PUBLISHERS' PREFACE.

This work contains a Digest of the cases reported during the years 1911 to 1915, both inclusive, in all the current series of English Reports, a list of which is printed overleaf, and of such cases in the Law Reports, Ireland, the Court of Session Cases, and Law Reports (Indian Appeals) as affect English Law.

It continues Mews' Digest of English Case Law. This standard Digest was published in 1898, and contains in 16 volumes the whole body of living case law to the end of 1897.

In 1911 there was published a Supplement containing a Digest of the cases from 1897 to 1910. This Digest was so arranged that it could be bound up in the appropriate volumes of the main work, thus bringing the cases in each volume down to the end of 1910, or could be bound as a separate Digest in three volumes. At the same time a new index of cases, containing under one alphabet all the cases in the main work and the supplement, was published to take the place of the original index volume.

Mews' English Digest System therefore consists of:

(1) The Digest of English Case Law to 1910, in 16 volumes.

(2) This Quinquennial Digest covering 1911 to 1915.

It will, as previously, be continued by Annual Digests with Quarterly cumulative advance issues, and a separate "Noter-up" on gummed paper.

Debt—Offer by Third Party to Creditor of Smaller Sum in Satisfaction—Acceptance by Creditor of Smaller Sum—Right of Creditor to Sue Debtor for Balance of Debt.]—The defendant, an officer of the British Army, when on service in India gave to the plaintiffs, who were a firm of money-lenders there, a promissory note for 1,500 rupees and interest, to secure repayment of a sum advanced by them to him. The father of the defendant, in response to an application by the plaintiffs, made them an offer of a less sum "in full settlement" of their claim against the defendant. The plaintiffs declined that sum, and again asked for what amount the defendant's father would "settle" his son's debt. The father replied offering 650 rupees, and inclosing a draft for that amount. The plaintiffs cashed the draft and retained the proceeds. The plaintiffs then brought an action against the defendant on the promissory note, claiming the amount thereof and interest, less the amount of the draft:—Held, that the plaintiffs having made a settlement with the father could not recover from the defendant, whose debt was thereupon extinguished. Hirachand Punamchand v. Temple, 80 L. J. K.B. 1155; [1911] 2 K.B. 330; 105 L. T. 277; 55 S. J. 519; 27 T. L. R. 430—C.A.

ACCUMULATIONS.

See also Vol. I. 144, 1074.

Accumulation Directed during Lives of Annuitants—Period Defined by Will not Extended by Codicil giving Further Annuity.]—By his will a testator directed his trustees to pay annuities to five persons named therein, and to accumulate the surplus income of his estate during their lives and the life of the survivor. By a codicil he directed a sixth annuity to be paid. The testator died in 1868, the last survivor of the will annuitants in 1882, and the codicil annuitant in 1911:—Held, that the codicil could not be read into the earlier part of the will so as to extend the period of accumulation beyond 1882, and that the accumulations of surplus income made since that date were not undisposed of, but fell into residue. Cresswell, In re; Lineham v. Cresswell, 58 S. J. 360—C.A.

—— Death of Last Annuitant—Accumulations Beyond the Statutory Period—Residuary Gift.]—A testator gave five annuities to be paid "out of the residuary estate and my bank shares" and "subject as aforesaid" directed the surplus income to be accumulated until the death of the last annuitant, and disposed of the residue. One annuitant lived beyond the period of accumulation allowed by the Thellusson Act:—Held, that there was an intestacy as to the income accumulated beyond the period. Pope, In re; Sharp v. Marshall (70 L. J. Ch. 26; [1901] 1 Ch. 64), not followed on the question of the bank shares. Cababé, In re; Cababé v. Cababé, 59 S. J. 129—Neville, J.

Accumulation Due to Trustees' Inability to Find Proper Objects of a Discretionary Trust.]—A testator, after providing for the disposal of the greater part of his estate among his children in the form of legacies, directed his trustees "from time to time, as they think proper, to make such special payments out of the free residue and remainder of my estate to such of my children or children's children as they may think most deserving, with special instructions to relieve any of them who may appear to be in want, provided always that they have not brought themselves into such circumstances by their own misconduct. My great desire is to assist merit and thrift, and not to acknowledge indolence or folly." The will contained no further directions as to the disposal of the residue. For a period of twenty-one years from the testator's death the income of the residue was accumulated, no distribution thereof being made by the trustees, owing to the fact that they were not satisfied that among the testator's children and grandchildren any cases existed which warranted payments out of the trust funds. In proceedings by the trustees, in which the children maintained that the direction as to the residue was void for uncertainty, or, otherwise, that further accumulation of the income was prohibited by the Thellusson Act,—Held, first, that the word "deserving" in the clause quoted meant deserving of pecuniary assistance, and accordingly that that clause committed an intelligible and workable discretion to the trustees, and was not void for uncertainty; and secondly, that as the accumulation of the income was due, not to the direction, express or implied, of the testator, but to the extraneous circumstance that no occasion for payment out of income had, in the opinion of the trustees, as yet arisen, the Thellusson Act did not apply. Whether the trust as to the residue was "charitable," quære. Mitchell's Trustees v. Fraser, [1915] S. C. 350—Ct. of Sess.

Savings out of Income—Thellusson Act.]—A testator conveyed the residue of his estate to trustees and directed them to apply the annual income in forming an "Institute" for the town of L., consisting of a library, reading room, &c. The trustees were "authorised and empowered to set apart and accumulate" the balance of income from such residue for the purpose of erecting a suitable building for the institute, but no power was given to them to employ the capital for this purpose. The trustees accordingly accumulated the income. More than twenty-one years after the testator's death the trustees applied for authority to uplift capital and apply it for the purpose of erecting such an institute:—Held, that as the Thellusson Act strikes at accumulations, the directions of the trust, so far as they necessitated accumulations, were gone after twenty-one years, but that the Thellusson Act does not prevent savings out of income, and accordingly that the trustees might still continue to make savings out of income. Lindsay's Trustees, In re, [1911] S. C. 584—Ct. of Sess.

Trust to Accumulate During Minority—Minor who, if of Full Age, would be Entitled to the Rents and Profits—Minor Born after Testator's Death.]—Section 1 of the Accumulations Act, 1800, renders void any direction by a settlor or testator for the accumulation of the income arising from a fund for a longer term than (inter alia) during the minority of any person who would for the time being, if of full age, be entitled to the income of the fund. Under this provision a testator may validly direct accumulation during the minority of a person not born until after his death. The dictum to the contrary in Haley v. Bannister (4 Madd. 275, 277) disapproved. The decision in Haley v. Bannister (supra) was on the special facts of that case, and is not an authority for the general principle laid down in the headnote. Cattell, In re; Cattell v. Cattell or Dodd, 83 L. J. Ch. 322; [1914] 1 Ch. 177; 110 L. T. 137; 58 S. J. 67—C.A.

In determining the validity of a direction to accumulate, the Court is not concerned to consider what might have happened under it, but only whether the direction has caused or is about to cause accumulation for a longer term than is allowed by the Accumulations Act, 1800. Jagger v. Jagger (53 L. J. Ch. 201; 25 Ch. D. 729) discussed and not followed. Ib.

Will—Leaseholds—Reserve Fund for Dilapidations—Validity.]—Where there is a direction in a will that a certain portion of the rents of leasehold property should be invested every year, so as to accumulate for the purpose of creating a fund to protect the trustees against uncertain claims for dilapidations under the leases, the trust to accumulate is valid and does not come within the Accumulations Act, 1800. Varlo v. Faden (29 L. J. Ch. 230; 27 Beav. 255) followed. Hurlbatt, In re; Hurlbatt v. Hurlbatt, 80 L. J. Ch. 29; [1910] 2 Ch. 553; 103 L. T. 585—Warrington, J.

—— Settlement in Tail—Persons who "shall be entitled to possession and enjoyment"—"Under the trusts and limitations of this my will"—Estate Tail in Possession—Disentailing Assurance—Cesser of Accumulations.]—Testator devised his real estate in strict settlement with an estate tail to the first and other sons of H. A. T., and directed the trustees to accumulate the rents and profits and the income of residuary personalty upon trust for the persons who at the end of the term during which accumulation was directed should "under the trusts and limitations of this my will be entitled to the possession and enjoyment " of the real estate devised by the will. The first estate tail had vested in possession in the plaintiff, and he had barred the entail before the end of the period during which accumulation was directed :—Held, that the interest of the trustees was not an estate prior to the estate tail and that the plaintiff was still in possession under the will, although now owner in fee; that at the end of the period of accumulation the plaintiff, his heirs or assigns, could be the only persons entitled to possession of the realty, and that therefore the Court would not enforce the trust for accumulation, but that the plaintiff was entitled to be let into possession of the rents and profits at once. Trevanion, In re; Trevanion v. Lennox, 80 L. J. Ch. 93; [1910] 2 Ch. 538; 103 L. T. 212; 54 S. J. 749—Joyce, J.

ACQUIESCENCE.

Loss of Rights under Covenant.] —See COVENANT.

ACTION.

See also Vol. I. 178.

Cause of—Criminal Offence—Felony—Application to Dismiss Action—Stay of Proceedings until Defendant Prosecuted.]—Where a statement of claim is based on a felony alleged to have been committed by the defendant against the plaintiff, the Court will stay further proceedings in the action until either the defendant has been prosecuted for the felony or a reasonable excuse has been shewn for his not having been so prosecuted. Smith v. Selwyn, 83 L. J. K.B. 1339; [1914] 3 K.B. 98; 111 L. T. 195—C.A.

—— Whether Retrospective—Crown Grant of Land — Waiver of Rights of Crown.] — The respondent, who held land under a grant from the Crown by which all mines and minerals were expressly reserved to the Crown, brought an action against the appellants for the removal of minerals from under his land. After the commencement of the action he obtained a statement in writing from the Crown that no claim was made on the part of the Crown to the minerals in question :—Held, that this statement had no retrospective effect so as to vest in the respondent a title to the minerals at the commencement of the action, and that the action would not lie. Fernando v. De Silva, 82 L. J. P.C. 111; 107 L. T. 670—P.C.

No Title at Date of Issue of Writ—Subsequent Acquirement of Title — Amendment.] A, believing that X died intestate, took out administration to him, and commenced an action as administrator against C. C, who had been aware that X left a will appointing him executor, declared that fact for the first time in his defence, and thereupon A took out administration with the will annexed (C having renounced), and sought to amend the pleadings accordingly :—Held, that A's application must be refused, as at the date of the issue of the writ she had no title to sue. Creed v. Creed, [1913] 1 Ir. ALIEN.

I. REGISTRATION.

Omission to Give Full Name.]—The Aliens Restriction Order made under the Aliens Restriction Act, 1914, contains a provision requiring aliens to register their names, and non-compliance with this requirement is an offence:—Held, that, if in registering his name, an alien, for the purpose of concealing his identity, does not give his full name, he commits an offence, even if he gives the name by which he is generally known. Silverman v. Hunt, 31 T. L. R. 410—D.

Effect of Registration — Right to Sue in Courts of this Country.]—The effect of the registration of an alien enemy under the Aliens Restriction Act, 1914, and the Aliens Restriction Order, 1914, is that the registered alien not only has licence to remain in this country, but is forbidden to leave it without special permission. A registered alien enemy can therefore enforce a personal right in the Courts of this country, notwithstanding the existence of the state of war, as being allowed to remain in this country and exonerated from the disabilities of enemies, on the principle stated in Hall's International Law (6th ed.), p. 388. Thurn and Taxis (Princess) v. Moffitt, 84 L. J. Ch. 220; [1915] 1 Ch. 58; 112 L. T. 114; 59 S. J. 26; 31 T. L. R. 24—Sargant, J. S. P. Volkl v. Rotunda Hospital, [1914] 2 Ir. R. 543—K.B. D.

II. EXPULSION.

Expulsion Order—Pauper—Medical Assistance—Ordinary Relief—Magistrate's Certificate.]—Evidence that an alien, who arrived in England from Russia in July, 1913, became chargeable to the Guardians of the Mile End Union on November 19, and was admitted to the workhouse infirmary for treatment, and took his discharge uncured on December 15, 1913, and was, according to the medical certificate, suffering from diabetes, which would produce in him permanent disability, was held sufficient to support an expulsion order of a Secretary of State made under section 3 of the Aliens Act, 1905. Rex v. Leycester; Greenbaum, Ex parte, 79 J. P. 14; 13 L. G. R. 159—D.

Further, upon the above facts, it is open to the magistrate who grants the certificate upon which the expulsion order is made to hold that such poor relief had been given to the alien as would disqualify him from exercising the Parliamentary franchise and deprive him of the benefit of section 2 of the Medical Relief Disqualification Removal Act, 1885. The magistrate's certificate need not follow the precise form given by the Summary Jurisdiction (Aliens) Rules, 1906, provided the facts appear in the body of it. Ib.

Recommendation for Expulsion.]—See post, col. 459.

III. STATUS OF ALIEN ENEMIES.

German Company with Branch in England.]—At common law the question whether a man is to be treated as an alien enemy for the purpose of his contracts, rights of suit, and the like, does not depend upon his nationality, or even upon his true domicil, but upon whether he carries on business in this country or not. If he does, it is not illegal, even during war, to have business dealings with him in this country in respect of the business which he carries on here. The same thing is true of a company which has a head office in Germany, but a branch office here, in respect of business transactions with such branch office. Ingle, Lim. v. Mannheim Continental Insurance Co., 84 L. J. K.B. 491; [1915] 1 K.B. 227; 112 L. T. 510; 59 S. J. 59; 31 T. L. R. 41—Bailhache, J.

Whether a person is an alien enemy depends on the place where he resides and carries on business, and not on his nationality; and a person who voluntarily resides in and carries on business in an enemy's country must be regarded as an alien enemy. Porter v. Freudenberg. Kreglinger v. Samuel. Merten's Patents, In re, 84 L. J. K.B. 1001; [1915] 1 K.B. 857; 112 L. T. 313; 20 Com. Cas. 189; 32 R. P. C. 109; 59 S. J. 216; 31 T. L. R. 162—C.A.

Alleged Alien Enemy — Habeas Corpus — Refusal of Writ.]—The appellant was born in Germany in 1883, and about the age of fifteen went to South America, and after living there two or three years came to England in 1901, where he alleged that he had since lived. Owing to the war between England and Germany he was interned as an alien enemy. On an application by the appellant to a Divisional Court for a writ of habeas corpus on the ground that he was not an alien enemy and had no nationality, evidence was given that by a German law of 1870 Germans who left the territory of the Confederation and resided abroad for ten years uninterruptedly ipso facto lost their nationality. There was also evidence that by a German statute of 1913 a person who had lost his nationality might recover it, and the Divisional Court refused the application:—Held, without deciding whether an appeal lay to the Court of Appeal, that as the statute of 1913 shewed that the appellant had not entirely lost his nationality of origin, he had failed to satisfy the Court that he had ceased to be of German nationality, and therefore he was not entitled to a writ of habeas corpus. Weber, Ex parte, 59 S. J. 692; 31 T. L. R. 602—C.A.

—— Internment.]—An alien enemy resident in the United Kingdom, who in the opinion of the Executive Government is a person hostile to the welfare of this country and is on that account interned, may properly be described as a prisoner of war, although neither a combatant nor a spy, and no writ of habeas corpus will be granted in the case of such a prisoner. A person who is by birth a German subject and who has obtained his discharge from German nationality under the German laws of 1870 and 1913, under which he is entitled to recover back his German nationality without returning to Germany, but who has taken no steps to naturalise himself in this country, is, during the war between Great Britain and Germany, an alien enemy, inasmuch as he has not become entirely divested of the rights of a natural-born German. Rex v. Vine Street Police Superintendent, 32 T. L. R. 3—D.

Nationality — Person Born Abroad whose Father had Previously Become a Naturalised British Subject—Internment as Alien Enemy — Habeas Corpus.]—A German subject became denationalised in Germany, and in 1869 became a naturalised British subject, and he was again naturalised as a British subject in 1877 under the Naturalisation Act, 1870. He was at that time a member of the London Stock Exchange, and remained a member until his death in 1908. Some time prior to 1884 he went to reside at Frankfort-on-Main in Germany, where his son, the present applicant for a writ of habeas corpus, was born in September, 1884, the birth being registered at the British consulate. The son resided there with his parents until he was sixteen and a half years of age, when he removed with his parents to Brussels. He lived there about seven years, when he left his parents and went to Berlin. In October, 1909, he came to England, where he had since resided. The applicant had never served in the German army, and had never been called upon to do military service in the German army. On the outbreak of war between Great Britain and Germany the applicant registered himself as an alien enemy. Subsequently, however, he unsuccessfully tried to get his name removed from the register. Having been interned as an alien enemy, he obtained a rule nisi for a writ of habeas corpus on the ground that, being the son of a British subject, he was himself a British subject:—Held, that the applicant, having been born out of the King's dominions and allegiance before the commencement of the British Nationality and Status of Aliens Act, 1914, had not obtained the status of a natural-born British subject merely by reason of the fact that his father was at the time of his birth a naturalised British subject. Rex v. Albany Street Police Superintendent; Carlebach, Ex parte, 84 L. J. K.B. 2121; [1915] 3 K.B. 716; 113 L. T. 777; 31 T. L. R. 634—D.

English Limited Company with Alien Enemy Shareholders.]—A limited liability company, incorporated under the Companies Acts, carrying on business and having its registered office in England, but practically the whole of whose shares are held by alien enemies, is not an alien enemy. Continental Tyre and Rubber Co. v. Daimler Co.; Same v. Tilling, Lim., 84 L. J. K.B. 926; [1915] 1 K.B. 893; 112 L. T. 324; 20 Com. Cas. 208; 59 S. J. 232; 31 T. L. R. 159—C.A.

—— Ownership of British Ship.] — Quære, whether an English company, consisting entirely of aliens, can own a British ship. The Tommi; The Rothersand, 84 L. J. P. 35; [1914] P. 251; 1 P. Cas. 16; 112 L. T. 257; 59 S. J. 26; 31 T. L. R. 15—Evans, P.

—— Right of Voting—Foreign Bank—Branch in England—Exercise of Right on Behalf of Branch.]—An alien enemy who is a shareholder in an English company is not entitled, during the war, to exercise the right of voting by employing a British subject as proxy at a meeting of the shareholders of the company, and where the alien enemy is a banking company with a branch in England such right of voting is not within clause 6 of the Trading with the Enemy Proclamation No. 2, and cannot be exercised during the war on behalf of the branch. Robson v. Premier Oil and Pipe Line Co., [1915] 2 Ch. 124; 59 S. J. 475; 31 T. L. R. 420—C.A.

IV. CONTRACTS BY AND WITH ALIEN ENEMIES.

Effect of Outbreak of War on Contract.]—The plaintiff company contracted before the war to supply zinc concentrates to a firm, which on the outbreak of war became alien enemies. The contracts provided that in certain events, including acts of God, force majeure, and any cause beyond the control of sellers or buyers preventing or delaying the carrying out of the agreement, the agreement should be suspended:—Held, that the effect of the war was not to abrogate the contracts, but to suspend all obligations thereunder during its continuance. Zinc Corporation v. Skipworth (No. 1), 31 T. L. R. 106—Sargant, J.

By an agreement made between the plaintiffs, who were an English company, and the defendants, who carried on business in Germany, the defendants agreed to buy from the plaintiffs a certain quantity of zinc concentrates in each year from 1910 to 1919, and it was agreed that so long as the agreement should be in force the plaintiffs should not sell any zinc concentrates to any persons other than the defendants and that "in the event of any cause beyond the control of either the sellers or the buyers preventing or delaying the carrying out of this agreement, then this agreement shall be suspended during the continuance of any and every such disability." War broke out between Great Britain and Germany on August 4, 1914, and the plaintiffs brought an action against the defendants for a declaration that the agreement was thereby dissolved:—Held, that the agreement only provided for the suspension of deliveries, and under it there still remained rights the exercise of which would be illegal after the outbreak of the war, and therefore the contract was dissolved on August 4, 1914. Zinc Corporation v. Hirsch, 32 T. L. R. 7—Bray, J.

Alien Enemy Lessee—Residence Prohibited in District — Whether Lessee Relieved from Liability under Lease.]—The fact that an alien enemy has been prohibited under the Aliens Restriction (Consolidation) Order, 1914, from residing in a particular district, where a house of which he is lessee is situated, does not relieve him from liability under the lease. London and Northern Estates v. Schlesinger, 32 T. L. R. 78—D.

—— Liability for Rent.]—The liability of an alien enemy lessee for rent accruing due after the outbreak of war is not thereby extinguished or suspended. An alien enemy defendant is not entitled to claim an indemnity by the use of third party procedure. Halsey v. Lowenfeld, 32 T. L. R. 138—Ridley, J.

British Steamer—Cargo Sold by Neutrals—Alien Enemy — Stoppage in Transitu.] — Semble, the failure of an alien enemy firm to meet their acceptances given for the price of goods shipped to such alien enemy firm by a neutral in a British ship does not constitute insolvency, so as to give the neutral a right of stoppage in transitu. The Feliciana, 59 S. J. 546—Evans, P.

"Deemed to be insolvent"—Sale of Goods.] —It is very doubtful whether the act of declining to pay an acceptance through bankers because of the outbreak of war could be interpreted as ceasing to pay debts in the ordinary course of business, so as to give the right to say that the firm could be "deemed to be insolvent" within the meaning of section 62, sub-section 3 of the Sale of Goods Act, 1893. Ib.

Trading with Enemy.]—See WAR.

V. PROCEEDINGS BY AND AGAINST.

Right of Alien Enemy to Sue in Courts of this Country.]—The effect of the registration of an alien enemy under the Aliens Restriction Act, 1914, and the Aliens Restriction Order, 1914, is that the registered alien not only has licence to remain in this country, but is forbidden to leave it without special permission. A registered alien enemy can therefore enforce a personal right in the Courts of this country, notwithstanding the existence of the state of war, as being allowed to remain in this country and exonerated from the disabilities of enemies, on the principle stated in Hall's International Law (6th ed.), p. 388. Thurn and Taxis (Princess) v. Moffitt, 84 L. J. Ch. 220; [1915] 1 Ch. 58; 112 L. T. 114; 59 S. J. 26; 31 T. L. R. 24—Sargant, J. S. P. Volkl v. Rotunda Hospital, [1914] 2 Ir. R. 543—K.B. D.

Interned Alien.]—The fact that a subject of an enemy State who is resident in this country has been interned as a civilian prisoner of war does not preclude him from maintaining an action. Schaffenius v. Goldberg, 60 S. J. 105; 32 T. L. R. 133—C.A.

—— Liability to be Sued—Right to Appear and Defend — Right to Appeal.] — An alien enemy, who is not within the realm by the licence of the King, cannot sue, but may be sued, in the King's Courts. An alien enemy who is sued can appear and be heard in his defence, and may take all steps necessary for his defence; and if judgment proceed against him he has the right to appeal; but an alien enemy who is plaintiff in an action, which commenced before the outbreak of war, has no right of appeal during the war, his right of appeal being suspended till peace is concluded. Porter v. Freudenberg. Kreglinger v. Samuel. Merten's Patents, In re, 84 L. J. K.B. 1001; [1915] 1 K.B. 857; 112 L. T. 313; 20 Com. Cas. 189; 32 R. P. C. 109; 59 S. J. 216; 31 T. L. R. 162—C.A.

Action against Alien Enemy — Cause of Action Arising Prior to War.]—The rule that an alien enemy cannot sue or prosecute his action during hostilities is confined to cases in which the alien enemy is plaintiff, or to a case in which a defendant alien enemy is seeking to prosecute a counterclaim, and does not apply to a case where the alien enemy is defendant. There is no rule at common law which prevents an alien enemy who is a defendant from appearing and defending his case. Robinson & Co. v. Mannheim Insurance Co., 84 L. J. K.B. 238; [1915] 1 K.B. 155; 112 L. T. 125; 20 Com. Cas. 125; 59 S. J. 7; 31 T. L. R. 20—Bailhache, J.

—— Outbreak of War—Effect—Action for Declaration—Absence of Party to Contract.]—An action by one party to a contract for a declaration as to its construction will not lie in the absence of the other party, where there is no third party whose interests make it necessary to determine its construction. Zinc Corporation v. Skipworth (No. 2), 31 T. L. R. 107—C.A.

Right of Company to Sue—Registration in England—Shares Held by Alien Enemies.]—A company registered under the Companies Acts is not precluded from suing by reason of the fact that some of its shareholders are alien enemies residing in any enemy State with which this country is at war. Amorduct Manufacturing Co. v. Defries & Co., 84 L. J. K.B. 586; 112 L. T. 131; 59 S. J. 91; 31 T. L. R. 69—D.

An action was brought by a company to recover the price of goods sold and delivered. The company was registered in England under the Companies Acts about eight years ago, having its office in London and its factory in Birmingham. Of its shares 380 were held by a naturalised German living in this country, and 1,435, being practically the whole of the remaining shares, were held by Germans resident in Germany. It was not disputed at the trial that the sum claimed was owing by the defendants, but the Judge of the City of London Court decided that owing to the composition of the plaintiff company it was not entitled, during the continuance of a state of war between this country and Germany, to sue in respect of the debt:—Held, reversing his decision, that when once the company was registered according to English law it became resident in this country, and was consequently entitled to judgment for the sum claimed. Ib.

—— English Company with German Shareholders — Debt Contracted with Company before Beginning of War—Right to Payment.]—A limited liability company, incorporated under the Companies Acts, carrying on business and having its registered office in England, but practically the whole of whose shares are held by alien enemies, is not an alien enemy, and can claim immediate payment of a debt contracted with it by an English company (also carrying on business in England) before the beginning of the present war. Neither the Trading with the Enemy Act, 1914, nor the Trading with the Enemy Proclamation of September 9, 1914, contain any prohibition against such payment. Continental Tyre and Rubber Co. v. Daimler Co.; Same v. Tilling, Lim., 84 L. J. K.B. 926; [1915] 1 K.B. 893; 112 L. T. 324; 20 Com. Cas. 208; 59 S. J. 232; 31 T. L. R. 159—C.A.

The plaintiffs, an English company, incorporated and carrying on business and having its registered office in England, in the second-named case sold and delivered certain goods to the defendants before the beginning of the war between England and Germany. The plaintiff company was one of many branches in different countries of a German company called the "parent company," and had a capital of 25,000 l. shares, the bulk of these shares being held by the German company. All the remaining shares, except one, were held by Germans resident in Germany, the managing director and other directors also residing there. The remaining one share was held by a naturalised German, the secretary of the company, who took part in the management of its business and resided in England. In an action for the price of the goods the defendants contended that payment to the company of the debt before the termination of the war would be aiding and benefiting alien enemies and was prohibited at common law and by the proclamation of September 9, 1914, and the Trading with the Enemy Act, 1914. In the first-named case the same plaintiffs were the holders of bills accepted by the defendants for goods supplied before the war. The bills matured and were presented for payment after the declaration of war. Scrutton, J., gave leave to sign final judgment under Order XIV.:—Held (Buckley, L.J., dissenting), that, first, payment to the plaintiff company was not payment to the enemy shareholders of the company or for their benefit; secondly, the payment "to or for the benefit of an enemy" forbidden by the proclamation did not include payment to a company incorporated and registered in this country under the Companies Acts; thirdly, the right of the company to recover payment did not depend on whether the majority of the shareholders were enemies or not; fourthly, that to allow the company to recover debts during the war was not contrary to public policy; fifthly, the defendants could not succeed on the ground that the secretary of the company could not in the circumstances have any authority from the directors to bring the action; and sixthly, the company were therefore entitled to payment. Ib.

Decision of Lush, J. (31 T. L. R. 77), affirmed. Ib.

—— Creditor in Bankruptcy—Proof—German Subject Resident in Germany — Rejection of Proof—Right to be Heard.]—An alien enemy, a German subject resident in Germany, cannot be heard during the war in support of a motion to revise or vary the decision of the trustee in bankruptcy rejecting his proof, and the motion must be dismissed. Porter v. Freudenberg (84 L. J. K.B., p. 1001; [1915] 1 K.B. 857) applied. Wilson, In re; Marum, ex parte, 84 L. J. K.B. 1893; [1915] H. B. R. 189—Horridge, J.

Alien Principal—Action by Agent against Principal—Claim for Receiver.]—An agent in this country of a principal, who is an alien enemy, is not entitled to bring an action against him for a declaration that the agent is entitled to collect debts due to the principal and to pay debts due from the principal, or for the appointment of a receiver of the assets of the principal's business in this country. Maxwell v. Grunhut, 59 S. J. 104; 31 T. L. R. 79—C.A.

—— Service of Writ on Alien Enemy.] — Where an action is brought against an enemy resident in the enemy's country, who carries on a branch business in this country by means of an agent, leave may be given to issue a concurrent writ and to make substituted service of the notice of the writ upon the agent, and such further terms as to advertisement or other means of communication and as to the period to be given to the defendant for appearance should be imposed in chambers on the plaintiff as may seem proper. Porter v. Freudenberg. Kreglinger v. Samuel. Merten's Patents, In re, 84 L. J. K.B. 1001; [1915] 1 K.B. 857; 112 L. T. 313; 20 Com. Cas. 189; 32 R. P. C. 109; 59 S. J. 216; 31 T. L. R. 162—C.A.

Joinder as Co-plaintiff—Application to Suspend.]—A patent was vested jointly in the plaintiffs, an English company and a German company, by a deed providing that the English company should have the sole right of bringing actions for infringement and might join the German company as co-plaintiffs. The English company brought an action for infringement and joined the German company as co-plaintiffs:—Held, that as the English company had the sole right of bringing the action, the fact that the German company was an alien enemy was not a ground for suspending the action. Mercedes Daimler Motor Co. v. Maudslay Motor Co., 32 R. P. C. 149; 31 T. L. R. 178—Warrington, J.

Person Carrying on Business in Allied Country—Action by—Whether Maintainable.]—On an application by the defendants in an action for a stay on the ground that one of the plaintiffs was an alien enemy, Warrington, J., held that the action could be maintained as the plaintiff in question, though a subject of an enemy State, was neither residing nor carrying on business in an enemy State, and he therefore dismissed the application (vide 31 T. L. R. 248). On appeal, further evidence as to the plaintiff's status having been produced, the Court held that it could be more conveniently given at the trial, and made no order except as to costs. Sutherland (Duchess), In re; Bechoff, David & Co. v. Bubna, 31 T. L. R. 394—C.A.

Two Co-plaintiffs—Appeal—One Plaintiff an Alien Enemy—Suspension of Appeal.]—Where two co-plaintiffs have given notice of appeal before the outbreak of war between Great Britain and another country, and one of them has on the outbreak of war become an alien enemy, the appeal must be suspended during the war. Actien-Gesellschaft für Anilin-Fabrikation v. Levinstein, Lim., 84 L. J. Ch. 842; 112 L. T. 963; 32 R. P. C. 140; 31 T. L. R. 225—C.A.

Business of Alien Enemies—Application by Manager for Receiver—Jurisdiction.]—The plaintiff, who was the London manager of a business carried on in various parts of the world by alien enemies of this country, applied for the appointment of a receiver and manager to carry on the business of the London branch:—Held, that the Court had no jurisdiction to make such an appointment. Maxwell v. Grunhut (31 T. L. R. 79) followed and applied. Gaudig and Blum, In re; Spalding v. Lodde, 31 T. L. R. 153—Warrington, J.

London Branch—British Workmen—English Assistant Manager Appointed Receiver and Manager.]—Where a large firm of alien enemies had a London branch employing a hundred British workmen the Court appointed the English assistant manager of that branch to be receiver and manager on his undertaking (1) not to remit goods or money forming assets of the defendants' business to any hostile country; (2) to endeavour to obtain a licence from the Crown to trade. Bechstein, In re; Berridge v. Bechstein (No. 1), 58 S. J. 863—Shearman, J.

Partnership—Articles—Partner Recalled to Serve in German Army—Deed of Accession—Licence to Trade Granted by Crown—Appointment of Receiver and Manager.]—A deed constituting a partnership, which consisted of English and German partners, contained a clause making provision for the event of the two German partners, or either of them, being called out to serve in the German Army. On the German partners being so called out before the outbreak of war between England and Germany, all the partners executed a deed of accession purporting to carry out the clause and to substitute other partners for the German partners:—Held, that a receiver and manager of the business should be appointed for the purpose of carrying on the business for a limited time. Armitage v. Borgmann, 84 L. J. Ch. 784; 112 L. T. 819; 59 S. J. 219; —Sargant, J.

—— English and German Partners—Business in Germany — Dissolution before War — English Assets Made Over to English Partner —Action on Contracts Made before War.]—The plaintiff, who was a British subject and before the war between Great Britain and Germany was in partnership with a German in business in Germany, made, on the eve of the war, an agreement with his partner, by which the assets and liabilities of the business were made over to the plaintiff, the intention being that the German partner should take over the German and Austrian assets and liabilities and that the plaintiff should take all the rest and carry on the business in London, the partnership being dissolved. The transaction diverted a balance of 6,000*l.*, together with the business, from Germany to England. In an action by the plaintiff on a bill of exchange given to the firm for goods supplied before the war and to recover a further sum, for goods supplied by the firm before the war, —Held, that in the circumstances the plaintiff was not precluded by sections 6 and 7 of the Trading with the Enemy Amendment Act, 1914, from recovering on the bill and for the goods supplied. Wilson v. Ragosine & Co., 84 L. J. K.B. 2185; 113 L. T. 47; 31 T. L. R. 264—Scrutton, J.

Partnership Business—One of the Partners an Alien Enemy — Collecting Outstanding Moneys—Receiver.]—The Court will appoint a receiver of a partnership business, of which one of the owners is an alien enemy, if the business is an ordinary commercial enterprise, and not within section 3 of the Trading with the Enemy Act, 1914. Rombach v. Rombach, 59 S. J. 90—Eve, J.

Partnership Firm Carrying on Business in England—Member of Firm Alien Enemy—Dissolution of Partnership Proceedings—Appointment of Receiver—Recovery of Partnership Debts—Partnership Claim by Receiver.]—The plaintiffs, a father and his two sons, carrying on business in partnership in England, claimed 53*l.* 19*s.* 9*d.* for goods sold and delivered. The father, who was a German subject resident in Germany, had, prior to May, 1914, carried on the business as sole proprietor, the sons managing the business for him. On May 9, 1914, he took his sons into partnership. One of the sons was a naturalised Englishman, denationalised in Germany, and the other was a German subject, but registered under the Aliens Restriction Act, 1914; both being resident in England. After the outbreak of war between Great Britain and Germany the naturalised Englishman commenced proceedings for the dissolution of the partnership, and was appointed receiver of the partnership assets, with liberty to sue for the debts owing to the partnership. In an action by him and his two partners for the foregoing claim the defendants admitted liability, but contended they were prohibited from paying the claim under the Trading with the Enemy Acts. Part of the claim was for goods supplied prior to the partnership:—Held, that the plaintiffs could not succeed as to that portion of the claim, but that they were entitled to judgment for the price of goods supplied by the partnership. Boussmaker, Ex parte (13 Ves. 71), and Mercedes Daimler Motor Co. v. Maudslay Motor Co. (31 T. L. R. 178) followed. Rombach Baden Clock Co. v. Gent, 84 L. J. K.B. 1558; 31 T. L. R. 492—Lush, J.

German Bank — Head Office at Berlin — Branch in London Trading under Licence of Home Secretary — Refusal of Head Office to Honour Cheque of English Customer — Action against Bank — Service of Writ on London Branch — Judgment — Right to Execution against Branch.]—The plaintiffs, an English firm with a branch office at Berlin, had an account at Berlin with a German bank whose head office was in that town, and who also had a branch in London. Shortly before the declaration of war between Great Britain and Germany on August 4, 1914, a sum of money was standing to the plaintiffs' credit at Berlin. On July 30, 1914, the plaintiffs drew a cheque for the sum in question, and payment was refused by the defendants' head office at Berlin. After the declaration of war the Secretary of State in England, acting under powers conferred upon him by the Aliens Restriction Act, 1914, and an Order in Council made pursuant thereto, granted a licence to the defendants' branch in London to carry on business in this country, subject to certain conditions. By the terms of the licence the permission granted by it was expressed to extend only to the completion of the transactions of a banking character entered into before August 5, 1914, so far as those transactions would in ordinary course have been carried out with the London establishment, and not to extend to any operations for the purpose of making available assets which would ordinarily be collected by, or of discharging liabilities which would ordinarily be discharged by, an establishment of the bank other than its London establishment. It was further provided that the business to be transacted under the permission should be limited to such operations as might be necessary for making the realisable assets of the bank available for meeting its liabilities, and for discharging those liabilities as far as might be practicable. All transactions carried out under the permission were to be subject to the supervision and control of a person to be appointed for the purpose by the Treasury, and any assets of the bank which might remain undisturbed after its liabilities had so far as possible in the circumstances been discharged, were to be deposited with the Bank of England to the order of the Treasury. The plaintiffs issued a writ against the defendants to recover the sum standing to their credit at Berlin, and served it upon the manager of the London branch of the bank, in accordance with the provisions of section 274 of the Companies (Consolidation) Act, 1908. At the trial the plaintiffs recovered judgment for the sum claimed and costs, and levied execution under a writ of fi. fa. upon the goods and chattels of the defendants at their London branch. The defendants thereupon took out a summons before Ridley, J., at chambers for an order staying proceedings under the writ of fi. fa. upon the ground that the effect of the licence granted to the defendants was to deprive the plaintiffs of their right to levy execution. Ridley, J., refused to stay proceedings under the writ of fi. fa. :—Held, that the effect of the statute, the Order in Council, and the licence was to direct that such assets of the bank in London as were subject to the control of the controller appointed by the Treasury should be applied in a particular manner, which was inconsistent with the exercise by the plaintiffs of their common law right to levy execution upon them, and that all proceedings under the writ of fi. fa. so far as regarded such assets should be stayed. Leader v. Disconto Gesellschaft, 84 L. J. K.B. 1806; [1915] 3 K.B. 154; 113 L. T. 596; 59 S. J. 544; 31 T. L. R. 464—C.A.

Alien Banking Company—Action on Bill—Licence to Trade.] — A bill payable to the order of the B. Bank of Rio de Janeiro ninety days after sight was drawn there on July 11, 1914, upon the defendants, who were merchants in London, and was bought by the B. Bank. The plaintiffs were a banking company incorporated in Germany and having a head office in Berlin and a branch in London, and the B. Bank, in order to provide funds to meet certain bills drawn by them and accepted by the plaintiffs' London branch under arrangement with the plaintiffs' Berlin office, sent to the plaintiffs in London on July 13 the first of exchange unindorsed, and asked them to obtain acceptance. The first of exchange was marked "for acceptance only." On the same day the B. Bank sent to the plaintiffs in Berlin the second of exchange indorsed, and on July 16 the B. Bank sent to the plaintiffs in London the third of exchange indorsed. On July 31 the defendants accepted the first of exchange payable in London. On August 4 war broke out between Great Britain and Germany. A few days later the plaintiffs in London received the third of exchange. On August 8 the plaintiffs in Berlin received the second of exchange. On September 19 the Home Secretary, acting under the Aliens Restriction (No. 2) Order, 1914, which was made in pursuance of the Aliens Restriction Act, 1914, granted to the plaintiffs and two other German banks a licence to carry on banking business in the United Kingdom, subject as follows: "(1) The permission shall extend only to the completion of the transactions of a banking character entered into before the 5th day of August, 1914, so far as those transactions would, in ordinary course, have been carried out through or with the London establishments. The permission does not extend to any operations for the purposes of making available assets which would ordinarily be collected by, or of discharging liabilities which would ordinarily be discharged by, establishments of the banks other than the London establishments. No new transactions of any kind save such as may be necessary or desirable for the purpose of the completion of the first-mentioned transactions shall be entered into by or on behalf of the London establishments of the banks. (2) The business to be transacted under this permission shall be limited to such operations as may be necessary for making the realisable assets of the banks available for meeting their liabilities, and for discharging their liabilities as far as may be practicable." The defendants dishonoured the first and third of exchange at maturity—namely, on October 31. On January 8, 1915, the plaintiffs in Berlin sent the second of exchange to the plaintiffs in London and asked them to credit the proceeds of collection to the Berlin office. The plaintiffs had with the Bank of England arrangements which bound the plaintiffs to pay to the Bank of England the amount of the bills when paid. The plaintiffs having brought an action against the defendants on the bill, the latter pleaded that the plaintiffs were alien enemies, and that the licence did not authorise the plaintiffs' London branch to present and receive payment of the bill:—Held, that the transactions permitted by the licence were not limited to transactions with the plaintiffs' London branch, that the transaction would in the ordinary course have been carried out in London, that the presentment or collection was not a new transaction, and that in the circumstances the plaintiffs were entitled to recover on the bill. Disconto Gesellschaft v. Brandt & Co., 31 T. L. R. 586—Bray, J.

Payment of Money "to or for the benefit of an enemy"—"Branch" Situated in British Territory—"Transaction."]—A German company, having its head office in Berlin and having manufacturing works in different parts of Germany, had also an office in London, in charge of a manager who had authority to enter into contracts and to sue and be sued on behalf of the company. In respect of this office the company was registered under the Companies Act, 1908, as a foreign company having a place of business in the United Kingdom. The company having entered into a contract, through their London manager, with a Glasgow firm, brought an action against that firm in the Sheriff Court at Glasgow for payment of certain sums alleged to be due under the contract. The Sheriff having granted decree in favour of the defenders, the company appealed to the Court of Sessions. Before the hearing of the appeal war was declared against the German Empire, and the proclamation of September 9, 1914, was issued which prohibited the payment of money to or for the benefit of an enemy, but contained the following exception: "Provided always that where an enemy has a branch locally situated in British . . . territory . . . transactions by or with such branch shall not be treated as transactions by or with an enemy." Thereafter the company presented a note to the Court in which they averred that the matter in dispute fell within the above-quoted exception in respect that it was a "transaction" entered into with a "branch" in British territory, and craved a hearing in ordinary course:—Held, first, that the company's office in the United Kingdom was not a "branch" in the sense of the exception in the proclamation; secondly (per the Lord President and Lord Johnston), that the payment of money after the date of the proclamation in fulfilment of a previous contract was not a "transaction" within the exception; and thirdly, in respect that no effective decree in favour of the company could be pronounced, the proceedings were stayed. Orenstein & Koppel v. Egyptian Phosphate Co., [1915] S. C. 55—Ct. of Sess.

Appointment of Controller—Mode of Application—Requisite Evidence—Form of Order—Trading with the Enemy.]—An application by the Board of Trade to the Chancery Division for the appointment of a controller of a firm or company under section 3 of the Trading with the Enemy Act, 1914, need not be made by petition, but may be made by originating motion. On such an application all the evidence that the Court ought to require is some evidence that the information of the Board of Trade in reference to the state of things laid down by the section as a condition precedent to the application has some reasonable foundation. A controller so appointed ought to be ordered to give the usual security given by a receiver, and to keep and vouch the accounts of the company in such manner as the Judge in chambers may from time to time direct and such other accounts as the Judge in chambers may from time to time order, and he ought to make periodical reports as to the position of the business and the result of carrying it on. Meister Lucius and Brüning, Lim., In re, 59 S. J. 25; 31 T. L. R. 28—Warrington, J.

Vesting of Enemy Property—Service on Alien Enemy — Motion — Originating Summons.]—Where notice of motion had been served before the rules under the Trading with the Enemy (Amendment) Act. 1914, were promulgated in the London Gazette,—Held, that an originating summons must now be issued, in pursuance of the rules, and the matter must come on first in chambers, leave being given to use the affidavit evidence filed on the motion. Company, In re, 59 S. J. 217—Sargant, J.

Where the alien enemy is interned in an internment camp a letter should be sent to him inclosing a copy of the originating summons. Ib.

Vesting Order—German Bank's Running Account with English Bank—Disputed Credit Balance—Application by Creditor of German Bank for Order Vesting Bank Balance in Custodian.]—Where a German bank had a running account with an English bank and the English bank disputed that they had in their hands a balance belonging to the German bank, the Court refused an application under section 4 of the Trading with the Enemy Amendment Act, 1914, by a creditor of the German bank, for an order vesting the credit balance of the German bank in the custodian. Such an order would place the custodian in the position of an assignee of a disputed debt, and that result was not intended by the Act. Bank für Handel und Industrie, In re, 84 L. J. Ch. 435; [1915] 1 Ch. 848; 31 T. L. R. 311—Warrington, J.

—— Parties to Summons—Debtor to Enemy Respondent.]—A debtor to an enemy is not a person holding or managing property alleged to belong to the enemy within rule 2 (4) of the Trading with the Enemy (Vesting and Application of Property) Rules, 1915, and therefore is not a proper respondent to a summons taken out by a creditor of an enemy under section 4 of the Act. Ib.

Injury to Trespasser—Acquiescence in Trespass—Liability of Owner.]—The owner of land who, knowing that persons are in the habit of crossing it, and acquiescing in the practice, puts a dangerous beast on his ground without warning of the danger is guilty of negligence and liable in damages to a person traversing the field who is injured by the beast. Lowery v. Walker, 80 L. Vicious Dog — Contributory Negligence — Patting Unknown Dog.] — In an action of damages brought against the owner of a dog for personal injuries caused by its biting the pursuer, the defender maintained that the pursuer had been guilty of contributory negligence in that he, although the dog was unknown to him, had patted it:—Held, that this did not amount to contributory negligence. Gordon v. Mackenzie, [1913] S. C. 109—Ct. of Sess.

—— Proof of Dog's Conduct Subsequent to Commencement of Action.] — Per the Lord Justice-Clerk: Evidence of attacks made by the dog on other persons after the date of the raising of the action for damages for personal injury caused by the dog is admissible for the purpose of shewing that the dog was of a vicious disposition. Ib.

—— Dog Kept by Daughter in Father's House — Daughter's Custody and Control — Scienter—Injuries Inflicted by Dog—Liability of Daughter.] — The defendant's daughter, aged seventeen, was the owner of a dog for which she took out a licence in her own name and the food for which she paid for out of her own earnings, the defendant consenting to the dog living in his house. The dog, which had previously attacked other dogs to the knowledge of the defendant and his daughter, whilst so kept killed a valuable dog belonging to the plaintiff. The County Court Judge found as a fact that the daughter had control of the dog:—Held, that, as the daughter was of a sufficient age to exercise control over the dog, and did in fact exercise such control, the defendant was not liable for the loss of the plaintiff's dog. M'Kone v. Wood (5 Car. & P. 1) distinguished. North v. Wood, 83 L. —— Dog Running into Bicycle.] — A lady cycling on a public road was about to pass a waggonette which was coming towards her when a dog belonging to the owner of the waggonette ran out from behind it in front of her bicycle, causing her to fall and sustain injuries. In an action against the owner of the dog,—Held (Lord Johnston diss.), that as the dog had never shewn, and as the defender accordingly could not have any knowledge of any vicious or dangerous propensities, he was not liable in damages for the result of its behaviour on the occasion of the accident. Milligan v. Henderson, [1915] S. C. 1030. —Ct. of Sess.

Cat Rearing Kittens—Vicious towards Dogs—Attacks Owner of Dog—Duty of Owner of Cat to take Reasonable Care to Provide for Safety of Customers.]—The plaintiff and her husband went into a teashop belonging to the defendants accompanied by a dog with (as the jury found) the defendants' permission or acquiescence. A cat belonging to the shop, which was rearing kittens, came out of a cupboard and attacked the dog. The plaintiff picked up the dog and handed it to her husband. The cat then sprang upon the plaintiff and bit her. The plaintiff brought an action claiming damages for the injury done to her and also for the injury done to the dog. The jury found that the cat had, to the knowledge of the defendant, whilst rearing kittens a disposition to attack a dog and a person holding a dog; that the cat attacked the dog unprovoked; and that the defendants had not taken reasonable precautions for the safety of their customers. On an appeal by the defendants,—Held, that a cat did not cease to be a domestic animal and become dangerous to mankind merely because, when it had kittens, it attacked a dog and, by accident, a person who happened to be there; and secondly, that, though the defendants were under a duty to take reasonable care to provide for the safety of their customers, they were not liable for what happened, because it was not the ordinary consequence of their act in keeping a cat on the premises, and was not such as would have been foreseen by a person of ordinary sense and prudence. Clinton v. Lyons, 81 L. J. K.B. 923; [1912] 3 K.B. 198; 106 L. T. 988; 28 T. L. R. 462—D.

Owner's Liability — Kick of Horse — Scienter.]—In the case of a horse not known to be vicious it is not the natural consequence of leaving it unattended in a yard that it should kick a workman employed there: the owner is therefore not liable therefor, as the damage is too remote. Cox v. Burbidge, (32 L. J. C.P. 89; 13 C. B. (N.S.) 430) followed. Bradley v. Wallaces, 82 L. J. K.B. 1074; [1913] 3 K.B. 629; 109 L. T. 281; 29 T. L. R. 705—C.A.

—— Dangerous Horse Let out by Owner—Injury to Person Hiring Horse and to another—Liability of Owner to Person other than Hirer.]—The duty of a person who lets out a horse of known vicious propensity is the same as that which any person is under who allows others to use, or come in contact with, an animal or chattel that is dangerous in itself; he is under a duty to warn not only the person who hires it, but any person who he knows or contemplates or ought to contemplate will use it. The duty is not dependent on, and is not created by, the contract; it exists independently of the contract. White v. Steadman, 82 L. J. K.B. 846: [1913] 3 K.B. 340; 109 L. T. 249; 29 T. L. R. 563—Lush, J.

The male plaintiff hired a horse and landau from the defendant, a livery-stable keeper, for the purpose of a drive. The defendant provided the driver as well as the horse and landau. The female plaintiff, the wife of the male plaintiff, was one of the party who went in the landau. During the drive the horse shied at a traction engine and the landau was upset and the plaintiffs were injured. In an action claiming damages in respect of their injuries, the jury found that the defendant ought to have known, if he had used proper care, that the horse was not safe at the time the landau was let out to the male plaintiff:—Held, that the defendant was liable in damages, not only to the male plaintiff, but also to the female plaintiff, first, inasmuch as he was, in view of his means of knowledge as to the character of the horse, under a duty to warn not only the person who hired it, but any person he knew or contemplated or ought to have contemplated would use it; and secondly, inasmuch as the defendant, who kept control of the landau, accepted the female plaintiff as a traveller or passenger, and was therefore bound to use due care to see that she was safely carried. Ib.

II. ANIMALS ON HIGHWAYS.

Cattle on Highway—Open Gate—No Evidence as to by Whom Opened—Burden of Proof.]—The plaintiff was riding on a bicycle at 10.30 P.M. along a highway adjoining a field in which the defendant kept a hundred cows. The field in question communicated by a gate with the highway, and at the time when the plaintiff was passing the gate was open, and she saw some cows coming through it. A little further along were other cows which had come from the field, some of which threw the plaintiff down and injured her. At the trial no evidence was given as to by whom the gate had been opened. The learned Judge held that, in the circumstances, the fact that the defendant's gate was open and that his cows had strayed on to the road through the open gate and had caused the accident to the plaintiff afforded evidence of negligence, and that it was for the defendant to displace this evidence by shewing that the gate was not left open by reason of any negligence on his part or on that of his servants. Upon the evidence he held that the defendant had not displaced this prima facie case, and gave judgment for the plaintiff for 75*l*.:—Held, that there was no evidence upon which the County Court Judge could find that the defendant, either by an act of his own or by the neglect of a duty which he owed to the public, produced an obstruction of the highway by his cattle, and that judgment therefore should be entered for the defendant. Ellis v. Banyard, 106 L. T. 51; 56 S. J. 139; 28 T. L. R. 122—C.A.

Horse Straying on Highway—Damage to Cyclists—Obligation of Owner or Occupier of Land Adjoining Highway.]—A young horse which had been placed by the defendant in a field adjoining a highway escaped owing to a defective hedge and strayed upon the highway. The plaintiffs were riding a tandem bicycle along the highway, and on seeing the horse they slowed down, but the horse turned round suddenly and ran across the road, coming in contact with the bicycle. The horse fell down, and then, jumping up, lashed out and injured one of the plaintiffs and damaged the bicycle. In an action for damages by the plaintiffs the learned County Court Judge found that there was no evidence that the horse was vicious or in the habit of trespassing or attacking bicycles or any one upon the high road. He also found that the defendant was guilty of negligence in turning the horse into a field of which the hedges were defective, but that, as the act of the horse was not one which it was in the ordinary nature of a horse to commit, the defendant was not liable:—Held, that the injury to the plaintiffs not being the natural consequence of the defendant's negligence, if any, the plaintiffs were not entitled to recover. Jones v. Lee, 106 L. T. 123; 76 J. P. 137; 28 T. L. R. 92—D.

Per Bankes, J.: The County Court Judge was wrong in law in holding that there had been negligence on the part of the defendant in turning the horse into a field with defective hedges, inasmuch as at common law there is no duty on the owner or occupier of land adjoining the highway to keep his animals off the highway. Ib.

Sheep.]—There is no rule of law that to drive sheep along the highway at night without a light is a negligent act. Catchpole v. Minster, 109 L. T. 953; 11 L. G. R. 280; 30 T. L. R. 111—D.

III. ANIMALS CAUSING INFECTION.

Diseases — Imported Sheep — Meaning of "brought from a port."]—Article 2 of the Foreign Animals Order, 1910, made under section 30, sub-section 1 of the Diseases of Animals Act, 1894, makes it unlawful unless by licence from the Board of Agriculture and Fisheries to bring into a port in Great Britain any cattle, sheep, goats, or swine brought from a port in a scheduled country. The First Schedule to the order provides that France shall be a country to which the order shall apply. The respondent, the master of a ship homeward bound, who had put on board in the East certain live sheep for food for the crew, had put into the port of Marseilles with one sheep still alive, and subsequently arrived in the Port of London, where the sheep was slaughtered on board for food. The respondent had obtained no licence in respect of the sheep:—Held, that no offence had been committed against the above article, for the sheep had not been "brought from" the port of Marseilles within the meaning of the article, but had been imported from the East. Glover v. Robertson, 106 L. T. 118; 76 J. P. 135; 10 L. G. R. 230; 22 Cox C.C. 692—D.

IV. CRUELTY TO ANIMALS.

See also Vol. I. 210, 1088.

Carrying Cows by Rail — Infirmity — Unnecessary Suffering—Permitting to be Carried —Person in Charge.]—A railway company to which cows are delivered for transit, and which conveys them by rail, does not "permit them to be carried," and is not "the person in charge" of them, within the meaning of clause 12 of the Animals (Transit and General) Order, 1912, made under the Diseases of Animals Act, 1894, and is not liable to be convicted of "carrying" them when owing to infirmity and fatigue they cannot be carried without unnecessary suffering. North Staffordshire Railway v. Waters, 110 L. T. 237; 78 J. P. 116; 12 L. G. R. 289; 24 Cox C.C. 27; 30 T. L. R. 121—D.

Overstocking—Cow—Custom.]—Where unnecessary suffering is caused to an animal by the owner an offence is committed against section 1, sub-section 1 of the Protection of Animals Act, 1911, even if the act is done in pursuance of a custom and for commercial reasons. The respondent held liable for allowing a cow to be overstocked with milk before offering her for sale. Waters v. Braithwaite, 110 L. T. 266; 78 J. P. 124; 24 Cox C.C. 34; 30 T. L. R. 107—D.

Sheep — Wounds not Attended to — Sufficiency of Evidence.] — The respondent was summoned for causing a sheep to be ill-treated. Evidence was given for the prosecution that a sheep belonging to the respondent, which had been attacked by flies, was seen in one of his fields, that two days later it was found dead with a large wound on the back, that it must have died from exhaustion owing to its being eaten by maggots, that it must have suffered great pain, and that there was no sign that the wound had been treated or dressed. Evidence was also given that the respondent when spoken to about it said that he knew some of his sheep were affected with fly, and that he had sent a man to dress the wounds. The Justices without calling on the respondent dismissed the summons, being of opinion that there was not sufficient evidence that he had unlawfully and cruelly caused the sheep to be ill-treated.—Held, that it could not be said that the Justices had taken a wrong view or that they had misdirected themselves. Potter v. Challans, 102 L. T. 325; 74 J. P. 114; 22 Cox C.C. 302—D.

Stranded Whale—Animal in Captivity.]—The respondent caused unnecessary pain and suffering to a whale which had been stranded and so was unable to escape for a time, but which would have floated off with the incoming tide :—Held, that the whale was not in captivity or close confinement within section 2 of the Wild Animals in Captivity Protection Act, 1900, and therefore that the respondent had not committed an offence under that Act. Steele v. Rogers, 106 L. T. 79; 76 J. P. 150; 28 T. L. R. 198; 22 Cox C.C. 656—D.

Ill-treatment of Horse—Proceedings against Owner — Evidence of Permitting.] — The respondent was charged with permitting his horse to be cruelly ill-treated. Evidence was given on behalf of the prosecution that the respondent said to the appellant, an inspector of the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals: "I am the boss, but I have nothing whatever to do with the horses. In fact, I know no more about them than an infant. My man Floyd, the driver of the horse in question, is wholly responsible for the horses. I pay him a good wage in order that he should be responsible. My proper horsekeeper has enlisted, and I have had my best horses commandeered by the military. Floyd bought this horse on October 15 last for 15*l.* I saw the horse and made a remark to my man that it was in a poor condition, but Floyd told me that it was a good horse and a good worker, and so I left it to him" :—Held, that upon this evidence there was a case for the respondent to answer on the charge made against him. Whiting v. Ivens, 84 L. J. K.B. 1878; 79 J. P. 457; 13 L. G. R. 965; 31 T. L. R. 492—D.

Causing Unnecessary Suffering.]—The respondent, who was the director of a research laboratory and was licensed by the Home Secretary under the Cruelty to Animals Act, 1876, to perform experiments on living animals, in the course of experiments to find a cure for sleeping sickness administered to an ass a drug which had the effect of bringing on gradual paralysis without pain. He then had the ass put in a field, where after some days it was found lying down and unable to rise and protect itself from flies. As soon as the experiment was completed the ass was painlessly destroyed. On a summons against the respondent for causing unnecessary suffering to the ass by omitting to give it proper care and attention when in a suffering state, the Justices found that the ass did not suffer unnecessary pain when lying in the field, and they dismissed the summons :—Held, that the question was a question of fact for the Justices, and therefore their decision must be affirmed. Dee v. Yorke, 78 J. P. 359; 12 L. G. R. 1314; 30 T. L. R. 552—D.

V. OTHER POINTS.

Distress—Damage Feasant—Right to Impound—Cattle Driven to Pound more than Three Miles.]—The statute 1 & 2 Ph. & M. c. 12, s. 1, provides that ". . . no distress of cattle shall be driven out of the hundred, rape, wapentake, or lathe where such distress is or shall be taken, except that it be to a pound overt within the same shire, not above three miles distant from the place where the said distress is taken . . ." :—Held, that on the true construction of this section the word

"not" should not be read as "nor"; and that the section means that the distress may be driven to any pound within the hundred or similar area where the distress was taken, even though more than three miles from the place where the distress was taken, but may not be driven outside that area except to a pound within the same shire and not more than three miles from the place where the distress was taken. Berdsley v. Pilkington (Gouldsb. 100) followed. Coaker v. Willcocks, 80 L. J. K.B. 1026; [1911] 2 K.B. 124; 104 L. T. 769; 27 T. L. R. 357—C.A.

Prohibition against Selling Alive or Permitting Sale of Animals Delivered to Knackers — Sale by Knacker's Assistant — "Permission" of Knacker—"Delivery" of Animal.]—A knacker's assistant, in the absence and without the knowledge of the knacker, purchased a horse at a market three miles from the knackery for the sum of 1*l.*, and tied it to the knackery cart. While the horse was standing there he sold it for 1*l.* 10*s.* to a person who subsequently despatched it for exportation to Antwerp. There was no evidence as to the purpose for which the knacker's assistant purchased the horse. The knacker's assistant and the knacker having been convicted of a contravention of section 5, sub-section 2 of the Protection of Animals (Scotland) Act, 1912 [corresponding to section 5, sub-section 1 of the Protection of Animals Act, 1911], by respectively selling and permitting the sale of the horse alive:—Held, first (Lord Salvesen dissenting), that the conviction of the assistant was right, inasmuch as Regulation 9 of Schedule I. applied not only to knackers, but also to their assistants, and although it would not be a contravention of the section to sell a horse that was proved to have been delivered for other than knackery purposes, yet in the absence of such proof the horse must be presumed to have been delivered for knackery purposes; and secondly, that the conviction of the knacker must be quashed, as in the absence of proof that he knew of or authorised the sale, or had failed to exercise a reasonable supervision over his assistant, he could not be said to have "permitted" the sale. Dundas v. Phyn, [1914] S. Trust to Pay out of Income—Gift of Corpus "subject nevertheless to the said annuities" —Charge upon Corpus.]—A testator devised and bequeathed all his real and personal estate to trustees upon trust for sale and conversion, and after payment of debts, &c., for investment of the residue of the proceeds of sale (hereinafter called "the residuary trust funds") upon trust out of the income thereof to pay an annuity of 150*l.* to G. and an annuity of 52*l.* to L. during their respective lives, and upon further trust to accumulate the residue of the income of the residuary trust funds until the youngest child of J. should attain twenty-one or until the expiration of twenty-one years from the testator's death, whichever event should first happen, and from and after the attainment of that age or the expiration of that term, whichever should first happen, to stand possessed of the residuary trust funds and accumulations, "subject nevertheless to the said annuities," in trust for the child or children of the said J. then living and the children of any deceased children per stirpes. The will also gave the trustees a discretionary power to apply the income of the share of a child or grandchild of the said J. in the residuary trust funds "subject to and after payment of the annuities" for the maintenance of such a child or grandchild, and, "subject to providing for the said annuities," to raise any part or parts not exceeding one moiety of such a share for the advancement of such a child or grandchild:—Held, following Howarth, In re; Howarth v. Makinson (78 L. J. Ch. 687; [1909] 2 Ch. 19), that the annuities were charged upon corpus. Held, further, that Taylor v. Taylor (43 L. J. Ch. 314; L. R. 17 Eq. 324) must be treated as having been overruled by Howarth, In re; Howarth v. Makinson (supra). Young, In re; Brown v. Hodgson, 81 L. J. Ch. 817; [1912] 2 Ch. 479; 107 L. Quære, whether there is any difference between a charge on corpus and a continuing charge on income. Ib.

—— Subsequent Trusts "subject thereto"—Power of Sale — Proceeds Charged with Annuity—Charge on Corpus.]—By a marriage settlement the husband conveyed certain real and personal property to trustees upon trust, after his death, out of the rents and profits and income of the trust premises to pay the clear annual sum of 400*l.* per annum to his widow for her life, and "subject thereto" upon the trusts therein mentioned. The settlement empowered the trustees to sell, exchange, or partition the real property free and discharged from "the said annual sum of 400*l.*, which shall thereupon become charged upon the proceeds thereof as aforesaid": —Held, that the words "subject thereto" meant subject to the annuity of 400*l.*, and therefore subject to the full and complete payment of the annuity, and that consequently the annuity was a charge upon the corpus. Birch v. Sherratt (36 L. J. Ch. 925; L. R. 2 Ch. 644) followed. Bigge, In re; Granville v. Moore (76 L. J. Ch. 413, 415; [1907] 1 Ch. 714), overruled. Watkins' Settlement, In re; Wills v. Spence, 80 L. J. Direction to Pay out of Income—Charge on Corpus.]—The trustees of a settlement were directed to pay an annuity out of income, or such of it as should exist, and subject thereto to stand possessed of the trust funds in trust for the persons therein named absolutely. The income was insufficient to pay the annuity:—Held (following Boden, In re; Boden v. Boden, 76 L. J. Ch. 100; [1907] 1 Ch. 132), that the annuity could not be charged on corpus, nor was it a continuing charge on the income. Boulcott's Settlement, In re; Wood v. Boulcott, 104 L. T. 205; 55 S. J. 313—Parker, J.

A testator by his will devised and bequeathed to trustees certain houses upon trust to receive the rents and profits thereof, and to pay thereout the head rent and other outgoings, and as to the residue of the rents and profits, after payment of the above, upon trust to pay a number of annuities to certain persons for their lives, and after their deaths to hold the annuities on trust for testator's son R., and after payment of such annuities to pay out of the residue of such rents and profits as the same should come to their hands a certain debt due by the testator. All the residue of his real and personal estate he devised and bequeathed to his son R. The rents and profits were insufficient to pay the annuities in full: —Held, that the annuities were a charge on the corpus. Phillips v. Gutteridge (32 L. J. Ch. 1; 3 De G. J. & S. 332) applied and followed. Buchanan, In re; Stephens v. Draper, [1915] 1 Ir. R. 95—C.A.

Gift over—Arrears of Annuity Payable out of Corpus—Continuing Charge on Income or Charge on Income for Particular Year.] — By a will there were gifts of small annuities and then a trust for sale of residue and a gift "upon trust in the first place with and out of the annual income thereof, including the profits which shall accrue to my estate from any partnership business in which I shall be engaged at the time of my decease and which my trustees or trustee shall continue to carry on under the discretionary power in that behalf hereinafter contained and which profits are hereinafter directed to be considered annual income for the purposes of this my will, to pay to my said wife during such time as she shall continue my widow a clear annual sum of 1,500*l.*, or in case the clear rentals derived from my said freehold warehouses and leasehold wharf shall, together with interest calculated at the rate of 2*l.* per cent. per annum on the cash value of the corpus or capital of the remainder of my general residuary estate, including the capital in my partnership business or businesses, amount to more than 1,500*l.*, then upon trust to pay to my said wife during such time as she shall continue my widow a clear annual sum equal to the amount of the said rentals, together with interest calculated as aforesaid, but not exceeding an annual sum of 2,000*l.*, and subject thereto upon trust out of the surplus annual income of my general residuary estate, but so far only as such surplus annual income will from time to time extend or permit, to pay to her my said wife during her widowhood (in addition to the annual sum for the time being payable to her as aforesaid) a further annual sum of 100*l.* in respect of each of my children who shall for the time being be under the age of twenty-three years." And after this payment had been satisfied there was a further provision as to the surplus, and in the language of the ultimate gift of capital there was nothing to indicate a fresh start or to create any trusts which were in any way inconsistent with the continuance of any arrears of the annuities as a charge on the future income. The words were: "My said general residuary estate and all moneys and property directed to fall into and form part thereof and the said surplus income and the accumulations thereof shall be divided or considered as divided into so many equal shares as the number of my sons and daughters who either shall be living at my death and shall, whether within my lifetime or after my decease, attain the age of twenty-three or marry under that age." The will contained, among other provisions, a declaration by the testator that the widow was to be paid in full; a provision that accumulations were only to be made "subject to such payments hereout as aforesaid"; and a declaration that no portion of corpus or capital was to be made over to the testator's children or issue so as to prejudice or affect the due payment of the annual sums bequeathed by the will:—Held, that the widow's annuity formed a continuing charge on income. Boden, In re; Boden v. Boden (76 L. J. Ch. 100; [1907] 1 Ch. 132), discussed. Rose, In re; Rose v. Rose, 85 L. J. Ch. 22; 113 L. T. 142—Sargant, J.

Tenant for Life and Remainderman—Charge on Settled Real and Personal Estate — Deficiency of Income — Deficiency Paid out of Corpus—Recoupment out of Income.]—A testator gave and devised his real and personal estate to trustees upon trust to pay certain annuities, and subject to such annuities the real estate was to be held upon trust for the testator's son for life, with remainder to his sons successively in tail male, with remainders over. The income of the estate was insufficient to pay the annuities, and the deficiency was made up out of capital. On the death of one of the annuitants, the income was more than sufficient to satisfy the remaining annuities: —Held, that, the annuities being charged on capital as well as income, there was no right to have moneys expended out of capital in making up the annuities recouped to capital out of income. Playfair v. Cooper (23 L. J. Ch. 343; 17 Beav. 187) followed. Croxon, In re; Ferrers v. Croxon, 84 L. J. Ch. 845; [1915] 2 Ch. 290; 59 S. J. 693—Eve, J.

Pecuniary Legacies — Insufficiency of Assets to Set Aside Sum by its Income to Meet Annuities — Purchase of Annuities. — The testatrix, after giving certain pecuniary legacies and two annuities to servants, directed that her trustees should provide for the annuities by setting aside and appropriating a portion of her estate sufficient to answer them by the income thereof, and that upon the cesser of an annuity a proportion of the capital so set aside and appropriated should sink into, and form part of, her residuary estate, which she gave in trust for other persons. The estate was not sufficient to make the provision contemplated by the will, but was sufficient to pay all the pecuniary legacies in full, and to provide sums enough to purchase annuities of the amounts given by the will:—Held, that sums sufficient to buy the annuities mentioned in the will should be invested by the trustees in the purchase of such annuities, to be paid to the annuitants for their lives or until they should assign, charge, or incumber them. Cottrell, In re; Buckland v. Bedingfield (79 L. Annual Payment Charged on Easements and Chattels—Realty or Personalty.—The tenant for life of one eighth share in certain realty and personalty constituting the C. Waterworks joined with the owners of the other seven shares in conveying such waterworks to a company incorporated by Act of Parliament, in consideration of an annual sum to be payable for ever to the grantors, their respective executors, administrators, and assigns, and there was a covenant by the company to pay such annual sum. The property granted consisted mainly of easements or rights in the nature of easements, and of personal chattels:—Held, that such annual payment was personalty and not realty. Baxter, In re; Malling v. Addison, 104 L. Married Woman—Forfeiture on Assigning, Disposing of, or Charging, whether under Disability or not.—By the terms of a will, by which an annuity was given to a married woman, it was provided that the annuitant should be restrained from anticipating any property coming to her thereunder, and, further, that "if she should assign, dispose of, or charge the annuity, whether under disability or not," the annuity should cease. The married woman (the annuitant) purported to charge the annuity:—Held, that as she could not create a valid charge there was no forfeiture of the annuity. Adamson, In re; Public Trustee v. Billing, 109 L. Pur autre Vie—Death of Annuitant before Cestui que Vie. — Payment "during the widowhood of my said wife . . . out of the income of my trust fund" of "the following yearly sums of money; . . . to my said daughter, Ellen Alice Francis, 100*l.*," gives an annuity to Ellen Alice Francis, which continues to be payable after her death to her legal personal representative during the widowhood of the testator's widow. Drayton, In re: Francis v. Drayton, 56 S. J. 253—Neville, J.

A testator left his estate to trustees upon trust during his wife's widowhood to pay out of the income certain annuities from his death, including annuities to his wife during widowhood, and to certain of his children (among them James Arthur Cannon). He directed that the rest of the income should be applied in paying off certain mortgages, and that when they had been redeemed the trustees should divide during the widowhood of his wife the remainder of the income among his said children equally; and that after the death or re-marriage of the testator's wife the trustees should hold the residue and the income thereof upon trust (subject to a special provision for one of the sons) for all his other sons and daughters equally. James Arthur Cannon survived the testator, but died intestate during the widowhood of the testator's wife. Held, that James Arthur Cannon's annuity continued to be payable to his administratrix during the remainder of the widowhood of the testator's wife. Cannon, In re; Cannon v. Cannon, 60 J. Arrears—Interest—Administration of Estate of Grantor.—In a foreclosure or redemption action as between incumbrancers and as against the property charged, no interest will as a rule be allowed on arrears of an annuity. But in the administration of the estate of the grantor, and as against his general assets, an annuitant is, in respect of arrears, in the same position as other creditors and is entitled to interest on his debt. Mansfield (Earl) v. Ogle (28 L. J. Ch. 422; 4 De G. & J. 38) explained. Salvin, In re; Worsley v. Marshall, 81 L. J. Ch. 248; [1912] 1 Ch. 332; 106 L. T. 35; 56 S. J. 241; 28 T. L. R. 190—Eve, J.

Annuity for Wife to Arise on Certain Events during Life of Husband and Jointure

after his Death—Statute of Limitations.]—By marriage settlement, lands held under freehold and chattel leases were conveyed to trustees on trust to permit the wife to receive and take out of the rents, issues, and profits thereof a yearly rentcharge or annuity of 100*l.* sterling during her life, in case she should survive the husband, or in case the husband should during her life become bankrupt, or assign, charge, or incumber the said premises or suffer something whereby the said premises or some part thereof would through his act or default, or by operation or process of law, become vested in some other person or persons, and subject thereto in trust for the husband. The husband, without the knowledge of the trustees or the wife, deposited the leases by way of equitable mortgage, and died more than twelve years afterwards. One of the leases contained a strict covenant against alienation:—Held (a) that the annuity, which arose when the husband incumbered the premises by depositing these leases with the bank, was barred; (b) that, at the husband's death, the widow became entitled to an annuity "in case she should survive her husband," which was in effect an independent annuity; and (c) that no estate passed by the settlement in the premises comprised in the lease which contained a covenant against alienation. Field v. Grady, [1913] 1 Ir. R. 121—Barton, J.

Annuity Determinable on Re-Marriage—Deficiency of Assets—Valuation.]—A testator by his will bequeathed two annuities, one of which was payable to the testator's widow during her life while she remained a widow, and the other payable to the annuitant for life. The estate was solvent qua creditors, but was insufficient to pay the two annuities in full. In administration proceedings one of the enquiries directed was what was the value of the widow's annuity:—Held, that the value should be ascertained as if the annuity was a life annuity, and that after the amount representing such value had been rateably abated it should be invested in the purchase of a life annuity to be paid to the widow until her re-marriage. Carr v. Ingleby (1 De G. & S. 362) followed; Sinclair, In re (66 L. J. Ch. 514; [1897] 1 Ch. 921) distinguished. Richardson, In re; Mahony v. Treacy, [1915] 1 Ir. R. 39—Barton, J.

Practice—Administration Action—Enquiry in Chambers—Presumption of Death—Form of Certificate.]—It is not for a Master, on an enquiry before him whether an annuitant is living or dead, either to presume the death or to state that there is no evidence before him to shew whether the annuitant is living or dead. His certificate should take the form of finding that the only evidence on the point before him is the evidence mentioned in the certificate, and submitting to the Court the question whether the annuitant ought to be presumed to be living or dead, and, if dead, on what date the death ought to be presumed to have taken place. Long, In re; Medlicott v. Long, 60 S. J. 59—Sargant, J.

APPEAL.

I. GENERAL PRINCIPLES.

See also Vol. I. 326, 1104.

Concurrent Findings in Courts Below — Jurisdiction on Appeal to Review Conclusions Resting upon Probabilities.] — The rule that concurrent findings should not be disturbed on appeal does not apply where on appeal there is tolerably clear evidence which satisfies the Court that the findings are erroneous, and the principle is especially applicable to a case in which the conclusion sought to be set aside rests upon the consideration of probability. "Hatfield" (Owners) v. "Glasgow" (Owners), 84 L. J. P. 161; 112 L. T. 703—H.L. (E.)

A vessel, the H., while rendering assistance to another vessel, the G., was rammed by the latter, and all her hands with one exception were lost. In the Court of first instance both vessels were held to blame—the H. owing to want of skilful navigation and the G. owing to the fact that she did not reverse her engines in time to avoid the collision; but the Court of Appeal reversed that decision, and held that the H. was alone to blame. The owners of the H. appealed:—Held, that this case was not a true example of concurrent findings in the Courts below; that there was jurisdiction to review the concurrent findings in the Courts below; and that on the facts judgment would be entered for the H. and the G. pronounced alone to blame. Ib.

Rule laid down by Lord Herschell and Lord Watson in "The P. Caland" (Owners) v. Glamorgan Steamship Co. (62 L. J. P. 41; [1893] A.C. 207), as to concurrent findings, considered. Ib.

Oral Evidence — Conflict of Evidence — Credibility of Witnesses — Opinion of Trial Judge.]—A Court of Appeal, in forming an opinion on the credibility of conflicting witnesses, where there has been plain perjury on one side or the other, must be greatly influenced by the opinion of the trial Judge, who has seen and heard the witnesses. Khoo Sit Hoh v. Lim Thean Tong, 81 L. J. P.C. 176; [1912] A.C. 323; 106 L. T. 470—P.C.

The Court of Appeal of the Supreme Court of the Straits Settlements, reversing the judgment of the trial Judge, had held that the respondent's mother was the natural daughter, born in wedlock, of the testator, and that the respondent, as one of the testator's next-of-kin, was entitled to share in the testator's undisposed-of property. The Judge of first instance had held that she was only an adopted daughter, and therefore that the respondent was not so entitled. Decision of the Court of Appeal reversed and that of the trial Judge restored. Ib.

Generally speaking it is undesirable for an Appellate Court to interfere with the findings of fact of the trial Judge, who sees and hears the witnesses and has an opportunity of noting their demeanour, especially in cases where the issue is simple and depends on the credit which attaches to one or other of conflicting witnesses. The view of the trial Judge as to the credibility of the witnesses should not be put aside on a mere calculation of probabilities by the Appellate Court. Bombay Cotton Manufacturing Co. v. Motilal Shivlal, L. R. 42 Ind. App. 110—P.C.

Leave to Appeal in Forma Pauperis — "Reasonable grounds for proceeding" with Appeal—Necessity for Counsel's Opinion.]—A defendant to an action, who is appealing from a judgment against him, and is desirous of proceeding in forma pauperis, must, in addition to proving that he is not worth 25*l.*, his wearing apparel and the subject-matter of the cause or matter only excepted, obtain the opinion of counsel that he has "reasonable grounds for proceeding" with the appeal. Merriman v. Geach, 82 L. J. K.B. 87; [1913] 1 K.B. 37; 107 L. T. 703; 57 S. J. 146—D.

II. TO HOUSE OF LORDS.

See also Vol. I. 327, 1105.

Findings of Fact in Courts Below not Concurrent.] — In an action arising out of a collision between the steamships H. and G., the Judge at the trial found both vessels to blame. On appeal, the Court of Appeal found the H. alone to blame:—Held, on appeal to the House of Lords, that there were not concurrent findings of fact in the Courts below, and that the House of Lords was not debarred from finding the G. alone to blame on the evidence before it. "Hatfield" (Owners) v. "Glasgow" (Owners). The Glasgow, 84 L. J. P. 161; 112 L. T. 703—H.L. (E.)

Ireland—Sale under Land Purchase Acts.]—No appeal lies to the House of Lords from an order of the Court of Appeal in Ireland with respect to the distribution of the purchase moneys of lands sold under the Land Purchase Acts. Scottish Widows' Fund Life Assurance Society v. Blennerhassett, 81 L. Order of Court of Appeal Fixing Time—Time not of Essence of Order—Appeal to House of Lords—Jurisdiction of Court of First Instance to Extend Time Pending Appeal.]—Where a time has been fixed by an order of the Court of Appeal for the doing of some act, but the time is not an essential part of the order, but is fixed merely for the purpose of working out complicated details, the Court of first instance has jurisdiction under Order LXIV. rule 7 to modify by extending the time the order of the Court of Appeal, pending an appeal to the House of Lords. Manks v. Whiteley, 82 L. J. Ch. 267; [1913] 1 Ch. 581; 108 L. T. 450; 57 S. J. 391—Sargant, J.

Arbitration — Special Case — Consultative Opinion of High Court—Award Incorporating Opinion of Court—Error on Face of Award—Refusal of Application to Set Aside Award—Competency of Court of Appeal and House of Lords to Review Opinion of High Court.]—An arbitrator having stated a Special Case for the opinion of the King's Bench Division—which Court expressed their opinion, answering the question in the affirmative—subsequently made his award incorporating the opinion so expressed by the Court, and adjudicating in favour of the respondents in accordance with that opinion. An application by the appellants to the King's Bench Division for an order to set aside the award on the ground that the opinion was wrong and constituted error on the face of the award having been dismissed, the Court of Appeal (Buckley, L.J., and Kennedy, L.J.; Vaughan Williams, L.J., dissenting) held that, though the decision of the King's Bench Division expressing their consultative opinion on the Special Case could not have been appealed against, yet their decision refusing to set aside the award which incorporated that opinion was open to review in the Court of Appeal:—Held, by the House of Lords, that the decision of the Court of Appeal was right, and that both the Court of Appeal and also the House of Lords were, in the circumstances, competent to review the consultative opinion which the arbitrator, as he was bound to do, had adopted, and had set out in his award. British Westinghouse Electric and Manufacturing Co. v. Underground Electric Railways, 81 L. J. K.B. 1132; [1912] A.C. 673; 107 L. T. 325; 56 S. J. 734—H.L. (E.)

Costs—Interest.]—A decision in favour of a plaintiff was reversed by the Court of Appeal and restored by the House of Lords. No order was made as to the plaintiff's costs of the appeal to the Court of Appeal prior to the judgment in the House of Lords:—Held, that the plaintiff was entitled to interest at the rate of 4 per cent. per annum on his costs of the appeal to the Court of Appeal as from the date of the judgment of that Court. Stickney v. Keeble (No. 2), 84 L. J. Ch. 927; 112 L. T. 1107; 31 T. L. R. 221—Joyce, J.

III. TO COURT OF APPEAL.

1. Jurisdiction.

See also Vol. I. 373, 1107.

Right of Appeal — Statute — Reference to Railway and Canal Commission.] — Where by statute any matter is referred to the determination of a Court of record with no further provision, the necessary implication is that the Court is to determine the matter as a Court, with the ordinary incidents of the procedure of that Court, including any general right of appeal from its decisions. Therefore, when by the Telegraph (Arbitration) Act, 1909, any difference between the Postmaster-General and any body or person was referred to the Railway and Canal Commission, such reference must be taken to be to the Commission as a Court and not as arbitrators, and an appeal lies from their decision to the Court of Appeal, as provided by section 17 of the Railway and Canal Traffic Act, 1888. National Telephone Co. v. Postmaster-General (No. 2), 82 L. J. K.B. 1197; [1913] A.C. 546; 109 L. T. 562; 57 S. J. 661; 29 T. L. R. 637; 15 Ry. & Can. Traff. Cas. 109—H.L. (E.)

Injunction—Power to Direct Reference.]—Where an injunction was rightly granted by a Court of first instance under the circumstances of the case then before the Court, the Court of Appeal has power to direct a reference to an expert to enquire and report as to whether the circumstances have changed, and, on his reporting that the circumstances existing at the time when the injunction was granted have changed, to dissolve the injunction. Att.-Gen. v. Birmingham, Tame, and Rea District Drainage Board, 82 L. J. Ch. 45; [1912] A.C. 788; 107 L. T. 353; 11 L. G. R. 194; 76 J. P. 481—H.L. (E.)

Arbitration — Special Case — Consultative Opinion of High Court—Award Incorporating Opinion of Court—Error on Face of Award—Refusal of Application to Set Aside Award—Competency of Court of Appeal and House of Lords to Review Opinion of High Court.]—An arbitrator having stated a Special Case for the opinion of the King's Bench Division—which Court expressed their opinion, answering the question in the affirmative—subsequently made his award incorporating the opinion so expressed by the Court, and adjudicating in favour of the respondents in accordance with that opinion. An application by the appellants to the King's Bench Division for an order to set aside the award on the ground that the opinion was wrong and constituted error on the face of the award having been dismissed, the Court of Appeal (Buckley, L.J., and Kennedy, L.J.; Vaughan Williams, L.J., dissenting) held that, though the decision of the King's Bench Division expressing their consultative opinion on the Special Case could not have been appealed against, yet their decision refusing to set aside the award which incorporated that opinion was open to review in the Court of Appeal:—Held, by the House of Lords, that the decision of the Court of Appeal was right, and that both the Court of Appeal and also the House of Lords were, in the circumstances, competent to review the consultative opinion which the arbitrator, as he was bound to do, had adopted, and had set out in his award. British Westinghouse Electric and Manufacturing Co. v. Underground Electric Railways, 81 L. J. K.B. 1132; [1912] A.C. 673; 107 L. T. 325; 56 S. J. 734—H.L. (E.)

2. In what Cases Appeal Lies.

See also Vol. I. 376, 1107.

Discretion of Judge — Courts (Emergency Powers) Act, 1914.]—Though there may in some cases be an appeal from an order made under the Courts (Emergency Powers) Act, 1914, yet the Court of Appeal will be very slow to interfere with the Judge's exercise of the wide discretion conferred upon him by section 1, sub-section 2 of the Act. Lyric Theatre v. L. T. Lim., 31 T. L. R. 88—C.A.

"Criminal cause or matter" — Committal under Fugitive Offenders Act, 1881 — Order Nisi for Habeas Corpus.]—A decision of the King's Bench Division discharging an order nisi for a writ of habeas corpus to bring up the body of a person committed to prison by a magistrate under the Fugitive Offenders Act, 1881, is a decision in a "criminal cause or matter" within the meaning of section 47 of the Supreme Court of Judicature Act, 1873, and therefore no appeal lies from it to the Court of Appeal. Rex v. Brixton Prison (Governor); Savarkar, Ex parte, 80 L. J. K.B. 57; [1910] 2 K.B. 1056; 103 L. T. 473; 54 S. J. 635; 26 T. L. R. 561—C.A.

"Criminal cause or matter" — Appeal to Quarter Sessions from Conviction—Appellant not Appearing Ordered to Pay Costs.] — The applicant was convicted at petty sessions for wilfully damaging certain property and for trespassing on a railway. Against these convictions he gave notices of appeal to quarter sessions, but these notices were in various respects defective. At quarter sessions the respondents to the appeals were represented, but the appellant neither appeared nor was represented; and the quarter sessions thereupon made an order on the applicant to pay the costs of the appeals. Thereafter the applicant applied ex parte for a rule nisi for a writ of certiorari to bring up for the purpose of being quashed the order of quarter sessions ordering the applicant to pay the costs. A rule was refused by the King's Bench Division, but was afterwards granted by the Court of Appeal. On the rule coming on, objection was taken that, being a "criminal cause or matter" within section 47 of the Judicature Act, 1873, the Court of Appeal had no jurisdiction to entertain the case:—Held, that the objection must prevail. Rex v. Wiltshire Justices; Jay, Ex parte, 81 L. J. K.B. 518; [1912] 1 K.B. 566; 106 L. T. 364; 76 J. P. 169; 10 L. G. R. 353; 56 S. J. 343; 28 T. L. R. 255; 22 Cox C.C. 737—C.A.

"Criminal cause or matter"—Contempt of Court—Hearing in Camera—Subsequent Publication of Evidence—Nullity Suit.]—In a suit for nullity of marriage an order was made that the cause should be heard in camera. One of the parties afterwards obtained a transcript of the shorthand notes of the evidence, and sent copies to certain persons in good faith:—Held, that such conduct did not amount to a contempt of Court, and further that such a contempt, if any, was not a "criminal cause or matter" within section 47 of the Judicature Act, 1873, but that an appeal lay to the Court of Appeal against a finding of a Judge that there had been a contempt of Court. Scott v. Scott (No. 1), 82 L. J. P. 74; [1913] A.C. 417; 109 L. T. 1; 57 S. J. 498; 29 T. L. R. 520—H.L. (E.)

Reference to Master to Ascertain Damages in Action — Decision of Master — Appeal, whether to Court of Appeal or Divisional Court.]—An appeal from the decision of a Master on a reference to him by a Judge to assess the amount of the damages in an action pursuant to Order XXXVI. rule 57 lies to the Court of Appeal and not to the Divisional Court. Dunlop Pneumatic Tyre Co. v. New Garage and Motor Co., 82 L. J. K.B. 605; [1913] 2 K.B. 207; 108 L. T. 361; 57 S. J. 357; 29 T. L. R. 344—C.A.

County Court—Appeal to Court of Appeal from Divisional Court—Death of Respondent Pending Appeal—Jurisdiction.]—Where an appeal against a decision of a Divisional Court has been set down, but before the hearing of the appeal the respondent dies, application for leave to add the legal representative of the deceased party can properly be made to the Court of Appeal. Blakeway v. Patteshall ([1894] 1 Q.B. 247) followed. Haywood v. Farabee, 59 S. 4. Time Within which Appeal must be Brought.

See also Vol. I. 404, 1112.

Date from which Running—Date of Sealing Judgment.]—The time for bringing an appeal to the Court of Appeal from a judgment in an action is six weeks from the date when it is perfected by being sealed, and not six weeks from the date when it is pronounced. Thames Conservators v. Kent, 59 S. J. 612—C.A.

Extension—Winding-up of Company—Misfeasance Summons Dismissed.]—A misfeasance summons taken out against directors by the liquidator of a company was dismissed on November 29, 1910. The liquidator received the opinion of counsel as to the chance of the success of an appeal on December 16, and on December 21 sent a circular to the shareholders and creditors acquainting them with the opinion and asking for funds to prosecute the appeal. In response to this circular an insufficient sum was promised, and on January 5, 1911, he sent a second circular and applied to the Court to extend the time for appealing to January 31, the time for appealing having expired on December 13, 1910:—Held, that the liquidator had taken a proper course in consulting the creditors and shareholders, and under the circumstances the time for appealing ought to be extended. Brazilian Rubber Plantations and Estates, In re (No. 2), 103 L. T. 882—C.A.

Final Order—Time for Appealing—Action—Appeal from County Court—Decision of Divisional Court.]—An order of the Divisional Court dismissing an appeal from a judgment of a County Court in a County Court action commenced by plaint is a final order in an action, and not in a "matter not being an action," and the time, therefore, for appealing therefrom to the Court of Appeal is under Order LVIII. rule 15, three months and not fourteen days only. Johnson v. Refuge Assurance Co., 82 L. J. K.B. 411; [1913] 1 K.B. 259; 108 L. T. 242; 57 S. J. 128; 29 T. L. R. 127—C.A.

Per Buckley, L.J.: The word "action" in section 100 of the Judicature Act, 1873, includes a County Court action, it being a civil proceeding commenced in manner "prescribed by Rules of Court." Ib.

5. Staying Proceedings.

See also Vol. I. 431, 1116.

Refusal of Respondents' Solicitors to Give Personal Undertaking.]—The plaintiff succeeded in an action in which nominal damages and an injunction were claimed on the ground of an alleged nuisance by noise. At the trial the defendants did not ask for a stay, but subsequently objected to pay the taxed costs except on the personal undertaking of the plaintiff's solicitors. This undertaking the solicitors declined to give. Application for a stay was then made to the Judge, but he refused to make an order:—Held, dismissing the application, that the matter was one in the absolute discretion of the Court, and that no special circumstances were shewn which would prima facie entitle the respondents to the order they sought. Att.-Gen. v. Emerson (59 L. J. Q.B. 192; 24 Q.B. D. 56) considered. Becker v. Earls Court, Lim., 56 S. J. 206—C.A.

Discretion of Judge—Verdict for Farthing—Application to Disallow Costs—Refusal—Opinion of Jury.]—By Order LVIII. rule 16, "An appeal shall not operate as a stay of execution or of proceedings under the decision appealed from, except so far as the Court appealed from, or any Judge thereof or of the Court of Appeal, may order; and no intermediate act or proceedings shall be invalidated, except so far as the Court appealed from may direct" :—Held, that where in a libel action the jury find a verdict for the plaintiff for a farthing, and at the conclusion of the trial the Judge refuses to deprive the plaintiff of costs, and on a subsequent day it appears from communications which have taken place with the jurymen since the trial that it was the opinion of the majority of the jury that the plaintiff should not be deprived of costs, the Judge is not entitled, in deciding whether he will grant a stay of execution pending an appeal, to take into consideration the opinion of the jury on the question of costs. Wootton v. Sievier (No. 3), 30 T. L. R. 165—C.A.

6. Evidence on Appeal.

7. Application to Single Judge of Court of Appeal.

Vacation Court—Notice of Original Motion to One Judge of the Court of Appeal.] — Where an application is made under section 52 of the Judicature Act, 1873, a notice of motion stating the nature of the application should be sent, together with the notice of appeal, to the Lord Justice to whom the application is made, and such notice of motion should also be served on the other side, together with the notice of appeal. X. L. Electric Co., In re; Wiener v. The Company, 57 S. J. 792—Swinfen Eady, L.J.

8. Hearing of Appeal.

See also Vol. I. 448, 1117.

Hearing before Two Judges — Absence of Parties—Filed Consent of Counsel.]—Under section 1 of the Supreme Court of Judicature Act, 1899, an appeal must be heard and determined by two Judges of the Court of Appeal upon the filed consent of the respective counsel for the parties, notwithstanding that the parties themselves are not present. Haworth v. Pilbrow, 28 T. L. R. 143—C.A.

Disagreement of Jury—Entering Judgment for Either Party on the Evidence—Slight Evidence—No Evidence—Possibility of Adducing Additional Evidence at a Re-trial.]—At the conclusion of a plaintiff's case the defendants applied for judgment on the ground that there was no evidence to go to the jury. The Judge refused to enter judgment, saying that there was some evidence, though very weak. The case was left to the jury and they disagreed. The defendants again applied for judgment, but the Judge again refused to enter judgment, saying that he could not alter his previous opinion that there was some evidence, though it was very weak :—Held, that the Judge had power to alter his opinion and enter judgment for the defendants if he would have been justified in directing the jury to find a verdict for the defendants. Skeate v. Slaters, Lim., 83 L. J. K.B. 676; [1914] 2 K.B. 429; 110 L. T. 604; 30 T. L. R. 290—C.A.

Semble, under Order LVIII. rule 4 the Court of Appeal has power to enter judgment for the defendant where a verdict has been found for the plaintiff, if the evidence on which that verdict was found was so weak and insufficient that the Court of Appeal would not have allowed the verdict to stand. But this power should only be exercised where the Court of Appeal is satisfied that it has all the necessary materials before it and that no evidence could be given at a re-trial which would in the Court of Appeal support a verdict for the plaintiff. Ib.

Per Buckley, L.J. : Where a case has been tried and the jury have disagreed, if upon the whole of the evidence of the case the Court of Appeal are of opinion that no twelve reasonable men could give a verdict for the plaintiff, the Court of Appeal has power and is bound to enter judgment for the defendant. Ib.

9. Costs of the Appeal.

See also Vol. I. 454, 1118.

Payment on Solicitors' Undertaking to Repay if Appeal Successful.] — The Court of Appeal will not, unless in most exceptional circumstances, order that the costs payable to the successful litigant should only be paid on his solicitor's undertaking to repay same in the event of an appeal to the House of Lords being successful. Griffiths v. Benn, 27 T. L. R. 346—C.A.

Shorthand Note—Joint Note—Transcript—Agreement to Use in Court of Appeal—Costs in Cause.]—At the trial of an action the solicitors for both parties agreed that a joint shorthand note of the proceedings should be taken. No arrangement was made as to taking a transcript, but it was agreed that if the case went to the Court of Appeal the transcript of the shorthand note of the evidence should be used as a substitute for the Judge's note. Both sides took transcripts, and they were printed and used by the Judge. The plaintiff obtained judgment in the action, with costs. Upon a motion by the plaintiff that the costs of the shorthand note and of the transcript should be paid by the defendants as costs in the cause,—Held, that as the case was one where there was no great technical difficulty, and one where in the absence of an arrangement to the contrary the Judge would have refused to allow the costs upon taxation, the motion must be refused. Jones v. Llanrwst Urban Council (No. 2), 80 L. —— Note Taken by Agreement of Parties to the Knowledge of Judge at Trial.] — Where the parties agree at the trial that a shorthand note shall be taken, and thereupon intimate that agreement to the presiding Judge, so that he is thereby relieved from taking a note, as the shorthand, by consent, is to be the record of what took place for the guidance of the Court of Appeal, the cost of such note to the successful party will be allowed on taxation. Hebert v. Royal Society of Medicine, 56 S. J. 107—C.A.

10. Power to Re-hear.

See also Vol. I. 462, 1120.

Duty on Re-hearing.]—The Court of Appeal is entitled and ought to re-hear a case as at the time of re-hearing, and on a re-hearing such a judgment may be given as ought to be given if the case came at that time before the Court of first instance. Att.-Gen. v. Birmingham, Tame, and Rea Drainage Board, 82 L. Power to Refer Question to Expert.]—The Court of Appeal has jurisdiction, without the consent of parties, to refer questions to an expert to enquire and report thereon. The parties may waive formalities of procedure and conduct the enquiry in a practical way, and the Court is at liberty, but not bound, to adopt wholly or partially the report of the referee. Ib.

Injunction — Discharge — Evidence.] — The Court of Appeal may discharge an injunction originally granted on good grounds, and may receive further evidence even as to matters which have occurred after the decision appealed from. Ib.

"Practice and procedure"—Order made by Judge at Chambers Directing Solicitor to Pay Money—Non-payment—Attachment.]—A writ was issued by a firm of solicitors, H. and C., purporting to act for the plaintiff. The plaintiff got this writ set aside and the action stayed on the ground that he had not authorised the issue of the writ, and the solicitors, H. and C., were ordered to pay the plaintiff's costs. An appeal against this order was dismissed with costs against H. and C. The costs not having been paid, the plaintiff applied for a writ of attachment against H., who alleged that he was not a partner with C. A Judge at chambers made an order that the plaintiff should be at liberty to issue a writ of attachment against H. on the ground that he, being a solicitor, had not complied with the orders for the payment of the costs by the firm. Against this order H. appealed to the Divisional Court:—Held (on the authority of Marchant, In re (77 L. J. K.B. 695; [1908] 1 K.B. 998)), that the appeal was not a matter of practice and procedure, and that it was rightly brought to the Divisional Court. Haxby v. Wood Advertising Agency, 109 L. T. 946—D.

Matter of Practice and Procedure—Solicitor — Agreement in Writing — Summons to Set Aside — Appeal from Chambers.] — Where a summons is taken out at chambers, under section 8 of the Attorneys and Solicitors Act, 1870, to set aside two agreements with regard to payment for a solicitor's services, and for delivery of a bill of costs, the matter is not one of "practice and procedure" within the meaning of section 1, sub-section 4 of the Supreme Court of Judicature (Procedure) Act, 1894, and an appeal from the order of a Judge at chambers lies to the Divisional Court, and not direct to the Court of Appeal. Jackson, In re, 84 L. J. K.B. 548; [1915] 1 K.B. 371; 112 L. T. 395; 59 S. J. 272; 31 T. L. R. 109—D.

Appeal in Forma Pauperis—Defendant in Court Below—Conditions Precedent.]—A defendant in the Court below, to appeal to the Divisional Court in forma pauperis, must first obtain a certificate of counsel that he has reasonable grounds for so proceeding in addition to his affidavit as to lack of means. Merriman v. Geach, 82 L. J. K.B. 87; [1913] 1 K.B. 37; 107 L. T. 703; 57 S. J. 146—D.

Court Divided in Opinion — Discretion of Junior Judge to Withdraw Judgment.] — Where, on an appeal to the Divisional Court from a County Court, the Judges differ in opinion, it is within the discretion of the junior Judge, in accordance with the old common law practice, to withdraw his judgment. Per Lush, J.: Apart from the question of practice, when once a litigant has obtained a judgment in any Court, that judgment ought to stand, unless a Court of Appeal unanimously or by a majority decides that the judgment of the Court below was wrong. Poulton v. Moore, 83 L. J. K.B. 875; 109 L. T. 976; 58 S. J. 156; 30 T. L. R. 155—D. See S. C. in C.A. 31 T. L. R. 43.

Absence of Respondent—Judgment—Application to Re-enter—Jurisdiction.]—Where a Divisional Court has allowed an appeal in the absence of the respondent, a Divisional Court has no power, on a subsequent application by the respondent, to order the appeal to be re-entered and re-argued. Hession v. Jones, 83 L. J. K.B. 810; [1914] 2 K.B. 421; 110 L. T. 773; 30 T. L. R. 320—D.

Misdirection.]—By Order LIX. rule 7, no motion by way of appeal from an inferior Court "shall succeed on the ground merely of misdirection . . . unless, in the opinion of the Court, substantial wrong or miscarriage has been thereby occasioned in the Court below":—Held, that in the above rule "misdirection" does not only mean misdirection to a jury, but covers a case where a Judge sitting without a jury has misdirected himself. Tullis & Son, Lim. v. North Pole Ice Co., 32 T. L. R. 114—D.

Writ of Attachment — Refusal by Witness to Produce Documents.]—A witness refused to produce certain documents at an examination under the Foreign Tribunals Evidence Act, 1856, whereupon an application was made in chambers for leave to issue a writ of attachment against him. The Judge refused to make the order :—Held, that the Judge's order was not made in a criminal matter, inasmuch as what was sought to be done by the writ of attachment was to compel the witness to produce the documents, and not merely to punish him, and therefore that an appeal lay from the Judge's decision. Eccles v. Louisville and Nashville Railroad Co., 56 S. Provision against Alienation—Life Interest — Income Accruing but not Received by Trustees at Date of Alienation — Apportionment Act, 1870.]—A testator gave a share in his estate to trustees upon trust to pay the income thereof to his son for life, but directed that any income for the time being payable to him "shall only be paid to him so long as he shall not attempt to assign or charge the same." The son by deed purported to assign his life interest by way of mortgage to secure money lent. At the date of the mortgage the trustees had in their hands a sum of 356*l.* representing income of the son's share received by them before that date, and they subsequently received a sum of 393*l.* representing income of the share received by them after the date of the mortgage, of which sum 254*l.* represented the apportioned part up to that date :—Held, that the Apportionment Act, 1870, did not apply; that the effect of the clause was to prevent the destination of the income being finally determined until it had actually accrued—that is, become payable to the tenant for life; and that, although the son or his mortgagee was entitled to the 356*l.*, neither of them was entitled to the 254*l.* Sampson, In re; Sampson v. Sampson (65 L. Restriction upon Bequest of Company's Articles—Private Company—Apportionment of Dividends—"Public company."]—Notwithstanding that section 5 of the Apportionment Act, 1870, applies the Act to the dividends of "public companies" only, the provisions of the Act apply to companies which restrict the right to hold and transfer their shares, and, under section 121 of the Companies (Consolidation) Act, 1908, are classed as "private companies," the expression "private companies" in the later Act being only a convenient way of referring to a particular class of public companies. White, In re; Theobald v. White, 82 L. Bill of Lading—Disputes Concerning Interpretation to be Decided Abroad.]—A clause in a bill of lading provided that any disputes concerning the interpretation of the bill of lading were to be decided in Hamburg according to German law:—Held, that this clause must be treated as a submission to arbitration within the meaning of section 4 of the Arbitration Act, 1889, and that, although a tribunal at Hamburg was not specified, the contract meant that disputes as to its interpretation were to be tried by the competent Court in Hamburg and in accordance with German law. The Cap Blanco, 83 L. J. P. 23; [1913] P. 130; 109 L. T. 672; 29 T. L. R. 557—Evans, P. Appeal withdrawn; see 83 L. J. P. 23—C.A.

Charterparty—Bills of Lading—Assignment—Cesser of Shipowner's Liability—Submission to Arbitration.]—The plaintiffs, who were the owners of the steamship Den of Mains, chartered her by charterparty dated April 26, 1911, to the defendants M. & Co., to load a cargo of beans at Vladivostock, and to proceed to a port in the United Kingdom and there deliver the cargo "agreeably to bills of lading." On June 10 a cargo of about 6,000 tons was loaded, and bills of lading made out to the order of M. & Co. or their assigns were signed by the master and handed to M. & Co.'s representative. M. & Co. had, by a contract dated April 27, 1911, sold the cargo to the defendants the B. Co. on the terms of a "basis delivered" contract, by clause 10 of which the contract was to be void as regarded any portion shipped which might not arrive. On June 12 the defendants M. & Co., under the contract of April 27, declared to the B. Co. that the beans had been shipped by steamship Den of Mains. On arrival of the vessel at Liverpool, the port of discharge, M. & Co. handed to the B. Co. the bills of lading indorsed against a payment. When the discharge had been completed it was alleged that there was a shortage of 171 bags, and, the B. Co. having paid only in respect of the quantity actually delivered, M. & Co. instructed them to make a corresponding deduction from the freight, but the plaintiffs refused to acknowledge the claim for short delivery. A dispute having thus arisen, M. & Co. gave notice that they demanded an arbitration under a clause in the charterparty which provided for arbitration "by arbitrators, one to be appointed by each of the parties to this agreement, if necessary the arbitrators to appoint a third," and formally required the plaintiffs within seven clear days to appoint their arbitrator. The plaintiffs did not appoint an arbitrator, and the defendants after the expiry of the seven days gave notice of the appointment of a gentleman to act as sole arbitrator. On a summons for directions taken out by the plaintiffs,—Held, first, that there was nothing in the contract or the circumstances of the case to satisfy the Court that it was the intention of the shipowners and charterers that the responsibility of the former under the charterparty had ceased; and secondly, that the submission to arbitration came within section 6 of the Arbitration Act, 1889. "Den of Airlie" Steamship Co. v. Mitsui, 106 L. T. 451; 17 Com. Cas. 116; 12 Asp. M.C. 169—C.A.

Arbitration or Valuation—Construction of Agreement.]—By an agreement the value of certain shares was to be determined by two valuers appointed by the parties or an umpire appointed by the valuers in accordance with the Arbitration Act, 1899:—Held, that this constituted an agreement to arbitrate as to value, and not a mere agreement to have a valuation. Taylor v. Yielding, 56 S. J. 253—Neville, J.

Construction of Arbitration Clause.] — A contract for the supply of certain machinery to a company by the manufacturers contained a clause referring disputes and differences to arbitration, with a proviso that no dispute or difference should be deemed to have arisen or to be referred to arbitration "unless one party has given notice in writing to the other of the existence of such dispute or difference within seven days after it arises." By a letter to the manufacturers the company's engineer gave notice of rejection of part of the machinery supplied. After more than seven days' interval the manufacturers wrote that they could not accept the rejection. No formal notice was given by either party of the existence of a dispute. Objection having been taken to the application of the arbitration clause, in respect that no notice of the existence of a dispute had been timeously given:—Held, that the proviso with regard to notice had been duly complied with and that the arbitration clause was applicable, in respect that no dispute had arisen until the manufacturers wrote refusing to accept the rejection, and that their letter of refusal itself constituted notice of the existence of a dispute. Howden v. Powell Duffryn Steam Coal Co., [1912] S. C. 920—Ct. of Sess.

Arbitration Clause in Articles of Association — Action Commenced by Member] — Where the articles of association of a company provide for differences to be referred to arbitration, this is to be treated as a statutory agreement between the company and its members, and constitutes a submission to arbitration within the Arbitration Act, 1889. Baker v. Yorkshire Fire and Life Assurance Co. (61 L. J. Q.B. 838; [1892] 1 Q.B. 144) applied. Hickman v. Kent or Romney Marsh Sheep Breeders' Association, 84 L. J. Ch. 688; [1915] 1 Ch. 881; 113 L. T. 159; 59 S. J. 478—Astbury, J.

The contract contained in the plaintiff's application for membership of the company also constituted a submission to arbitration, and accordingly a stay of the action was granted. Willesford v. Watson (42 L. J. Ch. 447; L. R. 8 Ch. 473) applied. Ib.

Condition Referring Disputes to Arbitration—Reasonable Notice of Condition—Sale.]—A member of the Glasgow Flour Trade Association sold flour to a purchaser (who was not a member of the association), the terms of the contract being contained in sale notes delivered to and accepted by the purchaser. Each sale note contained on the margin these words: "Any dispute under this contract to be settled according to the rules of the Glasgow Flour Trade Association." One of the rules of the association provided that all disputes should be referred to arbitration. No copy of the rules was sent to the purchaser, and it did not appear that he was aware of their terms: —Held, that the purchaser had not received reasonable notice of the condition referring disputes to arbitration, and accordingly that he was not bound by that condition. M'Connell & Reid v. Smith, [1911] S. C. 635—Ct. of Sess.

Arbitration Clause in Contract—Failure of Arbitration—Duty of Court.]—Where an arbitration has become abortive it is the duty of a Court of law, in working out a contract of which such arbitration was part of the machinery, to supply the defect. Cameron v. Cuddy, 83 L. J. P.C. 70; [1914] A.C. 651; 110 L. T. 89—P.C.

Therefore, where in a contract for the sale of goods it was agreed that the purchaser should be entitled to deduct from the price the value of any goods not delivered, such value to be determined by arbitration, and the arbitrators appointed were unable to agree, the purchaser was entitled in an action brought by the vendor to recover the contract price, to apply to the Court to fix the value of the goods not delivered and to deduct it from the price due, without bringing a cross-action. Ib.

Contract with Local Authority—Reference to Engineer Carrying out Work—Action by Contractor.]—A local authority entered into a contract with contractors for the execution of certain sewage works which provided for the works being completed to the satisfaction of a named engineer and maintained for six months afterwards, and which contained a wide arbitration clause referring all disputes to the same engineer. Disputes arose, and the contractors alleged that the engineer had in effect admitted that the works had long since been completed to his satisfaction (which the engineer denied), and that the maintenance period had expired, and brought this action for the balance of the contract price against the local authority. On the summons by the local authority to stay proceedings under section 4 of the Arbitration Act, 1889, —Held, that the action ought to be allowed to proceed—per Cozens-Hardy, M.R., on the ground that the cross-examination of the engineer was essential to the determination of the questions between the parties; per Buckley, L.J., on the ground that section 4 is permissive only, and that the fact that the other member of the Court was of opinion that the matter should not be referred was sufficient reason to enable him to concur, though if it had rested with himself alone he should have directed a stay. Freeman v. Chester Rural Council, 80 L. J. K.B. 695; [1911] 1 K.B. 783; 104 L. T. 368; 75 J. P. 132—C.A.

—— Claim for Extras—Whether within Arbitration Clause.]—Held, on the construction of a sewerage contract that a claim in respect of extras did not fall within the scope of the arbitration clause, and that consequently an action brought to recover the amount of such extras should not be stayed. Taylor v. Western Valleys (Monmouthshire) Sewerage Board, 75 J. P. 409—C.A.

—— Reference of Dispute to Building Owners' Engineer—Dispute Arising on Settlement of Final Account—Probable Conflict of Evidence —Referee in Position of Judge and Witness — Disqualification of Referee — Action to Recover Amount Due.]—The respondents executed certain dock works for the appellants, the owners of the dock, under a contract which provided that disputes between the parties to the contract were to be referred to the appellants' engineer. After the completion of the works, negotiations ensued between the respondents and the engineer with reference to the settlement of the final account, and a bona fide dispute of a substantial character arose between the respondents and the engineer which involved a probable conflict of evidence between them. The respondents having broken off the negotiations commenced an action against the appellants to recover the amount due to them under the contract. An application by the appellants to stay the action having been refused, on appeal, by the Court of Appeal,—Held, that the fact that the engineer, although by no fault of his own, must necessarily be placed in the position of judge and witness, was a sufficient ground why the dispute should not be referred to him under the contract; and that the Court could, under the circumstances and in the exercise of the discretion vested in it by section 4 of the Arbitration Act, 1889, refuse to stay the action. Bristol Corporation v. Aird, 82 L. J. K.B. 684; [1913] A.C. 241; 108 L. T. 434; 77 J. P. 209; 29 T. L .R. 360—H.L. (E.)

Questions of Law — Life Insurance Policy.]—A life insurance policy provided that it should not cover death by war, and the policy contained an arbitration clause. The assured lost his life by the explosion which caused the loss of H.M.S. Bulwark, and his executrix brought an action on the policy against the insurance company. The defendants applied to have the action stayed. The plaintiff contended that as serious questions of law were involved the case ought not to be sent to arbitration:—Held, that the Court was not justified in refusing the application merely because there were important questions of law to be considered, and that as no sufficient reason had been shewn why the contract to submit to arbitration should not be observed the action must be stayed. Lock v. Army, Navy, and General Assurance Association, 31 T. L. R. 297—Astbury, J.

Questions of Law Unsuited for Arbitration — Discretion of Court.] — Where a contract contains an agreement to refer disputes to arbitration, the Court will, as a rule, stay proceedings in an action on the contract, even though difficult questions of law are involved, provided such questions cannot be dealt with until the facts have been ascertained. The action may be allowed to proceed so far as regards matters which are outside the scope of the arbitration clause, and do not involve substantially the same facts and rights as fall to be determined by the arbitrator. Rowe v. Crossley, 108 L. T. 11; 57 S. J. 144—C.A.

Arbitrator Acting Unreasonably—Engineer of Works. — Where in a contract for the execution of works there is a clause referring disputes to an officer—for example, the engineer—of the local authority, and where facts subsequent to the contract have given rise to a substantial dispute in which there are allegations of continued unreasonableness on the part of the engineer, and that is the real dispute between the parties, the Court will not order an action on the contract by the contractor to be stayed under the arbitration clause. Blackwell v. Derby Corporation, 75 J. P. 129—C.A.

Submission to Arbitration — Contract for Construction of Works—Action for Fraudulent Misrepresentation Inducing Contract.]—A contract for the construction of sewerage works for an urban district council contained a clause referring to arbitration any dispute which might arise between the contractor and the council upon or in relation to or in connection with the contract. The contractor brought an action against the council, alleging that he had been induced to enter into the contract by a fraudulent misrepresentation on the part of the defendants as to the nature of the soil on the site of the works, and he claimed damages for such fraudulent misrepresentation, and also claimed for work and labour done :—Held, that the action was not one which could be stayed and referred to arbitration under the arbitration clause. Monro v. Bognor Urban Council, 84 L. J. K.B. 1091; [1915] 3 K.B. 167; 112 L. T. 969; 79 J. P. 286; 13 L. G. R. 431; 59 S. J. 348—C.A.

Lease Containing Arbitration Clause — Action by Lessors Claiming Rectification.]—A lease contained a clause providing that "any dispute, difference, or question which may at any time arise . . . touching the construction, meaning, or effect of these presents, or any clause or thing herein contained, or the rights or liabilities of the said parties respectively, or any of them under these presents or otherwise howsoever in relation to these presents" should be referred to arbitration. An action was commenced by the lessors against the lessees claiming (inter alia) rectification of the lease. The lessees moved, pursuant to section 4 of the Arbitration Act, 1889, that all proceedings in the action should be stayed and that the matters in difference should be referred to arbitration under the terms of the lease :—Held, that a claim for rectification did not fall within the arbitration clause, and therefore that the Court would not stay the action and refer the question to arbitration. Printing Machinery Co. v. Linotype and Machinery, Lim., 81 L. J. Ch. 422; [1912] 1 Ch. 566; 106 L. T. 743; 56 S. J. 271; 28 T. L. R. 224—Warrington, J.

Berth Note—Stevedoring Rate—"Dispute"—"Arising at loading ports."]—The plaintiffs' steamer loaded grain at a foreign port under a berth note which provided that the defendants, the freighters, should be in effect the ship's agents, and should do the stevedoring at a certain rate, and that "in case of any dispute arising at loading ports" it should be submitted to arbitration in the foreign country. The account for the stevedoring was submitted to the master of the steamer, who signed it without objection, and it was sent by the defendants to the plaintiffs, and the amount was deducted from the advance freight due to the plaintiffs. The plaintiffs complained to the defendants in London that the stevedoring rate as shewn in the account was not reckoned in the customary way, and brought an action to recover the amount which they alleged to be overcharged :—Held, that "dispute" meant not "disputation," but "matter in dispute," and therefore that the dispute was one "arising" at the loading port, and should be submitted to arbitration, and the proceedings must be stayed under section 4 of the Arbitration Act, 1889. The Dawlish, 79 L. J. P. 111; [1910] P. 339; 103 L. T. 315; 11 Asp. M.C. 496—D.

Bill of Lading—Arbitration Clause.]—A case of gold coin belonging to the plaintiffs was shipped on board the defendants' German steamship at Hamburg for delivery at a port in South America. The bill of lading, by clause 14, provided that disputes "concerning the interpretation" of the document were to be decided in Hamburg according to German law. The vessel called at Southampton on the outward voyage, failed to deliver the case on arrival in South America, and called again at Southampton on her return voyage, when the plaintiffs arrested her and brought their action in rem in the Admiralty Division. The defendants alleged that the claim was covered by the exceptions in the bill of lading :—Held, that the action involved a dispute "concerning the interpretation" of the bill of lading under clause 14, and must therefore be stayed under section 4 of the Arbitration Act, 1889. The Cap Blanco, 83 L. J. P. 23; [1913] 109 L. T. 672; 12 Asp. M.C. 399; 29 T. L. R. 557—Evans, P. Appeal withdrawn; see 83 L. J. P. 23—C.A.

Charterparty — Arbitration Clause — Bill of Lading—Conditions as per Charterparty—Incorporation of Arbitration Clause — Action for Demurrage.]—A charterparty for the carriage of a cargo of timber stipulated for the discharge of the cargo with customary dispatch and for payment of demurrage in the event of the ship being longer detained, and provided that any dispute or claim arising out of any of the conditions of the charterparty should be settled by arbitration. The bill of lading given for the cargo contained the words

"all other terms and conditions and exceptions of charter to be as per charterparty." The shipowners having brought an action for demurrage against the holders of the bill of lading to whom the cargo had been consigned, —Held, that the arbitration clause of the charterparty was not incorporated into the bill of lading so as to entitle the defendants to have the action stayed. Hamilton v. Mackie (5 T. L. R. 677) followed. The Portsmouth, 81 L. J. P. 17; [1912] A.C. 1; 105 L. T. 257; 12 Asp. M.C. 23; 55 S. J. 615 —H.L. (E.)

Contract—Outbreak of War—Impossibility of Performance—Avoidance of Contract.]—A contract was entered into on August 1, 1914, for the purchase of beetroot sugar to be delivered in the month of August at Hamburg. The contract provided for the reference of all disputes thereunder to arbitration, and it was also provided that in the event of Germany being involved in war with England the contract should be deemed to be closed at the average quotation of the sugar and the accounts made up, and that all differences should be due immediately from one party to the other. On July 31 the German Government had placed an embargo on the exportation of beetroot sugar, and on August 4 war was declared between England and Germany. The sellers contended that the contract had become illegal and void and could not be enforced by either party, and that the arbitration clause therefore could not be applied:—Held (affirming Warrington, J.), that as the outbreak of war had been expressly provided for by the contract, and as in that event there was no obligation to deliver the sugar, but instead of that an obligation to pay an ascertainable sum of cash, the contract had not been avoided by the outbreak of war, and any dispute under it must be referred to arbitration. Held, also, that the embargo on the export of sugar did not render the contract illegal or release the parties to it from the obligation of performance, as it was not necessary for its performance that the sugar should be delivered on board, and it might have been warehoused under the contract. Smith, Coney & Barrett v. Becker, Gray & Co., 84 L. J. Ch. 865; 112 L. T. 914; 31 T. L. R. 151—C.A.

Contract—Outbreak of War—Impossibility of Delivery — Arbitration Clause — Action.]—Before the outbreak of war between England and Germany the plaintiffs contracted to buy from the defendants a quantity of sugar which was in Hamburg and which was to be shipped by the defendants. The contracts provided that in the event of Germany being involved in war with England they should be deemed to be closed, and that if war should prevent shipment any party should be entitled to go to arbitration. Owing to the outbreak of war the defendants were unable to ship the sugar, and the plaintiffs brought an action against the defendants, claiming a declaration that the contracts were suspended or dissolved and an injunction restraining the defendants from proceeding with arbitration. On an application by the defendants for an order that the action be stayed under section 4 of the Arbitration Act, 1889, the Judge refused to make the order:—Held, that as the question between the parties was whether the contracts were alive or dead, it was in the Judge's discretion to say that it was not a proper question to be submitted to arbitration. Grey & Co. v. Tolme (No. 1), 59 S. J. 218; 31 T. L. R. 137—C.A.

"Step in the proceedings"—County Court —Notice of Intention to Defend.]—The plaintiffs had supplied the defendants with certain goods under a contract which contained a term that disputes between the parties should be submitted to arbitration. A sum of money being alleged to be due to the plaintiffs for goods so supplied, proceedings were taken in the County Court for its recovery, and a default summons was served upon the defendants, who filled up the slip attached to the summons giving notice of their intention to defend the action. The defendants subsequently applied to the learned Judge for a stay of the action under section 4 of the Arbitration Act, 1889. The section provides that: "If any party to a submission . . . commences any legal proceedings in any court against any other party to the submission . . . in respect of any matter agreed to be referred, any party to such legal proceedings may at any time after appearance, and before delivering any pleadings or taking any other steps in the proceedings, apply to that court to stay the proceedings, and that court . . . may make an order staying the proceedings." It was contended on behalf of the plaintiffs that the statement by the defendants on the slip attached to the default summons of their intention to defend was a step in the proceedings, since it entitled them to raise any defence other than a special defence, of which notice must be given, and that, consequently, they were not entitled to apply for a stay of the proceedings. The learned Judge gave effect to this contention, and refused to stay the action:—Held, that the giving notice of an intention to defend by filling up the slip attached to the default summons was merely the equivalent of entering appearance in the High Court, and that the defendants had not taken any step in the proceedings after appearance which disentitled them to apply for a stay. Austin and Whiteley v. Bowley, 108 L. T. 921—D.

—— Application for Stay.] — Attendance before the Master and acquiescence without protest in an order which is made subject to the production of a certain document to the Master which is ultimately produced is taking a step in the proceedings within the meaning of section 4 of the Arbitration Act, 1889, and the defendant is thereby precluded from moving to stay proceedings under that section. Cohen v. Arthur, 56 S. J. 344—Neville, J.

Jurisdiction—Award—Condition Precedent— "Dispute arising during tenancy"—Finding of Fact.]—An arbitrator cannot give himself jurisdiction by a wrong decision, collateral to the merits, as to facts on which the limits to his jurisdiction depends. In a case where it was a condition precedent to the arbitrator's jurisdiction that the dispute should have arisen during a tenancy between the plaintiff and the defendant, and where the arbitrator was not authorised by the submission to decide this preliminary question :—Held, that the arbitrator could not clothe himself with jurisdiction by finding this preliminary fact in favour of the plaintiff, so as to bind the defendant. May v. Mills, 30 T. L. R. 287—Lord Coleridge, J.

Powers of Arbitrator — Submission of all Matters in Difference—New Ground of Defence — Amending Points of Defence.] — Where points of claim and points of defence have been delivered by the parties to an arbitration, the arbitrator is not bound to allow an amendment by the defendant setting up a defence not disclosed by the points of defence. It is within the discretion of the arbitrator to admit or refuse to allow such an amendment, but he must exercise his discretion on judicial principles. Crighton v. Law Car and General Insurance Corporation, 80 L. J. K.B. 49; [1910] 2 K.B. 738; 103 L. T. 62—D.

Admission by Arbitrator of Inadmissible Evidence — Legal Misconduct — Inconclusive Award.]—A contract for the sale of sugar contained no provision for the suspension of deliveries "if the production by the sellers was prevented or lessened by causes beyond their control," nor any similar clause. Owing to a cause beyond their control, the production by the sellers was "prevented or lessened," and they suspended delivery. Disputes having arisen, recourse was had to arbitration. A former contract between the parties containing such a suspension clause as the above was produced to the arbitrator by the sellers. The arbitrator made an award simply that "the sellers are entitled to suspend delivery under this contract." The Court were satisfied that, in making this award, the arbitrator was influenced by the terms of the earlier contract : —Held, the award must be set aside, the arbitrator having been guilty of legal misconduct, inasmuch as he had, in making the award, looked to a document other than the contract, which was the only matter before him, or, in other words, had allowed to be given, and had acted upon, evidence which was wholly inadmissible, and which went to the root of the question submitted to him for decision. Held, further, that the award was inconclusive, and on that ground could not stand. Walford, Baker & Co. v. Macfie, 84 L. J. K.B. 2221; 113 L. T. 180—D.

Refusal of Arbitrators to Appoint Umpire—Parties—Service on Arbitrators.]—A dispute arose upon a contract of sale which the parties submitted to arbitration. Arbitrators were appointed who were to appoint an umpire under section 5 of the Arbitration Act, 1889. The purchasers under the contract served a notice on the arbitrators to appoint an umpire, but the arbitrators failed to do so. The purchasers then applied to the Court to appoint an umpire. The arbitrators were made respondents, but the vendors under the contract were not respondents as they were resident outside the jurisdiction. The vendors' arbitrator contended that he was not a proper party to the summons, and that the vendors ought to be made parties. The Master and the Judge in chambers made orders appointing an umpire, with liberty to the vendors to apply to discharge the order, costs to be costs in the arbitration :—Held, that the objection as to the form of the summons was not a valid objection and that the arbitrators were properly brought before the Court. Taylor v. Denny, Mott & Dickson, 82 L. Proceedings Subsequent to Arbitration—Oral Evidence by Arbitrator Amplifying Award—Liability to Cross-examination—Admittance of Evidence in Rebuttal.]—In June, 1913, the claimants, R. & Co., effected an insurance with the respondents, an insurance company, whereby the insurance company agreed that, if at any time during the period covered by the policy the premises of the claimants should be destroyed by fire and their business should be thereby interfered with or interrupted, they would pay to the claimants monthly until such time as the reduction in turnover in consequence of the fire should have ceased (but not exceeding in all nine months), on account of annual net profit and charges as therein set forth, the same percentage on the amount by which the turnover in each month should in consequence of the fire be less than the turnover for the corresponding month of the year preceding the fire as the sum or sums thereby insured should bear to the total of the turnover for the last financial year. It was provided that the amount of the losses under the policy should be assessed by the claimants' auditors, Messrs. L. & G. A condition on the back of the policy provided for reference to arbitration of all differences arising out of the policy. The premises of the claimants were destroyed by fire on July 22, 1913, a date within the period covered by the policy. G., a member of the firm of L. & G., duly assessed the amount of the loss suffered by the claimants in respect of profits for the period of nine months succeeding the fire. Differences having arisen in regard to the payments under the policy, the parties went to arbitration. G. was called as a witness by the claimants at the arbitration proceedings, and stated that although it did not appear on the face of the assessments he was at the time of signing the same satisfied that the losses of the turnover respectively therein stated were in fact sustained in consequence of the fire. There was no suggestion of any fraud on the part of the assessor :—Held, that as G., whether regarded as an arbitrator or an assessor, had been called to give oral testimony he could be cross-examined on all relevant issues, and consequently could be cross-examined here to shew that he had failed to take into account certain considerations necessary for arriving at the reduction in the turnover of the claimants due solely to the fire. Held, also, that the insurance company were entitled to give evidence for the purpose of establishing the same contention. Held, also, that upon the construction of the policy the assessors, if they had properly directed themselves in law, were empowered to determine the amount payable to the assured under the policy, and that such determination would be conclusively binding on the insurance company. Recher v. North British and Mercantile Insurance Co., 84 L. Clause that all Disputes Arising out of Contract be Referred to Arbitration — Jurisdiction of Arbitrators to Find that Custom Exists and Applies to Contract.]—By a contract made in May, 1912, the P. Company sold to the O. Company a specified quantity of Soya beans to be shipped from an Oriental port to Hull, and it was provided that "in case of re-sales copy of original appropriation shall be accepted by buyers," and, further, that all disputes arising out of the contract should be referred to arbitration. By a similar contract made in September, 1912, the P. Company contracted to purchase from the E. Company a like quantity of the same commodity with a view to the fulfilment of the earlier contract. In February, 1913, the E. Company made a tender or appropriation to the P. Company of a shipment by a specified ship, and shortly thereafter the P. Company made a tender of the same shipment to the O. Company. At the time of the tender by the E. Company it was not known, but at the time of the tender by the P. Company it was known as a fact that the ship and cargo were lost. A question arose between the P. Company and the O. Company whether the tender or appropriation by the P. Company was valid, seeing that at the time it was made it was known that the cargo was lost. The question was referred to arbitration, and came before an arbitration committee of the particular trade, which stated a Case raising the question. The Divisional Court, expressing a consultative opinion only, answered the question in the negative, and held that the tender was not valid (see 84 L. J. K.B. 281; [1915] 1 K.B. 233). The matter then went back to the committee, which, notwithstanding the opinion of the Divisional Court, made an award finding that, by the custom of the trade in case of re-sales, buyers impliedly agreed with their sellers to accept the original appropriation, and determining that the tender was valid. The O. Company moved to set aside the award on the ground that it was bad on the face of it. The Divisional Court took the view that it was not competent for the arbitration committee to find conclusively whether or not the custom existed and formed part of the contract, and that if on enquiry it appeared that the custom did not exist, the award ought to be set aside as having been made without jurisdiction, and that Court accordingly made an order adjourning the motion with a view to hearing evidence as to the existence of the custom:—Held, with reluctance and as being bound by authority, that the order of the Divisional Court was right. Hutcheson v. Eaton (13 Q.B. Arbitration Clause in Contract—Dispute—Reference to Arbitrator—Subsequent Action—Award after Action Brought — Plea of Award in Bar of Action—Ouster of Jurisdiction.]—The award of an arbitrator purporting to determine a dispute is no bar to an action pending at the date of the award in respect of the same dispute, where the agreement for arbitration has been entered into before the action was brought and the award has been made without notice to the plaintiff and without his knowledge or consent, and where an order to stay the action has not been obtained under section 4 of the Arbitration Act, 1889:—So held by Fletcher Moulton, L.J., and Farwell, L.J. Doleman v. Ossett Corporation, 81 L. J. K.B. 1092; [1912] 3 K.B. 257; 107 L. T. 581; 76 J. P. 457; 10 L. G. R. 915—C.A.

A contract between the plaintiffs and the defendants contained a clause providing that any dispute thereunder should be referred to and decided by the defendants' engineer, who should be competent to act without formal reference or notice to the parties or either of them, and whose awards should be final and binding upon the parties. Disputes within the scope of that clause arose between the parties. The plaintiffs brought an action against the defendants in respect of these disputes, and no order to stay the action was obtained under section 4 of the Arbitration Act, 1889. Subsequently, during the pendency of the action, without previous notice to the plaintiffs, and without their knowledge or consent, an award was made by the engineer determining the disputes. The action proceeded, and the pleadings raised questions of fact which were substantially the same as those that had been decided by the engineer, and also the question of law whether in the circumstances the award was conclusive and binding on the plaintiffs and prevented them from maintaining the action. An order was made that the question of law should be tried before the other questions in the action, and the Judge who tried it decided that the award of the engineer was binding on the parties, though made after writ:—Held, by the Court of Appeal, that this decision was wrong and should be reversed, and that the action should proceed to trial. Ib.

Costs of and Incident to Arbitration—Case Remitted to Arbitrator to Deal with such Costs—Death of Arbitrator.]—An arbitrator stated a Special Case, and directed that if any of his alternative awards in favour of the claimants were upheld by the Court, the parties to the arbitration were to pay the costs of and incidental to the arbitration in certain proportions. The Court of Appeal decided that the claimants had no right to the return of any money, and, allowing the appeal of the corporation with costs, remitted the Case to the arbitrator for him to deal with the costs of and incidental to the arbitration. The arbitrator having died, a summons was taken out by the corporation to tax these costs according to the award:—Held, that either intentionally or per incuriam, no costs were given in the award in the events which had happened, and therefore there could be no order to tax under the award. Stanley and Nuneaton Corporation, In re, 59 S. Summons Charging that Defendant did "buy, detain, or receive military property"—One Offence.]—A summons under the Army Act, 1881, s. 156, sub-s. Bribery of Army Officer to Shew Favour in Matter of Canteen Contracts.] — It is a common law misdemeanour for an officer who has a duty to do something in which the public are interested to receive a bribe either to act in a manner contrary to his duty or to shew favour in the discharge of his functions. It is therefore a misdemeanour at common law for the colonel of a regiment to receive a bribe to shew favour in the matter of a canteen contract for the regiment. Rex v. Whitaker, 84 L. J. Prohibition of Importation of Arms—Proclamation—Seizure—Forfeiture.]—Section 43 of the Customs Consolidation Act, 1876, provides that "The importation of arms, ammunition, gunpowder, or any other goods may be prohibited by proclamation or Order in Council":—Held (by Cherry, L.C.J., and Dodd, J.; Kenny, J., diss.), that in a proclamation under the section the area into which importation is prohibited may be limited, and that a Royal proclamation prohibiting the importation of arms, ammunition, and the component parts of arms, empty cartridge cases, explosives and combustibles for warlike purposes into Ireland, was valid under the authority of the section. Held, also (by Cherry, L.C.J., and Dodd, J.), that where goods are imported in violation of such a proclamation, the fact that a Customs officer who seizes the goods causes or permits them to be destroyed before proceedings are taken to have them condemned, does not give the owner of the goods any right of action against him. Hunter v. Coleman, [1914] 2 Ir. Liability of Commanding Officer of Volunteer Forces for Bank Overdraft.]—In October, 1906, on the instructions of the commanding officer of a Volunteer regiment, an account was opened with a bank, headed "R.S.F. 2nd Volunteer Battalion Finance Committee.

Cheques to be signed by any two members of the Committee." The sums paid to the credit of the account consisted mainly of sums paid directly to the bank by the War Office, while the drafts upon the account were made by cheques stamped "On his Majesty's Service," and signed by two members of the finance committee, one of whom was, as a rule, though not in every instance, the commanding officer. On the transference of the corps to the Territorial Force in 1908 there was a large debit balance on the account, for which the War Office and the county association refused to accept liability. The bank sued the commanding officer for the amount of the overdraft :—Held, that the defender was not liable as, first, neither section 25 of the Volunteer Act, 1863, nor the Volunteer Regulations of 1901 (which vested the property of the regiment in the commanding officer) imposed any liability upon him for such a debt; and secondly, it was not proved that he had as an individual entered into any contract with the bank which could infer personal liability against himself. National Bank of Scotland v. Shaw, [1913] S. Of Part of a Debt.]—Part of a debt is not assignable within the provisions of the Judicature Act. Opinion of Bray, J., in Forster v. Baker (79 L. J. K.B. 664; [1910] 2 K.B. 636) concurred in. Decision of Darling, J., in Skipper & Tucker v. Holloway (79 L. J. K.B. 91; [1910] 2 K.B. 630) dissented from. But the assignee of part of a debt may maintain a common law action in respect of such part, where all persons interested in the debt or in resisting it are parties to the action. Conlan v. Carlow County Council, [1912] 2 Ir. Assignability of Right to Damages for Waste.]—An assignment of the right to recover damages for voluntary waste is void both at law and in equity. Defries v. Milne, 82 L. J. Ch. 1; [1913] 1 Ch. 98; 107 L. T. 593; 57 S. J. 27—C.A.

By deed dated November 9, 1906, the plaintiff obtained a lease of premises for a term of some 41½ years. One of the lessee's covenants was substantially to repair and maintain the premises. The plaintiff took the lease as trustee for a company, and the company at once went into occupation of the premises. In 1909 the company went into voluntary liquidation, and on May 2, 1911, the liquidator agreed to sell the tenant's fixtures on the premises to the defendant, and by clause 14 of the agreement the company granted him a licence to go into occupation of the premises until September, 1911, upon certain conditions, which included provisions that the defendant was not to do anything which if done by the lessee would be a breach of any of the covenants and conditions in the lease, and that he was to make good to the satisfaction of the lessor all damages done in removing the tenant's fixtures. On November 6, 1911, the company released its interest in the premises to the plaintiff, and assigned to him the benefit and advantage of clause 14 of the agreement of May 2, 1911, and the full power and authority to enforce the obligations of the defendant under that clause. In an action by the plaintiff claiming damages from the defendant for breaches of clause 14 and for wilful waste, Warrington, J., dismissed so much of the action as related to the claim for wilful waste :—Held, by the Court of Appeal—first, that the plaintiff had no direct claim against the defendant because he had not himself sustained any damage through the alleged acts of wilful waste; and secondly, that he had no indirect claim in respect of damages sustained by the company because the deed of November 6, 1911, did not contain an assignment of the company's right to such damages, and because such an assignment would in any case be void as being an assignment of a right to recover damages in respect of a tort. Ib.

Damages when Recovered in Pending Action of Tort.]—An assignment for valuable consideration by the plaintiff in a pending action of tort to one of his creditors of the sum of money to which he may become entitled by virtue of the action, inasmuch as it is not an assignment of a mere right of action, but of property to come into existence in the future, is not invalid as savouring of champerty or maintenance. Glegg v. Bromley, 81 L. Contract to Supply Goods—Rights of Seller and Assignee.]—By a contract in writing the defendants agreed to supply B. H. with 10,000 tons of coal for delivery between July, 1911, and June 30, 1912, in about equal monthly quantities. The defendants had had business dealings with B. H. for some years, knew the class of business he was carrying on, and for personal reasons had fixed a specially low price for the coal in question. On February 13, 1912, B. H. assigned to the plaintiff this contract, together with his business of a coal merchant, but the defendants refused to recognise the assignment or make further deliveries under the contract :—Held, that the contract was not one which was assignable at law. Cooper v. Micklefield Coal and Lime Co., 107 L. Covenant—Mortgage—Transfer by Executors of Deceased Mortgagor — Covenant of Indemnity by Transferee — Assignment of Benefit of Covenant—Action against Transferee by Assignee of Benefit of Covenant—Liability.]—The executors of a mortgagor who died insolvent assured the mortgaged property to a transferee, who covenanted to pay to the mortgagees the principal moneys secured to them, and to indemnify the executors and the estate and effects of the deceased mortgagor against all proceedings in respect of the non-payment of the mortgage debts :—Held, that a deed by which the executors purported without consideration to assign the benefit of the covenant of indemnity to an assignee was inoperative, and that the covenant was not capable of assignment. Rendall v. Morphew, 84 L. Equitable Assignment — Loan to Building Society—Charge on Property—Action for Receiver—Secured Creditor.]—The plaintiff advanced money to a building society for the repayment of which the funds and property of the society were made liable, and brought an action for a receiver and declaration of charge. The society alleged that the plaintiff had no cause of action as a secured creditor, and moved to stay proceedings :—Held, that the funds of the society being appropriated for the repayment of the loan, there was a good equitable assignment, and therefore a good cause of action. Baker v. Landport and Mid-Somerset Benefit Building Society, 56 S. J. 224—Eve, J.

Assignment—Equitable Assignment—Existing Rights—Whether Consideration Required.]—The plaintiff's wife, having lent S. 100*l.* and taken from her an I O U, afterwards asked S. to pay M. the 100*l.* when due. S. agreed and the plaintiff's wife tore up the I O U, and S. gave M. a new I O U for 100*l.* payable to M. The plaintiff's wife then died, and the plaintiff, as the administrator of her estate, brought an action against S. and M. to recover the amount :—Held, that there was a good equitable assignment of the 100*l.* as there was sufficient consideration to support it, and therefore the action failed. Semble, the rule that for every equitable assignment there must be consideration applies only to rights of property which are not yet in existence, and though such an assignment of existing rights, if it is made without consideration, is revocable by the assignor, yet, if he dies without revoking it, it is binding on his executor. German v. Yates, 32 T. L. R. 52—Lush, J.

3. Construction and Validity.

See also Vol. I. 844, 1159.

Validity—Consideration—Antecedent Debt—Forbearance to Sue.]—Though the mere existence of an antecedent debt is not of itself valuable consideration for an assignment by a debtor to his creditor, yet such a debt, coupled with a promise, express or implied, by the assignee of some benefit to the assignor, such as forbearance to sue or a fresh advance, connected with the assignment, will constitute such valuable consideration. In the absence of evidence to the contrary, the law will presume from the fact of such an assignment a promise by the assignee of forbearance to sue for his debt. Glegg v. Bromley, 81 L. J. K.B. 1081; 106 L. T. 825—C.A.

—— Intention to Defeat and Delay Creditors —13 Eliz. c. 5.]—A deed of assignment made in good faith by a debtor in favour of his creditor is not rendered invalid under the statute 13 Eliz. c. 5, by reason of its being made with the express intention of defeating some other particular creditor or creditors of the assignor. Ib.

A wife who was in debt to her husband for a large advance executed a deed of assignment by which she assigned to him the sum of money to which she might become entitled by virtue of a pending action of slander in which she was plaintiff. Her husband then made a further advance to enable her to prosecute the action. The wife subsequently recovered a verdict in the action for damages. A judgment creditor of the wife thereupon served a garnishee order nisi attaching the damages which she had recovered :—Held, that the deed of assignment was not invalid either for want of consideration or as savouring of champerty, or under the statute 13 Eliz. c. 5, and that the husband, as assignee under the deed, was entitled to the damages recovered by the wife as against the execution creditor. Ib.

Contract Debt — Action by Assignee — Defence — Claim to Unliquidated Damages against Assignor.] — The plaintiff was the assignee of the unpaid balance of the price of a newspaper sold by one P. to the defendants. The sale had been induced by misrepresentations of P. as to the value of the newspaper by which the defendants had sustained damage equal to the sum sued for :—Held, that the defendants were not entitled to avail themselves of such damage by way of defence to the plaintiff's claim. Young v. Kitchin (47 L. Set-off—Mortgagee of Reversion and Tenant — Action by Mortgagee for Rent — Counterclaim by Lessee for Damages against Lessor —Damages for Breach of Covenant in Building Agreement.]—The rule that an assignee of a chose in action can set off a claim for damages against the assignor arising out of the same transaction has no application as between a lessee and a mortgagee of the reversion. The rule that a purchaser or mortgagee is bound by the equities of a tenant in possession does not apply to the right of a tenant to damages for breach of a covenant in a building agreement. Reeves v. Pope, 83 L. Assignment by One Party—Right of Other Party to Set off against Assignee.]—The defendants, who were tenants of an exhibition ground, entered into a contract with C. by which C. undertook to equip part of the ground and was to receive half of certain takings. C. was also to pay part of the cost of advertising, and if the defendants had to pay any part of C.'s share thereof they were to have a lien on his share of the receipts for admission, but this lien was not to operate until payment of a mortgage by which C. mortgaged to the plaintiffs his share in the profits. The defendants were also to supply C. with electricity, for which he was to pay, the accounts to be rendered weekly. On a motion by the plaintiffs to restrain the defendants from parting with moneys received for admission the defendants claimed to set off from the share of receipts due to the plaintiffs as C.'s mortgagees money due from C. to the defendants for electricity :—Held, that, although as a general principle a claim arising under the same contract might be set off against an assignee of a party thereto, yet as the defendants recognised the mortgage as part of the venture, and as the lien was not to operate till after the discharge of the mortgage, the defendants had no right of set-off against the plaintiffs until after its discharge. Phœnix Assurance Co. v. Earl's Court, Lim., 30 T. L. R. 50—C.A.

Notice of Assignment of Debt—Validity of Notice — Chose in Action.] — The defendant owed money to one D. in respect of money lent. D. in December, 1907, entered into a deed of arrangement by which he made an absolute assignment of all his property both real and personal to trustees for the benefit of his creditors. In April, 1908, the solicitors for the trustees of the deed of arrangement wrote the following letter to the defendant : "Re Yourself and Walter Derham. The trustees of the deed of arrangement dated the 5th December, 1907, and executed by Mr. Walter Derham, have instructed us to apply to you for an account showing all dealings between yourself and Mr. Walter Derham. The reason of this application is that there appears from Mr. Derham's books to be a considerable debt due from you to him for money advanced " :—Held, that the letter gave to the defendant express notice in writing of the deed of arrangement under which the debt was absolutely assigned to the trustees, within the meaning of section 25, sub-section 6 of the Judicature Act, 1873, so as to entitle the trustees to sue the defendant for the debt due from him to D. Denney v. Conklin, 82 L. Barrister's Fees—Whether a Debt.]—Fees received by a solicitor for payment to a barrister for professional services are not a debt, and therefore garnishee proceedings cannot be used to attach them in the hands of the solicitor. Where a garnishee order nisi has been obtained by a judgment creditor from a Registrar of the Probate, Divorce, and Admiralty Division, attaching debts alleged to be owing to the judgment debtor from the garnishees, there is a right of appeal to a Judge not only on the part of the garnishee, but also on the part of the judgment debtor and of an assignee to whom the alleged debts have been assigned by the judgment debtor. Wells v. Wells, 83 L. Yearly Income or Salary Voted to M.P. out of the Public Funds — Irish Member a Bankrupt when Elected.]—The respondent, a bankrupt on his own petition, was elected M.P. for an Irish constituency, and received the 400*l.* a year voted to be paid to Members of Parliament by resolution of the House of Commons. The appellant, as the official assignee in his bankruptcy, obtained an order in the King's Bench (Bankruptcy) Ireland, that the respondent should, out of his Parliamentary salary, pay 200*l.* a year to the appellant for the benefit of his creditors:—Held, that the payment to members was not in the nature of a dole, and was attachable for the benefit of creditors. National Insurance—Panel Doctor's Fees—Public Policy.]—Where an insurance committee under the National Insurance Act, 1911, has received from the National Insurance Commissioners funds for distribution among the doctors on the panel, there is a debt due and accruing to each of the doctors who have done the work, and such debt may be attached by garnishee proceedings inasmuch as it is not against public policy that it should be attachable. O'Driscoll v. Manchester Insurance Committee, 84 L. Debenture-holder — Judgment Creditor — No Appointment of Receiver—Garnishee Order—Priority.]—The plaintiff, a creditor of the defendant company, having recovered judgment against them, obtained on April 24, 1909, a garnishee order nisi against the company's bankers attaching the sum of 61*l.* On May 14 following, the claimant, who was a debenture-holder of the defendant company, and who had given them notice to pay off the debenture, gave notice to the plaintiff, the company, and the bank, claiming to be entitled to the sum which the plaintiff had garnished. The claimant did not, however, obtain the appointment of a receiver or take any other step to enforce his security:—Held, that the plaintiff was entitled to have the garnishee order nisi made absolute. Evans v. Rival Granite Quarries Co., 79 L. Garnishee Order—No Cause Shewn by Garnishee Owing to Mistake—Order Absolute—Jurisdiction to Set Aside Order.]—The plaintiff had obtained a garnishee order attaching a debt alleged to be due to the defendant by a county council and calling on the county council to shew cause why it should not be paid to the plaintiff. This order was served on the county council. Prior to the date of the order the debt had been assigned for value by the defendant to third parties, and notice of the assignment given to the county council. Owing to a mistake on the part of the secretary of the county council, no cause was shewn against the conditional order and it was made absolute:—Held, that the Court had jurisdiction to set aside the absolute order, and that in the special circumstances it should be set aside. O'Brien v. Killeen, [1914] 2 Ir. Judgment Debt Payable on a Certain Date—Issue of Garnishee Proceedings before that Date — Judgment "Unsatisfied."] — A judgment in the ordinary County Court form adjudging that the plaintiff recover from the defendant a certain sum, and ordering that the defendant pay that sum to the Registrar of the Court on a specified future date, cannot, before that date has arrived, be properly described as "still unsatisfied" within the meaning of Order XXVI. rule 1 of the County Court Rules, 1903-1909, and therefore the plaintiff is not, before that date, entitled under that rule to take garnishee proceedings for the purpose of obtaining payment to him of a debt due from another person to the defendant. White v. Stenning, 80 L. Wilful Disobedience to Restraining Order—No Limit of Time in Judgment.]—The Court granted an injunction restraining the defendant in the action from residing in the house of the plaintiff. No time was limited by the judgment within which the terms of the injunction were to be complied with, nor was there any memorandum of indorsement on the copy of the judgment served on the defendant, as provided by the Irish Order XLI. rule 4 [corresponding to the English Order XLI. rule 5]. The defendant, in disobedience to the injunction, continued to reside in the house of the plaintiff :—Held, that Order XLI. rule 4 [Order XLI. rule 5] did not apply to a prohibitive order of the kind, and that the defendant should be attached for his disobedience. Murphy v. Willcocks, [1911] 1 Ir. R. 402—Barton, J.

Grounds of Application—Service.]—Upon motion for attachment against two directors of a company, for disobedience to an order appointing a receiver of certain profits of the company, the grounds of the application must be stated in accordance with Order LII. rule 4; it is not sufficient compliance with the rule merely to serve a copy of the order of Court with the notice of motion. The order might be disobeyed in several ways, and the particular breach alleged must be specified. Brammall v. Mutual Industrial Corporation, 84 L. J. Ch. 474; 112 L. T. 1071; 59 S. Limited Company—Rule Nisi—Infliction of Fine.]—Where a rule nisi has been granted calling upon a limited company to shew cause why a writ of attachment should not issue against it for contempt of Court, the company, though incapable of being imprisoned, may in a proper case be punished by the infliction of a fine. Rex v. Hammond & Co.; Robinson, Ex parte, 83 L. AUCTION AND AUCTIONEER.

Sufficiency of Memorandum.]—The plaintiff instructed an auctioneer to put up for sale by public auction the grazing of a portion of her lands for a period of six months. The auctioneer duly offered the grazing for sale, and accepted the bid of the defendant, making at the same time the following entry in his book: "Miss Crane's meadows—Bernard Naughten, 13*l.* 10*s.*":—Held, that if the Statute of Frauds applied to such a contract, the above note or memorandum was insufficient to satisfy the statute. Crane v. Naughten, [1912] 2 Ir. R. 318—K.B. D.

—— Sale of Land—Auction—Entry by Auctioneer of Name of Purchaser on Margin of Particulars of Sale.]—An auctioneer at a sale of land entered on the margin of his copy of the particulars and conditions of sale, against the lot, the name of the highest bidder for the lot and the amount of the bid, but there was nothing to indicate that he was the purchaser of the lot. The bidder did not sign the memorandum of agreement contained in the particulars or pay any deposit :—Held, that the entry by the auctioneer was not a sufficient note or memorandum in writing to satisfy the requirements of section 4 of the Statute of Frauds. Dewar v. Mintoft, 81 L. Sale by Auction — Prior Agreement with Auctioneer as to Disposal of Proceeds of Sale—Subsequent Agreement by Seller with Purchaser to Set off Price of Goods Purchased against Debt—Refusal of Purchaser to Pay Price to Auctioneer—Action by Auctioneer to Recover Whole of Purchase Price—Equitable Defence of Set-off—Right of Purchaser to Surplus only of Total Amount Realised by Sale.] —The plaintiffs, who were auctioneers, were employed by F. to sell certain cattle for him by auction. Prior to the sale F. had given orders to certain of his creditors directing the plaintiffs to pay these creditors out of the proceeds of the intended sale, and the plaintiffs agreed to act upon these orders. Pending the sale F. had also become indebted to the plaintiffs for money lent and paid and for services rendered upon the terms that they should repay themselves out of the proceeds of the sale. The sale was held upon the condition (inter alia) that the price of any cattle bought was to be paid to the plaintiffs. Whilst the sale was proceeding an arrangement was entered into between F. and the defendant, to whom F. was indebted to a considerable extent, that the price of any cattle bought by the defendant might be set off against F.'s debt to the defendant, but this arrangement was not communicated to the plaintiffs either during, or directly after, the sale. The defendant bought a number of cattle at the sale, the purchase price of which exceeded the amount of F.'s debt to him, and being known to the plaintiffs was allowed to remove the cattle without having paid for them. Excluding the amount of the defendant's purchases, the plaintiffs received sufficient money to satisfy their lien for commission and charges in respect of the sale, but not sufficient to pay F.'s creditors or their own debt; but, including the amount of the defendant's purchases, the sale realised sufficient to satisfy all claims, leaving a small surplus. The defendant having refused to pay the plaintiffs the price of the cattle which he had bought, upon the ground that he was entitled to rely on the arrangement with F. as to set-off, the plaintiff brought an action to recover the whole of the price of the cattle bought by the defendant. Before action the defendant tendered and subsequently paid to the plaintiffs the difference between the amount of F.'s debt to him and the price of the cattle which he had bought:—Held, that the defendant was not entitled, under the circumstances, to set up as an equitable defence to the plaintiffs' claim the arrangement as to set-off made between him and F., inasmuch as such arrangement could not defeat the previous agreement between F. and the plaintiffs as to the disposition of the proceeds of the sale, on the faith of which agreement the plaintiffs had acted, and that the defendant was only entitled to be paid by the plaintiffs the surplus remaining after deducting from the total amount realised by the sale the debts owing to the other creditors, as well as what was owing to the plaintiffs in respect of F.'s debt to them and their commission and charges for conducting the sale, this surplus being the only amount which the plaintiffs would have been bound to pay over to F. Manley v. Berkett, 81 L. Sale by Auction—Auctioneer Intending to Sell one Commodity—Purchaser Intending to Bid for a Different Commodity — Parties to Sale not ad Idem—Validity of Contract.]—The plaintiffs employed an auctioneer to sell a quantity of Russian hemp and tow, samples of which were on view at certain show rooms. The catalogue prepared by the auctioneer contained the shipping mark "S.L." and the numbers of the bales in two lots, one being hemp and the other tow, but the catalogue did not disclose this difference in the nature of the commodity. At the show rooms bales from each lot were on view, and on the floor in front of the bales was written in chalk "S.L. 63 to 67" opposite the samples of hemp, and "S.L. 68 to 79" opposite the samples of tow. The defendants' manager inspected the samples of hemp, but not the samples of tow. The defendants' buyer bid for the first lot, which was knocked down to him. He then bid for the second lot, the tow, under the belief that it was hemp, and it was knocked down to him. In an action brought by the plaintiffs to recover the price of the tow, the jury found that the auctioneer intended to sell tow; that the defendants' buyer intended to bid for hemp; that the auctioneer believed that the bid was made under a mistake, but that the mistake was merely as to value; that the form of the catalogue and the negligence of the defendants' manager in not more closely examining and identifying the goods contributed to the mistake:—Held, that the parties were never ad idem as to the subject-matter of the alleged sale; that there was therefore no valid contract, and that the plaintiffs were not entitled to recover. Scriven v. Hindley, 83 L. Wharfinger—Lighterman—Loss of Goods while in Custody of Bailee—Proof of Negligence on Part of Bailee—Causal Connection between Negligence and Loss — Burden of Proof — Terms of Contract of Lighterage — Exemption from Liability — "Loss of or damage to goods however caused which can be covered by insurance."] — The defendant, who was a wharfinger, contracted to lighter goods of the plaintiffs from a vessel lying in the Thames to a wharf. By the terms of the contract the defendant was not to be responsible "for any loss of or damage to goods however caused which can be covered by insurance." The defendant's barge with the goods on board was lying at the wharf, when, in the absence of the man whose duty it was to look after the barge, from some unexplained cause the barge was submerged and part of the goods was washed away and part damaged. The plaintiffs having brought an action to recover damages for negligence, Pickford, J., at the trial found that there had been negligence on the part of the defendant's servant, but he gave judgment for the defendant on the ground that the plaintiffs had failed to shew that that negligence was the cause of the loss :—Held, by the Court of Appeal, that, the defendant being bailee of goods, and the goods having been lost while in the custody of the defendant, and the plaintiffs having proved negligence on the part of the defendant which might have contributed to the loss, the burden was on the defendant to shew that the negligence was not the cause of the loss. But held (Buckley, L.J., dissenting), that the defendant was entitled to retain the judgment in his favour on the ground that by the terms of the contract he was relieved from liability for negligence. Price & Co. v. Union Lighterage Co. (73 L. Warrants for Cargo — Owners' Request to Warehousemen to Issue Warrants—Lighterage by Owners — Sale — Damage to Cargo — Liability of Warehousemen to Purchasers — Indemnity from Owners.] — The plaintiffs agreed with the defendants to store a cargo of wheat which belonged to the defendants and was on board a steamer in dock. The defendants employed the lightermen, and after a small portion had been delivered to the plaintiffs the defendants requested the plaintiffs to issue three warrants for the wheat on the steamer and to make them deliverable to the defendants or their indorsees, in order that the defendants might sell the wheat. The plaintiffs made out the warrants and the defendants sold the wheat, but when it was delivered to the purchasers it was found to be unsound, owing to the leakiness of a barge and exposure to weather, and consequently the plaintiffs became liable to the purchasers for damages for failure to satisfy their warrants to deliver sound wheat. In an action by the plaintiffs against the defendants for an indemnity :—Held, that as the plaintiffs had issued the warrants at the request of the defendants, there was an implied contract by the defendants to indemnify the plaintiffs for loss to which the plaintiffs were subjected in consequence of their having issued the warrants, and that the plaintiffs were entitled to the indemnity claimed. Groves v. Webb, 31 T. L. R. 548—Scrutton, J.

Pony Left in Custody of Vendor — Injury Caused to Pony—Vendor Unable to Explain how Injuries Occurred—Liability of Vendor.] —An agreement was made for the purchase of a pony by the plaintiff from the defendants, and it was arranged that the pony should be left in the custody of the defendants for some days. While the pony remained in the custody of the defendants it was injured, and the plaintiff claimed to recover damages in respect thereof. The defendants did not shew how the injuries were caused or establish that they had taken reasonable care of the pony :—Held, that the defendants were liable, inasmuch as they were, as gratuitous bailees, under an obligation to take such care of the pony as a reasonably prudent owner would take of his own property, and they had failed to shew that they had taken such care of the pony. Wiehe v. Dennis, 29 T. L. R. 250—Scrutton, J.

Shares—Right to Delivery to Owner—Position of Bailee.]—The plaintiff, a British subject, instructed his London bankers to transfer certain shares to the defendants "to the order of" a German bank, which had arranged to transfer them to New York. The shares were accordingly handed over to the defendants "to the order of" the German bank, but the latter failed to give directions for their transfer to New York, and when war broke out between England and Germany the shares were still in the defendants' hands. The plaintiff claimed them back from the defendants and brought an action for their delivery to him. The German bank had no lien upon the shares :—Held, that as the plaintiff had a right, as against the German bank, to the delivery of the shares, the defendants were bound to hand them over to the plaintiff. Wetherman v. London and Liverpool Bank of Commerce, 31 T. Goods Claimed by Person other than Bailor —Order of Magistrate to Deliver up Goods—Duty of Bailee to Give Notice of Claim to Bailor — Negligence of Bailee.] — A married woman, who had been deserted by her husband, deposited some goods and chattels, which were her own property, with the defendant to warehouse for her for reward. A short time afterwards the husband claimed the goods from the defendant, who refused to give them up without the consent of the wife or a magistrate's order. A representative of the defendant accompanied the husband to a police Court, and, when the husband applied to the magistrate for a summons, the representative informed the magistrate that the goods had been deposited with the defendant by the wife. The magistrate granted a summons, and at the hearing four days afterwards made an order under section 40 of the Metropolitan Police Courts Act, 1839, for delivery up of the goods by the defendant to the husband, who thereupon removed the goods. The defendant, although he knew the wife's address, did not inform her of the claim made by her husband to the goods, or of the summons, until after the order had been made. The wife sued the defendant to recover possession of the goods or their value. The County Court Judge directed the jury that the defendant would be responsible to the plaintiff for the loss if he by his negligence allowed the order to be made without giving any notice to the plaintiff. The jury found that the magistrate's order was obtained through the negligence of the defendant, and the County Court Judge gave judgment for the plaintiff :—Held, that judgment had been rightly given for the plaintiff. Ranson v. Platt, 80 L. Money Wrongfully Appropriated—Ratification of Wrongful Act by True Owner — Liability to Refund.]—A volunteer receiving money, belonging to another, from a person who has obtained such money by a wrongful act, made rightful by imputed consent, resulting retrospectively from such ratification, cannot hold the money as against the true owner. Such volunteer is liable, like the person from whom he obtained the money, and cannot be in a better position than he would have been in had the person, through whom the money was obtained, been the agent of the true owner to apply the money to a specific purpose other than that of giving it to such volunteer. Lyons v. O'Brien, [1911] 2 Ir. Warehousemen—Lien—General Lien.] — A company imported frozen meat from Australia to England. The plaintiffs procured a credit for the company with a bank by putting their names as drawers on bills of exchange drawn on the company, which the bank discounted. With the money thus raised the plaintiffs paid for frozen meat shipped from Australia to England under bills of lading which made the meat deliverable to the order of the company. These bills of lading were pledged with the bank as security for the bills of exchange being met. The meat when landed in this country was, by arrangement with the bank, stored by the company with the defendants, whose landing receipts contained the following condition: "Goods are only received subject to a general lien for all charges accrued and accruing against the storer or for any other moneys due from the owners of the goods. . . ." The company having failed to meet certain of the bills of exchange, the plaintiffs, as drawers of the bills, had to pay them. The plaintiffs then received the bills of lading from the bank and claimed delivery of the meat from the defendants:—Held, that as the bank consented to the storage of the meat with the defendants upon terms which included a general lien, the defendants were entitled to enforce as against the plaintiffs, as succeeding to the rights and obligations of the bank, their general lien on the meat in their store for the whole of the charges due to the defendants from the company. Jowitt v. Union Cold Storage Co., 82 L. Sale of Bread Otherwise than by Weight—Sale of Loaf of Common Shape—Loaf Put in Bag — Notice on Bag that Loaf Weighed 1¾ lb.—Notice not Brought to Attention of Purchaser.] — By section 4 of the London Bread Act, 1822, all bread sold within the limits of the Act must be sold by weight, and any baker or seller of bread selling or causing to be sold bread "in any other manner than by weight" is subject to a penalty. The appellants' servant, who was in charge of a baker's cart, was asked for a loaf of bread, for which the purchaser paid 2¾*d.* The servant put a loaf of bread into a bag on which was printed a notice that the appellants sold the loaves as weighing 1¾ lb. He did not weigh the loaf, nor was he asked by the purchaser to do so. The purchaser was not told the exact weight of the loaf, nor was his attention called to the notice on the bag, and the purchaser, who had not previously bought bread of the appellants, never read it. The purchaser, however, expected to receive a 2 lb. loaf, the current price of which in that neighbourhood was 2¾*d.* The loaf which he received was of a common shape sold by every baker. The loaf when weighed by the respondent was found to weigh nearly three ounces short of two pounds. The practice at the appellants' bakery was for the dough to be weighed at 2 lb. 3 oz. before baking, and after baking each loaf was weighed at a weight well over 1¾ lb. The loaf that was sold had been weighed that morning before leaving the bakery:—Held (Lush, J., dissenting), that, as the bread was not weighed at the time of sale nor the notice on the bag brought to the attention of the purchaser, the bread was not sold by weight, in accordance with the London Bread Act, 1822, notwithstanding that the loaf had been weighed before it left the appellants' bakery. Held further, that the Justices were entitled, on the evidence, to hold that an offence had been committed, as selling by weight within the Act of 1822 means selling by the true weight of the bread sold. Lyons & Co. v. Houghton, 84 L. J. K.B. 979; [1915] 1 K.B. 489; 112 L. T. 771; 79 J. P. 233; 13 L. G. R. 605; 31 T. L. R. 135—D.

Sale of Bread—Delivery by Bicycle—Duty to Carry Beam and Scales—"Carriage."] — By the Bread Act, 1836, s. 7, "Every baker or seller of bread . . . and every journeyman, servant, or other person employed by such baker or seller of bread, who shall convey or carry out bread for sale in and from any cart or other carriage, shall be provided with and shall constantly carry in such cart or other carriage a correct beam and scales with proper weights . . . in order that all bread sold by every such baker or seller of bread, or by his or her journeyman, servant, or other person, may from time to time be weighed in the presence of the purchaser or purchasers thereof . . .; and in case any such baker or seller of bread, or his or her journeyman, servant, or other person, shall at any time carry out or deliver any bread without being provided with such beam and scales with proper weights . . . then and in every such case every such baker or seller of bread shall for every such offence" be liable to a penalty. The appellant, a baker, sent out one of his servants to deliver bread on a bicycle to which was attached by means of a strap a basket containing loaves. The appellant's servant sold one of the loaves to a purchaser, but not having been provided with scales and weights was unable to weigh it. Upon an information under the above enactment, the Justices convicted the appellant:—Held, that there was evidence on which the Justices were entitled to find that the bicycle and basket, as used by the appellant's servant, was a "carriage" within the meaning of section 7, and that the conviction must therefore be affirmed. Pollard v. Turner, 82 L. J. K.B. 30; [1912] 3 K.B. 625; 107 L. T. 792; 77 J. P. 53; 11 L. G. R. 42; 23 Cox C.C. 233; 29 T. L. R. 34—D.

Obligation to Carry Weights Suited to Weigh the Bread Purported to be Sold.] — The respondent carried out for sale in his cart loaves each of which was reputed to weigh 2 lb. To enable him to weigh the bread he was provided with a beam-scale and a 2 lb. weight only, and if a customer asked for a loaf to be weighed and it was found to be under 2 lb. his custom was to cut off and supply a piece from another loaf sufficient to make up the weight to 2 lb. :—Held, that the respondent had contravened section 7 of the Bread Act, 1836, in failing to carry with him proper weights which would shew the exact weight of the bread he purported to sell. Turner v. Holder, 80 L. Sale from Van on Road.]—Section 4 of the Bread (Ireland) Act, 1838, which requires that all bread (with certain exceptions) sold in Ireland shall be sold by weight only, and not by measure, applies to sales from a van on the public road as well as to sales in a shop. A prosecution for an offence under the section may be brought by a common informer. Rigney v. Peters, [1915] 2 Ir. R. 342—K.B. D.

Account at Branch of a Bank Abroad — Demand for Payment at Branch in this Country — Refusal to Pay — Claim by Customer against Bank.]—The plaintiffs had a current account with the Berlin branch of the defendant bank, the head office of which was in Germany, and which also had a branch in London. Without having applied to the Berlin branch of the bank for payment of the amount standing to their credit, the plaintiffs demanded payment of the sum in question from the branch in London, and upon payment being refused brought an action to recover the sum due :—Held, that the plaintiffs, having made no demand for payment from the Berlin branch, were not entitled to demand payment of the sum standing to their credit there from the London branch. Clare & Co. v. Dresdner Bank, 84 L. J. K.B. 1443; [1915] 2 K.B. 576; 113 L. T. 93; 21 Com. Cas. 62; 31 T. L. R. 278—Rowlatt, J.

Foreign Bank—English Customer—Request for Remittances — Procurability of Drafts on London — Obligations of Bank.] — The plaintiffs, an English company, had before the war an account in Berlin with the defendants, a German banking company, which had its head office in Berlin and a branch in London. The plaintiffs were in the habit of requesting the defendants to send a named sum to London by cheque, and the defendants then sent a cheque in sterling usually on their London branch, charging brokerage and the cost of the cheque stamp and debiting the plaintiffs' account with marks calculated at the exchange of the day. On July 29, 1914, the plaintiffs had nearly 5,000*l.* to their credit, and wrote to the defendants a letter asking for 4,000*l.* by a cheque on London. On July 31 the defendants telegraphed to the plaintiffs that they could not send the remittance as no rate of exchange had been fixed that day. In an action by the plaintiffs to recover from the defendants the 4,000*l.*, the evidence was that it was the invariable course of business for banks requested to remit money from one country to another to cover their remittances by purchasing exchange, drafts, or cheques payable in the foreign country, so as to provide funds to meet their drafts. After the outbreak of war on August 4, 1914, the defendants' London branch was not allowed by the British Government to pay any draft on them by the head office if it were sent :—Held, that no inference could be drawn from the course of business that the defendants were under an absolute obligation to remit on request by the plaintiffs a cheque in English sterling currency, if when the request arrived no exchange was procurable in Berlin and no drafts on London could be purchased, but that the defendants were merely under an obligation to use reasonable care to purchase and forward remittances to London at the plaintiffs' risk and expense, and that the case should be adjourned to give the defendants an opportunity of proving that drafts on London could not be purchased on July 31, 1914. Leete & Sons, Lim. v. Disconto Gesellschaft, 32 T. L. R. 158—Scrutton, J.

Money Paid under Mistake of Fact — Liability of Banker to Refund.]—The position of a banker does not differ from that of any other recipient of money acting as factor or agent; and money paid to a banker under a mistake of fact can be successfully redemanded from the banker by the person who so paid it. Kerrison v. Glyn, Mills, Currie & Co., 81 L. The appellant, who lived in England, was the English manager of a mine in Mexico. By a system of revolving credit, he agreed to pay to the respondents moneys paid to the New York bankers of the mine. For this purpose he had paid 500*l.* to the respondents. The New York bank stopped payment, and the appellant immediately demanded repayment of the 500*l.* The New York bank was largely indebted to the respondents, who claimed to retain the 500*l.* :—Held, that the appellant was entitled to be repaid the 500*l.* Ib.

Deposit Receipt—Transfer of Beneficial Interest.] — In order to transfer the beneficial interest in a deposit receipt, a written assignment is unnecessary. It is sufficient if the deposit receipt is surrendered to the bank, and a new deposit receipt taken out, with intent to pass the beneficial interest, in the names of the persons to whom the depositor intends to pass the beneficial interest. McEneaney v. Sherlin, [1912] 1 Ir. S., the owner of a deposit receipt for 900*l.*, surrendered the same to the bank, and directed a new deposit receipt to be made out in the names of himself, and his two nephews, with the intention that the interest in the same should at his own death pass to his nephews. S. subsequently died :—Held, that there had been an effectual transfer of the beneficial interest, and that at the death of S. the same passed to the two nephews. Ib.

—— Payment to Wrong Person Induced by Fraud — Liability to make Repayment to Depositor.] — A, who had placed 100*l.* on deposit receipt with a Scottish bank wrote from abroad to the bank requesting them to pay 60*l.* out of the 100*l.* to his brother (who was unknown to the bank) on presentation of the indorsed receipt. At the same time A wrote to his brother, inclosing the indorsed receipt, and also inclosing a letter addressed to the bank in similar terms to the letter sent direct to them. The letter sent to the bank was duly delivered, but the letter to the brother was stolen in the course of post. Thereafter a person, pretending to be the brother, presented the indorsed receipt and letter to the bank, and after having been required to indorse the receipt himself, which he did in the brother's name, received payment of the money. A having brought an action against the bank for payment of the amount to himself, the defenders pleaded that, having paid the sum to the person having A's authority to receive it, they were not liable :—Held, that the bank, being authorised to pay the money only to A's brother and having in fact paid it to some one else, were liable to A. Wood v. Clydesdale Bank, [1914] S. —— Deposit in Joint Names of Father and Daughter—Presumption of Resulting Trust Rebutted.] — Where money is placed on deposit by a father in the joint names of himself and his daughter, and to be paid out to the survivor, the relationship of father and child, in the absence of special circumstances, rebuts the ordinary presumption of a resulting trust for the owner, and raises the presumption that the child was meant to take beneficially if she survived her father. Warwick, In re; Warwick v. Chrisp, 56 S. Bankers and Brokers Holding Property of Foreign Lunatic — Refusal to Transfer Property to Provisional Administrator Appointed by Foreign Court without Order of English Court—Right to Costs.]—The defendants held securities and moneys on behalf of a domiciled Frenchman who had had business relations with them as bankers and stockbrokers respectively. He became of unsound mind, and P. was appointed provisional administrator of his property by the French Court. P. requested the defendants to transfer the property to him, offering to prove the orders of the French Court appointing him administrator in any manner satisfactory to the defendants; but they declined to transfer the property without an order of an English Court :—Held, that the case was governed by Didisheim v. London and Westminster Bank (69 L. J. Ch. 443; [1900] 2 Ch. 15), and that in view of that decision the defendants had shewn an undue and unreasonable excess of caution in the attitude which they had assumed, and were not entitled to costs in proceedings by P. and the lunatic for an order for the delivery of the property to P. Pélégrin v. Coutts & Co.; Pélégrin v. Messel & Co., 84 L. Money Placed with Bank for Agent's Use—Determination of Agency—Right of Principal to Claim Balance.]—Principals placed money in a bank to be used by their agent for the purposes of the business. The bank paid the money into an account which they opened in the name of the agent, and on the revocation of the agency refused to transfer the balance to the principals:—Held, that the instructions given by the principals to the bank, as appearing from the correspondence between them, were not to open an account in the name of the agent, but to hold the money for the principals with leave to the agent to draw upon it, and that the principals were entitled to recover the balance from the bank. Société Coloniale Anversoise v. London and Brazilian Bank, 80 L. Creditor's Suspicion that Debtor Guilty of Forgery — Obligation to Inform Surety.]—In security for advances to be made by a bank to a customer, the customer's father-in-law in 1899 guaranteed payment of the premiums on certain policies of insurance assigned to the bank, and payment of interest on an account for advances to the customer. In December, 1906, circumstances came to the knowledge of the manager of the bank which afforded ground for the strongest suspicion, short of actual proof, that the customer had forged a bill for 3,000*l*. That information was not communicated to the surety, and the bank continued to deal with the customer (though without making any further advances to him) until November, 1907, when his estates were sequestrated. He was shortly afterwards convicted on his own confession of several acts of forgery, but it was never ascertained whether or not he had forged the bill for 3,000*l*. The liability of the surety under the guarantee was no greater in November, 1907, than it had been in December, 1906. The surety having repudiated liability under the guarantee, on the ground that the bank should have communicated their suspicions to him in December, 1906,—Held, that in the circumstances, there was no duty on the bank to communicate their suspicions, and that the surety was not freed from his liability. Bank of Scotland v. Morrison, [1911] S. C. 593—Ct. of Sess.

Guarantee of Bank Overdraft to Agent of Guarantor — Alleged Misappropriation of Money by Agent—Suspicions of Bank—Non-communication to Guarantor — Release of Guarantor.]—The defendant guaranteed the payment of all sums due on any account from C. to a bank up to 5,000*l*. C. was at that time the agent of the defendant's estate and the guarantee was given in order to raise money to be expended for the benefit of the estate. C., however, without the knowledge of the defendant, opened another account with the bank by means of the guarantee, the money so advanced by the bank on the security of the guarantee being used by C. for other purposes than those of the defendant's estates. The defendant alleged that the bank knew or ought to have known that C. was misappropriating the money, and that as they did not communicate their suspicions to him he was discharged from his guarantee:—Held, that the defendant had not proved that the bank had suspicions that C. was defrauding him, and that therefore he was not discharged from his guarantee. Held, further, that even if the bank were suspicious that C. was defrauding the defendant they were under no duty to communicate their suspicions to the defendant. National Provincial Bank of England v. Glanusk (Baron), 82 L. Bank of Scotland v. Morrison ([1911] S. C. 593) followed. Ib.

Letter of Guarantee—Payment by Surety to Creditor before Bankruptcy of Debtor — Amount for which Creditor Entitled to Rank on Bankrupt's Estate.]—A. granted to a bank a letter of guarantee whereby he guaranteed due payment of all sums for which M. was or might become liable to the bank, the amount, however, for which A. could be called upon to pay not to exceed 2,500*l*. and interest. After the guarantee had been in existence for over four years, A., wishing to terminate his liability, paid to the bank the whole sum for which he was liable at that date—namely, the principal sum of 2,500*l*., together with 300*l*. of interest. The bank thereupon delivered up to A. the letter of guarantee with a receipt for the payment indorsed on it containing a reservation of the bank's right to claim on the estate of M. for the full amount of his indebtedness to it. A. had obtained the whole sum which he paid to the bank, with the exception of 400*l*., by realising property belonging to M. which had been assigned to him in security for the sums due under his guarantee; and on receiving back from the bank the letter of guarantee he destroyed it. The bank placed the money received from A. in a special account in name of its agent, and treated the interest on it as extinguishing pro tanto the interest falling due to the bank on the principal debt. A year and a half afterwards M. became bankrupt, and the bank claimed on his estate for the full amount of his indebtedness to it without deducting the sums paid by A.:—Held, that the payment by A. having been made before the bankruptcy of M., the bank was only entitled to rank on M.'s estate for the balance of the principal debt after deduction of that payment. Commercial Bank of Australia v. Wilson (62 L. Pledge of Certificates—Blank Transfer—Estoppel.]—The plaintiff employed a firm of stockbrokers to buy for him shares in a Colonial railway, and the brokers did so. The shares were registered in the name of one H., the certificates were in his name, and the transfers on the back had been signed by him in blank. On the brokers' suggestion the plaintiff left the certificates with them and subsequently consented to the shares being put into other names. The brokers deposited the shares with the defendant bank as security for loans, and at the broker's request the shares were put in the names of the bank's nominees. The defendant bank took the shares in good faith. In an action by the plaintiff against the defendant bank to recover the share certificates :—Held, that the bank was not put upon enquiry by the mere fact of the brokers depositing the shares as security for their own account, that the transfer from H.'s name was not an intimation to the bank that the shares did not belong to the brokers and did not put the bank upon enquiry, that the principle of Colonial Bank v. Cady (60 L. J. Ch. 131; 15 App. Cas. 267), that any one who signs a transfer on a certificate in blank and hands it to another person knows that third persons would think that that person had authority to deal with it, extends to a person who without having had such a certificate in his possession leaves it in the hands of his broker, and that therefore the plaintiff was estopped from recovering the certificates from the defendants. Fuller v. Glyn, Mills, Currie & Co., 83 L. Bearer Bonds Deposited by Bill Broker as Security for Loan—Re-delivery of Bonds by Banker in Exchange for Cheque — Whether Bonds Impressed with Trust in Favour of Banker until Cheque Honoured.]—The plaintiff bankers lent money on bearer bonds to a firm of bill brokers. They called in these loans, and, in accordance with the general practice in such cases, the bill brokers on the morning that the loans were repayable went to the plaintiffs, gave each of them a cheque for the amount of the call, and received in exchange the bonds that had been deposited as security. The cheques having been dishonoured, the plaintiffs sued the defendants, who had received in the course of the same day the bonds in question from the bill brokers, the plaintiffs alleging that the bonds were impressed with a trust in their favour until the cheques were honoured :—Held, that it was repugnant to the nature of negotiable instruments to impress them with a vendor's lien or an implied trust, and that therefore the plaintiffs' claim could not be sustained. Burra v. Ricardo (1 Cab. & E. 478) questioned. Lloyds Bank v. Swiss Bankverein; Union of London and Smiths Bank v. Same, 108 L. Deposit by Solicitor of his Client's Securities — Fiduciary Relationship — Notice — Enquiry.]—On September 29, 1904, the plaintiff was a customer of the Union Bank of London, where she had a current account and a loan account. On the loan account 1,900*l.* was advanced, and there were certain securities deposited to secure that amount. The plaintiff, being anxious to change her account for family reasons, consulted her solicitor, C., who had acted for her for many years. As a result, C. informed the plaintiff that he had arranged with the defendant bank to grant the loan on the same terms as she had had with the Union Bank of London, and asked her to sign certain documents in connection with the transaction. The material document was on the common printed form of the defendant bank, and was as follows : "At the request of Messrs. Rose Innes, Son, and Crick I have transferred or caused to be transferred . . ."—then the shares were mentioned and the names of the manager and sub-manager of the defendant bank—"or their nominees as trustees for you to be held as collateral security for your advance to Rose Innes, Son, and Crick." With this document C. went to the defendant bank after the securities were transferred, obtained an addition to the loan of 1,900*l.*, and effected the transfer of the securities in such a way as to make them available to secure his general indebtedness to the defendant bank, which amounted to some 16,000*l.* which he had from time to time obtained upon other securities. In the year 1911 the plaintiff required the return of her securities from C., which he promised to do, but they were never in fact returned, as C. absconded. In these circumstances the plaintiff brought this action to have her securities delivered to her by the defendant bank subject to her paying the 1,900*l.* which she admitted having received. It appeared that the general nature of the transactions between C. and the defendant bank were that advances were made by the defendant bank to C. upon securities which belonged to third parties who were clients of C. in the ordinary sense, and that this was known to the defendant bank, though in a number of cases it might be that the clients were clients in respect of a mere financial business carried on by C. independent of his solicitor's business. It was contended for the plaintiff (inter alia) that the defendant bank had such notice of the fiduciary relationship of C. to the plaintiff as to prevent their acting on the document :—Held, that there was here sufficient notice of the relationship existing or that probably existed between the plaintiff and C. to have put the defendant bank upon enquiry, and that accordingly they could not claim to be in a better position than they would have been if they had made enquiries, and that therefore the plaintiff was entitled to redeem the securities upon payment of 1,900*l.* Jameson v. Union Bank of Scotland, 109 L. 3. Appropriation and Set-off.

Appropriation of Payments—Rule in Clayton's Case — Mortgage to Secure Current Account — Subsequent Mortgage with Notice to the Bank.]—After notice to a bank holding a security from its customer of a subsequent mortgage by the customer, the debit of the customer is struck at the date of notice; and where a current account is merely continued and no specific appropriation of fresh payments is made, such payments are credited to the earliest items on the debit side of the account, and continue to be so credited until the first mortgage is extinguished. Deeley v. Lloyds Bank (No. 1), 81 L. J. Ch. 697; [1912] A.C. 756; 107 L. T. 465; 56 S. J. 734; 29 T. L. R. 1—H.L. (E.)

A customer of the respondent bank mortgaged his property to the bank to secure an overdraft limited to 2,500*l.* He then mortgaged the same property to the appellant for 3,500*l.* subject to the bank's mortgage. The bank on receiving notice of this further mortgage did not open a new account, but continued the old current account. The customer thereafter paid in moneys which at a particular date, if they had been appropriated in accordance with the rule in Clayton's Case (1 Mer. 572), would have extinguished the bank's mortgage. The customer's property was sold by the bank for a sum sufficient to satisfy the bank's debt, but not that of the appellant:—Held, that the evidence did not exclude the operation of the rule in Clayton's Case (1 Mer. 572), which must be applied. Ib.

Decision of the Court of Appeal (79 L. J. Ch. 561; [1910] 1 Ch. 648) reversed. Ib.

Right of Set-off.]—In 1905 a company was indebted to the appellant bank to the extent of $4,985 on current account. In that year they opened another current account with the bank on a written agreement that the bank would not appropriate any of the funds which might at any time be lying at the credit of the new account in reduction of the debt then due to the bank without the company's knowledge and consent. In 1909 the company was wound up. There was then owing to the bank $2,991 on the original account. On the second account the bank held $2,769 belonging to the company:—Held, that the agreement of 1905 was an ordinary business agreement intended to be operative as long as the accounts were alive, but no longer, and that there was nothing in it to exclude the right of the bank to set off the one sum against the other. British Guiana Bank v. British Guiana Ice Co., 104 L. Cheque — Forgery by Customer's Clerk — Non-examination of Pass Book by Customer — Right of Customer to Recover.]—The clerk of a customer of a bank forged the customer's signature to three cheques and obtained payment of same from the bank. The customer claimed to recover from the bank the amounts so paid:—Held, that the fact that the customer did not examine his pass book when it was periodically returned to him by the bank did not preclude him from recovering. Kepitigalla Rubber Estates v. National Bank of India (78 L. Married Woman — Unsatisfied Judgment — Action on Judgment.] — Where a judgment has been given before 1913 against a married woman, execution being limited to her separate property, and no stay has been granted, and the judgment remains unsatisfied, it is open to the plaintiff to bring a fresh action on the judgment and to recover judgment thereon for the purpose of founding bankruptcy proceedings against the married woman under section 12 of the Bankruptcy and Deeds of Arrangement Act, 1913. Semble, however, that section 12 of that Act is retrospective so as to make such fresh action unnecessary. Shaw v. Allen, 30 T. Married Woman Carrying on "a trade or business"—Negligence of Servant in Course of Trade—Liability in Tort—Business Debt.] —A married woman continues to carry on a business so long as any business debt remains unpaid, and a judgment against her in tort for a liability incurred in carrying on the business is a business debt, and is therefore available for bankruptcy proceedings against her under the Bankruptcy and Deeds of Arrangement Act, 1913, s. 12. Allen, In re; Shaw, ex parte, 84 L. —— Debts Incurred before April 1, 1914—Judgment after April 1, 1914—Validity.]—A married woman carrying on a trade or business is amenable to bankruptcy proceedings under section 12 of the Bankruptcy and Deeds of Arrangement Act, 1913, in respect of a judgment obtained against her after the date on which the Act came into operation on a debt incurred by her before that date. For the purposes of the Bankruptcy and Deeds of Arrangement Act, 1913, a married woman does not cease to carry on a trade or business until all the debts incurred by her in carrying on the trade or business have been paid. Dagnall, In re; Sloan & Morley, ex parte (65 L. J. Q.B. 666; [1896] 2 Q.B. 407), and Worsley, In re; Lambert, ex parte (70 L. J. K.B. 93; [1901] 1 K.B. 309), applied. Clark, In re; Pope, ex parte, 84 L. J. K.B. 89; [1914] 3 K.B. 1095; 112 L. On May 7, 1914, judgment was obtained against the debtor, who was a married woman, in respect of debts incurred by her in 1911 and 1912, and on June 4, 1914, a bankruptcy notice was issued in respect of the judgment debt. It appeared that prior to 1906 the debtor had carried on an hotel, and that she then sold it to a limited company of which she became the managing director. Soon afterwards she started a new hotel, and transferred it to the same company in 1910. In the same year she had to do with the formation of a second hotel company of which she was the managing director and the holder of the bulk of the preference shares. In June, 1912, a third hotel company was formed to acquire property, in which the debtor had acquired interests during the preceding two years, and erect an hotel thereon. It was in connection with this venture that the debtor had obtained the above-mentioned loans. It appeared from a prospectus issued by this company that the debtor had sold her interests in the property to the company for 289,000*l.*, payable in cash and shares, and that she had guaranteed the interest on an issue of preference shares during the period of construction of the proposed hotel, and had become the managing director of the company. This venture proved a failure, and the hotel had not been built. In connection with all these transactions the debtor had used a name which she had taken in 1906, and had continued to use for this purpose after her second marriage in 1910 :—Held, that the debtor was liable to bankruptcy proceedings under section 12 of the Bankruptcy and Deeds of Arrangement Act, 1913, as being a married woman carrying on the "business" of a company promoter; and that the bankruptcy notice was a valid notice. Ib.

—— Receiving Order—Judgment after April 1, 1914 — Goods Supplied Previously.] — By section 12, sub-section 2 of the Bankruptcy and Deeds of Arrangement Act, 1913, which came into operation on April 1, 1914, "Where a married woman carries on a trade or business and a final judgment or order has been obtained against her, whether or not expressed to be payable out of her separate property, for any amount, that judgment or order shall be available for bankruptcy proceedings against her by a bankruptcy notice as though she were personally bound to pay the judgment debt or sum ordered to be paid" :—Held, that where a married woman is carrying on business after April 1, 1914, a receiving order can be made against her upon a judgment obtained against her after that date for goods supplied to the business, although the goods were supplied before that date and the writ was issued before that date. Hollis, In re; Lawrence, ex parte, 112 L. Business Commenced before Marriage.]—A woman continued to carry on the business of a hay and corn merchant carried on by her father, who died in 1912, as his administratrix. On July 1, 1914, she sold the business and the greater part of the assets, but not including certain hay and outstanding trade debts. She married on July 25, 1914, and after the marriage the hay was sold and the outstanding debts were got in. A petition was presented by a creditor on October 27, 1914, whose debt had been incurred before the marriage, on an act of bankruptcy which took place after the marriage :—Held, that, as the debtor had continued to trade after the marriage, under section 12, sub-section 1 of the Bankruptcy and Deeds of Arrangement Act, 1913, she could be made bankrupt on the debt contracted before the marriage. Reynolds, In re; White, Lim., ex parte, 84 L. What Conduct Precludes Creditor from Relying on Deed as Available.]—On July 22, 1913, B. executed a deed of assignment for the benefit of his creditors, and on August 12 called a meeting of his creditors to approve the deed. At this meeting J. H., the secretary of J. S., Limited, one of the creditors, and N., solicitor for J. S., Limited, were present, but they did not vote upon the resolutions, and expressed themselves dissatisfied with the deed. Subsequently J. S., Limited, on being requested to assent to the deed, notified the trustee on September 2 that they declined to assent; and on October 18 they presented a petition against B., alleging as the act of bankruptcy the deed of July 22 :—Held, that there had been no assent, express or implied, on the part of the petitioning creditors, such as to disentitle them to set up the deed as an available act of bankruptcy, upon which a petition could be founded. Held, further, by Rowlatt, J., that, in view of the decision in Day, In re; Hammond, ex parte (86 L. T. 238), the case of Carr, In re; Jacobs, ex parte (85 L. T. 552), could no longer be relied upon as an authority for the proposition that an unexplained delay in presenting a petition might amount to acquiescence in a deed. Beesley, In re, 109 L. Seizure of Goods—Interpleader Summons—Final Order on Summons—No Interpleader Issue Ordered—Goods in Hands of Sheriff for Twenty-one Days—Allowance for Interpleader Summons—"Time elapsing."]—The words "any interpleader issue ordered thereon is finally disposed of" in the proviso to section 1 of the Bankruptcy Act, 1890, are technical, and must be construed strictly. Where, accordingly, goods were seized under a writ of fieri facias, and were in the hands of the sheriff, and, an interpleader summons having been taken out by him, the Master made an order by consent by which the interpleader proceedings were finally disposed of, but by which no interpleader issue was ordered,—Held, that this order was not equivalent to an order by which "any interpleader issue ordered thereon is finally disposed of" within the meaning of the proviso; and that accordingly the interval between the issue of the interpleader summons and the making of the order in question could not be deducted in calculating the period of twenty-one days during which the goods should be in the hands of the sheriff that was necessary in order to constitute an act of bankruptcy by virtue of section 1 on the part of the bankrupt. Chetwynd's Trustee v. Boltons Library, 82 L. Garnishee Order Absolute Obtained by Judgment Creditor.]—The obtaining by a judgment creditor of a garnishee order absolute on a debt due to the debtor does not preclude the creditor from issuing execution, or from issuing a bankruptcy notice against the debtor; nor ought the amount of the judgment debt to be reduced by the value of the garnishee order, since a judgment creditor's right to issue a bankruptcy notice is not affected by his holding a security for the debt. Renison, In re; Greaves, ex parte, 82 L. Bankruptcy Notice by Creditor — Creditor Himself Guilty of Act of Bankruptcy — Validity of Notice.]—A creditor who had himself committed an act of bankruptcy served a bankruptcy notice upon his debtor :—Held (Buckley, L.J., dissenting), that the bankruptcy notice was invalid, inasmuch as such a notice must be given by a person competent to receive and give a good discharge for the debt in respect of which the notice is given, and inasmuch as the creditor, in view of his own act of bankruptcy, was not such a person. Debtor (No. 211 of 1912), In re; Debtor, ex parte, 81 L. Judgment Creditor — Stay of Execution — Receiver by Way of Equitable Execution.]—Where a judgment creditor has obtained the appointment of a receiver by way of equitable execution, but the debtor is not thereby prevented from paying the judgment debt, the existence of the receiver is not a "stay" of execution within the meaning of section 4, sub-section 1 (g) of the Bankruptcy Act, 1883, and the judgment creditor may serve a bankruptcy notice upon the debtor in respect of his judgment. Bond, In re; Capital and Counties Bank, ex parte, 81 L. Balance of Debt Unpaid — Fresh Agreement — Dismissal of Petition — Appeal.] — A company obtained a judgment against V. for 440*l.* and 8*l.* costs on November 25, 1910, and on May 25, 1911, the debtor paid 200*l.* under the judgment. The balance remaining unpaid, the company instituted bankruptcy proceedings, and thereupon the debtor's solicitor wrote to the company on December 9, 1911, inclosing a cheque for 136*l.*: "It is understood that this payment includes your agreed costs of 20 guineas, and that the balance of debt, amounting to 149*l.* 5*s.* 6*d.*, is to be paid with interest at 10 per cent., on the 1st April next. It is further understood that the petition against Mr. V. shall be dismissed." The balance of debt was not paid on April 1, and further time was given by the company. On May 18, 1912, a further sum of 46*l.* 17*s.* was paid on account of the balance of debt and interest, and in consideration thereof the time for payment was further extended to August 6. The balance remained unpaid, and on January 1, 1913, the company issued a fresh bankruptcy notice for 105*l.* 9*s.* 8*d.*, being the amount of the balance of debt together with interest at 4 per cent. The petition was heard on March 18, 1913, and was dismissed by the Registrar on the ground that the agreement of December 9, 1911, and the payment of May 18, 1912, constituted a fresh agreement, and that a bankruptcy notice could not be issued in respect of the unpaid balance of the old judgment debt. The petitioning creditors appealed:—Held, that the creditors by the agreement of December 9, 1911, had not waived their judgment, but had merely postponed their recourse to it, and that, on the debtor's default in payment of the balance due on April 1, 1912, the creditors' rights revived and they were entitled to issue a bankruptcy notice for the balance of the judgment debt, and that therefore the appeal succeeded and a receiving order ought to be made against the debtor. Vogel, In re; Anglo-Eastern Contract Co., ex parte, 109 L. Person Entitled to Enforce Final Judgment—Charge of Interest—Leave to Issue Execution without Formal Addition of Party — Garnishee Order.]—The trustee in bankruptcy of the judgment creditor who has obtained leave under Order XLII. rule 23, to issue execution against the judgment debtor, though without having been added as a party to the action under Order XVII. rule 4, is a person entitled to enforce a final judgment within section 1 of the Bankruptcy Act, 1890. Dicta of Wright, J., in Clements, In re; Davis, ex parte (70 L. The trustee in bankruptcy of the judgment creditor who has obtained leave as aforesaid can serve a valid bankruptcy notice on the judgment debtor in respect of the judgment debt without taking any steps to discharge a previous garnishee order absolute, the effect of the receiving order being by section 45 of the Bankruptcy Act, 1883, to put an end to a garnishee order not completed by actual receipt of the debt. Ib.

County Court — Judgment Debt for more than 50*l.*—Payment of Instalment—Reduction below 50*l.*—Bankruptcy Notice for Whole Original Debt. — A creditor recovered judgment in the County Court for more than 50*l.*, and the debtor thereupon paid such a sum to the Registrar as reduced the debt below 50*l.* Subsequently the creditor served a bankruptcy notice on the debtor for the whole original sum:—Held, that, whether the Registrar was or was not justified in accepting the instalment, yet, inasmuch as the instalment had de facto been paid to the Registrar, and inasmuch as the Court of Appeal, sitting as a Court of Appeal in Bankruptcy, had no jurisdiction to review the validity of the payment, it was not competent to serve a bankruptcy notice for the whole original sum, but only for that unpaid balance in respect of which alone the creditor was now in a position to issue execution. Miller, In re; Furniture and Fine Arts Depositories, ex parte, 81 L. Bankruptcy Notice—Final Judgment—Stay of Execution—Action for Specific Performance —"Final judgment or order."]—An order by consent in the Chancery Division, in an action for specific performance, directed that a certain sum of money should be paid on a date to be ascertained in the future subject to the performance of certain conditions precedent. The conditions were performed, and the date was ascertained, but the money was not paid at the time in question. The judgment creditor thereupon served a bankruptcy notice on the judgment debtor in respect of the debt. The notice spoke of the consent order as a "final judgment or order," and added, "whereon execution has not been stayed":—Held, that the order by consent was a final judgment within the meaning of section 4, subsection 1 (g) of the Bankruptcy Act, 1883; that the phrase "whereon execution has not been stayed" was not, under the circumstances, inaccurate; and that the description of the consent order as a "final judgment or order," whether or not technically correct, was not of a nature to invalidate the notice. Held, accordingly, that the bankruptcy notice was good. Debtor (No. 837 of 1912), In re, 81 L. J. K.B. 1225; [1912] 3 K.B. 242; 107 L. T. 506; 19 Manson, 317; 56 S. J. 651—C.A.

Judgment Debt—Claim of Interest without any Deduction of Income Tax—Validity.]—A bankruptcy notice requiring payment of a judgment debt with interest thereon under the Judgments Act, 1838, s. 17, at 4 per cent., is not invalid because it claims payment of the interest in full without deducting the income tax payable thereon under the Income Tax Acts of 1842 and 1853. Cooper, In re; Debtor, ex parte, 80 L. Part Payment of Judgment Debt — Bankruptcy Notice for Balance — Sum Claimed Correct — Notice not Invalidated by Marginal Note.]—Where part of a judgment debt has been extinguished and a bankruptcy notice has been issued for the balance, the notice is not invalidated by reason of a variation from the terms of the judgment to be found in a marginal note thereto, provided that the sum claimed in the notice is the correct amount owing. Debtor (No. 2 of 1912), In re; Debtor, ex parte, 106 L. Final Judgment Obtained by Firm against Debtor—Direction to Pay Judgment Creditors or their Solicitors.]—A firm of stockjobbers recovered a final judgment against a stockbroker. Thereupon their solicitors obtained the issue of a bankruptcy notice which directed the judgment debtor to pay the judgment debt to the judgment creditors "or to their solicitors," and contained a statement by the solicitors suing out the notice that they had full authority to receive payment of the debt and to act for such creditors in respect of all matters specified in the notice :—Held, that the bankruptcy notice was not a good foundation for a receiving order, inasmuch as it did not require the debtor to pay the judgment debt "in accordance with the terms of the judgment," as provided by section 4, subsection 1 (g) of the Bankruptcy Act, 1883. Debtor (No. 305 of 1911), In re; Debtor, ex parte, 80 L. Address of Judgment Creditor—Absence from House.] — A judgment creditor, having two houses in different parts of England, inserted in a bankruptcy notice the address of the house from which he was absent during the currency of the bankruptcy notice. His butler was at the address given in the notice, and was authorised to receive payments on behalf of his master, or could have sent for him at any time during the currency of the notice :—Held, that the address given was sufficient, and that the bankruptcy notice was good. Persse, In re, 55 S. J. 314—C.A.

Foreign Creditor — Notice to Pay Outside the Realm — Right of Authorised Agent to Receive Payment—Invalid Notice.]—A bankruptcy notice requiring a debtor to pay a judgment debt at a place outside the realm is invalid; but a bankruptcy notice may properly require the debtor to make payment to the creditor at an address within the jurisdiction where not the creditor, but his properly authorised agent, is in attendance to receive payment. Debtor (No. 305 of 1911), In re; Debtor, ex parte (80 L. Counterclaim for Amount Exceeding Debt—Not Available in Action — Assignment to Debtor after Action of then Existing Debt.]—The counterclaim equalling or exceeding the amount of the judgment debt which, under section 4, sub-section 1 (g) of the Bankruptcy Act, 1883, a debtor can set up in answer to a bankruptcy notice is one which, as matters stood at the time of the action in which judgment was obtained, he could not in law have set up in that action, even though he might have taken steps which would have rendered it available to him in the action. Where, therefore, after the service on him of a bankruptcy notice, a judgment debtor obtained the assignment to himself of a debt due from the judgment creditors to his firm, which debt was in existence at the time of the action :—Held, that he was entitled to set up the debt in answer to the bankruptcy notice, although it was not shewn that, as a matter of fact, he could not have obtained an assignment of it in time to set it up by way of counterclaim in the action. Debtor (No. 37 of 1914), In re, 84 L. Circular to Trade Creditors—Proposals for Carrying on the Debtor's Business — Statement at Creditors' Meeting.] — A circular issued by a trader to his creditors, in which they are invited to attend a meeting to be held for the purpose of discussing the position of affairs and of deciding upon methods for continuing the business, may be a sufficient notice of suspension of payment of debts to be a good act of bankruptcy within section 4, subsection 1 (h). And a proposal, laid before the creditors' meeting, by which creditors are to be paid in full by instalments, partly in cash and partly in shares, may also be a good act of bankruptcy within the meaning of the section. Midgley, In re, 108 L. T. 45; 57 S. J. 247—D.

Non-trader—Doctor.]—The debtor, a doctor, sent through his solicitor a circular letter to all his creditors in the following form : "Dr. C. . . . physician and surgeon, has consulted me with reference to his financial position, and I shall be glad if you will attend a meeting of his creditors to be held here on Friday next. . . ." The meeting was held and a proposal was made thereat to, but was not accepted by, the creditors. The debtor was then asked if he would file his own petition in bankruptcy, but he refused to do so, and stated that he should go on. A creditor then presented a bankruptcy petition against the debtor, alleging that the above circular was equivalent to a notice that the debtor had suspended, or was about to suspend, payment of his debts, within the meaning of section 4, sub-section 1 (h) of the Bankruptcy Act, 1883:—Held, that the circular did not constitute an act of bankruptcy within the sub-section. Debtor, In re, 106 L. T. 812; 56 S. J. 482; 28 T. L. R. 386—D.

Debt Payable at a Certain Future Time—Moratorium.]—A debtor gave notice that he had suspended payment on September 9, 1914, and a petition was presented against him on September 12. At that time the Moratorium Proclamation of September 1, 1914, was in force extending the time for payment of debts to October 4:—Held, that a receiving order ought to be made upon the petition, for the debt was payable at a certain future time—namely, October 4—and that there was nothing in the Moratorium Proclamations to prevent a debtor from committing an act of bankruptcy by giving notice of suspension of payment. Sahler, In re, 84 L. Petition Presented by Secretary of a Company.]—Semble, in the case of a company presenting a petition by an officer authorised in that behalf it is unnecessary that the resolution of the board to delegate its authority should be under seal, provided that the seal of the company is affixed to the authority. Midgley, In re, 108 L. T. 45; 57 S. J. 247—D.

Authority of Company to Present.]—An authority given by a company, under section 148 of the Bankruptcy Act, 1883, to its secretary to present a bankruptcy petition against a debtor only extends to a petition on an act of bankruptcy available at the date of the authority, and does not include an option to present a petition on an act of bankruptcy committed subsequently to the date of the authority. Debtor (No. 30 of 1914), In re; Petitioning Creditors, ex parte, 84 L. Proposed Deed of Assignment — Assent of Creditor—Revocation of Assent before Execution of Deed.] — A creditor may revoke his assent to a proposed deed of assignment for the benefit of creditors at any time before the deed is actually executed. His having so assented will not preclude him from founding a petition on the acts of bankruptcy which led to the proposed deed of assignment. Jones, In re; Newnes and Associated Newspapers, ex parte, 81 L. Joint Petitioning Creditors — Estoppel.] — Where one of joint petitioning creditors is estopped from relying on the alleged acts of bankruptcy, the petition of the other creditor or creditors may succeed, provided that the debt of those not estopped is sufficient for the grounding of the petition. Hawley, In re; Ridgway, ex parte (4 Manson, 41), and Woodroff, In re; Woodroff, ex parte (4 Manson, 46), distinguished. Ib.

Petition on Judgment Debt Founded on Award—Going Behind Judgment.]—Where a petition is based on a judgment debt, founded on an award, and there is no allegation of fraud or improper conduct made against the arbitrator, the Court of Bankruptcy will not go behind the judgment and re-open the award for the purpose of re-trying what has already been adjudicated upon by the arbitrator. Newey, In re; Whiteman, ex parte, 107 L. T. 832; 57 S. J. 174—D.

Judgment not by Consent or Default—Discretion of Registrar.]—There is no power in the Bankruptcy Court on the hearing of a petition to go behind a judgment obtained in open Court against a person represented there—no fraud being suggested. The Registrar should only go behind a judgment obtained by default or compromise, or where fraud or collusion is alleged. The Registrar having refused in the exercise of his discretion to re-open a judgment obtained after trial in the presence of the defendant, the Court declined to interfere. Flatau, In re; Scotch Whiskey Distillers, ex parte (22 Q.B. Staying Proceedings—Jurisdiction.]—The Court of Bankruptcy has exclusive jurisdiction under section 1, sub-section 3 of the Courts (Emergency Powers) Act, 1914, as to staying proceedings on a bankruptcy petition which is not within the purview of section 1, sub-section 1 (a) of the Act. Silber, In re (No. 1), 84 L. Bankruptcy — Petition — Receiving Order — Debtor Subject of State at War with His Majesty — Discretion to Stay Proceedings — "Remedy."] — The Court has no power to exercise, in favour of a debtor who is a "subject of a Sovereign or State at war with His Majesty" within sub-section 7 of section 1 of the Courts (Emergency Powers) Act, 1914, the discretion to stay proceedings under a bankruptcy petition conferred by sub-section 3 of section 1. A bankruptcy petition is a Receivership Order in Lunacy against Debtor.]—An order was made by a master in Lunacy appointing a person receiver of the dividends and income of the debtor's property :—Held, that this did not prevent the Court from making a receiving order in bankruptcy against the debtor. Belton, In re, 108 L. T. 344; 57 S. J. 343; 29 T. L. R. 313—D.

" Sufficient cause " for Making no Order—Deed of Assignment—Subsequent Act of Bankruptcy — Conduct of Petitioning Creditor.] — The petitioning creditors, at a time when the debtor was to his own knowledge, insolvent, had delivered goods to him on credit, and at a preliminary meeting of creditors they refused to assent to a deed of assignment by the debtor for the benefit of his creditors unless these goods or their value were returned to them. The other creditors would not agree to this, and a resolution was passed by a majority that the debtor should be requested to execute a deed of assignment and for the appointment of a committee of inspection. The petitioning creditors did not vote on this resolution, but they did suggest the name of a person to act on the committee. They refused, however, to execute the deed, and repeated their request to the debtor for the return of the goods or their value, stating that otherwise they would issue a writ. This they did, and recovered judgment against the debtor, on which they served a bankruptcy notice, which was not complied with. They then presented a bankruptcy petition, alleging the non-compliance with the bankruptcy notice as the act of bankruptcy :—Held, that no " sufficient cause " within the meaning of section 7, sub-section 3 of the Bankruptcy Act, 1883, had been shewn why no receiving order should be made. Shaw, In re; Gill, ex parte (83 L. —— Existence of Valid Deed of Assignment—No Assets.]—Even in a case where the debtor has assigned all his assets to a trustee for the benefit of creditors by a deed which has become unimpeachable by lapse of time, the Court will not refuse to make a receiving order unless clearly convinced, not only that there are, but also that there will be, no assets in the bankruptcy. Scott, In re; Paris-Orleans Railway, ex parte, 58 S. J. 11—C.A.

Extortion—Possible Appointment of Sequestration of Benefice — Futility of Bankruptcy Proceedings.]—A creditor who was a mortgagee presented a bankruptcy petition against the incumbent of a benefice, and having withdrawn it on a payment by the debtor's relatives, presented another petition for the balance, and it was also withdrawn on their making another payment. The creditor then presented another petition for the remaining balance and the debtor gave evidence that he believed there would be a surplus. A receiving order was made against the debtor :—Held, first, that the circumstances did not shew that there was any extortion ; and secondly, that the possibility of the bishop appointing a sequestrator of the benefice did not prove that the bankruptcy proceedings would be futile; and that therefore the receiving order must be affirmed. Hay, In re, 110 L. T. 47; 30 T. L. R. 131—D.

Form of Receiving Order.] — A receiving order recited an act of bankruptcy as having been committed " on or about " August 31 :—Held, that a receiving order should state with certainty the date of the act of the bankruptcy committed. The introduction of such words as " on or about " introduces an undesirable vagueness. Herman, In re; Pharaoh & Co., ex parte, [1915] H. B. R. 41—C.A.

Scheme of Arrangement—Approval by Court —" Reasonable security " for Payment of 7s. 6d. in the Pound.]—In a case coming within section 3, sub-section 9 of the Bankruptcy Act, 1890, the Court has no discretion to approve a scheme of arrangement proposed by a debtor unless satisfied that the scheme provides reasonable security for payment of not less than 7*s.* 6*d.* in the pound on all the unsecured debts. It makes no difference that the creditors are themselves in favour of the scheme and have approved it. Paine, In re; Paine, ex parte ([1891] W. VIII. ADJUDICATION.

See also Vol. II. 227, 1974.

Meeting of Creditors — Creditors Desiring Adjournment — Discretion of Registrar.] — At the first adjournment of the first meeting of the creditors of the debtor, the official receiver declined further to adjourn the meeting, and did not put a resolution that the debtor should be adjudged bankrupt, but stated his intention to apply. The application for adjudication was subsequently made and supported by creditors for 146,000*l.* Certain creditors and the debtor opposed the application, and desired an adjournment thereof in order to call a new meeting of creditors and formulate a scheme. The Registrar declined to adjourn the application, and made the order for adjudication :—Held, that he had exercised his discretion rightly. Silber, In re (No. 2), [1915] H. B. R. 97—C.A.

IX. DISCHARGE.

See also Vol. II. 246, 1976.

Jurisdiction—Allegations that Bankrupt has Committed Criminal Offences.]—On a bankrupt's application for his discharge, the Court has not jurisdiction to try whether he has been guilty of criminal offences. The proviso in section 8, sub-section 2 of the Bankruptcy Act, 1890, that the Court shall refuse the discharge in all cases where the bankrupt has committed any misdemeanour under the Debtors Act or the principal Act, or any misdemeanour of felony connected with his bankruptcy, applies only to cases where the bankrupt has been tried and found guilty by a competent tribunal of any of the offences referred to. Wood, In re; Leslie, Lim., ex parte, [1915] H. B. R. 53; 59 S. J. 334—C.A.

Lapse of Time may be a New Fact—Discretion.]—Where a bankrupt applies for his discharge the Judge may take into consideration other offences and other facts than those disclosed in the official receiver's report, and his discretion is unlimited. Shields, In re, 106 L. T. 345—D.

Semble, lapse of time and good conduct on the part of the bankrupt may be such new facts as will justify a Judge in reviewing his decision on a subsequent application. Ib.

Unconditional Refusal — Appeal — Order Varied—Suspension Dating from Application for Discharge.]—A bankrupt's application for discharge will only be unconditionally refused in very exceptional circumstances. Delay in applying for a discharge, in the absence of fraud, will not justify such refusal. If an order made on an application for discharge is varied on appeal, the order so varied shall be dated of the day on which the application was made, and shall take effect from the day on which such order was drawn up. Pearse, In re; Bankrupt, ex parte, 107 L. T. 859—D.

Undischarged Bankrupt — Contract — Consideration—Policy of Bankruptcy Law—Debt Provable in Bankruptcy—Agreement by Bankrupt to Pay in Full—Validity.]—An agreement by an undischarged bankrupt that he will pay in full a debt provable in the bankruptcy, in consideration of an advance then made to him by the creditor, is not an agreement which is contrary to the policy of the bankruptcy law, but may be enforced by the creditor against the bankrupt. Wild v. Tucker, 83 L. J. K.B. 1410; [1914] 3 K.B. 36; 111 L. T. 250; 21 Manson, 181; 30 T. L. R. 507—Atkin, J.

Discharge of Debt — Subsequent Acknowledgment of Debt by Foreign Document — Absence of Consideration — Valid Agreement according to Italian Law—Conflict of Laws—Valid Claim.]—A debtor, who was an Italian subject carrying on business in London, became bankrupt in 1897 and obtained his discharge in 1901. Prior to the bankruptcy he had borrowed money from a creditor, who was an Italian subject, residing in Italy, and owed him 1,350*l.* at the date of the bankruptcy. The debtor did not disclose this debt in the bankruptcy, and the creditor became aware of the bankruptcy for the first time in 1908, after the debtor's death. In 1906 the debtor, while in Italy, signed a document called a privata scrittura, in which he acknowledged his indebtedness, and undertook to pay the debt off within five years, with interest. The estate of the debtor was being administered by the Court, and the creditor's claim against the estate for some 1,758*l.* was disallowed by the Master. Eve, J., dismissed a summons to vary the Master's certificate. On an appeal from that decision.—Held, that the privata scrittura was a valid agreement according to Italian law, although not entered into for valuable consideration, and that the creditor was entitled to enforce his claim under it notwithstanding the provisions of section 30, sub-section 3 of the Bankruptcy Act, 1883. Bonacina, In re; Le Brasseur v. Bonacina, 81 L. J. Ch. 674; [1912] 2 Ch. 394; 107 L. T. 498; 19 Manson, 224; 56 S. J. 667; 28 T. L. R. 508—C.A.

Insolvent Trader — Secured Creditor — Fraudulent Transfer—Exchange of Mortgage on Business for Debentures in Company.]—A trader who fraudulently transferred his business to a company induced a mortgagee of the business to accept debentures in the company in exchange for the mortgages he held prior to the formation of the company. On the transfer to the company being set aside,—Held, that the mortgagee was not entitled to be put back into his original position, but that he could prove against the debtor's estate for damages he had sustained by reason of the debtor's fraud. Slobodinsky, In re; Moore, ex parte (72 L. J. K.B. 883; [1903] 2 K.B. 517), considered. Goldburg, In re; Silverstone, ex parte, 81 L. J. K.B. 382; [1912] 1 K.B. 384; 105 L. T. 959; 19 Manson, 44—Phillimore, J.

Fraudulent Conveyance—Part of Property.]—A debtor who was hopelessly insolvent carried on business till August, 1914, when he gave his manager P. notice to leave. P. conceived the idea of forming a private company, and consulted one G., who was invited to come in, while the debtor agreed to lend his name. Discussion took place, and the result was that on August 31, 1914, a private company was formed, of which the signatories and first directors were the debtor, P., and G., the debtor being managing director at a salary of 300*l.* per annum. The company had its offices at the debtor's business premises. At a board meeting on September 7, 1914, G. stated that the debtor (who was absent) was willing to sell to the company the whole of the machinery on his premises, which was worth about 1,000*l.*, for 400*l.* in fully paid shares of the company, and the greater part of his stock for 600*l.* in cash, and resolutions were passed accordingly accepting these terms :—Held, that the sale of the machinery by the debtor to the company on September 7 was a fraudulent conveyance of part of his property within section 4, sub-section 1 (b) of the Bankruptcy Act, 1883. Herman, In re; Pharaoh & Co., ex parte, [1915] H. B. R. 41—C.A.

Assignment of Beneficial Interest in Lease —Trustee and Cestui que Trust—Damages for Breach of Covenant—Bankruptcy of Lessee— Recovery of Judgment Debt from Beneficial Owner under Indemnity—Rights of Trustee in Bankruptcy and Landlord.]—A lessee became trustee of the leasehold premises for his wife by reason of the purchase by her of the beneficial interest therein, and the wife as such beneficial owner was liable to indemnify her husband against any claim by the landlord under the covenants in the lease. On the expiration of the lease the landlord obtained judgment against the lessee for 711*l.* for rent and damages for breach of covenant, but before the amount of the lessee's liability was ascertained the lessee was adjudicated a bankrupt. The landlord obtained leave in the bankruptcy to commence an action in the joint names of the trustee in bankruptcy and himself to recover the 711*l.* from the wife under the lessee's right of indemnity, but without prejudice to the question whether the money so recovered should be treated as assets in the bankruptcy or be retained by the landlord. The action was brought and was compromised by the payment by the wife of 520*l.* :—Held, that the trustee in bankruptcy could only avail himself of the right of indemnity for the purpose of passing on the money to the principal creditor, and that consequently the landlord was entitled to retain the money on account of his debt. Richardson, In re; St. Thomas's Hospital, ex parte, 80 L. Assignment of Debtor's Business to Company — Bankruptcy of Debtor — Business Carried on by Receiver of Debenture-holders — Assignment Set Aside as Fraudulent — Liability of Receiver to Trustee in Bankruptcy.]—Where the transfer of a debtor's business to a company is subsequently set aside as an act of bankruptcy to which the title of the trustee in bankruptcy relates back, and the business of the company has in the meantime been carried on by a receiver appointed by the debenture-holders of the company, the receiver is liable as a trespasser to account to the trustee for the assets (if any) of the debtor which may have come to his hands or for the value of them. Goldburg, In re; Page, ex parte, 81 L. Equitable Execution — Priority as between Judgment Creditor and Trustee in Scottish Bankruptcy.]—The plaintiffs in 1911 recovered judgment against a Mrs. W., who had a furnished flat, which was let to the defendant. The plaintiffs obtained the appointment of a receiver of Mrs. W.'s interest in the flat, and notice of the receivership order was served upon the defendant with a request to pay the rent to the plaintiffs, but nothing further was done to enforce the order. In 1913 Mrs. W. became bankrupt in Scotland, and the trustee appointed in such bankruptcy claimed the rent due from the defendant to Mrs. W. in respect of the flat. The receiver appointed on behalf of the plaintiffs also claimed the rent. In an interpleader issue as to whether the receiver or the trustee was entitled to the money,—Held, that the rights of the parties had to be determined under the Bankruptcy (Scotland) Act, 1856, and not under the Bankruptcy (Scotland) Act, 1913, and that under the Act of 1856 it was not necessary, in order for a judgment creditor to succeed in his claim against the trustee in the Scottish bankruptcy, to shew that he was a secured creditor; it was sufficient for him to shew that he had obtained a receivership order, which prevented the assets which were being claimed being assigned by the judgment debtor, and that therefore the title of the plaintiffs under the receivership order was preferable to that of the trustee in bankruptcy. Galbraith v. Grimshaw (79 L. Undischarged Bankrupt — Appointment by Will of Bankrupt under General Power — Assets for Payment of Bankrupt's Debts — Claim by Creditors in Bankruptcy in Administration of Bankrupt's Estate.] — A debtor, under a will, took a life interest in 15,000*l.* subject to a trust over for accumulation in case of his bankruptcy, and was given a general power of appointment over the accumulated fund by will. The debtor was adjudicated bankrupt in 1890 and 1892. A dividend of 5*s.* 2*d.* was paid in the first bankruptcy and nothing in the second. The debtor never obtained his discharge in either bankruptcy. The debtor exercised his power of appointment by his will, and died on July 20, 1911. In an action in the Chancery Division an order was made for the administration of the debtor's estate, which consisted practically only of the appointed fund. Creditors in the two bankruptcies claimed to prove in the administration for the balance of their claims in the bankruptcies. Warrington, J., following Guedalla, In re; Lee v. Guedalla's Trustee (75 L. J. Ch. 52; [1905] 2 Ch. 331), held that the fund, though assets for the payment of the debtor's debts, did not pass to the trustees in bankruptcy, and that the creditors were precluded by section 9 of the Bankruptcy Act, 1883, from claiming on the fund. On appeal,—Held, that the fund did not pass to the trustees in bankruptcy, and that the claims were barred by the Statute of Limitations. Benzon, In re; Bower v. Chetwynd, 83 L. J. Ch. 658; [1914] 2 Ch. 68; 110 L. T. 926; 21 Manson, 8; 58 S. J. 430; 30 T. L. R. 435—C.A.

After-acquired Property—Chose in Action—Settlement on Marriage—Bona Fides—Valuable Consideration—Notice—Non-intervention of Trustee in Bankruptcy.]—The rule laid down in Cohen v. Mitchell (59 L. J. Q.B. 409, 411; 25 Q.B. D. 262, 267), that until the trustee intervenes all transactions by a bankrupt after his bankruptcy, with any person dealing with him bona fide and for value, in respect of his after-acquired property, whether with or without knowledge of the bankruptcy, are valid against the trustee, applies to a chose in action the title to which accrued to the bankrupt after his bankruptcy and before his discharge. Behrend's Trust, In re; Surman v. Biddell, 80 L. A settlement by the bankrupt upon his second marriage of a chose in action of this description consisting of his right to a fund in the hands of the trustees of a settlement executed upon his first marriage, if a bona fide transaction, is such a transaction as is contemplated by the rule, notwithstanding that the trustees holding the fund have notice of the bankruptcy prior to the assignment to the trustees of the settlement made on the second marriage, provided that there has been no active intervention on the part of the trustee in bankruptcy. Ib.

Client's Securities Pledged to Bank by Brokers — Sale of Securities by Pledgee — Secured Creditor—Marshalling Securities.]—A firm of stockbrokers purchased various shares for a client and lent him part of the purchase money on the security of the shares so purchased, and for that purpose deposited the shares with a bank, who held the securities not merely against the loans made to the client through the brokers, but against the brokers' general loan account with the bank. The brokers became bankrupt, and the bank realised as much of the security in its hands as was necessary to satisfy its claim against them. The client's securities pledged to the bank and realised by it exceeded the amount of the client's liability to the brokers. On application being made by the client for the trustee in bankruptcy to hand over the surplus securities remaining after the bank had paid itself in full,—Held, that the brokers could not pass to the bank a greater interest in the client's securities than that which they themselves possessed, and that, on the analogy of the equitable doctrine of "marshalling," the client, his own securities having been realised, was entitled to such others as remained in the hands of the trustee in part satisfaction of his claim. Burge, Woodall & Co., In re; Skyrme, ex parte, 81 L. Deed of Assignment—Possession of Property in Deed by Trustee—Bankruptcy of Debtor—Liability of Trustee of Deed to Account to Trustee in Bankruptcy.]—A debtor executed a deed of assignment and, in order to avoid a threatened distress, handed the key of his business premises to the trustee of the deed. The trustee executed the deed of assignment, accepted the key, valued the stock-in-trade on the premises, and subsequently, on the authority of the creditors, handed back the key to the debtor, who disposed of the stock-in-trade and became bankrupt within three months:—Held, that the trustee had taken possession of the property and was accountable for its value to the trustee in the bankruptcy. Prigoshen, In re; Official Receiver, ex parte, 81 L. Voluntary Settlement—Subsequent Bankruptcy of Settlor — Transfer by Voluntary Donee after Act of Bankruptcy for Valuable Consideration and without Notice.]—A transfer, for valuable consideration and without notice, from a donee under a voluntary settlement is valid as against the trustee in the subsequent bankruptcy of the voluntary settlor, even although the act of bankruptcy on the part of the voluntary settlor has been committed within two years of his making the settlement, and even although the transfer from the voluntary donee has taken place after the act of bankruptcy. Hart, In re; Green, ex parte, 81 L. —— Assignment of Life Insurance Policy — Bankruptcy of Assured — Subsequent Payments by Insurance Company to Bankrupt — Conversion of Lapsed Policy into Paid-up Policy—Notice—Title of Trustee.]—J. S. effected a policy of insurance on his own life with the N. B. & M. I. Co. for 60,000 rupees in June, 1903. This policy he subsequently assigned to his wife in April, 1905, but such assignment was to be revoked in the event of his wife predeceasing him. Within seven months of such assignment the assured was adjudicated bankrupt, and in June, 1906, the policy lapsed. In December, 1906, certain sums, in respect of bonus and refund of premiums, on the lapsed policy, were paid by the insurance company to the bankrupt. In June, 1910, at the request of the bankrupt and his wife, the old policy was converted into a paid-up non-participating policy for 12,000 rupees, and against this policy the insurance company advanced two sums of 4,000 rupees and 3,500 rupees to the bankrupt's wife. Upon application by the trustee in bankruptcy to set aside the assignment to the bankrupt's wife, and to have the policy handed over to him free from incumbrances, and for the payment to him of the sum paid to the bankrupt by the insurance company, it was agreed that the question whether the insurance company had notice of the English bankruptcy in December, 1906, or at any material time should stand over until after further discovery :—Held, that, whether or not the insurance company had notice of the English bankruptcy, the trustee was entitled to the various sums paid by the insurance company to the bankrupt. Held also, that, if the insurance company had notice, the trustee was entitled to have the converted policy handed over to him free from incumbrances; but that, if the company had no notice, the trustee, following the decision in Hart, In re; Green, ex parte (81 L. J. K.B. 1213; [1912] 3 K.B. 6), must take the policy subject to such incumbrances. Shrager, In re, 108 L. T. 346—Phillimore, J.

—— Gift for Special Purpose—No "transfer of property" to Donee — Purchaser for Value.]—A bankrupt within two years of his bankruptcy, in order to assist his nephew to obtain a lease of a public house, purchased a clock and had it fixed on to the public house. The lessors of the public house, in consideration of the clock being affixed to the premises as landlord's fixtures, granted a lease of the premises to the nephew at a reduced rent. The trustee in bankruptcy claimed the clock or its value as a gift to the nephew constituting a voluntary settlement within section 47 of the Bankruptcy Act, 1883 :—Held, that the clock having been transferred to the lessors for value could not be claimed by the trustee; that there was no gift of the clock as a chattel to the nephew; that the reduction of rent did not amount to a retention of any property in the clock by the nephew, and that its value could not therefore be claimed by the trustee. Branson, In re; Moore, ex parte; Trustee v. Branson, 83 L. J. K.B. 1673; [1914] 3 K.B. 1086; 111 L. T. 741; 21 Manson, 229; 30 T. L. R. 604—C.A.

Marriage Settlement—Furniture—Covenant by Husband to Settle After-acquired Furniture—Subsequent Purchase of Furniture—Use of Same at Family Residence—No Formal Transfer to Trustees of Settlement—Bankruptcy of Husband—Claim by Trustee in Bankruptcy—"Actually transferred."] — By a marriage settlement in 1899 the husband settled the furniture and household effects in his private residence upon trust for the separate use and enjoyment of his wife for her life, and after her death upon trusts for the benefit of himself and the children of the marriage, and covenanted that any household effects purchased by him during the life of his wife should form part of the trust property and should be transferred to the trustees of the settlement. The husband and wife frequently changed their residence, and in 1908 moved into a large house, where they lived until the husband became a bankrupt. On that occasion he purchased a large quantity of furniture, which was used in the house. No part of the furniture was formally transferred to the trustees of the settlement and no inventory was taken of the same, but the sole acting trustee was in the habit of visiting at the house, and saw the furniture there. In December, 1909, a receiving order was made against the husband, and he was adjudicated a bankrupt in March, 1910. In January, 1910, he sent all the furniture from his house to a warehouse. The trustee in his bankruptcy claimed the purchased furniture on the ground that it had not been "actually transferred" to the trustee of the settlement pursuant to the covenant within the meaning of the Bankruptcy Act, 1883, s. 47, sub-s. 2. :—Held, that the words "actually transferred" in section 47, subsection 2, must be read with reference to the nature of the property; that, inasmuch as the furniture in question passed by delivery, in the view of the law there had been under the circumstances an actual transfer of such furniture by the husband to the trustee of the settlement and a handing back of the same by the trustee to the wife to be used by her in accordance with the trusts of the settlement, and that consequently the claim of the trustee in bankruptcy failed. Dictum of WRIGHT, J., in Reis, In re; Clough, ex parte (73 L. Mortgage of Book Debts — Bankruptcy of Mortgagor.]—The appointment of a receiver by mortgagees of a bankrupt's book debts, unless followed by notice to the debtors within reasonable time, is not sufficient to take the goods out of the bankrupt's order and disposition. Rutter v. Everett (64 L. Goods Lying in Warehouse.]—Goods which would not pass to the trustee as being in the order or disposition of the bankrupt, if they were upon the bankrupt's premises, will not pass to the trustee if they are lying in the warehouse of a third party in the name of the bankrupt. Keller, In re; Rose, ex parte, 109 L. Deposit of Shares between Act of Bankruptcy and Adjudication.]—By section 313 of the Irish Bankrupt and Insolvent Act, 1857, if a bankrupt, at the time he becomes bankrupt, shall, by the consent and permission of the true owner thereof, have in his possession, order, or disposition, any goods or chattels whereof he was reputed owner, the Court has power to order the same to be sold for the benefit of the creditors under the bankruptcy. M. was adjudicated bankrupt on August 21, 1914, upon an act of bankruptcy committed on June 21, 1914. Between these dates he had deposited certain share certificates and a policy of insurance with a bank as security for his account :—Held, that M. had become bankrupt within the meaning of section 313 at the date of the act of bankruptcy, and that, as at that date he himself was the true owner of the shares, the section did not apply. Lyon v. Weldon (2 Bing. 334) and The Ruby (83 L. T. 438) followed. Mackay, In re, [1915] 2 Ir. R. 347—C.A.

Deposit of Policy of Insurance—Notice to Insurance Company after Adjudication, but before Order of Sale.]—In April, 1914, M. deposited two policies of insurance with a bank as security for his account. On August 15 he executed a legal mortgage of them to the bank. On August 21 he was adjudicated bankrupt, and on the same day notice of the mortgage was sent by the bank to the insurance company. In November, 1914, an order was made ex parte under section 313 of the Irish Bankrupt and Insolvent Act, 1857, for the sale of the policies for the benefit of the creditors under the bankruptcy :—Held, that the policies were, by the consent of the true owner, in the order and disposition of the bankrupt, and that the bank should be ordered to deliver them to the assignees in bankruptcy. Malet's Trusts, In re (17 L. Chattels Personal — Fixtures Separately Assigned by Bill of Sale—Shop Furniture—Attachment to Premises—Action by Grantee of Bill of Sale against Trustee in Bankruptcy of Grantor.]—The tenant of a chemist's shop placed certain articles of shop furniture on the premises for the purposes of his business, and, except so far as was to be inferred from the degree of annexation, without any intention of permanently making them part of the freehold. In consideration of money lent he gave a bill of sale to the plaintiff, by which bill of sale the articles in question were separately assigned, and on his making default under the bill of sale the plaintiff took possession of the scheduled goods. The tenant having become bankrupt, the defendant, as trustee in bankruptcy, claimed the articles under the reputed ownership clause of the Bankruptcy Act, 1883 (section 44), contending that they were chattels, and disposed of them in the bankruptcy. The plaintiff brought an action against the defendant for conversion, contending that the articles were fixtures. At the trial the Judge found that the articles were annexed to the premises, but only in the slightest possible degree, and that that degree of annexation was only adopted for the more efficient use of the articles as chattels, and he held that, inasmuch as they remained chattels, the defendant was entitled to them :—Held, that there was no ground for interfering with the Judge's decision. Horwich v. Symond, 84 L. Seizure by Sheriff under Writ of Fi. Fa.—Ransom of Goods by Third Party — Money Advanced for Specific Purpose.] — Under a writ of fi. fa. the sheriff seized scenery and theatrical costumes lying at a railway station in the name of a judgment debtor, but not being in fact his property. The debtor had a few days previously been adjudicated bankrupt, although the sheriff had no notice of the fact at the time. To release this property for a performance which the bankrupt was under a contract to present, a sum of money was paid over to the sheriff by a third party, who took a receipt from the bankrupt and deducted the amount so paid from a share of the takings at the theatre to which the bankrupt became entitled under the contract at the end of the week :—Held (Farwell, L.J., dissenting), that the money was paid for the specific purpose of releasing goods which were not the property of the bankrupt, and the official receiver was not entitled to the goods seized or the money. Watson, In re; Schipper, ex parte, 107 L. T. 783—C.A.

Assignment in Fraud of Creditors — Good Consideration for Part of Property Assigned — Apportionment of Benefit of Contract — 13 Eliz. c. 5.]—A debtor, in receipt of a conditional life pension, assigned the same to his sister, in consideration of her taking over, in the first place, the liability for the payment of an annuity of 50*l.* to a third party; and secondly, in consideration of her covenanting to maintain the debtor and provide him with a home. The debtor subsequently became bankrupt, and the assignment was impeached by the trustee as a fraud on the creditors:—Held, that the taking over of the liability for payment of the annuity of 50*l.* was good consideration, and to that extent the deed must stand; but that after discharging the liability for the annuity, the assignee must pay over the remainder of the pension to the trustee. Sturmey's Trustee v. Sturmey, 107 L. New Zealand Bankruptcy—Reversionary Interest in England—Subsequent English Bankruptcy—Domicil—Title of Official Assignee in Bankruptcy of New Zealand — Statutory Assignees—Notice.]—In September, 1898, a debtor was adjudicated bankrupt in New Zealand and obtained his discharge in New Zealand in December, 1900. In January, 1904, he was adjudicated a bankrupt in England, and the official receiver became the trustee in bankruptcy. The debtor at the date of his New Zealand adjudication and also of his English adjudication was entitled to a reversionary interest in personalty comprised in the marriage settlement of his parents. The debtor did not disclose this reversionary interest in either bankruptcy, but in August, 1909, it was discovered by the official receiver in the English bankruptcy, and he immediately gave notice to the persons in possession of the trust funds claiming any interest which was vested in the debtor:—Held, that, notwithstanding the fact that the official receiver in England was the first to give notice of his title to the trustees of the fund, the official assignee in New Zealand was entitled as against the official receiver in bankruptcy in England to the reversionary interest. Davidson's Settlement, In re (42 L. Subsequently he was discharged and continued to pay the premiums until his death, which occurred in a motor-car accident. Less than a month before his death he had again been adjudicated bankrupt:—Held, that the trustee of the first bankruptcy, although an officer of the Court, was under no legal, equitable, or moral obligation to allow the trustee in the second bankruptcy out of the policy moneys a sum equal to the amount of the premiums paid in respect of the policy. Tyler, In re; Official Receiver, ex parte (76 L. Advance to Pay off Petitioning Creditor—"Money impressed with a trust."]—A sum of money was advanced by a debtor's stockbroker to him in order to pay off a pressing petitioning creditor, the understanding being that the money was to be used for that purpose. The petitioning creditor's solicitors had already refused a cheque, and had notice of an available act of bankruptcy, but accepted payment of the money advanced by the stockbroker, which was brought by the debtor's secretary later on the same day on which the cheque had been refused:—Held, that the money had never been under the debtor's control, and was so impressed with a trust as to prevent the trustee in bankruptcy from recovering the amount by virtue of the relation back of his title. Drucker, In re; Basden, ex parte (No. 1) (71 L. Partnership Action—Judgment Creditors—Order by Consent During Period of Relation—Subsequent Adjudication—Secured Creditors —Notice of Act of Bankruptcy.]—An order in a partnership action was made by consent after petitions in bankruptcy had been presented against the debtors, but before adjudication. The debtors (who were the plaintiff and defendant in the action), a receiver of the partnership assets, and two firms of solicitors who had acted respectively for the defendant and the receiver in the action, were among the parties to the order, and all had notice of available acts of bankruptcy against the debtors. The order directed the taxed costs of the two firms of solicitors to be paid out of the partnership assets by the receiver. The debtors were subsequently adjudicated bankrupts, and the two firms of solicitors respectively moved the Court for payment of the taxed costs under the order to them, as secured creditors, by the trustee in bankruptcy:—Held, that, although the consent order had the effect of creating equitable charges in favour of the applicants, the trustee, not having been a party to the order, could not be bound thereby, and that the effect of the relation back of the trustee's title to a date anterior to the date of the order was to make the applicants merely unsecured creditors, and that they, having notice of available acts of bankruptcy against the debtors, could not claim the protection of section 45 of the Bankruptcy Act, 1914. Potts, In re; Taylor, ex parte (62 L. Contingent Liability—Provable Debt—Unsuccessful Action by Debtor—Order for New Trial—Costs of First Trial to Abide Event of New Trial.]—An action for wrongful dismissal tried before a Judge and a special jury was dismissed with costs. On the application of the unsuccessful plaintiff the Court of Appeal made an order for a new trial and that the costs of the first trial should abide the event of the new trial. The plaintiff became bankrupt, but a composition scheme having been approved by the Court the bankruptcy was annulled. The defendants in the action were not the petitioning creditors, nor were they parties to the scheme. After the annulment the new trial took place, when judgment was ordered to be entered for the defendants with costs, and that they should recover against the plaintiff the taxed costs of the first trial and the costs of the second trial to be taxed. The defendants served on the plaintiff a bankruptcy notice to pay them the taxed costs of the first trial, the other costs not having been taxed. The plaintiff applied to set aside the notice on the ground that the amount of the taxed costs was a provable debt in the bankruptcy that had been annulled:—Held, that at the date of the annulled bankruptcy there was only a possibility of having to pay costs; that the order of the Court of Appeal did not create any contingent liability which gave rise to a provable debt in that bankruptcy within the meaning of section 37, sub-sections 3 and 8 of the Bankruptcy Act, 1883, and that therefore the bankruptcy notice was valid. Fraudulent Company Promoter—Issue of Debentures—Real Promoter not Disclosed—Secret Profits—Bankruptcy of Promoter.]—A corporation, consisting only of the seven signatories to its memorandum of association, was formed by D. and G., two of the signatories, to conceal their identity of promoting companies. D. and G., who were then undischarged bankrupts, had a controlling interest in the shares of the corporation, were its only directors, and divided its profits between themselves in an agreed proportion. In 1904 the corporation contracted to buy a Welsh quarrying interest for a small sum, and promoted a company to purchase the same from it at a greatly enhanced price in cash and shares. The seven signatories to the memorandum of association of this company and its directors were found by D. and G. and were their creatures. These signatories and the corporation were the only shareholders, and no issue of shares was made to the public, but, immediately after the incorporation of the company, D. and G. prepared prospectuses, which were issued by the company to the public, inviting subscriptions for an issue of debentures. Out of sums subscribed on the faith of these prospectuses, the company paid the corporation some 9,000*l.* on account of the purchase price of the quarrying interest, and D. and G. divided this sum between themselves. The prospectuses disclosed that the corporation was the promoter of and vendor to the company and was making a large profit, but did not disclose the fact that D. and G. were the real promoters and vendors and were receiving the profit through the corporation. Early in 1906 the company was ordered to be wound up compulsorily, and in 1908 D. and G. were again adjudicated bankrupt and also prosecuted and convicted for fraudulent misrepresentations in the prospectuses :—Held, that the corporation was a mere alias of D. and G., and that the liquidator of the company could prove in D.'s bankruptcy for the secret profit received by D. and G. through the corporation. Darby, In re; Brougham, ex parte, 80 L. Loan to Trading Firm—Share of Profits of a Trading Venture — "Business" within Meaning of Partnership Act—Failure of Proposed Company — Subsequent Alteration of Terms.]—A. in December, 1910, lent to a firm sums amounting to 13,325*l.* for the purposes of a commercial adventure in Mexico, upon the terms that the loan was repayable with interest at 5 per cent. or, at the option of the lender, together with a share in the profits of the venture. A. decided in lieu of interest to receive shares in the proposed company. The company was never formed, and in April, 1911, the terms of the agreement were varied, A. continuing to lend the money in consideration of 5 per cent. interest and a proportion of any profits realised out of the Mexican venture. No profits were ever realised therefrom, and in August, 1911, the firm became financially embarrassed. Thereupon A. undertook to release the firm from their liability in consideration of the individual members of the firm accepting bills for the amount of the loan, and an ultimate guarantee being given by the firm for their due payment. In the ensuing bankruptcy A. claimed to prove for the full amount of his debt against the joint estate of the firm :—Held, that the release of the firm's liability in August, 1911, and the substitution therefor of the liability of the several partners, constituted a new agreement, and that A. under the guarantee of August, 1911, could prove for his debt against the joint estate of the bankrupt firm in competition with the other creditors.—Abenheim, In re; Abenheim, ex parte, 109 L. T. 219—Phillimore, J.

Semble, the transaction, although originally within the mischief of sections 2 and 3 of the Partnership Act, ceased to be so when in April, 1911, the source of any intended profits failed and the advance became a mere loan at interest. The term "business" in the Partnership Act, 1890, s. 2, sub-s. 3 (d), applies not merely to a lifelong or universal business, but to any separate commercial venture in which a trader or firm of traders embarks. Ib.

Double Proof—Partnership—Misfeasance—Breach of Trust—Joint and Several Liability—Proof against Individual Partner's Estate—Claim to Set off Debt Due to Joint Estate—Right of Election—"Distinct contracts."]—Where a firm, while in fiduciary relation to a company, has secretly profited to the extent of 14,000*l.* of the company's funds, and afterwards become bankrupt, the partners are jointly and severally liable for that sum. But where the liquidator of a company had elected to prove in the separate estate of one of the partners, it was held that he could not afterwards, by the provisions of rule 18, Schedule II. of the Bankruptcy Act, 1883, set off a debt due to the estate of the firm by the company against the balance of his claim, as neither of the partners had been an express trustee, and the fiduciary relationship did not constitute a "distinct contract" under the rule. Parkers, In re: Sheppard, ex parte (56 L. Set-off — Mortgage of Company's Plant — Insurance in Name of Secured Creditor—Insurance Money Paid to Creditor Prior to Winding-up — Surplus over Secured Debt — Set-off against Unsecured Debt.]—A company borrowed money from the respondents, with whom they had business dealings, giving them as a security for the loan bills of sale on their machinery, which in accordance with the provisions of the bills of sale was insured; but at the request of the company the respondents insured and paid the premiums, which were repaid to them by the company. In July, 1910, a fire occurred on the premises of the company, and the machinery was destroyed. In September, 1910, a resolution having been passed and duly confirmed to wind up the company, the company went into liquidation and was insolvent. Two weeks prior to the commencement of the winding-up the insurance moneys were paid over to the respondents, who, having paid themselves the loan made by them to the company, had in their hands a surplus, which they claimed they were entitled to retain and set off in the liquidation against certain unsecured book debts due to them from the company :—Held, that there had clearly been mutual dealings and no contract to apply the money for a specific purpose so as to prevent the operation of section 38 of the Bankruptcy Act, 1883, as applied to insolvent companies by section 207 of the Companies (Consolidation) Act, 1908, and that the mutual dealings having resulted in a money claim some time before the date of the winding-up section 38 was applicable and a set-off must be allowed. Thorne & Son, Lim., In re, 84 L. Creditor's Right to a Security—Obligation to Assign Debenture as Security for Debt—Assignment not Completed at Date of Liquidation.]—A company which was indebted to the appellant bank entered into an arrangement whereby it was agreed that upon the bank surrendering certain goods, the property of the company, which the bank held as security, the company should obtain from one J., who was indebted to them, a debenture or floating charge over his assets, and should assign it to the bank in lieu of the security so surrendered. The property was surrendered to the company, and the debenture was obtained from J., but before it had been assigned to the bank the company went into liquidation. Assignment by Debtor to his Solicitor of Sum Due to Him from Commissioners of Inland Revenue for the Purpose of Opposing Bankruptcy Proceedings—Notice to Assignee of Available Act of Bankruptcy—Adjudication—Title of Trustee.]—On February 14, 1912, J., against whom a bankruptcy petition had been presented by W. and various judgments had been obtained, requested T., his solicitor, who had acted for him since September, 1911, to oppose this petition and to act for him in the other proceedings then pending. T., who was owed a considerable sum for professional services, declined to act unless the debtor provided funds for the purpose. Thereupon J. gave T. a letter authorising the Commissioners of Inland Revenue to pay T. a sum of 42*l.* 15*s.* 5*d.* then due from them to J. This letter T. immediately took to Somerset House, but the money was not paid over to him till March 20. T. acted for J. from February 14 till May 29, when the retainer was withdrawn, and, by making payments amounting to 38*l.* 17*s.* 2*d.*, succeeded in getting two adjournments of W.'s petition and of a subsequent petition by K. After May 29 J. employed another solicitor, and, although W.'s petition was dismissed, a receiving order was made against J. on K.'s petition, and he was subsequently adjudicated bankrupt. E., the trustee in J.'s bankruptcy, now applied for an order that T. should pay over to him the sum of 42*l.* 15*s.* 5*d.* as being money received by him with notice of an available act of bankruptcy. It was admitted that T. had notice of an available act of bankruptcy when he received the letter of authority from J. on February 14 :—Held, that the money was paid by the debtor to his solicitor for the purpose of opposing bankruptcy proceedings and protecting the debtor's estate, and that what the solicitor did was for the benefit of the debtor's estate, and that he was entitled to retain out of the sum of 42*l.* 15*s.* 5*d.* the sum of 38*l.* 17*s.* 2*d.* actually expended, and that the trustee was only entitled to the balance of 3*l.* 18*s.* 3*d.* Sinclair, In re; Payne, ex parte (15 Q.B. Parties Protected — Time between Receiving Order and Adjudication.]—After the dismissal of a bankruptcy petition against him a debtor continued to carry on business, paid in sums to his banking account, and drew cheques against them. On appeal, three months later, a receiving order was made and dated as of the date when the petition was wrongly dismissed. The sums paid into the bank during this period were claimed by the trustee for the benefit of the creditors :—Held, that the receiving order was rightly antedated, but that the rights of innocent third parties were not affected thereby in regard to dealings with the debtor between the date when the receiving order ought to have been made and the date when it was in fact made. Teale, In re; Blackburn, ex parte, 81 L. Mortgage — Trustees of Settlement — Bankruptcy of Settlor — Bona Fide Transaction without Notice—Covenant by Trustees, "as such trustees but not otherwise," to Repay Principal—Effect of Covenant.]—By a settlement made in 1903 on the marriage of R., a sum of 200,000*l.*, charged on his share in his father's residuary estate, was settled on trusts for R. and his wife and the issue of the marriage, with an ultimate trust for R. The settlement contained a power to the trustees to apply any part of the trust fund on R.'s request in writing in paying debts incurred by him, for which purpose they were to have full power of sale or mortgage. On November 18, 1906, R. committed an act of bankruptcy, and on December 18 R. made a request in writing to the trustees, in pursuance of which they applied to the plaintiff for a loan to pay off R.'s debts. The plaintiff advanced 800*l.*, to secure which a mortgage dated February 19, 1907, was executed, and by it the trustees, "as such trustees but not otherwise," covenanted to pay the 800*l.* with interest, and they assigned to the plaintiff the property subject to the settlement of 1903 in exercise of the power contained in it. On January 16, 1907, a receiving order was made against R., and in April, 1907, he was adjudicated bankrupt. In an action by the plaintiff to enforce the mortgage,—Held, first, that the request by R. to the trustees in December, 1906, before the date of the receiving order, was a bona fide transaction without notice within section 49 of the Bankruptcy Act, 1883, and that the mortgage made in pursuance of it was valid and effectual, though made after the date of the receiving order; secondly, that the words in the covenant, "as such trustees but not otherwise," did not protect the trustees from liability; and thirdly, that the plaintiff was entitled to judgment. Robinson, In re; Gant v. Hobbs, 28 T. L. R. 121—Warrington, J.

Gift for Special Purpose—No "transfer of property" to Donee—Purchaser for Value.]—A bankrupt within two years of his bankruptcy, in order to assist his nephew to obtain a lease of a public house, purchased a clock and had it fixed on to the public house. The lessors of the public house, in consideration of the clock being affixed to the premises as landlord's fixtures, granted a lease of the premises to the nephew at a reduced rent. The trustee in bankruptcy claimed the clock or its value as a gift to the nephew constituting a voluntary settlement within section 47 of the Bankruptcy Act, 1883 :—Held, that the clock having been transferred to the lessors for value could not be claimed by the trustee; that there was no gift of the clock as a chattel to the nephew; that the reduction of rent did not amount to a retention of any property in the clock by the nephew, and that its value could not therefore be claimed by the trustee. Branson, In re; Moore, ex parte; Trustee v. Branson, 83 L. C. OFFICIAL RECEIVER.

See also Vol. II. 1038, 2040.

Costs—Official Receiver—Receiving Order against Firm—Partner—Unsuccessful Application for Adjudication.]—The official receiver is under no statutory obligation to apply for an adjudication in bankruptcy, and the Court has jurisdiction therefore to order him to pay the costs of an unsuccessful application, although in making the application he was not guilty of any misconduct and did not exceed his powers. Williams & Co., In re; Official Receiver, ex parte, 82 L. J. K.B. 459; [1913] 2 K.B. 88; 108 L. T. 585; 20 Manson, 21; 57 S. J. 285; 29 T. L. R. 243—C.A.

A receiving order was made against a firm in the firm name, and, believing M. to be a partner, the official receiver applied for his adjudication. There was a serious conflict of evidence, but ultimately M. was held not to be a partner, and the application was dismissed : —Held, that it was within the jurisdiction of the Court to order the official receiver to pay the costs personally in the first instance, and that the Registrar had rightly exercised his discretion in ordering him to do so. Tweddle & Co., In re (80 L. J. K.B. 20; [1910] 2 K.B. 697), applied. Ib.

Motion — Consent of Official Receiver in Writing.]—Although not so prescribed by the Rules, it is desirable that the consent of the official receiver to the use of his name by a third party in launching a bankruptcy motion should be in writing. Fitzgerald, In re (No. 1), 112 L. T. 86—Horridge, J.

D. THE TRUSTEE.

Resolution for Appointment of.]—In calculating a quorum of creditors present at a first meeting of creditors only those who have lodged proofs can be calculated; consequently, if there is only one creditor present who has lodged a proof he forms a quorum, and can carry a resolution for the appointment of the trustee. Thomas, In re; Warner, ex parte, 55 S. J. 482—Phillimore, J.

Sale of Bankrupt's Business to a Private Company—Company Promoted by the Trustee and Committee of Inspection—Sanction of the Court.]—The trustee in bankruptcy may, with the leave of the Court, sell the bankrupt's business to a private company, notwithstanding that such company has been promoted by the trustee and the committee of inspection, and that such persons are interested in such company as shareholders or directors or officers of the company. Spink, In re; Slater, ex parte (No. 1), 108 L. T. 572; 57 S. J. 445; 29 T. L. R. 420—Phillimore, J.

Trustee Carrying on Bankrupt's Business—Goods Supplied to the Business by Firms in which a Member of the Committee of Inspection was a Partner — Payments out of the Estate — Sanction of Court.] — Where the trustee in bankruptcy is carrying on the business of the bankrupt and orders goods from firms with which a member of the committee of inspection is connected, although this fact was not known to the trustee at the time when such orders were given and executed, the Court will sanction the payment by the trustee out of the bankrupt's estate of the cost price of goods so supplied. Spink, In re; Slater, ex parte (No. 2), 108 L. T. 811—Phillimore, J.

Proceedings by Trustee in Bankruptcy—No Sanction of Committee of Inspection — No Defence to Action.]—The obtaining of the consent of the committee of inspection to the taking of proceedings by a trustee in bankruptcy which is required by section 22, subsection 9, and section 57 of the Bankruptcy Act, 1883, and section 15, sub-section 3 of the Bankruptcy Act, 1890, is merely a provision for the protection of the estate, and is not one which the respondent or defendant in any proceedings by the trustee is entitled to avail himself of in answer to those proceedings. Lee v. Sangster (26 L. J. C.P. 151; 2 C. B. (N.S.) 1) and Angerstein, Ex parte; Angerstein, in re (43 L. J. Bk. 131; L. R. 9 Ch. 479), applied. Branson, In re; Trustee, ex parte, 83 L. J. Default of Trustee—Improper Retention of Money—Statutory Interest—Non-payment of Interest—Fidelity Bond—"Loss or damage" to Estate—Loss by "Default" of Trustee—Liability of Surety.] — Non-payment by a trustee in bankruptcy of the interest at 20 per cent. per annum imposed by section 74, subsection 6 of the Bankruptcy Act, 1883, upon a trustee who improperly retains for more than ten days a sum exceeding 50*l.*, is not a loss or damage to the estate of the bankrupt by the default of the trustee within the meaning of a bond given by the trustee and his surety for the due performance of his duties by the trustee, conditioned to be avoided if the surety should make good any such loss or damage occasioned by any such default. Board of Trade v. Employers' Liability Assurance Corporation, 79 L. J. K.B. 1001; [1910] 2 K.B. 649; 102 L. T. 850; 17 Manson, 273; 54 S. J. 581; 26 T. L. R. 511—C.A.

Right to Costs Incurred with Sanction of Committee — Proofs of Majority of Creditors and Committee Expunged — Annulment of Adjudication.]—A trustee who has been appointed by creditors and permitted to incur costs by a committee of inspection, whose proofs have subsequently been expunged, with the result that the adjudication has been annulled and a new trustee appointed, is, in the absence of fraud on his part, entitled to have such costs out of the estate. Jones, In re; Goatly, ex parte, 56 S. J. 17—Phillimore, J.

Committee of Inspection.] — A creditor is qualified for appointment to the committee of inspection by section 5 of the Bankruptcy Act, 1890, even before he has tendered a proof. Ib.

Leave to Use Trustee's Name—Indemnity.] —Where a secured creditor, who relies on his security, wishes to exercise his power of sale and to enforce a contract made by the bankrupt, and applies to the trustee in bankruptcy for the use of his name, he must give a full and proper indemnity, and an indemnity limited to assets received by the creditor as receiver and manager is not wide enough. Grenfell, In re; Plender, ex parte, [1915] H. B. R. 74—Horridge, J.

Taxation — New Trustee — Taxation of Trustee's Solicitor's Bill of Costs without Notice to New Trustee—Allocatur Signed—Re-taxation.] — "The trustee," who under rule 120 of the Bankruptcy Rules, 1886 and 1890, is entitled to not less than seven days' notice of the appointment to tax, is the person who is trustee at the time when the taxation takes place; so that where a new trustee in bankruptcy had been appointed and the solicitor to the original trustee did not give him notice of the appointment to tax the solicitor's bill of costs, and the taxation proceeded in his absence and the allocatur was signed, a re-taxation was ordered, and in the meantime the allocatur was suspended. Smith, In re; Wilson, ex parte, 80 L. J. K.B. 16; [1910] 2 K.B. 346; 102 L. T. 861; 17 Manson, 290; 26 T. L. R. 492—Phillimore, J.

Insolvent Traders — Proposal to Transfer Business to Private Company—Debentures in Satisfaction of Debts—Restriction on Debentures—Approval of Creditors—Valuable Consideration—Bona Fides—Defeating or Delaying Creditors—Fraudulent Conveyance—Act of Bankruptcy.]—An assignment of their business assets to a private company by insolvent traders is not void under the statute 13 Eliz. c. 5, if the assignment is for valuable consideration, and is not in any way tainted by fraud. Where, however, the object and effect of the transaction is to enable the insolvent traders to carry on their business without interruption by creditors, and where the principal consideration for the assignment consists of debentures, which are not available as assets for creditors generally, but are handed to specific creditors, with a restriction against their being enforced during a term of years; then the assignment is void, as calculated to "defeat or delay creditors," and is an act of bankruptcy within the meaning of the Bankruptcy Act, 1883, s. 4, sub-s. 1 (b). David & Johnson, In re; Whinney, ex parte, 83 L. Payment by Cheque on Eve of Bankruptcy—Cheque Given in Substitution for Former Uncashed Cheque.]—O. acted as agent for W. in the selling of cattle. On January 30 O. sent to W. in England a cheque for the proceeds of certain sales, which cheque W. omitted to cash, and he came to Ireland leaving the uncashed cheque in England. On February 4 W. met O., who informed him of his insolvency, and at W.'s request O. gave him a cheque for the same amount and bearing the same date as the former, and in substitution therefor. This cheque W. immediately cashed. Earlier that day O. had instructed his solicitor to file a petition in arrangement on his behalf, and the petition was filed later in the same day and protection granted:—Held, that the giving of the second cheque did not amount to a fraudulent preference of W. under section 53 of the Bankruptcy (Ireland) Amendment Act, 1872. Oliver, In re, [1914] 2 Ir. R. 356—C.A.

Innocent Receipt—Misleading Representation — Estoppel.] — Owing to the doctrine of relation back that is formulated in section 43 of the Bankruptcy Act, 1883, by which the property of a bankrupt becomes the property of the trustee in his bankruptcy as from the date of committal of the act of bankruptcy on which the receiving order is founded, it is impossible for the trustee to be prejudiced in any way whatever in dealing with the bankrupt's property by any representation concerning the property made by the bankrupt himself after the act of bankruptcy, even though such representation might have estopped the bankrupt himself from dealing with the property in any particular fashion. Where, accordingly, a bankrupt makes a preferential payment to one of his creditors on the representation that the payment is really being made by some third person, and where the creditor believes in and acts on the representation, the trustee in bankruptcy will not be estopped from recovering the money thus paid on behalf of the bankrupt's estate. Ashwell, In re; Salaman, ex parte, 81 L. J. K.B. 360; [1912] 1 K.B. 390; 106 L. T. 190; 19 Manson, 49; 56 S. J. 189; 28 T. L. R. 166—Phillimore, J.

Return of Goods to Creditor—Evidence of other Acts of Fraudulent Preference—Admissibility.]—A debtor returned goods to the value of 1,808*l.* to a creditor on March 22, 1912, the debtor being to his own knowledge insolvent at that date. No threats of legal proceedings were made by the creditor. On May 29 a receiving order was made against the debtor on a creditor's petition, based on an act of bankruptcy committed on May 2. The trustee in bankruptcy claimed the return of these goods or the payment of 1,808*l.* on the ground that the transaction was a fraudulent preference. In support of the application evidence was tendered of other acts of fraudulent preference by the debtor shortly before and shortly after the transaction in question, to shew the intent of the debtor:—Held, that the transaction was fraudulent, and further, that the evidence of other acts of fraudulent preference was admissible. Ramsay, In re; Deacon, ex parte, 82 L. Post-nuptial Settlement — Recital of Ante-nuptial Agreement — Intention to Defeat or Delay Creditors.]—A recital in a post-nuptial deed of settlement that the settlement is made in pursuance of a parol ante-nuptial agreement is a memorandum in writing sufficient to satisfy the Statute of Frauds; but it does not dispense with the necessity of proving that the recited ante-nuptial agreement was actually made. Validity of a post-nuptial settlement under 13 Eliz. c. 5, and section 47 of the Bankruptcy Act, 1883, considered. Gillespie, In re; Knapman v. Gillespie, 20 Manson, 311—Horridge, J.

Agreement by Undischarged Bankrupt to Pay Debt Incurred Prior to Bankruptcy — Validity.]—The plaintiff recovered judgment against the defendant for 913*l.* 11*s.*, and subsequently a receiving order was made against the defendant, and he was adjudicated bankrupt. No part of the 913*l.* 11*s.* had been paid, but the plaintiff lodged no proof in the bankruptcy. While the defendant was still undischarged, the plaintiff lent 15*l.* to the defendant in consideration of a promise by the defendant to pay what he owed prior to the receiving order just as if such receiving order had not been made. In an action by the plaintiff against the defendant to recover the 913*l.* 11*s.* it was admitted that no dividend could be paid by the defendant's state :—Held, that the contract was valid, and that therefore the plaintiff was entitled to recover. Wild v. Tucker, 83 L. J. K.B. 1410; [1914] 3 K.B. 36; 111 L. T. 250; 21 Manson, 181; 30 T. L. R. 507—Atkin, J.

Undischarged Bankrupt — Proceeding against Trustee—Maintenance.]—An undischarged bankrupt is not entitled to bring an action for damages for maintenance in respect of proceedings brought against his trustee in bankruptcy. Bottomley v. Bell, 59 S. J. 703; 31 T. L. R. 591—C.A.

Arrest of Debtor—High Bailiff's Man's Fee —Mileage—Scale of Fees.]—Under Table C of the Scale of Fees and Percentages under the Bankruptcy Acts, which prescribes 5*d*. per mile for the high bailiff's man travelling "to execute a warrant of or order of commitment," he is entitled to mileage for the whole journey up to delivery of the debtor to prison. Cropley, In re; Fox, ex parte, 80 L. Hearing of Matter not Arising out of the Bankruptcy.]—Where a dispute has arisen in respect of a title on a contract for the sale of a lease, the matter would, as a general rule, be decided in the Chancery Division on a vendor and purchaser summons, but where the estate of the vendor has subsequently become vested in a trustee in bankruptcy a Judge of the King's Bench Division sitting in Bankruptcy may, for the convenience of the parties and with their consent, hear the application. Martin, In re: Dixon, ex parte, 106 L. Administration — Probable Insolvency of Estate — Application to Transfer Proceedings from the Chancery Division to the Court of Bankruptcy.]—Where an administration order had been made in the Chancery Division on the application of a creditor of a testator, and the advertisements had been issued stating that creditors' claims must be sent in by a certain day, and a date had been fixed for adjudicating on them, and where the solicitors for the executrix had written stating that so many claims had reached them that they did not know whether there would be sufficient to pay all the creditors in full, on an application made for the proceedings to be transferred to the Bankruptcy Court, under section 130, sub-section 3 of the Bankruptcy Act, 1914,—Held, that there was not sufficient evidence to satisfy the Court that the estate was insufficient to pay its debts, and that, however that might be, there were no such considerations of convenience, delay, or expense as would justify the Court in making the order for transfer. York, In re; Atkinson v. Powell (56 L. Bankruptcy Order of County Court Judge for Payment of Money—Action in High Court of Order.]—A married woman executed a deed of assignment of her property for the benefit of her creditors, and appointed the defendant trustee. A bankruptcy petition founded on that act of bankruptcy was presented against her in the County Court, and she was adjudicated a bankrupt, and the official receiver appointed trustee in the bankruptcy. An order was obtained in the County Court that (the official receiver having elected to treat the defendant as a trespasser) the defendant should pay to the official receiver the amount which might be found due from him in respect of the bankrupt's property and book debts. The Registrar found that a sum of 178*l*. 12*s*. 1*d*. was due from the defendant to the official receiver, who thereupon instituted an action in the High Court to recover that amount from the defendant :—Held (Bray, J., dissenting), that the action was maintainable. Savill v. Dalton, 84 L. County Court Order for Payment of Salary —Default in Payment—Committal—Attachment—Personal Service.]—The County Court sitting in bankruptcy has the power to commit for contempt, and it is therefore not necessary, when proceeding against a bankrupt who has disobeyed an order made in pursuance of section 53 of the Bankruptcy Act, 1883, for the payment to his trustee of a portion of his salary, that the requirements of Order XXV. rule 58 of the County Court Rules, 1903 and 1904, which regulate the practice as to attachment, shall have been complied with. Pickard, In re; Official Receiver, ex parte, 81 L. Receiving Order Varied by Striking out Finding Complained of without Prejudice to any Question.]—A receiving order was made against a debtor on a petition alleging two acts of bankruptcy, one of which was the giving of a bill of sale. The grantee of the bill of sale was not a party to the bankruptcy proceedings in the County Court, and had no opportunity of disputing the allegation of fraud. The grantee appealed to the Divisional Court to annul the adjudication order and rescind the receiving order and, if necessary, to dismiss the petition, or, alternatively, to amend the orders by striking out all reference to the particular act of bankruptcy complained of :—Held, that the receiving order ought to be amended by striking out all reference to the finding complained of, and that the trustee should within fourteen days give notice of motion in the County Court to set aside the bill of sale. Debtor, In re; Powell, ex parte, 106 L. T. 344—D.

3. Appeal.

Order of Court of Appeal Supporting Receiving Order — No Leave to Appeal — Appeal to House of Lords — "Bankruptcy matters."]—Matters coming within the jurisdiction of the Bankruptcy Court are "bankruptcy matters" within the meaning of section 104, sub-section 2 (c.) of the Bankruptcy Act, 1883, and therefore an appeal will not lie to the House of Lords from an order of the Court of Appeal, supporting a receiving order, without the leave of the Court of Appeal. Chatterton v. City of London Brewery Co., 84 L. From County Court — Money or Money's Worth Involved not Exceeding 50*l.*—Leave to Appeal—Appeal from Part of Order—Property Involved in Proceedings as a Whole—Costs.]—Rule 129 (1) [rule 1 of 1905] of the Bankruptcy Rules, 1886 to 1914, which provides that no appeal shall be brought, without the leave of the Court, or of the Court of Appeal, from any order relating to property when it is apparent from the proceedings that the money or money's worth involved does not exceed 50*l.*, means, first, to exclude costs, which do not come into consideration in the amount involved; and secondly, that the money or money's worth involved in the appeal does not exceed 50*l.*; and not that the same did not exceed 50*l.* when the proceedings were originally taken in the County Court. In order to ascertain the amount involved in the appeal the Court is entitled to look at all the proceedings. Arnold, In re; Hext, ex parte, 84 L. J. K.B. 110; [1914] 3 K.B. 1078; [1915] H. B. The occupier of a farm was adjudicated a bankrupt. He had sold the stock and effects. The official receiver, as trustee in the bankruptcy, applied in the County Court for a declaration that the effects, which on a sale by the purchaser had realised upwards of 126*l.*, were in the order and disposition of the bankrupt, and that 13*l.* odd, part of that sum which had been paid to the purchaser, was a fraudulent preference. The County Court Judge refused the motion so far as it related to the question of order and disposition, but he declared that the payment of the 13*l.* was a fraudulent preference, and ordered the purchaser to pay the costs, which with the 13*l.* exceeded 50*l.* The purchaser, without obtaining leave, appealed from the part of the order directing payment of the 13*l.*, and the Divisional Court (Horridge, J., and Atkin, J.) overruled a preliminary objection by the official receiver that, under rule 129 (1) of the Bankruptcy Rules, 1886 to 1914, leave to appeal was necessary, and allowed the appeal :—Held, reversing the Divisional Court, that, as the value of the property involved in the only part of the order under appeal did not exceed 50*l.* there could be no appeal without leave, and that in dealing with that question the Court could not take the costs into consideration. Everson, In re; Official Receiver, ex parte (74 L. A petition for the administration of the estate of a deceased debtor in bankruptcy under section 125 can only be presented by a creditor whose debt was incurred during the life of the debtor. Ib.

Appeal against Making of Receiving Order—Stay of Proceedings—Official Receiver not Served with Notice of Appeal—Appeal Heard de Bene Esse.]—Notice of appeal to the Court of Appeal or to the Divisional Court in Bankruptcy against the making of a receiving order must in every case, whether proceedings under the order have been stayed or not, be served upon the official receiver within the time limited by the Rules for service on the petitioning creditor. But in special circumstances the Court may extend the time for appealing in order that the official receiver may be served, or may hear the appeal de bene esse, and if necessary then adjourn the matter for a like purpose. Sleath, In re; Lotus Shoe Co., ex parte, 109 L. T. 222—D.

Order for Administration in Bankruptcy—"Person aggrieved."] — An administratrix who will be put to expense in complying with an order for administration in bankruptcy under section 125, rule 278 of the Act is a "person aggrieved" within the meaning of section 104 of the Act. The apparent absence of any available assets is not of necessity a ground for refusing administration in bankruptcy under section 125. Hosking, In re; Hosking, ex parte, 106 L. T. 640—D.

Security for Costs — Nominal Plaintiff — Action by Undischarged Bankrupt for Commission — Personal Earnings of Bankrupt — Earnings Necessary for Maintenance of Bankrupt—Intervention of Trustee.]—The plaintiff, an undischarged bankrupt, brought an action against the defendants claiming a sum of 60*l.* alleged to be due to him on a commission note given by them to him during the bankruptcy, by which, in consideration of his obtaining for them a certain loan, they agreed to pay him that sum as commission. The trustee in bankruptcy of the plaintiff wrote to the defendants claiming any moneys that might become payable to him. The defendants made an application for an order that the plaintiff should give security for the costs of the action on the ground that he was a mere nominal plaintiff suing for the benefit of his trustee in bankruptcy. The evidence shewed that for the year preceding the bringing of the action the plaintiff's total earnings, including the sum sued for, had not exceeded 100*l.* :—Held, that the sum sued for was personal earnings of the plaintiff necessary for his maintenance within the exception which excludes such earnings of a bankrupt from the general rule that the property of the bankrupt vests in the trustee in bankruptcy; and, consequently, that the plaintiff was not a mere nominal plaintiff, and should not be ordered to give the security asked for. Affleck v. Hammond, 81 L. Taxation of Costs of Trustee's Solicitors—Right of Bankrupt to Attend—Authorisation of Trustee to Employ Solicitor — Solicitor's Retainer.]—A man was adjudicated bankrupt. There was only one creditor. This creditor's general proxy purported to appoint himself committee of inspection, and as such committee authorised the trustee to employ solicitors. Under the Bankruptcy Act, 1883, s. 22, sub-s. 1, a committee must not consist of less than three persons; under section 22, sub-section 9, if there is no committee the Board of Trade have their powers; under section 57, sub-section 3, the trustee may, with the permission of the committee, employ solicitors; under section 73, sub-section 3, the taxing officer is to satisfy himself that the employment of solicitors has been duly sanctioned. The debt was paid in full, and the bankruptcy annulled. The trustee under the above authority, and not under the authority of the Board of Trade, employed solicitors, whose costs were taxed and paid. The solicitors, although applied to by the late bankrupt, gave him no information as to costs until they had been taxed. The late bankrupt thereupon applied to re-open the taxation and for leave to attend. The taxing officer refused the application. The Divisional Court sent the matter back to him to be re-opened :—Held, that the taxing officer had jurisdiction in a proper case to allow a bankrupt to attend taxation, and that this was such a case; and that the trustee had not been duly authorised under the Bankruptcy Acts to retain solicitors, and that the sums paid for costs must be disallowed. Geiger, In re; Geiger, ex parte. Williams v. Biddle, 84 L. Petition — "Person carrying on business under a partnership name."]—When a petition has been presented against a debtor who, to the knowledge of the creditor, carries on business alone under a partnership or trade name, it must be served personally against the debtor, and it is not sufficient to serve it upon a person having at the time of service the control or management of the business. Patrick, In re; Hall & Co., ex parte, 107 L. Committal for Disobedience to Order of Court—Mode of Service of Order Disobeyed.] —Where it is sought to commit a bankrupt for disobedience to an order made under section 53 of the Bankruptcy Act, 1883, it is not necessary that such order shall have been personally served upon the bankrupt or indorsed with a warning of the consequences of non-compliance therewith. Pickard, In re; Official Receiver, ex parte, 56 S. 6. Various Matters.

Joint and Separate Estates—Intermixture of Partnership—Consolidation.]—The Court will not sanction a consolidation of the joint and separate estates of bankrupt partners merely because the estates are so intermixed that the investigation of proofs and distinguishing claims against the joint and separate estates may be attended with difficulty and expense. Kriegel, In re; Trotman, ex parte (68 L. Private Examination of Witness — Summons.]—The Court will not refuse to issue a summons for the attendance of a witness for examination by the trustee under section 27 of the Bankruptcy Act, 1883, either upon the ground that the bankrupt knows as much about the matters to be enquired into as the witness, or upon the ground that the witness is the arbitrator under a contract entered into by the bankrupt as to which the trustee wishes to make enquiries. Macdonald, Deakin & Jones, In re; Trustee, ex parte, 58 S. —— Service of Notice of Motion on Person to be Examined—Special Circumstances.]—The trustee claimed that certain money in the banking account of a stranger formed part of the property of the bankrupt. In order to prevent the stranger from dealing with the money, he served notice of motion upon her, and obtained an interim injunction before examining her under section 27 :—Held, that the above facts constituted such special circumstances as to entitle the trustee to proceed with the examination of the respondent under section 27, although he had already commenced proceedings against her. Aarons, In re; Trustee, ex parte, 111 L. T. 411; 58 S. J. 581—Horridge, J.

Notice of Intention to Read Private Examination of Party to Motion — Copy to be Supplied to Other Side.]—Where on a notice of motion notice is given of intention to read against a party his deposition taken under section 25 of the Bankruptcy Act, 1914, the solicitor giving such notice ought to supply the party against whom the deposition is to be read with a copy thereof, on being paid for it. It will then be for the taxing officer to say whether such a copy was necessary. Carill-Worsley, In re; Trustee, ex parte, 84 L. J. K.B. 1414; [1915] 2 K.B. 534; [1915] H. B. R. 190; 59 S. Public Examination — Evidence against Third Parties.]—The public examination of a bankrupt is not evidence against his trustee in bankruptcy, at all events so far as it consists of statements as to what the bankrupt says or does after the commencement of the bankruptcy. Bottomley, In re; Brougham, ex parte, 84 L. —— Questions Tending to Incriminate — Debtor Charged with Offence Abroad.] — Where a debtor prior to the filing of his own petition has been arrested in London on a charge of robbery in Canada, and at his public examination under section 17 of the Bankruptcy Act, 1883, the official receiver put questions to him to which he objected as tending to incriminate him in reference to the offence with which he was charged, the debtor was ordered to answer the questions. Atherton, In re, 81 L. Discovery of Debtor's Property—Order to Produce for Inspection — Jurisdiction of Registrar.]—The procedure of section 27 of the Bankruptcy Act, 1883, is primarily intended to apply to the case of a recalcitrant witness, and is only one of the methods by which the official receiver or trustee is enabled to obtain discovery of the debtor's property. Geiger, In re, 109 L. Production of Documents — Custody.] — Where a witness is summoned before the Court for examination under section 27 of the Bankruptcy Act, 1883, and required to produce documents in his custody relating to the debtor, his dealings or property, the Court has no jurisdiction to order the witness to give up such documents to the official receiver or trustee for the purpose of removing them out of the custody of the Court in order to take copies of them. Ash, In re; Hatt, ex parte, 110 L. Resolution at Creditors' Meeting — Deed Executed in Pursuance thereof—Absence of Communication to Creditors—Revocability.]—A deed of assignment executed by a debtor for the benefit of his creditors is revocable until the fact of its execution has been communicated to them. Until such communication the trustee under the deed has no title to the property comprised in it, as against an execution creditor of the assignor. Garrard v. Lauderdale (Lord) (2 Russ. & M. 451) applied. Ellis & Co. v. Cross, 84 L. Alleged Verbal Assent to Deed by Landlord — Subsequent Distress for Rent — Action by Trustee for Illegal Distress.]—A debtor made a deed of assignment for the benefit of his creditors generally. At the time he owed his landlord, the defendant, two years' rent. The defendant attended a meeting of creditors, and was there informed by the plaintiff, the trustee of the deed, that if he assented to the deed he would receive six months' rent in full, and that he could claim with the other creditors for the balance. The deed, however, contained no provision to this effect, and the other creditors did not assent to this payment. The defendant used certain words at the meeting which the plaintiff alleged amounted to a verbal assent to the deed. The defendant subsequently distrained for the two years' rent owing to him, and the plaintiff thereupon brought an action against him claiming damages for illegal distress. At the close of the plaintiff's case the County Court Judge found that the remark made by the defendant did not amount to an assent to the deed, and that it gave no cause of legal action. On appeal by the plaintiff,—Held, first (Atkin, J., dubitante), that there was some evidence to support that finding; and secondly, that in any event a new trial would be bound to end in favour of the defendant, on the ground that his assent to the deed, if any, was conditional on his right to receive six months' rent in full, and that he acquired no such right, and that therefore a new trial ought not to be ordered. Sier v. Bullen, 84 L. J. K.B. 1288; [1915] H. B. R. 132; 113 L. T. 278—D.

Previous Bankruptcy and Receiving Order—Composition and Discharge of Receiving Order—Debts not Proved in Previous Bankruptcy—Creditors Scheduled in Deed—Estoppel.]—In 1910 a debtor had a receiving order in bankruptcy made against him. He subsequently paid a composition, and the receiving order was discharged. A and B, who were creditors, did not prove under the receiving order, and did not receive the composition. In 1912 the debtor, being again in difficulties, executed a deed assigning property to a trustee on trust to pay the creditors scheduled thereto their debts, including A and B. The trustee declined to pay A and B with the other scheduled creditors on the ground that their debts were barred by the discharge of the receiving order and the payment of the composition, and that they were in law not creditors at all:—Held, that the trustee was bound to investigate the claims and to pay only the real creditors under the deed; that there was no new consideration which could be enforced against the debtor to pay A and B; and that the trustee was not estopped by the deed from denying that A and B were in fact creditors entitled to the benefit of the deed. Lancaster v. Elce (31 L. J. Ch. 789; 31 Beav. 325) distinguished. Pilet's Deed, In re; Toursier & Co., ex parte; Berkeley's Executors, ex parte, 84 L. J. K.B. 2133; [1915] 3 K.B. 519; [1915] H. B. R. 149; 31 T. L. R. 558—D.

Execution by Attorney — Registration — Affidavit by Attorney—Assent of Majority of Creditors—Declaration of Invalidity of Deed—Jurisdiction.]—By section 23 of the Deeds of Arrangement Act, 1914, "Any application by the trustee under a deed of arrangement, which either is expressed to be or is in fact for the benefit of the debtor's creditors generally, or by the debtor or by any creditor entitled to the benefit of such a deed of arrangement, for the enforcement of the trusts or the determination of questions under it, shall be made to the Court having jurisdiction in bankruptcy in the district in which the debtor resided or carried on business at the date of the execution of the deed." A debtor gave his sister a power of attorney to execute a deed of arrangement for the benefit of his creditors generally and she executed it and swore the affidavit in support. Afterwards the debtor applied under section 23 of the Deeds of Arrangement Act, 1914, to a County Court having jurisdiction in bankruptcy for a declaration that the deed was void on the grounds, first, that under sections 1 to 5 of the Act the deed should have been executed and the affidavit sworn by the debtor personally; secondly, that the power of attorney was a deed of arrangement under section 1, subsection 2 (e) and not being registered was void; and thirdly, that the assent of the majority of the creditors had not been obtained as required by section 3. The Judge decided against the debtor's contentions:—Held, that as the application was neither for the enforcement of the trusts of the deed nor for the determination of questions under it, but was for a declaration that there was no valid deed under which an application could be made, the above section gave the Court of Bankruptcy no jurisdiction to entertain the application. Decision of Divisional Court (32 T. L. R. 75) affirmed on a different ground. Wilson, In re, 32 T. L. R. 86—C.A.

Non-registration of Deed—Scheduled Creditors—Void Deed.]—By a deed of arrangement expressed to be made between the debtor, certain sureties, a trustee, and "the several persons whose names and seals are hereunto subscribed and affixed . . . being respectively creditors of the debtor (who are hereinafter called the creditors)," the debtor assigned certain future property upon trust to pay the debts of the creditors, in consideration of a covenant not to sue the debtor during the life of his mother. There was evidence shewing that the deed was intended to benefit eighteen only out of twenty-two creditors, and that, of these eighteen, only thirteen executed the deed, their names being scheduled to the deed:—Held, that a deed in which the creditors are described as in this case must be construed as a deed for the benefit of creditors generally, and is therefore void if not registered. Allix, In re; Trustee, ex parte, 83 L. J. K.B. 665; [1914] 2 K.B. 77; 110 L. T. 592; 21 Manson, 1; 58 S. J. 250—Horridge, J.

Counsel's Fees—Money Received by Solicitors from Lay Client—Attachment of Debt—Garnishee Order—Fees not a Debt.]—Fees owing to counsel are not debts and cannot be sued for; neither can money received by solicitors on account of such fees be sued for as money had and received. Such fees cannot therefore be attached or garnisheed even when the money on account of them has been received by the solicitors. The Court has power to order its officers to make payments which are honest and just, although such payments may not be recoverable either at law or in equity as between litigant parties. BASTARDY.

Application for Summons—Woman Married at Date of Application—Order for Maintenance of Child.]—A bastardy summons issued under section 3 of the Bastardy Laws Amendment Act, 1872, upon an application by the respondent (then a single woman) against the appellant could not be served owing to the appellant having left the neighbourhood. He subsequently returned, and the respondent thereupon applied to the clerk to the Justices to amend the date of hearing and to serve the summons. At the date of this application the respondent was a married woman living with her husband. The summons, having been altered and served on the appellant, came on for hearing before the Justices, who made an order against the appellant to contribute to the maintenance of the respondent's bastard child: —Held, that the alteration of the summons by the clerk to the Justices was equivalent to the issuing of a fresh summons, and that as the respondent was a married woman at the date of such alteration the Justices had no power to make the order. Tozer v. Lake (4 C.P. Child Born in New South Wales—Jurisdiction of Justices to make Affiliation Order.]—An English woman went to Australia, and was there delivered of a bastard child. She returned to England, and applied within twelve months from the birth of the child for an affiliation order against the putative father:—Held (Avory, J., dissenting), that under the Poor Law Amendment Act, 1844, and the Bastardy Laws Amendment Act, 1872, the Justices had jurisdiction to make the order upon the putative father notwithstanding that the child was born out of England or Wales. Reg. v. Blane (18 L. J. M.C. 216; 13 Q.B. 769) discussed and distinguished. Rex v. Humphreys; Ward, Ex parte, 84 L. J. K.B. 187; [1914] 3 K.B. 1237; 111 L. T. 1110; 79 J. P. 66; 30 T. L. R. 698—D.

Right of Applicant to Re-hearing—Effect of Applicant's Right of Appeal to Quarter Sessions.]—Where a Court of summary jurisdiction has heard an application for an order of affiliation, and refused to make any order on the ground that the evidence of the mother was not corroborated in some material particular, the mother is not barred from making a second application within the period limited by the Bastardy Acts by any of the provisions of section 37, sub-section 2 of the Criminal Justice Administration Act, 1914. Reg. v. Machen (18 L. J. M.C. 213; 14 Q.B. 74) explained. McGregor v. Telford, 84 L. J. K.B. 1902; [1915] 3 K.B. 237; 113 L. T. 84; 79 J. P. 485; 31 T. L. R. 512—D.

Corroboration of Evidence of Mother — Evidence of Conduct — Conviction of having had Unlawful Carnal Knowledge — Mode of Proof of Conviction.]—On the hearing of a complaint preferred by the respondent against the appellant under section 4 of the Bastardy Laws Amendment Act, 1872, the only evidence given before the Justices as corroborative of the evidence of the respondent was that of a witness who deposed as follows: that he was present in the police Court when the appellant was committed for trial on a charge of having had unlawful carnal connection with the respondent, she being under the age of sixteen years; that the appellant then gave evidence which suggested that the respondent was a fast girl; that he (the witness) was also present at the assizes when the appellant was tried for the said offence; that no suggestion was then made by the defence that the respondent was a fast girl, nor did the appellant repeat the evidence on this point which he had given in the police Court; and that the appellant was convicted of the said offence. No certified copy of the conviction under section 13 of the Evidence Act, 1851, was produced:—Held, that the evidence as to the conduct of the appellant was evidence which the Justices were entitled to treat as corroborating the evidence of the respondent in some material particular within the meaning of section 4. Mash v. Darley, 83 L. Enforcement of Affiliation Order by Guardians when Mother is Living Abroad.]—The mother of an illegitimate child, having obtained an affiliation order upon the putative father, allowed the child to become chargeable to a union and went to reside permanently in America. The putative father objected that since the mother was alive, and of sound mind, and not in any gaol or prison, nor under sentence of transportation, she was the only person who could enforce the order against him, and that the guardians could not enforce it in her absence:—Held, that section 7 of the Bastardy Laws Amendment Act, 1872, empowered the guardians to enforce the order against the putative father and recover the weekly payments and arrears under it when the mother was living abroad. Jones v. Merthyr Tydfil Union, 105 L. Unaccepted Bill—Purchase—Subsequent Acceptance — Action by Purchaser against Acceptor—Holder in Due Course.]—The P. Co. sold some turpentine to the defendants and in respect of the purchase price drew upon them a bill payable to the order of the P. Co.'s bankers, to whom the P. Co. then handed the bill. Subsequently the plaintiffs bought the bill from agents of the P. Co.'s bankers. It had not then been accepted by the defendants, but it was eventually accepted by them unconditionally in the usual way. A dispute then arose between the defendants and the P. Co., and the defendants refused to meet the bill. The P. Co. thereupon requested the plaintiffs to sue the defendants in their (the plaintiff's) own name, and guaranteed the expenses and agreed to pay the bill if the plaintiffs failed to recover the amount from the defendants:—Held, in an action brought by the plaintiffs against the defendants on the bill, first, that the bill was a complete bill when purchased by the plaintiffs, though it had not then been accepted, and that therefore the plaintiffs were holders in due course; and secondly, that the plaintiffs were not suing as trustees for the P. Co., and that therefore the defendants were not entitled to set up the same defences as they would have been entitled to set up against the P. Co., and consequently the plaintiffs were entitled to recover. National Park Bank

Husband and Wife Joint Makers of Note—Wife Signing Note for Accommodation of Husband — Accommodation Indorser — No Knowledge by Indorser that Wife Signed to Accommodate Husband—Liability of Wife.]—A husband and wife were parties to a promissory note as makers, and the husband's brother was the payee who indorsed the note for the accommodation, as he believed, of both husband and wife. In fact, the wife only signed the note for the accommodation of her husband. The note having been dishonoured,—Held, that the wife and the payee were co-sureties, and that as between them the wife was only liable for half the amount of the note. Godsell v. Lloyd, 27 T. Joint and Several Promissory Note by Infant and Father—Liability of Father.]—The plaintiff sued the defendants, father and son, on a promissory note given in respect of a loan to the son, who was under age when the money was advanced to him. The father joined in the note in order to facilitate the transaction, understanding that the debt would be paid when the son came of age. It appeared that in all probability the plaintiff knew that the son was under age:—Held, that the true meaning of the transaction was that the father acted as principal borrower, and therefore, although by the Infants' Relief Act the son was not liable, the father was liable as principal. Wauthier v. Wilson, 28 T. L. R. 239—C.A.

Indorser—Waiver of Statutory Requirement as to Presentment and Notice of Dishonour—Onus of Proof.]—A bill which had been indorsed was not presented for payment at maturity, nor was notice of dishonour given to the indorser, as required by statute, to avoid discharge of the indorser's liability. After the bill was due a payment on account was made by the indorser, under the erroneous belief, as she alleged, that she was not an indorser, but a joint acceptor, and so liable in payment. In an action for payment of the balance due under the bill,—Held, that the presumption, arising from the payment on account, that the indorser had waived the statutory requirements, had been rebutted by proof that that payment had been made in error, and that in consequence of the failure of the holder to observe these requirements the indorser was freed from liability. Mactavish's Judicial Factor v. Michael's Trustees, [1912] S. —— Bill Payable to Drawer's Order—Indorsement by Way of Guarantee — Subsequent Indorsement by Drawer — Irregular Bill — Guarantee—Memorandum in Writing Signed by Party to be Charged.] — The plaintiffs agreed to supply goods to a company against drafts accepted by the company and indorsed personally by the two defendants, who were directors of the company, by way of guarantee. The plaintiffs accordingly drew a bill and sent it to the company, who signed as acceptors. The two defendants having thereupon signed their names at the back, the bill was sent back to the plaintiffs, who indorsed it by putting their signature below that of the defendants. The bill not having been met at maturity, the plaintiffs sued the defendants as indorsers or alternatively as guarantors:—Held, that, as the plaintiffs had failed to make the bill a complete and regular bill, they could not maintain their action against the defendants as indorsers of the bill of exchange under section 56 of the Bills of Exchange Act, 1882, nor on the contract of guarantee, as there was no note or memorandum in writing, signed by the parties to be charged, sufficient to satisfy the Statute of Frauds. Jenkins v. Comber (67 L. J. Q.B. 780; [1898] 2 Q.B. 168) approved and followed. Shaw v. Holland, 82 L. J. K.B. 592; [1913] 2 K.B. 15; 108 L. T. 543; 18 Com. Cas. 153; 29 T. L. R. 341—C.A.

C. ACTIONS ON.

Promissory Note — Signature Obtained by Duress—Action by Original Party to Instrument — Burden of Proof.] — Section 30, subsection 2 of the Bills of Exchange Act, 1882, provides that "if in an action on a bill it is admitted or proved that the acceptance, issue or subsequent negotiation of the bill is affected with fraud, duress, or force and fear, or illegality, the burden of proof is shifted, unless and until the holder proves that, subsequent to the alleged fraud or illegality, value has in good faith been given for the bill":—Held, that the sub-section does not apply where the holder of the negotiable instrument who brings the action is the person to whom it was originally delivered and in whose hands it still remains; the burden of proof in such a case not being shifted from, but remaining on, the defendant. Talbot v. Von Boris, 80 L. J. K.B. 661; [1911] 1 K.B. 854; 104 L. T. 524; 55 S. J. 290; 27 T. L. R. 266—C.A.

In an action on a joint and several promissory note the defendant pleaded that her signature to the note had been obtained by duress on the part of her husband. At the trial the defendant gave evidence in support of duress, and in cross-examination stated that she did not think that the plaintiff himself had any knowledge of it; but the plaintiff did not go into the witness box, and there was no evidence to negative knowledge on his part of the duress :—Held, that the burden of proof lay on the defendant, and was not under section 30, sub-section 2 of the Bills of Exchange Act, 1882, shifted from her to the plaintiff, and that the defendant was not entitled to succeed in her defence. Ib.

—— Note given by Makers in Payment for Goods—Signed by Indorser as Surety—Admissibility of Oral Agreement that Surety was not to be Liable if Goods not up to Sample—Liability of Surety.] — The defendant company bought certain leather goods from the plaintiffs and gave the plaintiffs in payment therefor a promissory note of which they were the makers, and which the defendant D. at the request of the plaintiffs indorsed as surety. The plaintiffs delivered the goods to the defendant company, who kept them. The plaintiffs subsequently sued the defendant company as the makers, and the defendant D. as indorser of the promissory note. The defendant company did not appear at the trial, but the defendant D. pleaded that he signed the note as surety, and proved an oral agreement with the plaintiffs, contemporaneous with the promissory note, that if the goods when received by the defendant company should not be equal to sample, he was not to be called upon to pay the promissory note. He also proved that the goods were in fact not equal to sample :—Held, that evidence of the oral agreement relied upon by D. was not admissible, as it was not an agreement suspending the coming into force of the contract contained in the promissory note, but was an agreement in defeasance of that contract, and that therefore the defendant D. was liable on the promissory note. Hitchings and Coulthurst Co. v. Northern Leather Co. of America, 83 L. J. K.B. 1819; [1914] 3 K.B. 907; 111 L. T. 1078; 20 Com. Cas. 25; 30 T. L. R. 688—Bailhache, J.

—— Date when Cause of Action Arises—Calculation of the Six Years—Limit Expiring on Sunday—Order LXIV. rule 3.]—The time for payment of a promissory note, including the days of grace, expired on Saturday, September 22, 1906. The writ in the action to recover the amount due on the note was issued on Monday, September 23, 1912 :—Held, that the action on the note was barred by the Statute of Limitations, as the cause of action was complete on the expiration of September 22, 1906, the day on which payment was due, and the six years next after the cause of such action, within which the action must be brought in order to comply with the Limitation Act, 1623, expired on Sunday, September 22, 1912. Held, further, that Order LXIV. rule 3 of the Rules of the Supreme Court, which provides that, "Where the time for doing any act or taking any proceeding expires on a Sunday, or other day on which the offices are closed, and by reason thereof such act or proceedings cannot be done or taken on that day, such act or proceeding shall, so far as regards the time of doing or taking the same, be held to be duly done or taken if done or taken on the day on which the offices shall next be open," has no effect on the operation of the Statute of Limitations, and that therefore the writ, which was issued on Monday, September 23, 1912, could not be considered as having been issued on Sunday, September 22, 1912. Gelmini v. Moriggia, 82 L. J. K.B. 949; [1913] 2 K.B. 549; 109 L. T. 77; 29 T. L. R. 486—Channell, J.

D. CHEQUES.

See also Vol. II. 1674, 2090.

Consideration.] — In December, 1912, the plaintiff lent to the defendant 1,500*l.* on the security of a promissory note payable three months after demand. In March, 1914, the plaintiff became uneasy about his money and saw the defendant, who promised to repay in April. In the latter month the defendant gave the plaintiff a post-dated cheque for 1,500*l.*, the plaintiff agreeing that during the currency of the cheque he would not claim payment under the note. When this cheque was presented it was dishonoured :—Held, in an action on the cheque, that the cheque was only a collateral security and did not discharge the liability under the note, that the plaintiff's agreement was a consideration for the cheque, and that, therefore, the plaintiff was entitled to recover. Elkington v. Cooke-Hill, 30 T. L. R. 670—Darling, J.

Signature in Blank—Clerk's Authority to Fill in Name of Payee—Wrong Name Filled in—Holder—No Value Given—Estoppel—Action by Drawer against Holder.]—A person who signs a blank cheque and then hands it to a confidential clerk to fill in the name of the payee is not estopped as against a holder of the cheque who has not given value for it from saying that it was wrongly filled up as regards the name of the payee. In such circumstances, if the holder has obtained payment of the cheque from the bank on which it was drawn, the drawer can recover back from the holder the amount of the cheque. Paine v. Bevan, 110 L. T. 933; 30 T. L. R. 395—Bailhache, J.

Addition of Words "To be retained"—Whether an "unconditional" Order.]—The defendant gave to the plaintiffs a cheque for 100*l.*, drawn by him upon his bankers and payable to the plaintiffs. The cheque was made out upon a sheet of blank paper, and the defendant had written on the face of it the words "To be retained." In an action on the cheque the defendant gave evidence to the effect that these words implied that the cheque was not to be presented, and that, in the event of a certain agreement between the parties being approved by the defendant's solicitors, the defendant was to exchange the cheque for another of equal value in his bankers' ordinary printed form :—Held, that the words upon the cheque did not prevent it from being an "unconditional" order in writing within the meaning of section 3 of the Bills of Exchange Act, 1882, inasmuch as they did not render it conditional as regards the bankers upon whom it was drawn. Robert &

Co. v. Marsh, 84 L. J. K.B. 388; [1915] 1 K.B. 42; 111 L. T. 1060; 30 T. L. R. 609—C.A.

"Account payee only"—Customer—Negligence.]—A person becomes a customer of a bank when he goes to the bank with money or a cheque and asks to have an account opened in his name and the bank accepts the money or cheque and is prepared to open an account in the name of that person. When the drawer of a cheque crosses it "Account payee only" a bank is guilty of negligence towards the drawer if without making any enquiries it allows a person who is unknown to them to open an account with it and collects the money for it. Ladbroke & Co. v. Todd, 111 L. T. 43; 19 Com. Cas. 256; 30 T. L. R. 433—Bailhache, J.

Crossed Cheque—"A/c Payee"—Collection by Bank for Customer — Negligence.] — A cheque drawn in favour of "F. S. Hanson, Esq., and others or Bearer," crossed with the words "a/c payee," was collected by a bank and credited to a customer, the bearer of the cheque :—Held, that the bearer was not the payee, and that the bank was negligent in not making enquiry as to the circumstances in which the customer was the bearer of the cheque. House Property Co. v. London County and Westminster Bank, 84 L. J. K.B. 1846; 31 T. L. R. 479—Rowlatt, J.

Procuration Signature — Effect of.] — A, a manager in the service of the plaintiffs, who were insurance brokers, gave cheques drawn per pro the plaintiffs to the defendant in payment of his (A's) racing debts. A had authority to sign cheques per pro the plaintiffs for the purposes of the latter's business :—Held, that the plaintiffs were entitled to recover the amount of the cheques from the defendant inasmuch as the defendant must be taken to have had notice that the cheques were signed for purposes outside the plaintiffs' business and that A had only power to draw cheques confined to that business, and inasmuch as there was no evidence that the plaintiffs had held out A as having authority to draw the cheques in question. Morison v. Kemp, 29 T. L. R. 70—Darling, J.

—— Addition of Words "Not negotiable"—Notice of Limited Authority—Bank in Good Faith Receiving Payment for Customer—Conversion — Liability of Bank — Negligence — Forgery—Ratification.]—A banker who collects for a customer cheques which are the property of another is prima facie liable to the true owner for the conversion. The effect of section 25 of the Bills of Exchange Act, 1882, which says that a signature per pro is notice that the authority of the agent so signed is limited, is that if the agent has exceeded his authority the principal may refuse payment of the bill, and persons taking it do so subject to this risk. Where, however, the bill has once been paid, the transaction is complete, and the section does not confer a right to recover the proceeds. By section 82 of the Bills of Exchange Act, 1882, a banker who has collected a crossed cheque for a customer whose title was defective is relieved from liability provided that he acted in good faith and without negligence. Therefore in the case of a cheque signed per pro issued without authority, but duly honoured by the bank upon which it is drawn, section 25 does not operate to deprive the collecting banker of the protection given by section 82. Neither is that protection affected by the addition of the words "not negotiable," or "not negotiable, a/c payee." Morison v. London County and Westminster Bank, 83 L. J. K.B. 1202; [1914] 3 K.B. 356; 111 L. T. 114; 19 Com. Cas. 273; 58 S. J. 453; 30 T. L. R. 481—C.A.

A document cannot be a forgery in the hands of one person and valid in those of another. If it be genuine for one purpose it is genuine for all. Ib.

—— "Not negotiable"—Payment into Customer's Account — Customer not Payee — Forged Indorsement—Liability of Bank.]—A series of cheques crossed "Not negotiable" and drawn in favour of a person other than the customer were paid by the customer into his banking account with the defendants, the indorsements being forged :—Held, that the fact that the cheques were crossed "Not negotiable" and drawn in favour of a person other than the customer did not impose an obligation on the defendants to make enquiry so as to make them negligent in receiving the cheques and crediting their customer's account therewith. Held, also, that the fact that some of the cheques were signed "per pro" the plaintiff merely operated as a notice that the drawer of the cheques had a limited right to sign them. Crumplin v. London Joint Stock Bank, 109 L. T. 856; 19 Com. Cas. 69; 30 T. L. R. 99—Pickford, J.

Payment of Crossed Cheque by Banker not through Bank—Fraud of Agent.]—By section 79 of the Bills of Exchange Act, 1882 (which is reproduced in a Singapore Ordinance), "where the banker on whom a cheque is drawn . . . pays a cheque crossed generally otherwise than to a banker . . . he is liable to the true owner of the cheque for any loss he may sustain owing to the cheque having been so paid." The appellants' cashier had for some time made a practice, instead of receiving cash for cheques drawn on the respondents, of obtaining cheques of corresponding amounts drawn by them on another bank in favour of the appellants or bearer and crossed generally. The cashier misappropriated some of these cheques, and paid the amounts to his own account. The appellants sued the respondents for the amount of these cheques :—Held, that the handing over of fresh cheques drawn by the respondents on another bank amounted to payment of the cheques drawn on them, but that the loss sustained was not owing to the action of the respondents, but to the misconduct of the appellants' cashier, and that the respondents were not liable. Meyer v. Sze Hai Tong Banking and Insurance Co., 83 L. J. P.C. 103; [1913] A.C. 847; 109 L. T. 691; 57 S. J. 700—P.C.

Post-dated Cheque—Issue of Cheque Affected with Illegality—Value Given in Good Faith.]

—To an action by the plaintiff to recover the amount of two cheques drawn to self or order and indorsed by the defendant the defendant pleaded, first, that the cheques were originally given for gaming and wagering transactions, and so the burden of shewing that he was a holder in due course was on the plaintiff; and secondly, that as the cheques were post-dated they were not payable on demand and ought to have been stamped as bills of exchange. The plaintiff cashed the two cheques for one H., who, the plaintiff knew, had been bankrupt about twelve months previously, and for whom he had cashed several other cheques within the previous few months, which cheques had all been met. It was admitted that the issue of the cheques in question was affected with illegality :—Held, that the plaintiff was entitled to recover, inasmuch as on the evidence he had discharged the onus of proving that subsequent to the illegality he had given value in good faith for the cheques, and inasmuch as the two post-dated cheques became cheques payable on demand when the due date arrived and were therefore sufficiently stamped as cheques. Robinson v. Benkel, 29 T. L. R. 475—Horridge, J.

Infant — Holder for Value — Action on Cheque.]—The defendant, who was an infant at the time, drew a cheque on a date prior to July 29, 1913, making it payable to one Bell, and post-dating it August 14. The cheque was not given for necessaries. On July 29 the defendant came of age. On August 11 the plaintiff cashed the cheque for Bell, and on August 14 presented it, but it was returned marked "Account closed" :—Held, in an action on the cheque, that the plaintiff could not recover. Hutley v. Peacock, 30 T. L. R. 42—Scrutton, J.

Cheque Obtained by Duress in France — Liability of Drawer.] —The plaintiffs, hotel keepers in France, obtained from the defendant, a young Englishman of twenty-two years of age, who had been staying at the plaintiffs' hotel, an English cheque payable in England, by a threat of criminal proceedings in France if it was not given, and a suggestion that no such proceedings would be taken if the cheque were given :—Held, that payment of the cheque could not in these circumstances be enforced in an English Court. Kaufman v. Gerson (73 L. J. K.B. 320; [1904] 1 K.B. 591) applied. Société des Hôtels Réunis v. Hawker, 29 T. L. R. 578—Scrutton, J. See S. C. in C.A. on question of costs, 30 T. L. R. 423—C.A.

BILL OF SALE.

Registration — Occupation of Grantor — Description — Baptist Minister — Director of Public Companies.]—The grantor of a bill of sale given in 1913 was described therein as a Baptist minister, living at an address in Essex. Until 1909 he had held a pastorate as a Baptist minister near his residence, relinquishing it in that year. Since then he had preached for fees and visited the poor, but not in connection with any particular church. His name was still on a register of Baptist ministers. He also carried on a business in London as promoter and director of public companies :—Held, that the grantor's occupation was not sufficiently described within the Bills of Sale Act, 1878, s. 10, sub-s. 2, and that the bill of sale was therefore void. The definitions of "occupation" by Kelly, C.B., and Martin, B., in Luckin v. Hamlyn (21 L. T. 366) explained. Barron v. Potter; Potter v. Berry, 84 L. J. K.B. 2008; [1915] 3 K.B. 593; 59 S. Decision of the Divisional Court (84 L. J. K.B. 751) reversed. Ib.

Misdescription of Grantor's Occupation — Gentleman of no Occupation — Partner in Business — Bankruptcy of Grantor.] — The grantor of a bill of sale was described therein and in the affidavit filed on registration thereof as a gentleman of no occupation. In fact at the date of the bill of sale, November 3, 1913, he was in partnership with another in a business of soap manufacturers and agents :—Held, that this description in the bill of sale and affidavit was erroneous and misleading, and that the bill of sale was void as against the grantor's trustee in bankruptcy. Decision of Atkin, J., in Barron v. Potter (84 L. J. K.B. 751), and of the Court of Appeal (84 L. J. K.B. 2008) applied and followed. Feast v. Robinson (63 L. J. Ch. 321) not followed. Boddington, In re; Salaman, ex parte, 84 L. J. K.B. 2119; [1915] H. B. R. 183—Horridge, J.

—— Hire-purchase Agreement — Colourable Transaction — Inference from Facts.] — S. wished to buy some goods which were to be offered for sale by auction. He approached B., a money-lender, and asked for a loan to enable him to do so. B. refused. Subsequently B. attended the sale and bought the goods. A hire-purchase agreement, containing a licence to seize, was then entered into between B. and S. in respect of the goods, and the goods were delivered to S. An execution being levied against S., the goods were seized by the execution creditors. B. put in a claim. In interpleader proceedings in the County Court the Judge held that the true inference from the facts was that the transaction between B. and S. was merely a loan upon the security of the hire-purchase agreement, and that the hire-purchase agreement was a bill of sale and void for want of registration, and therefore barred the claim. B. appealed :—Held (per Lush, J.), that the transaction between B. and S. was a bona fide hire-purchase, and that the claim should have been allowed. Per Atkin, J., that there was evidence upon which the County Court Judge could hold that the transaction was really a loan by B. to S. upon the security of the hire-purchase agreement and in barring the claim. Decision of the County Court Judge affirmed. Mellor's Trustees v. Maas & Co. (71 L. J. K.B. 26; [1902] 1 K.B. 137; in the Court of Appeal, 72 L. J. K.B. 82; [1903] 1 K.B. 226; in the House of Lords, sub nom. Maas v. Pepper, 74 L. J. K.B. 452; [1905] A.C. 102), discussed and applied. Johnson v. Rees, 84 L. J. K.B. 1276; 113 L. T. 275—D.

—— Assignment—Varying Original Bill of Sale—Defeasance.]—By a bill of sale made on August 15, 1913, the defendant M. assigned her household furniture to a firm of money-lenders for securing the repayment of 700*l.* and interest at the rate of 60 per cent. per annum. On March 7, 1914, the money-lenders, by indenture, declared to be supplemental to the bill of sale, assigned to the claimant P. the principal sum of 700*l.* secured on the bill of sale, and the chattels and things included therein. By an indenture of the same date which recited the above-mentioned deeds, and that the parties M. and P. had agreed on the interest for the future being at the rate of 27½ per cent. per annum, and not as mentioned in the bill of sale of August 15, 1913, and that the repayment of the mortgage debt should be made by instalments at regular periods, M. agreed to pay off the principal and interest as thereinbefore mentioned. The original bill of sale was filed at the Central Office in 1913, but the assignment and the contemporaneous deed were refused registration, on the ground that the original bill of sale was still in existence. The plaintiff in the above action levied execution on the goods comprised in the bill of sale, and in the interpleader proceedings in the County Court judgment was given against P., the claimant, and in favour of the plaintiff, the execution creditor. On appeal,—Held, that whether or not the second deed, varying the terms of the original bill of sale, was a defeasance within section 10, sub-section 3 of the Bills of Sale Act, 1878, the true terms were not in the form required by section 9 of the Bills of Sale Act, 1882, as the original bill of sale no longer expressed the true intent and meaning of the parties thereto. Cornell v. May, 112 L. T. 1085—D.

—— Mortgage—Heirlooms Settled in Trust—Equitable Chose in Action.]—Personal chattels were given to trustees upon trust for a certain tenant for life, and, after his death, upon trust for his sons successively in tail male: —Held, that the interest in the chattels of the first tenant in tail male in remainder during the lifetime of the tenant for life was an equitable chose in action; and, accordingly, that a mortgage of his interest in the chattels by this tenant in tail did not require registration under section 8 of the Bills of Sale Act (1878) Amendment Act, 1882, inasmuch as the operation of that statute was limited to mortgages of "personal chattels" by section 3 of the Bills of Sale Act, 1878, and inasmuch as "personal chattels" were expressly defined by section 4 of the same statute so as to exclude choses in action. Tritton, In re; Singleton, ex parte (61 L. T. 301), applied. Thynne, In re; Thynne v. Grey, 80 L. J. Ch. 205; [1911] 1 Ch. 282; 104 L. T. 19; 18 Manson, 34—Neville, J.

—— Pledge of Goods—Warrant.]—A distillery company gave, as security for advances, warrants making the whiskey therein mentioned deliverable to the holder of such warrant. The name of the holder was entered in the books of the company opposite the numbers and particulars of the casks of whiskey, which still remained in the possession of the company, and were dealt with by them. When they sold the whiskey they cancelled the warrant and erased the holder's name from their books, and substituted another warrant over other whiskey as security to the creditor: —Held, that this transaction did not create a valid pledge at common law, and, if it did, the warrants were void as not being registered under the Bills of Sale (Ireland) Act, 1879, s. 4. Dublin City Distillery v. Doherty, 83 L. J. P.C. 265; [1914] A.C. 823; 111 L. T. 81; 58 S. J. 413—H.L. (Ir.)

"Consideration" — Sum Received by Grantor under 30*l.*—Deduction of Costs of Preparation of Deed—Validity.]—A bill of sale was granted in consideration of the sum of 30*l.* less the sum of 2*l.* 2*s.* retained thereout by the mortgagees with the consent of the mortgagor and paid to the mortgagees' solicitor towards the costs of the preparation of the deed:—Held, that the bill of sale was not void under section 12 of the Bills of Sale Act, 1882, inasmuch as the total consideration for the bill was a sum not under 30*l.* London and Provinces Discount Co. v. Jones, 83 L. J. K.B. 403; [1914] 1 K.B. 147; 109 L. T. 742; 21 Manson, 18; 58 S. J. 33; 30 T. L. R. 60—D.

Contract — Goods Obtained by Fraud — Necessaries—Liability of Infant.]—An action was brought by the plaintiff to recover from the defendant the price of certain furniture and effects. The goods were transferred to the defendant by an agreement containing a licence to the plaintiff to resume possession of the goods if the price was not paid on a certain date. The defendant sold some of the goods for a sum of 30*l.*, and, with the plaintiff's assent, transferred the remainder by bill of sale as security for an advance of 100*l.* by the grantee:—Held, that the agreement by which the goods were transferred by the plaintiff to the defendant was a bill of sale which was governed by the Bills of Sale Act, 1878, and not by the Bills of Sale Act, 1882, and was not therefore void for not complying with the requirements of the later Act. Stocks v. Wilson, 82 L. J. K.B. 598; [1913] 2 K.B. 235; 108 L. T. 834; 20 Manson, 129; 29 T. L. R. 352—Lush, J.

Payment by Equal Instalments—Bargain that Instalments should Include Interest—Covenant for Payment of Interest on Unpaid Instalment—Ambiguity.]—By a bill of sale the grantor, in consideration of the sum of 30*l.* paid to the grantor by the grantee, assigned unto the grantee the chattels comprised therein by way of security for the payment of the sum of 30*l.* and interest thereon at the rate of 10*d.* in the pound per month. And the grantor agreed that he would duly pay to the grantee the principal sum aforesaid, together with the interest then due, by monthly payments of 2*l.*, and that in default of payment of any instalment of the said principal sum he would pay interest on such instalment at the rate aforesaid from the date when the same should become due until payment thereof. By the bargain made between the parties immediately before the giving of the bill of sale the grantor was to pay instalments of 2*l.* per month, including interest. In an action brought by the grantor for a declaration that the bill of sale was void on the grounds that it did not set out the real bargain between the parties, and that it was so ambiguous as not to be in accordance with the statutory form,—Held (Fletcher Moulton, L.J., dissenting), that there was no ground for avoiding the bill of sale. Rosefield v. Provincial Union Bank, 79 L. J. K.B. 1150; [1910] 2 K.B. 781; 103 L. T. 378; 17 Manson, 318—C.A.

Per Vaughan Williams, L.J., and Buckley, L.J. : On the true construction of the bill of sale the instalments were to consist partly of principal and partly of interest, each instalment of 2*l.* going in the first place to pay the interest due and the balance going towards repayment of the principal. There was nothing in Goldstrom v. Tallerman (56 L. J. Q.B. 22: 18 Q.B. D. 1) to prevent the Court from so construing the bill of sale. The bill of sale therefore was in accordance with the real bargain between the parties, and it was not void on the ground of being unintelligible. Ib.

Per Vaughan Williams, L.J. : The fact that the bill of sale did not expressly state how much of each instalment was to be appropriated to principal and how much to interest did not amount to an ambiguity such as would entitle the grantor to have the bill of sale declared void. Ib.

Per Fletcher Moulton, L.J. : The bill of sale was not in accordance with the real bargain between the parties. For Goldstrom v. Tallerman (supra) was a binding decision that in a bill of sale in the statutory form, as this bill of sale was, the instalments were instalments of principal only. The existence of the statutory form, however, did not prevent parties from making provision for repayment in other ways. Ib.

Defeasance or Condition — Separate Document.]—Prior to and as a condition of making the advance, the grantee under a bill of sale given as a security for money obtained a letter from the grantor stating that the grantor had obtained the advance on the faith of his representation that the chattels comprised therein were his own property free from any charge, and undertaking not to mortgage the same nor borrow from any other loan office until the whole of the advance had been repaid. The bill of sale was in the usual form, but contained no reference to the above letter :—Held, that the letter and the bill of sale were one transaction, and that, as the contract ought to have been inserted in the bill of sale, and if so inserted would have operated as a defeasance, the bill of sale was absolutely void under section 9 of the Bills of Sale Act (1878) Amendment Act, 1882. Smith v. Whiteman (78 L. J. K.B. 1073; [1909] 2 K.B. 437) followed. Hall v. Whiteman, 81 L. J. K.B. 660; [1912] 1 K.B. 683; 105 L. T. 854; 19 Manson, 143; 28 T. L. R. 161—C.A.

Deviation from Statutory Form—Joinder of Wife of Grantor — Recitals — Estoppel.] — A husband and wife were parties to a bill of sale and joined in executing it, but the wife did not purport to grant the chattels, the subject of the bill of sale, the husband alone actually assigning those chattels. The bill of sale also contained recitals stating how the liability, in respect of which the security was given, arose :—Held, that the bill of sale was valid, as the joining of the wife was mere surplusage, and did not give the bill of sale a legal consequence other than that which would attach to it if drawn in the form required by the Bills of Sale Act (1878) Amendment Act, 1882, s. 9, and schedule, and that it would not prevent a borrower understanding the nature of the security, nor a creditor, searching the register, understanding the position of the borrower; and further, that the recitals could not operate against the wife by way of estoppel, as she had not entered into any contract. Brandon Hill, Lim. v. Lane, 84 L. Low-water Mark — Artificial Structures Erected below Low-water Mark.] — In an action regarding liability for assessments, held that the boundary of a burgh, fixed by statute as "low-water mark" of the sea, followed that mark as it varied from time to time through natural fluctuation or was altered by artificial operations; and that, accordingly, piers which had been erected so as to extend below the natural low-water mark were situated wholly within the burgh. Leith Docks Commissioners v. Leith Magistrates, [1911] S. Action to Recover Possession—Strip of Land by Side of Highway — Waste of Manor — Evidence of Acts of Ownership over Contiguous Land—Reputation.]—The plaintiffs, as lords of a manor, claimed a strip of land by the side of a highway as part of the waste of the manor. They did not prove acts of ownership over the land in dispute, but tendered evidence of acts of ownership over the contiguous land:—Held, that the plaintiffs, having failed to prove that the disputed land was within the manor, could not adduce as evidence of their title acts of ownership over the contiguous land, and therefore the action failed. Leeke v. Portsmouth Corporation (No. 2), 107 L. BUILDING SOCIETY.

Rules—Borrowing Powers—Banking Business—Ultra Vires—Action for Money Had and Received—Tracing Money.]—A building society, formed under the Building Societies Act, 1836, with powers of borrowing, in addition to the legitimate business of a building society, established and developed a banking business on a large scale, which was admitted to be ultra vires. A winding-up order was made, and the assets of the society, after payment of the outside creditors and the costs, were more than sufficient to pay the members in full, but were not sufficient to pay them and also the depositors in the bank in full:—Held, that the depositors could not maintain an action for money had and received in respect of the money borrowed by the society ultra vires, but that they could recover money which they could trace into the hands of the society as actually existing assets, and that on this footing the members of the society and the depositors were entitled to rank pari passu in the distribution of the assets, in proportion to the amounts properly credited to them in respect of their advances. Sinclair v. Brougham, 83 L. Banking Business—Ultra Vires—Premises Occupied by Customer of Society—Set-off of Balance on Current Account against Claim for Rent.]—The defendant occupied offices belonging to the plaintiff society, and he was also a customer of the plaintiffs in the banking business carried on by them. The plaintiff society went into liquidation in June, 1911, and at that time there was rent for two quarters due by the defendant for the offices occupied by him. An arrangement was made in September, 1911, by the liquidator of the plaintiff society and the defendant for a set-off, against the amount of rent due, of 38*l.* 3*s.* 3*d.* the amount of the dividends in the liquidation to which the defendant was entitled on his current account. In November, 1911, it was decided by the High Court that the banking business carried on by the plaintiff society was ultra vires, and that consequently none of their customers could rely on any legal liability on the part of the society towards them. After this decision the official receiver refused to allow any set-off against the rent due from the defendant and sued for the full amount. The defendant set up the arrangement of September, 1911, as a defence. The County Court Judge held that there was no consideration for an agreement by way of set-off, since by the decision of November, 1911, there was no debt due from the plaintiff society to the defendant at the time the arrangement was made :—Held, that the decision of the County Court Judge was right. Birkbeck Building Society v. Birkbeck, 29 T. L. R. 218—D.

—— Ultra Vires—Right to Recover Overdraft from Customer.]—The liquidator of the Birkbeck Building Society sued the defendant in the County Court to recover the amount of an overdraft due to the society in the banking business it had carried on. It having been decided by the Court of Appeal in Birkbeck Permanent Building Society, In re (81 L. J. Ch. 769; [1912] 2 Ch. 183), that the banking business carried on by the society was ultra vires, the County Court Judge, treating that as a decision that the banking business was illegal, held that the action by the liquidator was not maintainable :—Held, that, although the banking business carried on by the society was ultra vires, it was not illegal, and therefore that the liquidator was entitled to maintain the action as for money had and received by the defendant to the use of the society. Brougham v. Dwyer, 108 L. T. 504; 29 T. L. R. 234—D.

Winding-up.]—Per Kenny, J.: The enactments and practice in force at any time in the Chancery Division for the winding up of companies apply to the winding up of building societies in the County Court, even though such provisions may be the result of enactments passed since 1874. Rex v. Londonderry (Recorder), [1911] 2 Ir. R. 553—K.B. D.

—— Pensioners—Claim against Assets—Employment Ultra Vires.]—Where the servant of a company was employed in matters ultra vires the company, and therefore illegal, he cannot, on a winding-up, make any claim against the assets of the company in respect of a pension which he was granted upon his retirement. Birkbeck Permanent Benefit Building Society, In re, 82 L. J. Ch. 232; [1913] 1 Ch. 400; 108 L. T. 211; 20 Manson, 159; 29 T. L. R. 256—Neville, J.

Class of Shareholders Paid in Full in Liquidation under Judgment of Court of Appeal—Decision of Court of Appeal Reversed—Money Paid by Mistake—Right of Liquidator to Recover Money Overpaid.]—A building society went into liquidation. The "A" and "B" shareholders of the society and the depositors in an unauthorised banking business carried on by the society had conflicting claims on the assets of the society. Neville, J., decided that the shareholders had priority over the depositors, and this decision was affirmed by the Court of Appeal. In the meantime a scheme of arrangement had been entered into between the "A" shareholders and the depositors, and the scheme was sanctioned by Neville, J., and the Court of Appeal, in spite of the opposition of the "B" shareholders, who were not parties to the scheme. The depositors appealed, as against the "B" shareholders, to the House of Lords from the decision of the Court of Appeal which gave the shareholders priority over the depositors. The House of Lords reversed the Court of Appeal, and held that the depositors were entitled to be paid pari passu with the shareholders. After the judgment of the Court of Appeal, but before the appeal in the House of Lords, the liquidator of the society paid the "B" shareholders in full. The liquidator now sought to recover the money overpaid :—Held, that the liquidator was entitled to have the money which had been overpaid returned. Birkbeck Permanent Benefit Building Society, In re (No. 2), 84 L. Removal of Furniture—Liability of Remover—Whether that of a Common Carrier.]—The defendant, who was a furniture remover and was not a common carrier, having inspected certain furniture belonging to the plaintiff, agreed with him to remove it from one place to another for a named sum, no other special terms being fixed. On the way a fire broke out in the van, and the furniture was damaged. The fire was not caused by any negligence of the defendant or by the plaintiff's putting any improper articles in the van. The plaintiff sued the defendant for the loss, and the Judge held that the defendant, though not a common carrier, did business on the terms of receiving an order from anybody and therefore had contracted on the footing of a common carrier and was accordingly liable :—Held, on appeal, that there was no evidence of the defendant's doing business on the terms of receiving an order from anybody and consequently no evidence of his having contracted on the footing of a common carrier, and that therefore he was not liable. Watkins v. Cottell, 32 T. Passenger—Motor Omnibus—Riding on Top—Order Prohibiting—Refusal to go Inside—Delay of Omnibus—Wilful Obstruction.]—A borough corporation, which owned motor omnibuses, made an order owing to the camber of a certain road that passengers should not travel on the top between a point L. and the terminus. The appellant, who had paid his fare and was a passenger on the top of an omnibus, on the top of which notice of the order was exhibited, was asked by the conductor, on reaching the point L. to stand inside. The appellant refused, the result being that the omnibus was delayed for twenty minutes, at the end of which time he left the omnibus. The appellant was convicted under a by-law of wilfully obstructing the servants of the corporation in the execution of their duty :—Held, that the conviction was right. Baker v. Ellison, 83 L. —— Carriage by Sea—Notice of Conditions.]—The plaintiff applied to the defendants for a passage by their line of steamers from Hull to Archangel, and was given a ticket which had on its face a condition that the defendants would not be responsible for any loss or damage of luggage or for personal injuries arising from any neglect of the master. Through the negligence of the master the vessel failed to keep to the route prescribed by the Admiralty for vessels crossing the North Sea, and in consequence she struck a mine and foundered. As a result the plaintiff lost her luggage, and she suffered from nervous shock. In an action by the plaintiff against the defendants for damages, the jury found (1) that though the plaintiff was aware generally that there were conditions relating to contracts of travel, there was no evidence that she was aware that they were printed on her ticket, and (2) that the defendants did not do what was reasonably sufficient to give the plaintiff notice of the conditions, and they awarded the plaintiff damages :—Held, that the defendants had done all that was reasonably necessary on their part to give the plaintiff reasonable notice of the conditions and therefore were entitled to judgment. Cooke v. Wilson, 60 S. Goods—General Lien—Stoppage of Goods in Transitu by Unpaid Vendor—Whether Lien Exercisable by Unpaid Vendor.]—Goods were consigned by the plaintiffs from the United States to T. & Co., in England. The goods were shipped upon a through bill of lading which provided that they were to be carried to Manchester and from there to be forwarded to T. & Co. via the defendant railway, "and the carrier is authorised by the owner to forward by a connecting carrier and upon such conditions as the latter may exact." The defendants had the following condition on their consignment note : "All goods delivered to the company will be received and held by them subject to a lien for money due to them for the carriage of and other charges upon such goods, and also to a general lien for other moneys due to them from the owners of such goods upon any account." Before the goods in question were delivered to T. & Co. that firm became insolvent, whereupon the plaintiffs claimed to stop the goods in transitu. The defendants were paid the charges for the conveyance of the goods in question, but as T. & Co. owed them in respect of the conveyance of other goods the defendants claimed to exercise their general lien as against the plaintiffs on the goods in question:—Held, that they were not entitled to do so. United States Steel Products Co. v. Great Western Railway, 85 L. —— Lighterman—Contract—Damage Coverable by Insurance—Exemption from Responsibility — Liability for Negligence.] — The defendant contracted with the plaintiffs that he would lighter certain goods from the import ship to a wharf on the Thames. The goods, when on the defendant's barge, were damaged, and the plaintiffs brought an action against the defendant alleging negligence of the defendant's servants. The defendant denied negligence, and relied on the following notice: "The rates charged by me for lighterage are for conveyance only. I will not be responsible for any damage to goods, however caused, which can be covered by insurance. Merchants are advised to see that their policies cover risk of craft and are made without recourse to lighterman":—Held (Buckley, L.J., dissenting), that the notice protected the defendant from liability for loss by negligence. Travers & Sons, Lim. v. Cooper, 83 L. Removal of Action from County Court to High Court—Consent of Parties—Obligation of Plaintiff to Proceed with Action.]—Where in a County Court action an order has been made by consent of the parties for the removal of the action into the High Court by a writ of certiorari, and subsequently, on the application of the defendants, a writ of certiorari has been granted removing the action into the High Court, the plaintiff is under no obligation to proceed with the action in the High Court. Garton v. Great Western Railway (28 L. Charity—Maintenance.]—If a person makes a bargain with another to assist him in bringing an action, upon the terms that he is to receive part of the proceeds, that bargain amounts in law to champerty, although the person rendering the assistance would not have done so to a stranger or to any one other than a friend in needy circumstances. Charity may be indiscreet, but must not be mercenary. The plaintiff out of charity lent a sum of 326*l.* 10*s.* to the defendant to enable him to bring an action for malicious prosecution. The defendant agreed that if he succeeded in the action he would repay this loan, and also pay 60*l.* out of any damages he might recover. The defendant, having succeeded in his action for malicious prosecution, repaid to the plaintiff 272*l.*, but he refused to repay the balance of 54*l.* 10*s.* or to pay the 60*l.*, whereupon the plaintiff sued him to recover these sums:—Held, that the plaintiff was entitled to recover the 54*l.* 10*s.*, but not the 60*l.* Cole v. Booker, 29 T. Damages when Recovered in Pending Action of Tort.]—An assignment for valuable consideration by the plaintiff in a pending action of tort to one of his creditors of the sum of money to which he may become entitled by virtue of the action, inasmuch as it is not an assignment of a mere right of action, but of property to come into existence in the future, is not invalid as savouring of champerty or maintenance. Glegg v. Bromley, 81 L. Charity Commissioners—Hospital—Endowment—Foundation Deed—One Original Contribution.]—A founder by deed of gift gave real and personal property to trustees for the purpose of founding a hospital. The deed of gift provided for the sale of the property, and that 10,000*l.* of the capital and income thereof should be applied for or towards the erection and equipment of the hospital, and the residue of the capital and income towards the general purposes of the charity. The hospital had been erected, and had been partly equipped out of the sums realised by the sale of part of the property. No other donations or subscriptions had been received by the trustees of the charity. The Charity Commissioners claimed the right to have the accounts of the charity submitted to them :—Held, that, as at present the charity derived its support entirely from the property which it received from the original donation, it was not a charity "wholly maintained by voluntary contributions," and therefore it was not exempt, under section 62 of the Charitable Trusts Act, 1853, from the jurisdiction of the Charity Commissioners. Richard Murray Hospital, In re, 84 L. J. Ch. 184; [1914] 2 Ch. 713; 111 L. T. 710; 79 J. P. 2; 58 S. J. 670; 30 T. L. R. 600—Joyce, J.

—— Endowment—Voluntary Subscriptions—Vendor and Purchaser—Sale of Charity Land—Trust Deed—Implied Authority to Declare Trusts for General Purposes.] — In 1771 a charity purchased certain freehold land and erected thereon a school building. The funds for the purchase and the building were provided partly out of the general funds and subscriptions of the charity and partly by special subscriptions given for the purpose. Subsequently the land thus purchased and the building were conveyed to trustees to be held upon trust for the use, benefit, and service of the charity, and to be conveyed and disposed of from time to time in such manner as should be ordered and directed for that purpose at any general court or meeting of the subscribers of the said charity for the time being, and to or for no other use, trust, intent, or purpose whatsoever. In 1848 the charity was incorporated by Act of Parliament, and that Act was amended and superseded by an Act of 1905. The charity was one deriving its funds partly from voluntary subscriptions and partly from income arising from property held on trust for it, and had power by one section of the Act of 1905 to sell its land; a later section of the same Act, however, provided that this power of sale should be exercisable as regards property forming an endowment for charitable or educational purposes and not exempted from the jurisdiction or control of the Charity Commissioners or the Board of Education, with the consent of the Charity Commissioners or of the Board of Education, as the case might be. On a sale of a portion of the land bought in 1771,—Held, first, that the provision in the Act of 1905 meant that where but for that Act the consent of the Charity Commissioners or of the Board of Education would have to be obtained, it must be obtained notwithstanding the power of sale given in the earlier section. Held, secondly, that under the trusts declared the land was conveyed for the general purposes of the charity; that the subscriptions to the building fund were not, within the meaning of section 62 of the Charitable Trusts Act, 1853, appropriated by the donors upon any special trust; that they were applicable for income as well as capital purposes of the charity, and that the land was therefore exempt from the jurisdiction and control of the Charity Commissioners or the Board of Education, and could be sold without their consent. Held, further, applying the principle of Att.-Gen. v. Mathieson (76 L. J. Ch. 682; [1907] 2 Ch. 383) and following Church Army, In re (75 L. J. Ch. 467), that, in the absence of evidence to the contrary, the trusts declared in respect of the subscriptions to the building fund must in the circumstances be taken to carry out the true intent and meaning of the subscribers who gave money in the first instance to that fund. Orphan Working School and Alexandra Orphanage, In re, 81 L. Board of Education—Land Transfer—Voluntary Subscriptions — Investment in Land — Gift of Land—Mixed Charity—Endowment—Power of Sale.]—The Foundling Hospital was a charity incorporated by Royal charter in 1739, with power to buy, hold, and sell land. Prior to 1750 certain land in Bloomsbury was conveyed to the governors of the charity in fee-simple and paid for out of voluntary contributions liable to be expended as income, although some of the contributions were made with the idea of purchasing property to produce income for the maintenance of the charity. On part of this land, among other buildings, a chapel was built, which was partly paid for out of money specially contributed for the purpose. Under a private Act of Parliament of 1885 certain sales and leases of the charity land were enacted to be valid notwithstanding certain Acts of Elizabeth, which had been suggested to have the effect of invalidating them, but not so as to make valid any act not authorised by the charter. In 1744 certain property in the City of London was conveyed by two donors to the charity without any express trust. The income of the charity consisted partly, though only to a small extent, of annual subscriptions, "annual benefactions," and of legacies and donations received from time to time, in addition to the income from lands. The income from land at the present time exceeded the whole annual expenditure of the charity. In an action for a declaration that the lands of the charity could not be disposed of except in accordance with the provisions of section 29 of the Charitable Trusts Amendment Act, 1855—that is, not without the consent of the Board of Education,—Held, that the charity was at the time of the passing of the Charitable Trusts Act, 1853, and had ever since been, maintained partly by voluntary subscriptions and partly by income arising from endowment, and that the exemption in the latter part of section 62 of that Act (with reference to donations, bequests, and subscriptions legally liable to be applied as income and to investments thereof) applied both to the Bloomsbury estate and to the City property: that the charity was therefore by virtue of section 48 of the Charitable Trusts Amendment Act, 1855, exempted from the operation of section 29 of that Act, and could dispose of its property without the consent of the Board of Education. Charity for Poor Widows &c. and Skinner, In re (62 L. Provision in Will that Doubts as to Identity of Legatees be Decided by Trustees—Jurisdiction of Court.]—It is not competent for a testator to confer legal rights by the gift of legacies, and at the same time to provide that questions whether or not those legal rights are to be enjoyed are to be determined by a tribunal indicated by the testator, and not by the Courts. Such a provision is an attempt to deprive the legatees of one of the incidents of their rights; and it is, further, unlawful and inoperative on grounds of public policy, as being an attempt to deprive persons of resort to the ordinary tribunals to determine their legal rights. Massy v. Rogers (11 L. Legacy to Charitable Institution already Dissolved—Institution in Existence of Similar Name and Identical Purpose.]—By her will made in 1910 a testatrix gave a legacy of 3,000*l.* to Queen's College, Belfast, to found a scholarship bearing her name. Her husband had been educated at the college. The college had, however, been dissolved in 1909 under the provisions of the Irish Universities Act, 1908, whereby its property had been transferred to the Queen's University of Belfast, founded in pursuance of the Act. There was no evidence whether the testatrix knew of the dissolution of Queen's College:—Held, that it could not be assumed that she was ignorant of what had taken place, and that the Queen's University of Belfast, being an existing society of similar name and identical purpose, and sufficiently described, was entitled to the legacy. Coldwell v. Holme (23 L. Institution — Local Branches — Receipt of Legacies by Branch — Whether Institution Entitled to Payment Over.]—A Royal Charter governing an institution empowered the governors to make by-laws for the management of its affairs, and they make a by-law providing that "in the event of a legacy being received by a branch it must at once be transferred, with the necessary particulars, to the institution." Various testators left legacies to or for the purposes of the Blackpool branch, which was not a separate charitable body:—Held, that in the case of legacies which were within the by-law the institution was entitled, on their receipt by the branch, to have them paid over and the central committee was entitled to control the expenditure of the money, subject to its being restricted to the area of the branch, but that where a legacy had been left to the local committee, to be applied in their discretion in connection with the branch, or had been left to be applied by the local committee for the relief of sailors, the legacy not being within the by-law should not be sent to the institution, but should be administered by the local committee. Royal National Life-boat Institution v. Turver, 31 T. L. R. 340—Sargant, J.

Charitable Legacy—Misdescription—Change in Address — Change of Management — Confirmation by Codicil — Validity — Gift for Particular Charitable Object.]—By her will, dated in 1908, a testatrix gave a legacy of 1,000*l.* to "Saint Mary's Home for Women and Children of 15 Wellington Street, Chelsea." By her codicil, dated March 20, 1911, she revoked so much of the legacy as exceeded 500*l.* and in other respects confirmed the bequest. At the date of the will the P. Association conducted St. Mary's Home at 15 Wellington Square, Chelsea, with separate management. In 1909 the home was handed over to the C. Association, but under the same separate management. Later in 1909 the home was moved to another house in the neighbourhood. The legacy was claimed by the C. Association:—Held, that, having regard to the confirmation of the bequest by the codicil, the inaccuracy of the local description did not invalidate the bequest and that it was a good charitable legacy, not to the C. Association, but for the charitable objects of St. Mary's Home. Wedgwood, In re; Sweet v. Cotton, 83 L. J. Ch. 731; [1914] 2 Ch. 245; 111 L. T. 436; 58 S. J. 595; 30 T. L. R. 527—Joyce, J.

Legacy to Society—Two Societies of Similar Names — Accurate Use of Name — Presumption.]—A domiciled Scotsman made in Scots form a will, prepared in Scotland by a Scottish solicitor, and in the midst of a series of legacies to Scottish charities he left a legacy to the "National Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Children." The society of this name had its head office in England and did not operate in Scotland, but there was in Scotland a society called the "Scottish National Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Children " :—Held, that though there was no rigid rule that where a legatee was accurately named there could be no enquiry with regard to the person to take the legacy, yet the accurate use of a name in a bequest afforded a strong presumption against the claim of any one who was not the possessor of the name mentioned in the will and that as it had not been proved that the testator meant something different from what he said, the English society was entitled to the legacy. National Society for Prevention of Cruelty to Children v. Scottish National Society for Prevention of Cruelty to Children, 84 L. J. P.C. 29; 58 S. J. 720; 30 T. L. R. 657—H.L. (Sc.)

Gift to Charity Incompletely Named — Ambiguity — Evidence of Intention.] — A testator gave, among other charitable legacies, one to "The National Association for the Prevention of Consumption." He directed that if any doubt should arise in any case as to the identity of the association intended to benefit, the question should be decided by his trustees, whose decision should be final and binding on all parties. There was no institution entitled "The National Association for the Prevention of Consumption," but there was one, having its office in London, entitled "The National Association for the Prevention of Consumption and other Forms of Tuberculosis." There was also an independent branch of this association in the locality where the testator lived :—Held, that the question which institution was entitled to the legacy must be decided by the Court and not by the trustees of the will. Held, also, that the description in the will applied to the National Association only; that evidence of intention could not be admitted; and that the National Association and not the branch was therefore entitled to the legacy. Raven, In re; Spencer v. National Association for Prevention of Consumption, 84 L. J. Ch. 489; [1915] 1 Ch. 673; 113 L. T. 131—Warrington, J.

Charitable Trust—Perpetuity—Gift for Contribution to Workpeople's Holiday—Gift to Club—To be Used as Committee should Think Best.]—A testator gave a legacy for the purposes of contribution to the holiday expenses of workpeople employed in a business in such manner as the directors should think fit; and he gave the residue of his estate to a club, and by a codicil declared that he desired the money to be utilised by the club for such purposes as the committee might determine :—Held, that the gift to the workpeople was not a good charitable gift either as being for poor persons or for general public purposes, and was therefore void as infringing the rule against perpetuities. Held, also, that the gift to the club was a good gift for such purposes as the committee might determine. Drummond, In re; Ashworth v. Drummond, 83 L. J. Ch. 817; [1914] 2 Ch. 90; 111 L. T. 156; 58 S. J. 472; 30 T. L. R. 429—Eve, J.

Gift to Found Homes for Aged Poor—Site to be in Western Suburb of London or in Adjacent Country — "Western suburb" — "Adjacent."]—A testator gave a large sum of money to found homes for aged poor, and directed his trustees to lay out a sufficient part thereof in the purchase of a site "in some or one of the western suburbs of London or in the adjacent country." The trustees proposed to purchase a very eligible site for the purpose near Croydon :—Held, that the site was not in a western suburb or in the adjacent country. Whiteley, In re; London (Bishop) v. Whiteley, 55 S. J. 291—Eve, J.

Residue of Rents—Meaning of "employed and bestowed."]—A testator gave land to a City Company subject to a direction to distribute 40*l*. a year in charity and with a provision that the residue of the rents should be "employed and bestowed" according to their discretion, and in the event of his will not being carried out for the space of a year there was a gift over :—Held, that there was no direction in the will to hold the surplus rents above 40*l*. for any purposes which would in law be charitable. Rowe, In re; Merchant Taylors' Co. v. London Corporation, 30 T. L. R. 528—Astbury, J.

Invitation of Subscriptions — Excess over Expenditure—Proper Destination of Balance.]—A Red Cross Society, believing that they had no power to expend their funds in a war in which British troops were not engaged, invited and received subscriptions to a special fund to be expended in aiding the sick and wounded in the war which broke out in 1912 between the Balkan Allies and the Turks. At the end of the war a large balance of the special fund was still unexpended, and in reply to a circular from the society stating that the war was concluded a large majority of the subscribers consented that the balance of their subscriptions should be used for the general purposes of the society, a very few refused their consent, and a considerable number did not reply. Shortly after this a war broke out between the Balkan Allies, and the society expended a further sum in this war :—Held, that on the construction of the invitation and circular the subscriptions for the war against Turkey could not be used for the war between the Allies, and that those who subscribed after the date at which the society had received subscriptions sufficient to cover all the expenditure incurred in the war against Turkey and who desired the return of their subscriptions were not entitled to the return of their subscriptions in full, but only to the return of such proportion as the amount unexpended on the war against Turkey bore to the total sum subscribed. British Red Cross Balkan Fund, In re; British Red Cross Society v. Johnson, 84 L. J. Ch. 79; [1914] 2 Ch. 419; 58 S. J. 755; 30 T. L. R. 662—Astbury, J.

Validity of Bequest—Common Law Condition Subsequent — Gift Over.] — A testator devised all his land in Australia, subject to certain life interests, to the council of the Church of England Collegiate School of St. Peter, at Adelaide, for the general purposes of that institution, but on the express condition that the council should publish annually a statement of payments and receipts, and in case default should be made for six months in the publication of such statement of accounts the gift should cease and determine and should go over and enure for the sole benefit of such persons and for such public purposes as the Governor for the time being of South Australia should in writing direct:—Held, first, that the gift over was not a good charitable gift; secondly, that the condition was a common law condition subsequent and was void as being obnoxious to the rule against perpetuities; and thirdly, that the council of the collegiate school were therefore entitled to a conveyance of the land freed from the condition. Da Costa, In re; Clarke v. St. Peter's Collegiate School, 81 L. J. Ch. 293; [1912] 1 Ch. 337; 106 L. T. 458; 56 S. J. 240; 28 T. L. R. 189—Eve, J.

Hospital — Ecclesiastical Law — Consecrated Chapel — Rebuilding — New Chapel — Consecration of New Chapel—Effect of Consecration.]—An unincorporated society consisting of a large number of governors was in possession of an infirmary, held by them on charitable trusts. The infirmary contained a consecrated chapel with an endowed chaplaincy attached and with statutes and rules providing for services of the Church of England only therein. It becoming expedient to build a new and enlarged infirmary upon a new site the governors accepted a gift of a large sum, given on condition that the subscriptions to the new infirmary building fund became available for the general purposes of the institution. The new buildings included a chapel, the cost of which came out of the subscribed funds generally, but the organ, altar, pulpit, and general fittings were provided by special donations made by members of the Church of England. The general administration and management of the infirmary was carried on by a house committee appointed by the governors. Shortly before the opening of the new infirmary, the house committee invited the bishop of the diocese to consecrate the new chapel, which he shortly afterwards did upon the formal petition of the trustees, to whom the new site and building had been conveyed. The petition stated that the new infirmary buildings included a chapel which had been erected "in substitution for the present Royal infirmary and the consecrated chapel thereof, which is intended to be pulled down." In an action by certain of the governors for a declaration that the new infirmary and the site thereof were vested in the trustees upon trust notwithstanding the dedication service above-mentioned to permit the chapel to be used for the general purposes of the charity, including the holding therein of religious services other than those of the Church of England for the benefit of the objects of the charity,—Held, first, that, inasmuch as the trustees had a bare legal estate with no powers at all, and the house committee's functions were confined to the administration and management of the infirmary, their action in inviting the bishop to consecrate would have been ultra vires but for the fact that the old infirmary was consecrated, and that it must be presumed to have been the prima facie intention of all parties to reproduce as nearly as might be the state of things existing in the old infirmary. Held, secondly, that inasmuch as the consecration had been duly performed, there would in any event have been no jurisdiction in a secular Court to interfere or to make the declaration asked for. Sutton v. Bowden, 82 L. J. Ch. 322; [1913] 1 Ch. 518; 108 L. T. 637; 29 T. L. R. 262—Farwell, L.J.

Residue Given to Archbishop and Successors —To be Used Wholly or in Part as Archbishop may Judge most Conducive to the Good of Religion.]—The gift by will of a residue to the Catholic Archbishop of Brisbane and his successors "to be used and expended wholly or in part as such Archbishop may judge most conducive to the good of religion in this diocese,"—Held, not to be a good charitable bequest and to be void for lack of certainty in the words "wholly or in part," the wideness of the discretion in the legatee, and the vagueness of the words "most conducive to the good of religion in this diocese." Dunne v. Byrne, 81 L. J. P.C. 202; [1912] A.C. 407; 106 L. T. 394; 56 S. J. 324; 28 T. L. R. 257—P.C.

"Charitable institutions, persons, or objects."]—A testatrix left the residue of her estate to her trustees "with power to them to distribute the same amongst such charitable institutions, persons or objects, as they may think desirable":—Held (Lord Skerrington dubitante), that the bequest was not void for uncertainty, the words "charitable persons" falling to be construed as meaning persons in need of charity. Cameron's Trustees v. Mackenzie, [1915] S. C. 313—Ct. of Sess.

Police Superannuation Fund—Uncertainty —Perpetuity.]—The testator gave the residue of his property to "the superannuation fund of the Cardiganshire constabulary." The only fund of this kind in the district was the "police pension fund" created by the Police Act, 1890, which is administered in the case of a county by the county council. No person is authorised by that statute to receive augmentations to the fund; but by section 18, sub-section 3, surplus income may be invested, and (section 22, sub-section 1) where there is an excess of income over expenditure the police authority may apply to the Secretary of State for a provisional order authorising payment out of the fund for such purposes as may seem expedient:—Held, that even if the "police pension fund" were intended by the testator, the destination of that fund was uncertain, and the gift was invalid as not being to a proper charitable object. Davies, In re; Lloyd v. Cardigan County Council, 84 L. J. Ch. 493; [1915] 1 Ch. 543; 13 L. G. R. 437; 59 S. J. 413—Neville, J.

"Charitable or religious purposes."] — By his will a testator devised and bequeathed the residue of his property real and personal to

W., the Bishop of Ossory, or other the bishop of that diocese for the time being, and F., the incumbent of the parish of Carlow, or other the incumbent of that parish for the time being, upon trust to pay the interest, dividends, or annual proceeds of his residuary estate to his three sisters, and the survivors and survivor of them for life, "and from and after the decease of such survivor in trust to apply and dispose of such interest, dividends, or annual proceeds from time to time for the use of the Protestant Orphan Society of the county of Carlow, or for or towards the relief and benefit of such poor and necessitous Protestant widows and widowers resident in the county of Carlow, or to both of such objects or purposes, or to such other merely and purely charitable or religious purpose or purposes for the benefit of or advantage of members of the Church of Ireland, or other Protestant denomination within the said county of Carlow, in such shares and proportions, and in such manner as my said trustees shall in their uncontrollable discretion think fit":—Held, that the testator, in the words "charitable or religious" had not shewn an intention to enable the trustees to apply the gift to purposes religious, but not charitable, and that the gift was a valid charitable gift. Davidson, In re; Minty v. Bourne (78 L. "Religious and charitable institutions in Glasgow and neighbourhood."]—A testator directed his trustees to "pay and divide" a sum of 250*l.* "among such religious and charitable institutions in Glasgow and neighbourhood as they may select, and in such proportions as they may think proper":—Held, that the bequest was to be construed as a bequest to institutions in the locality of which it could be predicated that they were both religious and charitable, and that it was not void for uncertainty. M'Phee's Trustees v. M'Phee, [1912] S. Religious Purposes—Provision for Annual Sermon in Parish Church—Revenues in Excess of Requirements — Application of Surplus Cy-près — Scheme — Payment of Stipends of Assistant Curates—Applying Income to Religious Purposes only — Subdivision of Old Ecclesiastical Parish — Confining Benefit to Ancient Parish Church.]—In 1580 A. conveyed lands in West Ham in trust to employ part of the rents and profits for or towards the charges of a sermon to be made annually in the parish church. The rents and profits subject to this trust had now increased to upwards of 300*l.* per annum. The ancient parish had been divided into nineteen ecclesiastical parishes, of one of which the ancient parish church was the parish church; and the borough of West Ham, which was coterminous with the ancient parish, had now a population of about 300,000. A scheme having been directed for the application cy-près of the income, so far as it was not required for the annual sermon,—Held, that A.'s object was a distinctly religious one, and that no part of the income ought to be applied to the delivery of lectures or to any non-religious purpose. Held, also, that the object nearest to that expressed in the deed was the payment of the stipends of assistant curates; that the application of the income ought to be confined to the ecclesiastical parish now attached to the ancient parish church; and that any money not required for the payment of curates' stipends ought to be applied by the trustees in or towards the expenses incurred by the vicar in providing for the due conduct of the services of the church, the visitation of the poor, or the religious instruction of the parishioners, with power to the trustees to pay any particular part of the income to the vicar, to be applied by him to one or more of those objects and accounted for accordingly. Avenon's Charity, In re; Att.-Gen. v. Pelly, 82 L. Dissenting Protestants—Unitarians—"Congregation."]—An annuity charged on land was granted by deed made in 1761 to trustees on trust to pay it to the Rev. J. P. or such other persons as for the time being should have the pastoral care of the congregation of dissenting Protestants of the town of C., for or towards the support of such pastor. The congregation of which the Rev. J. P. was then pastor were Presbyterians, and had a church in Nelson Street, C. A subsequent minister adopted Unitarian doctrines, and in 1827 the majority of the congregation seceded and built a church of their own in C., which was carried on in connection with the General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church in Ireland. The rest of the congregation continued to attend the church in Nelson Street, in which, thenceforth, Unitarian doctrines were preached. The Unitarian congregation of C. was one of the three congregations—namely, Dublin, Cork, and Clonmel—forming the Synod of Munster. The annuity was paid to the Unitarian minister for the time being of the church, without question. There was a resident minister down to 1882, after which date the services were conducted by visiting ministers. In 1911 the land on which the annuity was charged was sold under the Purchase of Land (Ireland) Acts, the annuity was redeemed, and the redemption price paid into Court. A claim was then made to the redemption price on behalf of the Presbyterian congregation in C. The only persons then attending service in the Nelson Street church were three members of the family of the late resident minister, and one other person:—Held, that, inasmuch as no particular religious doctrines were required by the trust deed to be taught, the provisions of the Dissenters' Chapels Act, 1844, applied, and that the usage for twenty-five years and upwards preceding the claim was conclusive evidence that Unitarian doctrines and mode of worship might properly be taught and observed in the church, and that the right of the minister to the annuity could not be called in question; that there still was a congregation of Unitarians attending the church; and that the income of the trust fund should be paid to the minister for the time being of the Unitarian congregation in C. Hutchinson's Trusts, In re, [1914] 1 Ir. R. 271—M.R.

Chapel Building Fund — Reversionary Bequest to Same — Immediate Bequest Held Invalid in 1876 under then Existing Statute of Mortmain—Claim to Reversionary Bequest —Res Judicata.]—A will proved in 1874 gave an immediate legacy of 200*l.* to a chapel building fund, and also a reversionary bequest, payable after the death or re-marriage of the testator's widow. The executors believed that these legacies transgressed the then operative Statutes of Mortmain, and an order was made in chambers, dated May 8, 1876, directing that the 200*l.* should fall into the residue. The testator's widow died in 1909 :—Held, that the representatives of the building fund were entitled to the reversionary bequest, inasmuch as the fund had other objects than those involving the purchase of land to which the money might be applied. Held, further, that the order of 1876 did not constitute an estoppel by res judicata, as such order had been in respect of another bequest, and had been based on a belief which was erroneous. Surfleet's Estate, In re; Rawlings v. Smith, 105 L. Augmentation Fund for Benefice—Condition — "Never be held in plurality" — Defeasance.]—A clergyman who had for many years down to shortly before his death been rector of K., by his will bequeathed 1,000*l.* "as an augmentation fund" for that benefice "upon condition that the benefice or rectory never be held in plurality by any neighbouring clergyman." Steps towards the union of the rectory of K. with a neighbouring rectory and vicarage were commenced by the bishop of the diocese in the year preceding the testator's death, and subsequently, in the year of his decease, the rectory of M. with the vicarage of S. and the rectory of K. were united into one benefice for ecclesiastical purposes, the defendant, incumbent of M.-cum-S., being presented to the rectory of K. :—Held, that the testator having used "plurality," which was a technical expression involving the holding of a benefice by some clergyman who at the same time holds one or more other benefices, the rector of the one united parish or benefice was not holding in plurality, and the event contemplated by the condition of defeasance had not arisen. Macnamara, In re; Hewitt v. Jeans, 104 L. Legacy to Pay off Debt on Church and Schools — Legacy Exceeding Debt — General Charitable Purposes.]—J. C. bequeathed to Father W. of St. A., for his own use, 100*l.*, and to the same Father W. or to the priest in charge for the time being of the said church, to pay off the debt on the church and boys' schools" of St. A., 500*l.* payable in one sum or five annual instalments. At the date of the testator's will there was a mortgage debt of 200*l.* on the church, but at the date of his death there was a debt of 63*l.* on the schools only :—Held, that the bequest of 500*l.* was for a general charitable purpose of maintaining the church and schools and valid in respect of the amount not required for the particular purpose of paying off the debt. Connolly, In re; Walton v. Connolly, 110 L. Bequest to "General" of Salvation Army — Corps Purposes — Religious Branch of Army.]—A testatrix by her will directed her trustee to stand possessed of the residue of her estate in trust for the "General" of the Salvation Army for the time being, to be used for corps purposes in Liverpool :—Held, that the gift of residue was a good charitable bequest, as the evidence shewed that "corps purposes" meant the purposes of the religious branch of the Army. Fowler, In re; Fowler v. Booth. 31 T. Community of Friars—Absolute Bequest—Validity—Gift to Individuals—Public Policy.] —Bequest of residue of proceeds of conversion of realty and personalty "in trust for the society or institution known as the Franciscan Friars of Clevedon in the county of Somerset absolutely" :—Held, first, an immediate absolute bequest to the several members of the community of Franciscans at Clevedon at the date of the testator's death; and secondly, that the policy of the Roman Catholic Relief Act, 1829, ss. 28 to 37, which is aimed at the suppression of religious orders of the Church of Rome in this country, has no operation upon such a bequest. Cocks v. Manners (40 L. "City Mission cause in London" — Whether Valid.] — A legacy to "The City Mission cause in London" was a legacy for the cause of Christian missions in London, and was valid as a charitable gift, and, there being no objection by the Attorney-General, that the legacy should be paid to the London City Mission. Hall, In re; Hall v. Hall, 31 T. Gift to Secular Society.] — A testator bequeathed the residue of his estate to a society called the Secular Society, which was registered as a limited company, the memorandum of association stating that one of its objects was to promote the principle that human conduct should be based upon natural knowledge and not upon supernatural belief, and that human welfare in this world was the proper end of all thought and action. There was nothing to shew that the rule against perpetuities was infringed :—Held, that as there was nothing subversive of morality or contrary to law in the memorandum or articles, the gift was valid. Bowman, In re; Secular Society v. Bowman, 85 L. To Found Scholarship—According to Scheme "or as near as may be"—Undesirable Condition — Discretion of Legatees.] — A testator gave a legacy to two institutions to be applied according to, "or as near as may be," in the discretion of the legatees to a scheme for the founding of a scholarship. The legatees refused to accept the legacy unless certain modifications were made in the scheme :—Held, that the legacy should be applied as nearly in accordance with the scheme in the will as the legatees might think desirable. Harrison, In re; Harrison v. Att.-Gen., 85 L. Maintenance of House of Residence for Ladies of Limited Means — Poverty.] — A testatrix by her will, made in 1900, bequeathed her residuary estate upon trust to sell such portions thereof as the trustees in their discretion should think necessary or desirable "for the maintenance of a temporary house of residence for ladies of limited means" :—Held, that there was a good charitable bequest of so much of the estate as should be necessary and such further portion as in the discretion of the trustees might be desirable for the maintenance of a home for ladies of limited means. Gardom, In re; Le Page v. Att.-Gen., 83 L. Charitable Institutions for Benefit of Women and Children—No Express Power of Selection—Uncertainty.]—A testator directed his trustees "to pay over the balance or residue of my estates to and for behalf of such charitable purposes as I may think proper to name in any writing, however informal, which I may leave; but failing my leaving such writings, then to such charitable institutions or societies which exist for the benefit of women and children requiring aid or assistance of whatever nature, but said institutions and societies to be under the management of Protestants." The testator died without leaving any such writing :—Held, that the bequest of residue was not void for uncertainty, in respect that its object was charitable, and that the description of the beneficiaries was sufficiently definite to enable the trustees to exercise a power of selection which must be held to have been impliedly conferred upon them. Wordie's Trustees v. Wordie, [1915] S. Bequest to "Ormond Home for Nurses"—Maternity Nurses for Poor People — Home Carried on by Testatrix—Fees Received from Patients and Pupils — Charitable Intent — Validity.]—By her will the testatrix gave a bequest to the "Ormond Home for Nurses," and directed that, if necessary, a committee of management should be formed to carry on the home. The Ormond Home for Nurses was a private residence which the testatrix used as a home for midwives and for training midwives. The testatrix and the nurses under her charge attended maternity cases among the working classes for a small fee. The testatrix also received pupils, who paid her a fee, and for whom she provided lectures. The testatrix maintained the home out of her own income of 30*l*. per annum, together with the sums she received from patients and pupils :—Held, that the bequest was a good charitable bequest. Webster, In re; Pearson v. Webster, 81 L. Education of Testator's Relations.] — A testator bequeathed to St. J. College, Tuam, the sum of 600*l*., the interest on which was to go for ever towards the education of his relations in that college, preference to be given to the most eligible and best conducted, the selection to be given to the archbishop for the time being, to a conscientious layman, and to the parish priest of the boys to be considered. There were no trustees of St. J. College, nor any deed of foundation. The affairs of the college were managed by a council :—Held, that the bequest was a valid charitable bequest. Att.-Gen. v. Sidney Sussex College (38 L. J. Ch. 656; L. Tomb, Trust to Repair — Gift Over.] — A bequest of income to the vicar of a parish and his successors, with a direction that the testator's grave should be kept in repair, and a gift over upon failure to comply with this direction, is a valid gift as an accretion to the endowment of the living. Tyler, In re; Tyler v. Tyler (60 L. J. Ch. 686; [1891] 3 Ch. 252), followed. Davies, In re; Lloyd v. Cardigan County Council, 84 L. J. Ch. 493; [1915] 1 Ch. 543; 112 L. T. 1110; 79 J. P. 291; 13 L. G. R. 437; 59 S. J. 413—Neville, J.

Trust "for the protection and benefit of animals."]—A bequest of a fund upon trust "for the protection and benefit of animals," to be applied for their use as the trustee should think fit, two particular methods of doing so being indicated by the donor—namely, the humane slaughtering of animals and the provision of municipal abattoirs :—Held, a good charitable trust. Wedgwood, In re; Allen v. Wedgwood, 84 L. J. Ch. 107; [1915] 1 Ch. 113; 112 L. T. 66; 59 S. J. 73; 31 T. L. R. 43—C.A.

Society for Benefit of Animals — Cats' Home.]—A testatrix bequeathed to the Commissioners of Charitable Donations and Bequests 4,000*l*. New Consols "upon trust to apply the income for the exclusive maintenance of the D. home for starving and forsaken cats . . . including the maintenance of the chloroform chamber now existing, or any other painless method of putting an end to cases of hopeless suffering, and the maintenance of the boarding department, but for no other purpose, as the D. Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals are bound, under deed . . . to provide for rent, taxes, repairs, caretaker's wages, and all other expenditure " :—Held, that the bequest in favour of the home for starving and forsaken cats was a valid charitable gift. Swifte v. Att.-Gen. for Ireland (No. 2), [1912] 1 Ir. R. 133—Barton, J.

Angling and Preservation Society.]—A gift to a society having for its immediate object the preservation and improvement of angling in certain parts of the river Thames for the benefit of its members,—Held, not to be a good charitable bequest, although some benefit might enure from its operations to the public generally. Clifford, In re; Mallam v. McFie, 81 L. J. Ch. 220; 106 L. T. 14; 56 S. J. 91; 28 T. L. R. 57—Swinfen Eady, J.

" Purposes of healthy recreation."] — A testator directed that the balance of the income of his estate should be applied by his trustees " for the purpose of fostering, encouraging and providing the means of healthy recreation, including the teaching of singing in classes or choruses for the residents of the town of P. and the surrounding districts, and for the purpose of providing music and instruments (in so far as my trustees think advisable) for the town band, in such manner and form as my trustees in their absolute discretion consider best, but in no case shall my trustees pay away any moneys derived out of my estate for prizes for football or rowing for speed " :—Held, that this was a valid charitable bequest. Shillington v. Portadown Urban Council, [1911] 1 Ir. R. 247—Barton, J.

Charitable Bequest — Validity — Gift to School for the Erection of Fives Courts.]—A gift to the governing body of a school, which is admittedly a charity, " for the purpose of building Eton fives courts or squash racket courts or for some similar purpose," is a good charitable bequest. Mariette, In re: Mariette v. Aldenham School, 84 L. J. Ch. 825; [1915] 2 Ch. 284; 59 S. J. 630; 31 T. L. R. 536—Eve, J.

—— Gift to Provide a Prize for School Sports.] —A gift to the head master of a school for the time being to provide a prize for some event in the school athletic sports is also a good charitable bequest. Ib.

—— Considerations Affecting.]—In considering whether a gift to a charity is charitable one must have regard not only to the character of the gift, but also to the character and objects of the charity which is the recipient of the gift. Ib.

Scheme — Practice — Parties — Metropolis—Burial Ground — Land Purchased out of Ecclesiastical Funds — Leases of Unconsecrated Portion — Application by Rector and Churchwardens for Scheme—Ecclesiastical or Secular Purposes—City Council—Leave to Intervene before Order for Scheme — Proper Person to Represent Secular View.]—Where trustees of a charity apply to the Court by originating summons for a scheme and make the Attorney-General a party, that is a properly constituted proceeding, and no application to be added as a party ought to be listened to before an order has been made for the scheme. Hyde Park Place Charity, In re, 80 L. J. Ch. 593; [1911] 1 Ch. 678; 104 L. T. 701; 75 J. P. 361; 9 L. G. R. 887—C.A.

In 1757 land was purchased by the vestry of St. George, Hanover Square, out of ecclesiastical funds, for a burial ground, and was by a private Act vested in the rector and churchwardens of the parish for the use and benefit of the inhabitants thereof. Part of the land was used as a burial ground and the same was closed in 1854 by an Order in Council. The unconsecrated portion was let on long building leases, on the expiration of which fresh leases were granted and new buildings were erected. Under the Burial Act, 1857, the surplus income was to be applied for the benefit of the parish as the vestry should direct. The Council of the City of Westminster, as the successors of the vestry under the London Government Act, 1899, brought an action against the rector and churchwardens of the parish, in which it was ultimately decided by the House of Lords (St. George, Hanover Square (Rector) v. Westminster Corporation, 79 L. J. Ch. 310; [1910] A.C. 225) that the land was Church property and that no rights or interest in respect of the property passed to the city council under the Act of 1899. The House, however, deliberately refrained from deciding for which purposes the income of the property was applicable. An originating summons was thereupon taken out by the rector and churchwardens, to which the Attorney-General alone was a respondent, for the establishment of a scheme for the administration of the charity trusts. Before any order was made the city council applied by summons for liberty to intervene in the proceedings to contend that the purposes for which the charity was applicable were secular and not ecclesiastical purposes :—Held, that the application of the city council was premature and must be dismissed. Warrington, J., expressed the opinion that when the time arrived for the determination of the question raised the city council would not be the proper person to represent the secular view; but the Court of Appeal decided that that point must be left entirely open. Ib.

—— School—Grant of Land for Purposes of School to be Conducted According to Principles of Church of England—Use as Sunday School—Discontinuance as Weekday School—Power of Trustees to Let School.]—Land was conveyed in 1867, under the authority of the School Sites Act, 1841, to the minister and chapelwardens of C., upon trust to permit the land and buildings to be erected thereon to be for ever appropriated and used as and for a school for the education of children and adults of the poorer classes of the district, and for no other purpose. School buildings were erected and a school was carried on as a public elementary school till 1905, when it was closed by reason of the inability of the trustees to satisfy the requirements as to repairs and improvements. In an action for the administration of the trusts affecting the school and for a scheme for the regulation and management of the charity, a scheme was prepared by the Attorney-General which provided that the buildings should be used in the first instance for Church of England educational purposes, and that so far as they were not used for such purposes they should be used for educational purposes of a secular and strictly undenominational character. On objection by the trustees, Swinfen Eady, J., modified the scheme by giving the trustees power to let the buildings and apply the net receipts for church educational purposes. The Attorney-General appealed:—Held (Buckley, L.J., dissenting), that the order appealed against should be discharged, and that subject to certain modifications in form the scheme should be approved. Att.-Gen. v. Price, 81 L. J. Ch. 317; [1912] 1 Ch. 667; 106 L. T. 694; 76 J. P. 209; 10 L. G. R. 416; 28 T. L. R. 283—C.A.

Appeal settled by agreement, and form of scheme for administration of educational charity in connection with the Church of England approved. Price v. Att.-Gen., 83 L. J. Ch. 415; [1914] A.C. 20; 109 L. T. 757; 78 J. P. 153; 12 L. G. R. 85—H.L. (E.)

——Alteration of Objects of Charity—Lapse—Continued Existence of Charity.]—A testatrix by will made in 1908 bequeathed a legacy "to Mrs. Bailey's Charity, Rotherhithe." There formerly existed a charity in Rotherhithe, known as Hannah Bayly's Charity, founded in 1756, the income of which was applicable in providing pensions for widows in Rotherhithe. In 1905, under a scheme of the Charity Commissioners, the endowments of Hannah Bayly's Charity and thirteen other charities in Rotherhithe were consolidated, and it was provided that they should be administered by trustees under the title of "the Consolidated Charities." The income was to be applied for various charitable purposes, including pensions for poor persons in Rotherhithe, without mentioning widows as special objects of the trust:—Held, that, notwithstanding the scheme of 1905, Hannah Bayly's Charity was not extinct and the legacy had not lapsed, but took effect although widows were no longer a special object of this charity. Faraker, In re; Faraker v. Durell, 81 L. J. Ch. 635; [1912] 2 Ch. 488; 107 L. T. 36; 56 S. J. 668—C.A.

Semble, no scheme of the Charity Commissioners can destroy an existing endowed charity. Ib.

—— Attorney-General—Right to Appeal.]—The Court gave leave to the Attorney-General to appeal from the decision of Neville, J., although he was not a party to the proceedings in the Court below. Ib.

Action against Unincorporated Charity — Defendants.] — Where an unincorporated charity is sued, the proper practice is to sue a responsible official of the charity on its behalf. Royal National Lifeboat Institution v. Turver, 31 T. L. R. 340—Sargant, J.

Cy-près — Legacy for Charitable Object — Failure of Object — Lapse.] — A testator directed his trustees in a certain event to apply the residue of his estate "in founding, erecting, and endowing in Paisley an industrial school for females." At the date of the testator's death it was open to a private individual to found or to contribute to an industrial school, but when the residue became available the effect of supervening legislation had been to make individual foundation or contribution impossible. The trustees asked for an order that they might administer the fund under a cy-près scheme:—Held, that, as the terms of the bequest did not disclose any general charitable intention, but only the favouring of the particular object that had failed, there was no room for the application of the doctrine of cy-près, and that the bequest had accordingly lapsed. Burgess's Trustees v. Crawford, [1912] S. C. 387—Ct. of Sess.

—— Gift to Named Institution—Institution Ceasing at Death of Testatrix — General Charitable Intention.]—A testatrix bequeathed her property to the Ormond Home for Nurses, an institution founded and controlled solely by herself for nursing the working classes. The institution charged small fees, payable by instalments, and was entirely self-supporting. On the death of the testatrix the work ceased to be carried on, and the premises were disposed of:—Held, that the bequest was for the continuance of the work carried on by the home, which was a charitable work, and was therefore a good charitable gift, for the purposes of which there must be a scheme cy-près. Webster, In re; Pearson v. Webster, 81 L. J. Ch. 79; [1912] 1 Ch. 106; 105 L. T. 815; 56 S. J. 90—Joyce, J.

—— Annuity—Express Purpose—Lapse.]—A testatrix bequeathed a leasehold house to trustees to be used for the widows and orphan daughters of the clergy. She then gave her real and personal estate to trustees upon trust (inter alia) to pay three annuities, one being to the treasurer of a named charitable society "for the maintenance and expenses of maintaining" the above house for the purpose named; then followed a gift over to other charities "after the final expiration of the aforesaid trusts." At the testatrix's death the house was used as a home for the widows and orphans of the clergy, but within a year of her death the house was sold by the trustees in accordance with the Mortmain and Charitable Uses Act, 1891, and the home was subsequently discontinued:—Held, that the annuity was still subsisting, that there was a general charitable intention, and the annuity was applicable to general charitable purposes according to the doctrine of cy-près. Slevin, In re; Slevin v. Hepburn (60 L. J. Ch. 439; [1891] 2 Ch. 236), and Mann, In re; Hardy v. Att.-Gen. (72 L. J. Ch. 150; [1903] 1 Ch. 232), applied. Cunningham, In re; Dulcken v. Cunningham, 83 L. J. Ch. 342; [1914] 1 Ch. 427; 110 L. T. 371—Astbury, J.

—— Impracticability of Particular Object — No General Charitable Intention—Lapse.]—On the construction in a will of a charitable gift for a particular purpose, which purpose it was impracticable to carry out,—Held, that there was no paramount intention shewn in the will to benefit any particular class of charitable objects, and that, inasmuch as the particular directions given in connection with the gift failed, the gift itself failed, and no scheme should be directed. Biscoe v. Jackson (56 L. J. Ch. 93, 540; 35 Ch. D. 460) discussed and distinguished. Wilson, In re; Twentyman v. Simpson, 82 L. J. Ch. 161; [1913] 1 Ch. 314; 108 L. T. 321; 57 S. J. 245—Parker, J.

—— Preference of Scottish Charity.] — A Scottish testatrix left a legacy to a Scottish society for the prevention of cruelty to animals "to be devoted by them specially towards the total and absolute prohibition of vivisection." The society, finding it impossible, owing to differences of opinion within their body on the subject of vivisection, to administer the legacy themselves, petitioned the Court for approval of a scheme whereby it was proposed that the trust funds should be paid over in equal shares to two anti-vivisection societies, one Scottish and the other English. The Court amended the scheme by excluding the English society, and approved a scheme for the paying over of the whole funds to the Scottish society. Mirrlees' Charity, In re (79 L. J. Ch. 73; [1910] 1 Ch. 163), commented on. Glasgow Society for Prevention of Cruelty to Animals v. National Anti-Virisection Society, [1915] S. C. 757—Ct. of Sess.

—— Charitable Purposes in Existence at Testator's Death—Specific Purposes Ceasing to Exist before Distribution of Estate.] — Where a gift is left by will to trustees to apply the income for charitable purposes which are in existence at the death of the testator, but the specific purposes cease to exist before it is paid over, the gift is applicable to charitable purposes, cy-près. Geikie, In re; Robson v. Paterson, 27 T. L. R. 484—Neville, J.

—— Voluntary Charitable Society—Application of Surplus Income — Discretion of Governors.]—On a petition for the approval of the Court, under the Imprisoned Debtors Discharge Society's Act, 1856, to the application of a certain part of the society's income by way of donation to ninety charitable institutions, Parker, J., declined to sanction the proposed application on the ground that it frittered away the fund among too many objects, and expressed the view that the Court had to be satisfied on each occasion that a proper cy-près application of the fund was being made. On appeal, held, allowing the appeal, that under the Act of 1856 it was not for the Court to say in the first instance what institutions should be assisted by the governors of the society, unless the Court found that the application was in some way corrupt or that assistance was being given to an institution of such a nature that it could not have been intended by Parliament to be aided; that the practice which had been adopted during many years, for the Judge to whom the petition was presented to adopt the institutions approved by his predecessors and to enquire only as to the propriety of new institutions proposed to be assisted, should be followed; and that the doctrine of cy-près had no application. Imprisoned Debtors Discharge Society, In re, 56 S. J. 596; 28 T. L. R. 477—C.A.

—— Scheme—Distributive Charities—Eleemosynary Gift — Increased Profits — Apportionment.]—A gift to distribute a fixed sum weekly in loaves to the poor, and "the residue of the profits thereof, if any shall arise or grow out of the said premises over and above the said sum of two shillings weekly, the same to be employed for or towards the charges of a sermon once in every year to be made," must be applied, first, in paying the fixed sum for the purpose stated, and the residue, regardless of its great increase, must be applied cy-près to the preaching of a sermon, and cannot be apportioned between the two objects. Att.-Gen. v. Pelly; Avenon's Charity, In re, 106 L. T. 295; 56 S. J. 241—Parker, J.

Testator Domiciled in England—Mortgages on Freeholds in Ontario — Movables or Immovables—Impure Personality—Lex Rei Sitæ—Invalidity of Bequest.]—A testator who died in 1888, domiciled in England, bequeathed property, which included mortgages on freeholds in Ontario, for charitable purposes. The mortgages contained covenants to pay the moneys thereby secured. At the date of the testator's death the Charitable Uses Act, 1735, then in force, extended to Ontario, and would admittedly have invalidated the bequest of the mortgages had the testator been domiciled there:—Held (Fletcher Moulton, L.J., doubting), that mortgages on land are deemed to be immovables and not movables, and governed by the lex rei sitæ, and that therefore the bequest of the mortgages was a gift of impure personalty and was invalid. Jerningham v. Herbert (6 L. J. (o.s.) Ch. 134; 4 Russ. 388) and Fitzgerald, In re; Surman v. Fitzgerald (73 L. J. Ch. 436; [1904] 1 Ch. 573), applied. Hoyles, In re; Row v. Jagg, 80 L. J. Ch. 274; [1911] 1 Ch. 179; 103 L. T. 817; 55 S. J. 169; 27 T. L. R. 131—C.A.

The terms "movable" and "immovable" are not technical terms in English law, though they are often used, and conveniently used, in considering questions between English law and foreign systems which differ from that law. But where the two systems are identical, quære whether the terms are appropriate—per Cozens-Hardy, M.R. The division into movable and immovable property is no part of the law either of England or of Canada, and is only called into operation in England when the English Courts have to determine rights between domiciled Englishmen and persons domiciled in countries which do not adopt the English division into real and personal property—per Farwell, L.J. Ib.

Debentures Charged on Real and Personal Property — Company's Leasehold Offices — Apportionment—Quantum.]—A testator, who died before the coming into operation of the Mortmain and Charitable Uses Act, 1891, gave so much of his residuary estate as might by law be applicable to charitable legacies to two charities. Part of his residuary estate consisted of debentures in two Australian land companies. In the case of one company the debentures were charged on all the real and personal property of the company at maturity, and in the case of the other by way of floating security on all its undertaking and all its real and personal property. By Australian law money charged on land can be validly given to charities. At the testator's death the only interests in land in England which the companies possessed were leasehold offices of no appreciable value:—Held, that the debentures could not be given to charity as, being charged upon the English leaseholds, they were "an interest in land" within the Mortmain and Charitable Uses Act, 1888; that the doctrine of "de minimis non curat lex" was not applicable, and that there could be no apportionment. Brook v. Badley (37 L. J. Ch. 884; L. R. 3 Ch. 672) followed. Hill's Trusts, In re (50 L. J. Ch. 134; 16 Ch. D. 173), overruled. Dawson, In re; Pattisson v. Bathurst, 84 L. J. Ch. 476; [1915] 1 Ch. 626; 113 L. T. 19; 59 S. J. 363; 31 T. L. R. 277—C.A.

Private Act — Statutory Trust.] — A private Act will not set aside the provisions of the Mortmain and Charitable Uses Acts, 1888 and 1891, unless language is used in the private Act which makes the application of those Acts impossible. Webster v. Southey (56 L. J. Ch. 785; 36 Ch. D. 9) followed. Verrall, In re, 60 S. J. 141—Astbury, J.

The National Trust Act, 1907, s. 21, sub-s. 2, was inconsistent with and overrode the provisions of the Mortmain and Charitable Uses Act, 1891, by which land acquired by will by a charity must be sold in twelve months, but that did not exonerate the trustees from complying with the terms of the Mortmain and Charitable Uses Act, 1888, relating to conveyances inter vivos. Robinson v. London Hospital (22 L. J. Ch. 751; 10 Hare, 19) applied. Ib.

Licence—Renewal—Application by Company — Enemy Nationality — Licensing Authority—Discretion to Refuse Renewal.]—Where an application is made by a limited company for the renewal of a music licence under the Disorderly Houses Act, 1751, or for the renewal of a cinematograph licence under the Cinematograph Act, 1909, the licensing authority have a discretion to refuse the renewal on the ground that some of the directors and the majority of the shareholders are alien enemies. Rex v. London County Council; London and Provincial Electric Theatres, Ex parte, 84 L. J. K.B. 1787; [1915] 2 K.B. 466; 113 L. T. 118; 79 J. P. 417; 13 L. G. R. 847; 59 S. J. 382; 31 T. L. R. 329—C.A.

—— Company Owners of Theatre—Licence to manager — Appointment of New Manager — No Transfer of Licence — "Occupier" of Premises.]—The manager of a cinematograph theatre, owned by a limited liability company, is not, by virtue of his position as their manager, the "occupier" of the premises within the meaning of section 3 of the Cinematograph Act, 1909. Bruce v. McManus, 84 L. J. K.B. 1860; [1915] 3 K.B. 1; 113 L. T. 332; 79 J. P. 294; 13 L. G. R. 727; 31 T. L. R. 387—D.

A licence under the Cinematograph Act, 1909, to use a picture theatre for the purpose of giving cinematograph exhibitions was granted to the manager of the theatre in the employment of a limited company, the owners of the theatre. Their name appeared in the poor rate book as occupiers of the theatre. Afterwards the appellant was appointed by the company as their manager of the theatre in lieu of the licensee, and he for a certain period superintended the cinematograph exhibition without having the licence transferred to him. An information was preferred against him for that, being the occupier of the premises (the theatre) he during the aforesaid period unlawfully allowed them to be used, in contravention of the Act, for an exhibition of pictures by means of a cinematograph without having first obtained a licence for some person so to use the said premises, and he was convicted and fined :—Held, on appeal, that he was not the "occupier" of the premises within the meaning of section 3 of the Act, and that the conviction must be quashed. Ib.

—— Condition in Licence Prohibiting Opening on Sundays — Power of Licensing Authority to Impose Conditions.]—A county council in issuing a licence under section 2 of the Cinematograph Act, 1909, authorising the user of premises for the purpose of exhibiting pictures by means of a cinematograph, is entitled to insist that the licence shall contain a condition prohibiting the opening of the premises on Sundays, Good Friday, and Christmas Day. London County Council v. Bermondsey Bioscope Co., 80 L. J. K.B. 141; [1911] 1 K.B. 445; 103 L. T. 760; 75 J. P. 53; 9 L. G. R. 79; 27 T. L. R. 141—D.

—— Restrictive Condition—Power of Licensing Authority.]—A licensing authority under the Cinematograph Act, 1909, has no power, in granting a licence, to impose on the licensee a condition that no child under fourteen years of age shall be allowed to enter into or be on the licensed premises after nine o'clock in the evening unaccompanied by a parent or guardian, and that no child under ten years of age shall be allowed on the licensed premises under any circumstances after that hour—per Lush, J., and Rowlatt, J. (Atkin, J., dissenting). Halifax Theatre de Luxe v. Gledhill, 84 L. J. K.B. 649; [1915] 2 K.B. 49; 112 L. T. 519; 79 J. P. 238; 13 L. G. R. 541; 31 T. L. R. 138—D.

By section 1 of the Cinematograph Act, 1909, the exhibition of pictures by means of a cinematograph for the purposes of which inflammable films are used is prohibited unless (inter alia) it is given in premises licensed under the Act. By section 2, sub-section 1, a county council may grant licences to such persons as they think fit to use the premises specified in the licence for the purposes aforesaid, on such terms and conditions as the council may determine. A licence was granted to the respondents to use certain premises "for public cinematograph or other similar exhibitions to which the Cinematograph Act, 1909, applies" upon each weekday (with certain specified days excepted). Attached to the licence was a condition that the premises should not be opened for cinematograph or other exhibitions on Sunday. The respondents gave an exhibition on Sunday at which non-inflammable films were used, the audience present on that occasion having paid for admission. In proceedings against the respondents for breach of the condition subject to which the licence was granted,—Held, that, although no licence was required under the Cinematograph Act, 1909, for an exhibition at which non-inflammable films were used, a condition attached to a licence granted under section 2 was not ultra vires by reason of the fact that it prohibited the use of the licensed premises on a particular day, irrespective of the character of the films used; nor because in the case of a six-day licence it prohibited the use of the premises upon Sunday, to which day the licence did not extend. Ellis v. North Metropolitan Theatres, 84 L. J. K.B. 1077; [1915] 2 K.B. 61; 112 L. T. 1018; 79 J. P. 297; 13 L. G. R. 735; 31 T. L. R. 201—D.

Regulations — Obstructions to Gangways Leading to Exits—Persons Standing in Gangways—Persons Present not Exceeding Number for which Theatre was Licensed.]—Under section 1 of the Cinematograph Act, 1909, "An exhibition of pictures . . . by means of a cinematograph . . . shall not be given unless the regulations made by the Secretary of State for securing safety are complied with." The regulations made by the Secretary of State provided that "the gangways and the staircases, and the passages leading to the exits, shall, during the presence of the public in the building, be kept clear of obstruction." All the seats for which the respondent's cinematograph theatre was licensed had not been installed. At a certain performance a number of persons were standing in the gangways and passages, so that persons going to or from seats had to pass through them, but the number of persons present did not exceed the number for which the theatre was licensed :—Held, that the persons standing in the gangways and passages leading to the exits constituted an obstruction within the meaning of the regulations, and the fact that if the theatre had contained all the seats for which it was licensed all the people present could have been seated was no answer to the charge. Potter v. Watt, 84 L. J. K.B. 394; 112 L. T. 508; 79 J. P. 212; 13 L. G. R. 488; 31 T. L. R. 84—D.

"Inflammable" Films.]—Semble, the word "inflammable" in reference to films as used in the Cinematograph Act, 1909, is not limited to films which are inflammable only while being used in a cinematograph. Victoria Pier Syndicate v. Reeve, 76 J. P. 374; 10 L. G. R. 967; 28 T. L. R. 443—D.

Unlicensed Premises—Dealer or Manufacturer — Display to Prospective Customers only.]—The Cinematograph Act, 1909, s. 1, provides that an exhibition of pictures by means of a cinematograph for the purposes of which inflammable films are used, shall not be given unless the regulations made by the Secretary of State for securing safety are complied with, or, save as expressly provided for by the Act, elsewhere than in premises licensed for the purpose in accordance with the provisions of the Act :—Held, that the statute does not apply to cases where a dealer or manufacturer in the exercise of his trade runs films through a cinematograph machine in the presence of prospective customers. Att.-Gen. v. Vitagraph Co., 84 L. J. Ch. 142; [1915] 1 Ch. 206; 112 L. T. 245; 79 J. P. 150; 13 L. G. R. 148; 59 S. J. 160; 31 T. L. R. 70—Astbury, J.

Constable or any other Officer Appointed by a County Council—Right of Entering Building —"Reason to believe" that the Act was being Infringed—Alleged Trespass.]—Section 4 of the Cinematograph Act, 1909, provides that "a constable or any officer appointed for the purpose by a county council, may at all reasonable times enter any premises whether licensed or not, in which he has reason to believe that such an exhibition as aforesaid " (that is, one in contravention of the provisions of the Act or regulations made thereunder) " is being, or is about to be, given, with a view to seeing whether the provisions of this Act, or any regulations made thereunder and the conditions of any licence granted under this Act have been complied with, and if any person prevents or obstructs the entry of a constable or any officer appointed as aforesaid, he shall be liable, on summary conviction, to a penalty not exceeding 20*l.*" The plaintiff was the proprietor of premises which were not licensed for cinematograph exhibitions, and, therefore, inflammable films could not lawfully be exhibited. He alleged that the police resorted to the building not with the bona fide object of seeing whether the provisions of the Cinematograph Act were being infringed, but for the purpose of getting him convicted for not having a music licence. In an action against the police for trespass he was awarded 100*l.* damages :—Held (while ordering a new trial on the grounds that the verdict of the jury was against the weight of evidence and that there was misdirection), that the word " constable " in the above section meant any police constable, and not merely a constable or other officer appointed by the local authority, and that where a constable enters the premises with a view of seeing whether the provisions of the Cinematograph Act, or regulations made under it, are being contravened the requirements of the Act are complied with, and the fact that he may have entered for other purposes also does not make the entry a trespass. McVittie v. Turner, 85 L. J. K.B. 23; 13 L. G. R. 1181 —C.A.

Exhibition of Film — Condition — Justices' Right to Prohibit—Interest of Party other than Licensee—Refusal of Certiorari.]—A cinematograph licence was granted by Justices and accepted by the licensee, subject to a condition that no film should be exhibited at the theatre if notice had been given to the licensee that the Justices objected to it. The applicants, who had the sole right of exhibiting a certain film in the district, agreed to let the film be exhibited at the theatre for a week, and the cinematograph committee of the Justices having viewed the film gave notice to the theatre manager that they objected to it and it must not be produced. The applicants thereupon applied for a rule nisi for a certiorari to quash the Justices' order prohibiting the exhibition of the film :—Held, that as the applicants had no interest entitling them to make the application, and as the evidence did not establish that the film was of so innocent a nature that no Justices exercising an honest jurisdiction could object to it, the application must be refused. Stott, Ex parte, 32 T. L. R. 84—D.

Whether Licensing Authority have Power to State Case — Power of County Council Delegated to "Justices sitting in petty sessions."] — County Councils and, in the case of county boroughs, borough councils are empowered by section 2 of the Cinematograph Act, 1909, to license premises for the purpose of cinematograph exhibitions. By section 5 of that Act county councils or borough councils are empowered to delegate the powers conferred upon them by the Act to Justices sitting in petty sessions :—Held, that Justices sitting in petty sessions for the purpose of exercising the powers delegated to them under section 5 of the Cinematograph Act, 1909, are not a Court of summary jurisdiction, and therefore have no power to state a Case for the opinion of the High Court Boulter v. Kent Justices (66 L. Expulsion of Member—Quasi-judicial Functions of Committee—Proper Application of Rules—Right of Member to be Heard.]—The committee of a club, having power to expel a member whose conduct should be injurious to the character and interests of the club, purported to expel a member on the ground that he had failed to pay certain fines with punctuality. It was proved at the trial that the real reason of the expulsion was the alleged failure on the part of the member to comply with a rule requiring that no debts should be incurred at the club. The member was not invited to be present when the committee considered his case :—Held, that the committee of a club is bound to exercise its powers in a judicial manner, and that the ostensible reason for the expulsion of a member must be the real reason. Held, further, that a member has a right to have his case heard by the committee of a club before they come to a decision against him. D'Arcy v. Adamson, 57 S. Sale — Non-provision of Perfect Weighing Machine in, on, or under Waggon—Whether Provisions of Coal Duties Acts as to Vending of Coal still in Force — Abolition of Coal Duties.]—Section 52 of 1 & 2 Will. 4. c. lxxvi. (as amended by section 5 of 1 & 2 Vict. c. ci.), which requires every waggon used for the delivery of coal to a purchaser in the Cities of London and Westminster and within twenty-five miles of the General Post-Office to be provided with a perfect weighing machine, is still in force, inasmuch as, being a permanent provision of the Act, it is not affected by the erroneous recital and enactment in section 1 of 1 & 2 Vict. c. ci., and in the subsequent Acts recited in the London Coal Duties Abolition Act, 1889. Houghton v. Fear, 82 L. By-law—Not Carrying Scales and Weights — "Carrying coal for sale" — Coals for Delivery.] — A by-law made by a local authority under the Weights and Measures Act, 1889, provided that "the person in charge of every vehicle carrying coal for sale shall carry therewith a weighing instrument of a form approved by the local authority, together with correct weights," and a penalty was fixed for contravention of the by-law:—Held, that a person did not carry coal for sale within the meaning of the by-law if he carried it for the sole purpose of fulfilling specific orders previously given, even though there had been no unconditional appropriation of specific coal to the customers. Hunting v. Matthews, 108 L. Rights of Executive Government.]—Where the right to money is sub judice, and the money is held in medio by the Court, the Executive Government has no discretion to dispose of such money without the order of the Court, and the fact that no procedure analogous to a petition of right exists in a colony does not authorise the interference by the Crown with private rights; but where a question of legal right is in doubt, the Executive Government should apply to the Court to determine the question. Eastern Trust Co. v. McKenzie, Mann & Co., 84 L. Powers of Australian Legislature—Commonwealth Parliament—States Legislatures.]—The Royal Commissions Act, 1902-1912, is ultra vires the Commonwealth Parliament of Australia so far as it purports to enable a Royal Commission to compel answers to questions, or to order the production of documents, or otherwise to enforce compliance with its requisitions. Att.-Gen. for Australia v. Colonial Sugar Refining Co., 83 L. J. P.C. 154; [1914] A.C. 237; 110 L. T. 707; 30 T. L. R. 203—P.C.

Before federation such powers were vested in the Legislatures of the individual States, and they have not been transferred to the Commonwealth Parliament. Ib.

Contract in Restraint of Trade—Illegality—Injury to Public—Enhancing of Prices—Evidence of Intention.] — A contract is not an offence at common law, even if unenforceable, merely because it is in restraint of trade; to make any such contract or combination unlawful it must amount to a criminal conspiracy. Att.-Gen. for Australia v. Adelaide Steamship Co., 83 L. J. P.C. 84; [1913] A.C. 781; 109 L. T. 258; 12 Asp. M.C. 361; 29 T. L. R. 743—P.C.

A contract in restraint of trade which is unenforceable at common law is not necessarily detrimental to the public within the meaning of the Australian Industries Preservation Acts, and the parties to such contract will not be taken to have intended a detriment, either because they intended to limit competition, or to raise prices. Ib.

An intention to charge excessive or unreasonable prices must be proved, and the onus of shewing that any contract is calculated to raise prices to an unreasonable extent lies on the party alleging it. Ib.

Civil Servant — Retirement — Superannuation Allowance.] — Under the Civil Service Act, 1884, and the Public Service Act, 1895, of New South Wales, members of the Civil Service have an absolute right to retire upon the statutory superannuation allowance provided by the Acts at any time after attaining the age of sixty. Therefore, where a member of the Civil Service was appointed shortly after attaining the age of sixty to a salaried office under the Crown which was incompatible with his remaining in the service,—Held, that on ceasing to be a member of the service he became entitled as of right to a superannuation allowance under the Acts, and that this allowance was not in abeyance while he held the other office to which he was appointed, and that his position was not affected by section 2, sub-section (d) of the Public Service (Superannuation) Act, 1903. Williams v. Delohery, 82 L. Crown Lands—"Homestead grant"—Conversion into "original conditional purchase"—Residence by Applicant.]—For the purpose of the provision for the reduction of residence contained in section 3, sub-section 3 of the Crown Lands Amendment Act, 1908, of New South Wales, the term "applicant" does not include the predecessors in title by successive transfers of the person who actually applies for the conversion of a "homestead grant" into an "original conditional purchase" under the Act. Walsh v. Alexander (16 Commonwealth L. —— Rating — Land without Buildings — Exemption from Rate — Betterment Charge Imposed on Ratepayers — Sale by Crown — Whether Purchasers Liable for Charge.]—By the Sydney Corporation Act, 1879, the Crown is rateable in respect of buildings in the city of Sydney, but not in respect of lands on which there are no buildings. By the Moore Street Improvement Act, 1890, the corporation was authorised to make certain improvements, and part of the cost, in a proportion to be determined, was to be defrayed out of a betterment charge, payable by such owners of property within the improvement area as were liable to the city rate. When the assessment was made in 1891, certain lands in the improvement area were the property of the Crown, and there were no buildings upon them. Afterwards the Crown sold portions of these lands, and buildings were subsequently erected thereon:—Held, that under the Act of 1890 the assessment to the betterment charge was to be made once for all in accordance with the then existing facts, and as the Crown was not then liable to the charge the subsequent purchasers were not liable to it either. Bank of Australasia v. Sydney Municipal Council, 32 T. Duties on Estates of Deceased Persons—Rate of Duty—Aggregations of Estates not Allowed.]—The Stamp Duties (Amendment) Act, 1904, of New South Wales does not provide for any aggregation of estates of persons deceased for the purpose of determining the rate of duty. Therefore where a testator dies leaving free estate, and also estate subject to a special testamentary power of appointment, such estates ought not to be aggregated for the purpose of the assessment of duty as on the death. Where a schedule provides for duties the rate of which varies with "the total value of the estate," these words must be taken to mean the total value of each estate chargeable, not the total value of all the estates chargeable. Brunton v. Commissioner of Stamp Duties for New South Wales, 82 L. Gift by Father to Sons—Presumptive Advancement — Trust — "Intent to evade payment of duty."] — A father made gifts of property to his sons. There was no arrangement or implied agreement between the father and either of the sons. The father received the rents and paid the rates and repairs:—Held, on the evidence, that the transactions were not colourable or made with intent to evade duty; but that they were out-and-out gifts to the sons to the exclusion of any interest to the father, and that the duty was not payable. Grey v. Grey (2 Swanst. 594) followed. Commissioner of Stamp Duties v. Byrnes, 80 L. Government House — Crown Property — Waste Lands—Dedication to Public Purpose — Right of Colonial Government to Vary Purpose—Information by Attorney-General.] —A house and grounds in New South Wales, the property of the Crown, had for many years been used as a personal residence for the Governor of the Colony. The Colonial Government provided another residence for the Governor, and proposed to throw open the grounds of the former residence to the public, and to use some of its buildings for public purposes:—Held, that whether or not the house and grounds were "waste lands of the Crown" within the Constitution Act, 1855, s. 2, the Government had power to deal with them without any legislative act, and that an information by the Attorney-General asking for a declaration and an injunction to restrain them was incompetent. Att.-Gen. for New South Wales v. Williams, 84 L. J. P.C. 92; [1915] A.C. 573; 112 L. T. 785; 31 T. L. R. 171—P.C.

Income Tax — Assessment — "Taxable income."]—In the assessment of income tax in cases where there was no taxable income for the year preceding the year of assessment, the rule laid down in section 27 (VI.) of the Land and Income Tax Assessment Act, 1895 (No. 15), is to be observed, and the taxable amount is to be the total amount of "taxable income" arising or accruing from all sources during the year of assessment, except to the extent of the exemptions provided by section 17 of the Act of 1895. Commissioners of Taxation of New South Wales v. Adams, 81 L. J. P.C. 185; [1912] A.C. 384; 106 L. T. 307; 28 T. L. R. 263—P.C.

In order to ascertain the amount of taxable income, section 27 of the Act of 1895 (No. 15) is to be read as if section 3, sub-section 2 of the Amendment Act of 1904 (No. 17) were substituted for sub-section 1 of section 27 of the Act of 1895. Ib.

Land Compulsorily Taken by Crown—Compensation — Value of Land — Elements to be Considered.] — When land is taken compulsorily for public purposes the compensation payable to the owner is to be calculated on the value of the land to him, taking into account the suitability of the land for any special business for which he proposes to use it, though he has not actually begun to do so, not only on the market value of the land; but the capitalised amount of the additional business profits and savings which he expects to make from the use of the land should not be taken into account in arriving at such value. Pastoral Finance Association v. The Minister, 84 L. —— Arbitration—Costs.]—Section 118 of the Public Works Act, 1912, of New South Wales, dealing with the costs of an arbitration to settle the compensation payable for lands compulsorily acquired for public purposes, provides by sub-section 1 that all the costs shall be borne by the constructing authority, unless the sum awarded by the arbitrators is the same or a less sum than was offered by the constructing authority, in which case each party shall bear his own costs; and by sub-section 2, if the sum awarded is one-third less than the amount claimed, the whole costs shall be borne by the claimant. In a case in which the arbitrators awarded a sum which was larger than that offered by the constructing authority, but more than one-third less than the amount claimed by the claimant,—Held, that the whole costs of the arbitration should be borne by the constructing authority. New South Wales Railways (Chief Commissioner) v. Hutchinson, 83 L. J. P.C. 181; [1914] A.C. 581; 110 L. T. 915—P.C.

Public Service—Gratuity on Retirement—Discretion of Government—Illusory Exercise of Discretion.] — The appellant was in the public service of New South Wales from December 9, 1875, to September 16, 1905. On his retirement the Public Service Board awarded him a gratuity based on his service up to December 23, 1895. By section 4 of the Public Service Superannuation Act, 1903, the appellant became "entitled to a gratuity not exceeding one month's pay for each year of service from the date of his permanent employment." He claimed this statutory gratuity from December 23, 1895, to the commencement of the Public Service Act, 1902. The Public Service Board, in exercise of their discretion, awarded him one penny a year for the seven years:—Held, that this was an illusory award and was tantamount to a refusal by the Board to exercise its discretion, and that the appellant was entitled to the full amount prescribed by the statute for the further seven years. Williams v. Giddy, 80 L. J. P.C. 102; [1911] A.C. 381; 104 L. T. 513; 27 T. L. R. 443—P.C.

Stamp Duty—Sale of Old Company to New Company — Consideration in Shares of Old Company Partly or Wholly Paid up—Date of Assessment.] — When a company purchases the undertaking of another company in consideration of partly and wholly paid-up shares of the former, the stamp duty on transfer must be assessed on the value of the shares not at the date of the provisional agreement, before the new company had come into existence, but at the date of the adoption of that agreement, and evidence is admissible to shew that the real value was not identical with the face value or the value attributed to the share consideration by the purchasing company. Commissioner of Stamp Duties v. Broken Hill South Extended, Lim., 80 L. J. P.C. 130; [1911] A.C. 439; 104 L. T. 755—P.C.

Street — Effect of Assessment on Owners within the Improvement Area—Liability of Owner for Time Being.] — The New South Wales Moore Street Improvement Act, 1890, authorised the appellants to make street improvements, the cost thereof (see sections 4 and 6) to be divided between the whole body of ratepayers under a special street improvement rate and the owners of property within the improvement area. In a suit by the appellants to enforce liability for the unpaid amounts assessed in respect of three properties within the improvement area the Judge ordered its dismissal on the ground that with regard to two of the houses they ought to have been separately assessed, and in regard to the third that the defendants were not the successors in title of the person originally assessed:—Held, that the appellants were not required to assess each house separately, but only the properties of owners, and that, the improvement having been duly commenced, and the assessment on owners duly completed according to the requirements of sections 4 and 6, the owner for the time being was liable for the amount assessed upon his property and for arrears not exceeding three years before suit. Sydney Municipal Council v. Fleay, 81 L. J. P.C. 1; [1911] A.C. 371—P.C.

Boundary of—Determination—Re-opening.]—By an Act of Parliament passed in 1834 (4 & 5 Will. 4. c. 95) and letters patent issued under the powers given by the Act, the Colony of South Australia was erected into a British province and its eastern boundary was fixed at "the 141st degree of east longitude." A survey was carried out at the joint expense of the Colony of South Australia and the colony lying to the east of it by which the 141st meridian of east longitude was fixed as accurately as was possible with the scientific knowledge and appliances then available, and the result of such survey was adopted and proclaimed as the boundary by both colonies. It was afterwards discovered that the boundary so laid down was about two miles and a quarter to the west of the true meridian of 141 degrees of east longitude, whereby a strip of land of about 340,000 acres, which should have been included in South Australia, was excluded from it:—Held, that the letters patent implicitly gave to the executives of the two colonies power to do such acts as were necessary for fixing the boundary between them, and such acts having been done with all due care, the boundary must be taken to have been finally and permanently fixed and could not be re-opened. South Australia (State) v. Victoria (State), 83 L. Company — New Shares — Dividend — "Profit, advantage, or gain."] — The Dividend Duties Act, 1902, of Western Australia imposes duties on the dividends or profits of incorporated companies, and by section 2 "dividend" includes every dividend, profit, advantage, or gain intended to be paid or credited to or distributed among any members of any company. A company increased its capital by creating new fully paid shares which were allotted to the existing shareholders in proportion to their holdings of old shares. No money passed, but a sum was taken from the reserve fund and transferred to the share capital account:—Held, that this was a "dividend" within the meaning of the Act and liable to duty. Swan Brewery Co. v. Regem, 83 L. —— Duties on Dividends — "Deducted and paid" Construed as "deducted or paid."]—By sections 5 and 6 of the Dividend Duties Act, a duty is imposed on dividends declared by a company carrying on business in Western Australia and not elsewhere. The company under section 13 "may deduct and retain" for their own use the sums payable in discharging these duties from the dividends. By section 15, "when a dividend is distributed before the duty payable in respect thereof is deducted and paid, the duty shall be a debt due by the person receiving the dividend to his Majesty":—Held, that the words "deducted and paid" in section 15 must be read as meaning "deducted or paid," and that where the duty has been paid by the company on dividends declared, but no deduction made from the amounts paid to the shareholder, no further duty is payable to the Crown. Golden Horseshoe Estates Co. v. Regem, 80 L. Appeal—Action for Specific Performance—Enquiry as to Damages—Judgment whether Interlocutory or Final.]—The Supreme Court Act of Canada by section 38 (c) gives an appeal to that Court from any judgment, whether final or not, "in any action, suit, cause, matter or judicial proceeding, in the nature of a suit or proceeding in equity." Where, therefore, in an action for specific performance of a contract with an alternative claim for damages, an appeal has not been brought against the judgment within the time limited by the Supreme Court Act, and the Court has refused to extend the time for appealing, the judgment cannot be questioned in subsequent proceedings. Before the passing of the statute 3 & 4 Geo. 5. c. 51 a judgment in a common law action in Canada finding liability and directing an enquiry into damages was held to be interlocutory, and therefore no appeal as of right lay against it. Windsor, Essex, and Lake Shore Rapid Railway v. Nelles, 84 L. —— Interest—Legal Rate.]—The Canadian Bank Act, 1906, s. 91, provides that a bank shall not be able to recover interest at a higher rate than 7 per cent., and the Interest Act, 1906, provides by section 3 that where no rate of interest is fixed the rate of interest shall be 5 per cent.:—Held, that where a bank in a mortgage deed had stipulated for interest at the rate of 8 per cent., accounts should be taken on the basis of interest at 5 per cent. only. McHugh v. Union Bank of Canada, 82 L. Company — Registration — Ultra Vires.] — The exclusive power conferred by section 91, sub-section 2 of the British North America Act, 1867, on the Dominion Parliament, of making laws for "The Regulation of Trade and Commerce," enables that Parliament to prescribe to what extent the powers of companies, the objects of which extend to the entire Dominion, shall be exercisable, and what limitations shall be placed on those powers; and therefore a provincial Legislature has no power under section 92, sub-section 11 of the Act, which gives power to make laws for "The Incorporation of Companies with Provincial Objects," to pass an Act requiring a Dominion company to be licensed or registered under the Act before it can carry on business in the province. Citizens Insurance Co. v. Parsons (51 L. Constitutional Powers — Questions of Law Submitted to the Supreme Court—Ultra Vires.] —An Act of the Dominion Parliament authorising questions either of law or of fact to be put to the Supreme Court, and requiring the Judges of that Court to answer them on the request of the Governor in Council, is a valid enactment within the powers of that Parliament. Att.-Gen. for Province of Ontario v. Att.-Gen. for Dominion of Canada, 81 L. J. P.C. 210; [1912] A.C. 571; 106 L. T. 916; 28 T. L. R. 446—P.C.

Extradition — Preliminary Requisition not Obligatory.] — A preliminary requisition on behalf of the power requiring extraditions is not obligatory on the authorities before issuing a warrant under section 10 of the Extradition (Canada) Act, 1906, for the arrest of a fugitive criminal. Att.-Gen. for Dominion of Canada v. Fedorenko, 81 L. J. P.C. 74; [1911] A.C. 735; 105 L. T. 343; 27 T. L. R. 541—P.C.

Fishery — Right of Fishing in Tidal and Non-tidal Waters—Rights of Dominion and Province.] — By the British North America Act, 1867, s. 91, sea coast and inland fisheries are among the matters to which the exclusive authority of the Dominion Parliament extends; and therefore a provincial Legislature has no power to grant exclusive rights of fishing in the open sea within three miles of the coast of the province or in any arm of the sea, or estuary of a river, or other tidal waters, the right of fishing in such waters being a public right which can be dealt with only by the Dominion Parliament. Att.-Gen. for British Columbia v. Att.-Gen. for Canada, 83 L. J. P.C. 169; [1914] A.C. 153; 110 L. T. 484; 30 T. L. R. 144—P.C.

Where land has been granted absolutely by a province to the Dominion such grant includes the right of fishing in non-tidal waters within such land, and the provincial Legislature has no power to deal with fishing rights in such waters. Ib.

Land Compulsorily Acquired — Compensation—Value of Land—Advantages.]—The law of Canada as regards the principles upon which compensation for land taken compulsorily is to be awarded is the same as the law of England; that is to say, the value to be paid for is the value to the owner as it exists at the date of taking, not the value to the taker; and this value consists in the present value of all such advantages as the land possesses, present or future. Cedar Rapids Manufacturing Co. v. Lacoste, 83 L. J. P.C. 162; [1914] A.C. 569; 110 L. T. 873; 30 T. L. R. 293—P.C.

Where, therefore, there is a value above the bare agricultural value of the land, consisting in a possibility of use for a certain undertaking, the price is not to be calculated as a proportional part of the whole value of such undertaking, but is such price above the bare agricultural value as possible intending undertakers would give. Ib.

Light, Heat, and Power Companies — Powers of Restriction on Importation of Electric Energy — Implied Powers — Relations between City and Supply Company.] — A statutory power to do certain things is not to be read as not extending to other things ancillary thereto, such as in an electric system the erection of poles whereon to hang the wires. Where a number of companies are amalgamated by statute, a restriction of the powers of one of the companies—for example, in the importation of energy from outside the city—is not to be held as applying to the amalgamated concern. It is not open to a municipality to object to the details of a system, established at great expense, in which it has for many years co-operated and from which it has derived advantage. Winnipeg Electric Railway v. Winnipeg City, 81 L. J. P.C. 193; [1912] A.C. 355; 106 L. T. 388—P.C.

Master and Servant — Common Employment—Breach of Statutory Duty by Employer —Accident Caused by Breach.]—The breach of a statutory duty by an employer is not one of the risks which a servant must be assumed to have undertaken to run when he entered the employers' service, and therefore, where an employer has employed an unqualified person in breach of his statutory duty he cannot rely on the defence of "common employment" in the case of an accident to a servant caused, or contributed to, by the conduct of such unqualified person. Jones v. Canadian Pacific Railway, 83 L. J. P.C. 13; 110 L. T. 83; 29 T. L. R. 773—P.C.

A railway company employed a person who had not passed the tests required by an order of the Railway Commissioners, which had the force of a statute, to work a train. He allowed the train to run past danger signals, and an accident resulted:—Held, that there was evidence that the breach of the statutory duty caused, or contributed to, the accident. Ib.

Minerals under Railway Line—Compensation to Owner for not Working.] — By the common law both of England and Ontario, except so far as altered by legislation, when land is sold with a reservation of the minerals to the vendor, he cannot, in the absence of a special bargain, so work them as to let down the surface. But under the Canadian Railway Act a railway company which has acquired the surface is not, as by the English Railways Clauses Consolidation Act, 1845, deprived of the natural right of support from subjacent and adjacent minerals, but is put on terms to compensate the mineral owner at once for the loss of value caused by the liability to support which rests on him after the titles to the minerals and the surface have been severed, and, in the absence of agreement, the entire amount of compensation is to be ascertained by arbitrators once for all, as at the date of the deposit of the plans; and upon payment of the compensation the mineral owner is restrained from working his minerals excepting under such conditions as may be imposed by the Railway Board. Davies v. James Bay Railway, 83 L. J. P.C. 339; [1914] A.C. 1043; 111 L. T. 946; 30 T. L. R. 633—P.C.

Parliament — Provincial Legislatures — Legislative Powers — Marriage Law.] — By section 91 of the British North America Act, 1867, the exclusive legislative authority of the Parliament of Canada includes marriage and divorce; and by section 92 the Legislature in each province may exclusively make laws with relation to the solemnisation of marriage in the provinces. Upon the true construction of these sections, the jurisdiction of the Dominion Parliament does not cover the whole field of validity of marriage, for section 92 operates by way of exception to the powers conferred as regards marriage by section 91, and enables provincial Legislatures to enact conditions as to solemnisation of marriage which may affect the validity of the contract. Reference by Governor-General of Canada to Supreme Court, In re, or Marriage Legislation in Canada, In re, 81 L. J. P.C. 237; [1912] A.C. 880; 107 L. T. 330; 28 T. L. R. 580—P.C.

A bill by which it was proposed that every ceremony or form of marriage heretofore or hereafter performed by any person authorised thereto by the laws of the place where it is performed shall be valid everywhere in Canada notwithstanding any differences in the religious faith of the persons married, and without regard to the religion of the celebrant, is ultra vires of the Dominion Parliament, and the Parliament of Canada has not authority to enact that marriages not contracted before a Roman Catholic priest of persons both or only one of whom is a Roman Catholic shall be legal and binding. Ib.

—— Powers of Dominion and Provincial Legislatures — Provincial Act Affecting Dominion Railways—Ultra Vires.]—A provision in an Act of a provincial Legislature empowering a provincial railway company to "take possession of, use or occupy any lands belonging to" a Dominion railway company, "in so far as the taking of such lands does not unreasonably interfere with the construction and operation of" such railway, is ultra vires of the provincial Legislature; and the omission of the word "unreasonably" will not make such legislation intra vires. Att.-Gen. for Alberta v. Att.-Gen. for Canada, 84 L. J. P.C. 58; [1915] A.C. 363; 112 L. T. 177; 31 T. L. R. 32—P.C.

—— "Property and civil rights in the province" — Ultra Vires.] — Under the British North America Act, 1867, s. 92, a provincial Legislature has the exclusive power of legislating as to "property and civil rights in the province." A sum of money was subscribed by bondholders resident outside the province for the construction of a railway in a province of Canada, under a scheme which afterwards proved abortive. The money was lying at a bank in the province. The provincial Legislature passed an Act providing that the money should form part of the general revenue fund of the province free from all claims of the railway company or their assigns, and should be paid over to the treasurer of the province: —Held, that as the bondholders had a right to recover back their money as having been paid for a consideration which had failed, the legislation was not restricted to dealing with property and civil rights in the province, and was ultra vires. Royal Bank of Canada v. Regem, 82 L. J. P.C. 33; [1913] A.C. 283; 108 L. T. 129; 29 T. L. R. 239—P.C.

Railway — Statute — Construction — Special Act—General Act—Inconsistency.]—By section 3 of the General Railway Act, 1906 (R. S. C. 1906, c. 37), the general Act is to be construed as incorporated with any special Act, and where the provisions of the general Act and "of any special Act passed by the Parliament of Canada, relate to the same subject-matter, the provisions of the special Act shall . . . be taken to override the provisions of" the general Act:—Held, that the power given by the General Railway Act, 1906, with the consent of the local authority, to enter upon any public place or highway and break up the ground did not curtail the larger powers without such consent to enter upon property required for their undertaking which were given by the appellant's Act of incorporation, 1902 (2 Edw. 7. c. 107). Toronto and Niagara Power Co. v. North Toronto Corporation, 82 L. J. P.C. 14; [1912] A.C. 834; 107 L. T. 182; 28 T. L. R. 563—P.C.

Section 247 of the General Railway Act, 1906, applies only to companies within the definition clause—that is, to railway companies. Ib.

—— Deprivation of Facilities — Finding of Fact by Railway Board—Limitation of Time for Bringing Actions.]—The appellant railway in 1888, at the request of the respondents, constructed a spur track or siding into the respondents' yard. In 1904 the appellants gave notice to the respondents to discontinue this facility, which was afforded under section 253 of the Railway Act of Canada, 1903; and in November, 1904, cut it off. The Railway Board, whose order was affirmed by the Supreme Court of Canada, in 1906 ordered the restoration of the facility. In an action of damages for the deprivation of the facility brought in 1908,—Held, that the facility of the siding was a facility to which the respondents were entitled, as it had so been found by the Railway Board and the Supreme Court, whose decision on a question of fact is under section 42 of the Railway Act, 1903, conclusive. Held, also, that the special provisions for limiting the time of bringing actions of certain classes to a period of a year do not apply to a refusal or discontinuance of facilities such as were involved. Canadian Northern Railway v. Robinson, 81 L. J. P.C. 87; [1911] A.C. 739; 105 L. T. 389—P.C.

—— Agreement with Corporation—Powers of Railway Commissioners—Damages for Location of Railway.]—It is beyond the powers of the Board of Railway Commissioners for Canada, in expressing approval of the location of a railway along a street, to impose the condition that "the Company shall do as little damage as possible and make full compensation to all persons interested for all damage by them sustained by reason of the location of the said railway," inasmuch as such a condition is not authorised either by section 47 or by section 237, sub-section 3 of the Dominion Railway Act, 1906. Grand Trunk Pacific Railway v. Fort William Land Investment Co., 81 L. J. P.C. 137; [1912] A.C. 224; 105 L. T. 649; 28 T. L. R. 37—P.C.

—— Federal and Provincial Railways — Through Traffic — Jurisdiction of Railway Commissioners.]—The effect of sub-section 10 of section 92 ("Exclusive Powers of Provincial Legislature") of the British North America Act, 1867, is to transfer the excepted works mentioned in subheads (a), (b), and (c) into section 91, and thus to place them under the exclusive jurisdiction of the Dominion Parliament. The Board of Railway Commissioners for Canada have no jurisdiction over a provincial railway in respect of its through traffic. Montreal City v. Montreal Street Railway, 81 L. J. P.C. 145; [1912] A.C. 333; 105 L. T. 970; 28 T. L. R. 220—P.C.

—— Bond Issue — Guarantee.]—By a contract of July, 1903, confirmed by Act of Parliament, the Government guaranteed an issue of bonds to be made by the appellant company for an amount equal to 75 per cent. of the cost of construction of a portion of the appellant railway. The Grand Trunk Railway of Canada guaranteed a second series of bonds as a second charge on the appellants' undertaking, to rank next after the Government bonds. In a supplemental contract dated February, 1904, and confirmed by statute, the Government agreed to implement its guarantee of the bonds of the appellants, which had fallen in value, "in such manner as may be agreed upon, so as to make the proceeds of the said bonds so to be guaranteed a sum equal to 75 per cent. of the cost of construction" of the above-mentioned portions of the railway:—Held, that it was not competent for the Government to guarantee other bonds than those authorised by the contract of July, 1903, as to do so would be a breach of faith with the Grand Trunk Railway of Canada by letting in a further charge in priority to the bonds guaranteed by that company, and that the Government might implement their guarantee either in cash or in any manner not imposing further liability on the appellants. Grand Trunk Pacific Railway v. Regem, 81 L. J. P.C. 134; [1912] A.C. 204; 105 L. T. 645—P.C.

—— Contract Restricting Liability to Passenger.]—In Canada no contract restricting a railway company's liability is valid unless it has been approved by the Board of Railway Commissioners under section 340 of the Railway Act (Rev. Stat. 1906, c. 37). Grand Trunk Railway v. Robinson, 84 L. J. P.C. 194; [1915] A.C. 740; 113 L. T. 350; 31 T. L. R. 395—P.C.

—— Freight Classification — Supplement — Powers of Railway Company.]—A railway company in Canada has no power by introducing a supplementary tariff to use a freight classification for through traffic with the United States which is not a classification in use in the United States, nor a classification authorised by the Railway Board. Canadian Pacific Railway v. Canadian Oil Companies; Canadian Pacific Railway v. British American Oil Co., 83 L. J. P.C. 347; [1914] A.C. 1022; 111 L. T. 950—P.C.

—— Land Subsidy — Railway — Exemption from Taxation—Period of Exemption.]—By clause 16 of the construction contract of the Canadian Pacific Railway, lands of the company were to be exempt from taxation "until they are either sold or occupied," or "for twenty years after the grant thereof from the Crown":—Held, that there must have been a completed sale under which the property passed out of the company and vested in the purchaser before property became liable to taxation. Minister of Public Works of Alberta v. Canadian Pacific Railway; Rex v. Canadian and Pacific Railway, 80 L. J. P.C. 125; [1911] A.C. 328; 104 L. T. 3; 27 T. L. R. 234—P.C.

The period of exemption from taxation should be reckoned from the date of the conveyance of the lands to the company by letters patent under the Great Seal, not from the date of the survey by which the lands were identified as those to which the company was entitled under their contract. North Cypress v. Canadian Pacific Railway (35 Can. S. C. R. 550) approved and followed. Ib.

—— Breach of Statutory Duty—Level Crossing — Accident — Proximate Cause — Negligence.] — By section 274 of the Canadian Railway Act, when any train is approaching a level crossing "the engine whistle shall be sounded at least eighty rods before reaching such crossing" :—Held, that this section did not apply to an engine engaged in shunting, which did not in the course of its work ever get eighty rods away from a level crossing. Grand Trunk Railway of Canada v. McAlpine, 83 L. J. P.C. 44; [1913] A.C. 838; 109 L. T. 693; 29 T. L. R. 679—P.C.

By section 276, whenever in any city, town, or village a train moving reversely is passing over a level crossing "the company shall station on that part of the train, or of the tender" of the engine "which is then foremost a person who shall warn persons standing on, or crossing, or about to cross the track of such railway" :—Held, that if a warning was given in proper time, such as would be apprehended by a person possessed of ordinary faculties, the company would not be liable for an accident occurring to a person who did not hear, or did not act upon, such warning. Ib.

In the case of an accident a company is not liable for a negligent breach of a statutory duty unless it is proved that the accident was caused by such negligence, and not by the folly and recklessness of the person injured. Ib.

—— Special Act — Same Subject-matter — Ratifying Agreement.]—Section 3 of the Canadian Railway Act, 1906, provides that where its provisions and those of any special Act passed by the Parliament of Canada relate to the same subject-matter, the provisions of the special Act are to override the provisions of the Act of 1906 :—Held, that an Act ratifying an agreement between the two railway companies was a special Act within the meaning of the words of section 3 of the Railway Act, 1906. The subject-matter of this special Act and that of section 238 of the Railway Act, 1906, are not the same, and there is no conflict between them. Canadian Pacific Railway v. Toronto City, 81 L. J. P.C. 5; [1911] A.C. 461; 104 L. T. 724; 27 T. L. R. 448—P.C.

Railway Board—Jurisdiction of—Declaratory Order.]—The Board of Railway Commissioners for Canada has jurisdiction, under section 26 of the Railway Act, to make a declaratory order. Canadian Pacific Railway v. Canadian Oil Companies; Canadian Pacific Railway v. British American Oil Co., 83 L. J. P.C. 347; [1914] A.C. 1022; 111 L. T. 950—P.C.

The Railway Board constituted by the Railway Act, 1903, ordered the appellant and the respondent railway companies to construct a bridge and an elevated viaduct for the purpose of carrying their railways through the city of Toronto :—Held, that under the Canadian Railway Act, 1906, s. 238, and the Amending Act, 1909, ss. 237, 238, the Railway Board had jurisdiction to make these orders. Canadian Pacific Railway v. Toronto City, 81 L. J. P.C. 5; [1911] A.C. 461; 104 L. T. 724; 27 T. L. R. 448—P.C.

Railway Board—Powers of—Viaduct over Railway—Cost of Construction.]—The Railway Board have no power under the Canadian Railway Act to order that a local tramway company, whose lines run along streets which cross a railway track by level crossings, shall contribute to the cost of the construction of viaducts to carry the streets over the railway, in place of the level crossings. British Columbia Electric Railway v. Vancouver, Victoria, and Eastern Railway, 83 L. J. P.C. 374; [1914] A.C. 1067; 111 L. T. 686—P.C.

Rivers Navigable and Floatable — Loose Logs—Crown Domain—Private Property.]—A river down which only loose logs can be floated is not a "navigable and floatable" river within the meaning of article 400 of the Civil Code of Lower Canada. Tanguay v. Canadian Electric Light Co. (40 Can. Sup. Ct. Rep. 1) approved. Maclaren v. Att.-Gen. for Quebec, 83 L. J. P.C. 201; [1914] A.C. 258; 110 L. T. 712; 30 T. L. R. 278—P.C.

Riparian Proprietor — Presumption of Ownership ad Medium Filum Aquæ.]—The English rule of law that a conveyance of land expressed to be bounded by a river must be presumed to confer the ownership ad medium filum aquæ, in the absence of words of exclusion, holds good in Canada. Ib.

Succession Duty—"Direct taxation within the Province"—Ultra Vires.]—A direct tax within the meaning of section 92 of the British North America Act, 1867, is a tax which is demanded from the very persons who it is intended or desired should pay it, and therefore it is ultra vires a provincial Legislature to impose a succession duty, such duty not being "direct taxation within the Province," but being payable in the first instance by a person entitled to recover the amount paid from the assets of the estate. Cotton v. Regem, 83 L. J. P.C. 105; [1914] A.C. 176; 110 L. T. 276; 30 T. L. R. 71—P.C.

Trade Mark — Registration — Distinctive Word—Passing off.]—Distinctiveness is of the essence of a trade mark, and the word "Standard," though registered, is not a valid trade mark within the Canadian Trade Mark and Design Act, 1879 :—Standard Ideal Co. v. Standard Sanitary Manufacturing Co., 80 L. J. P.C. 87; [1911] A.C. 78; 103 L. T. 140; 27 R. P. C. 789; 27 T. L. R. 63—P.C.

—— Extra-provincial Corporation.] — Where an extra-provincial corporation which has obtained a licence carries on its business only by means of travellers who send the goods direct to the purchasers, and the name of the goods has not acquired a secondary meaning, in the absence of evidence of deception no action for passing off will lie, and an injunction will not be granted to restrain such sale. Ib.

Water Rights—Land Conveyed by Province to Dominion—Power of Province to Legislate.]—Under the British North America Act, 1867, and the Articles of Union incorporating British Columbia in the Dominion, lands known as the "Railway Belt" became the property of the Dominion. By the Water Clauses Consolidation Act, 1897, of British Columbia, all unrecorded water in any river, lake, or stream in the province was declared to be vested in the Crown in right of the province :—Held, that the lands in the Railway Belt, and consequently the waters therein, which before the Articles of Union were the property of the Crown in right of the province, had become the property of the Crown in right of the Dominion, that no Act of the provincial Legislature could affect such waters, and that in fact the Water Clauses Act, 1897, did not purport to affect them. Burrard Power Co. v. Regem, 80 L. J. P.C. 69; [1911] A.C. 87; 103 L. T. 404; 27 T. L. R. 57—P.C.

b. Alberta.

Road Allowances — Statutory Authority to Company to Cross Road Allowances—Canals Intersecting Road Allowances — Duty of Company to Build Bridges at Points of Intersection.]—The respondents obtained authority under the North-West Irrigation Act, 1898, to cross the road allowances, which were strips of Crown lands reserved from public sale and settlement for the purpose of making roads where required :—Held, that the respondents and not the provincial Government were bound to construct the necessary bridges with proper and sufficient approaches thereto at the points where the respondents' canals intersected the road allowances reserved throughout the province of Alberta under the Dominion Lands Act, R. S. C. 1886. Rex v. Alberta Railway and Irrigation Co., 82 L. J. P.C. 40; [1912] A.C. 827; 107 L. T. 185; 28 T. L. R. 574—P.C.

c. British Columbia.

See also Vol. III. 513, 2299.

Company—Requirement of Licence to carry on Business.]—The provision in Part VI. of the British Columbia Companies Act, that a company incorporated under the laws of the Dominion of Canada and duly authorised to carry out any of the purposes to which the authority of the British Columbia Legislature extends must obtain a licence from the British Columbia Registrar of Companies authorising it to carry on business within the province, is ultra vires the provincial Legislature. John Deere Plow Co. v. Wharton, 31 T. L. R. 35—P.C.

Ejectment—Dominion Possessory Lease—Title—Inconsistent Grants—Deceit Notice—Practised upon the Crown.]—The respondents brought an action against the appellants to recover possession of an island in Burrard Inlet near the city of Vancouver. The appellants claimed to have been in possession since June, 1887, under a grant from the Dominion Government, subsequently cancelled, of land contiguous thereto as a park, and under a lease from the Dominion, for ninety-nine years, dated November, 1908, which did not express the island in suit, and was made "subject until their determination to any existing lease of portions of the said land." The respondents based their title on a Dominion lease dated February, 1899 :—Held, that the appellants as defendants in possession could not object that the respondents' lease was not granted under the Great Seal as that objection was not raised in the Courts below, or that deceit had been practised on the Crown by the respondents as the latter had had no notice, actual or constructive, of any previous inconsistent grant. Vancouver City v. Vancouver Lumber Co., 81 L. J. P.C. 69; [1911] A.C. 711; 105 L. T. 464—P.C.

Land—Title to—Registration of Title—Unregistered Deed—Admissibility in Evidence—Action for Specific Performance.] — By section 75 of the British Columbia Land Registry Act, 1906, an unregistered instrument affecting land shall not be receivable as evidence or proof of the title of any person to such land, as against the registered title of any person to the same land, except in an action questioning the registered title to such land on the ground of fraud. S. applied for a certificate of title to certain land. At the time of her application she took to the Land Registry Office a deed the effect of which was to shew that she was the owner of a part of the land only, and that the other part belonged to the appellant's predecessor in title. This deed was deposited in the office, but was not registered, and S. obtained a certificate of title to the whole of the land in her own name. Afterwards she contracted to sell the land to the respondents. In an action by the purchasers against S. and the appellant to obtain specific performance of the contract, S. admitted the appellant's title to part of the land :—Held, that the appellant was improperly joined as a defendant in the action, and that the unregistered deed was admissible in evidence, not as disproving the respondents' title, but as a material circumstance which the Court must take into account in deciding the extent to which specific performance ought to be granted. The only operation of section 75 of the Act is to impose a penalty on the non-registration of an instrument by making such instrument inadmissible in evidence in certain cases. Howard v. Miller, 84 L. J. P.C. 49; [1915] A.C. 318; 112 L. T. 403—P.C.

Limitations, Statute of—Possession of Land—Possession for More than Twenty Years by Grantee as Mortgagee — Payment of Taxes only Act of Possession.]—In 1889 the appellant lent money to the respondent, who, by way of security for the loan, conveyed to the appellant certain wild land which was then of no value. For more than twenty years before the respondent brought a suit to redeem the appellant paid the taxation upon the land, and so performed the only act of possession of which it appeared to be capable. The respondent, who was aware that these payments were being made by the appellant, made no payments whatever in the way of interest on, or repayment of, the loan, and left the property severely alone :—Held, that his right to redeem was barred by the British Columbia Statute of Limitations (Rev. S. 1897, c. 123), s. 40.

Master and Servant—Workmen's Compensation—Extra-territoriality of Statute—Death by Accident of Alien Workman—Non-resident Alien Dependant.]—The legal personal representative of an alien workman who was killed by accident arising out of and in the course of his employment,—Held, under the British Columbia Workmen's Compensation Act, 1902, Schedule II. s. 8, to be entitled to compensation, to be held for the benefit of the deceased man's widow, who was herself an alien residing in Austria. Baird & Co. v. Birsztan (8 Fraser, 438) approved. Krzus v. Crow's Nest Pass Coal Co., 81 L. J. P.C. 227; [1912] A.C. 590; 107 L. T. 77; 56 S. J. 632; 28 T. L. R. 488—P.C.

Municipality — Validity of By-law.] — The Municipal Act, 1892, of British Columbia, s. 146, provides that "When debentures have been issued by a municipal council under a statute or under a by-law, and the interest on such debentures . . . has been paid for the period of one year or more by the municipality, the statute and the by-law, and the debentures issued thereunder . . . shall be valid and binding on the corporation, and shall not be quashed or set aside on any ground whatever":—Held, that the effect of the enactment was not confined to making valid the debentures so issued, but that the by-law under which they were issued could not, after the lapse of a year, be quashed or set aside on the ground of any irregularity in the procedure by which it was obtained. Wilson v. Delta Corporation, 82 L. J. P.C. 52; [1913] A.C. 181; 107 L. T. 778—P.C.

—— Limitation of Actions against Municipality.]—By section 243 of the Municipal Clauses Act, 1897, "all actions against any municipality . . . for the unlawful doing of anything purporting to have been done . . . under powers conferred by any Act of the Legislature . . . shall be commenced within six months after the cause of such action shall have first arisen"; and by section 244 all other actions against a municipality shall be commenced within one year after the cause of action has arisen:—Held, that the sections applied to an action brought in respect of continuing damage alleged to have been caused to land of the plaintiff by works constructed and maintained by a municipality, and for an injunction. Ib.

—— Stopping up Lane — Lease of Disused Highway—"Giving a bonus."]—A municipal corporation professing to act under the powers as to public health conferred on them by statute, passed a by-law to divert a lane in the city, and leased the disused part of it at a nominal rent. Their Act of incorporation gave them power, under the head of "Public Health," to pass by-laws for (inter alia) "stopping up lanes":—Held, that they had power to divert the lane, though it was not shewn to be necessary on grounds of health, and that it was not outside their powers because steps taken in the public interest were accompanied by a benefit specifically accruing to private persons; and that enacting a by-law which benefited some persons more than others was not "giving a bonus" within section 194 of the Municipal Act, 1906. United Buildings Corporation v. Vancouver City, 83 L. J. P.C. 363; [1915] A.C. 345; 111 L. T. 663—P.C.

Negligence — Damages for Injury Causing Death—Action by Administrator—Nature of Action.]—An action by the administrator of a deceased person under the Families Compensation Act of British Columbia, which is practically identical with Lord Campbell's Act, to recover, on behalf of the father and mother, damages for negligence causing the death of the deceased, is not a suit "for indemnity for damage or injury suffered by the plaintiff," inasmuch as the Families Compensation Act, like Lord Campbell's Act, gives a new cause of action and does not merely remove the operation of the maxim Actio personalis moritur cum persona; and therefore such an action is not barred by section 60 of the Consolidated Railway Act of British Columbia at the end of six months from the death of the deceased. British Columbia Electric Railway v. Gentile, 83 L. J. P.C. 353; [1914] A.C. 1034; 111 L. T. 682; 30 T. L. R. 594—P.C.

Street Railway—Statutory Powers—Agreement with Corporation — "Right, franchise, or privilege"—Ultra Vires.]—Where a street railway company had by statute power to construct lines of railway along such of the streets, roads, and highways within the limits of a municipality as the corporation should direct, and the corporation made an agreement with the company consenting to the exercise by the company of their powers over certain streets, and covenanting that in certain events they would consent to the company exercising their powers over other streets, such agreement does not confer "a right, franchise, or privilege" on the company within the meaning of section 64 of the Municipal Clauses Act, 1896, of British Columbia, and does not require the assent of the electors in accordance with that section to render it valid. British Columbia Electric Railway v. Stewart; Point Grey Corporation v. Stewart, 83 L. J. P.C. 53; [1913] A.C. 816; 109 L. T. 771—P.C.

Water Rights — Riparian Proprietor — Recorded Water.]—A riparian proprietor holding land under a Crown grant made after the passing of the Water Privileges Act, 1892, of British Columbia (c. 47 of 1892), can only acquire water rights by obtaining a record under the Acts which provide for such grants by the Crown, or by a special statutory title, all water unrecorded and unappropriated at the date when the Act came into force being vested in the Crown in right of the province. Cook v. Vancourer City, 83 L. J. P.C. 383; [1914] A.C. 1077; 111 L. T. 684—P.C.

d. New Brunswick.

Succession Duty — Domicil of Testator — Local Administration.] — Succession duty is payable in respect of property locally situate in a St. John's, New Brunswick, bank, and belonging to a testator who was domiciled in Nova Scotia, under the New Brunswick Succession Duty Act, 1896 (Consolidated Statutes, 1908), s. 5, sub-s. 1, which enacts that "All property, whether situate in this province or elsewhere, . . . shall be subject to a succession duty, to be paid to the use of the province over and above the fees provided by the chapter of these Consolidated Statutes relating to Probate Courts." Rex v. Lovitt, 81 L. J. P.C. 140; [1912] A.C. 212; 105 L. T. 650; 28 T. L. R. 41—P.C.

e. Nova Scotia.

Taxation—Exemption—Cost of Construction of Sewers.]—By an agreement made between the appellant and the respondent, in consideration that the respondent company would establish a manufactory in the city of Halifax, it was agreed that "the City will grant to the company a total exemption from taxation for ten years on its buildings, plant and stock, and on the land on which its buildings used for manufacturing purposes are situated . . . the foregoing exemption not to apply to the ordinary water rate" :—Held, that under the agreement the company were exempt from contributing to the cost of the construction of public sewers, constructed before the expiration of the period of ten years from the date of the agreement, in the streets in which its buildings were situated. Halifax City v. Nova Scotia Car Works, 84 L. J. P.C. 17; [1914] A.C. 992; 111 L. T. 1049—P.C.

f. North-West Territories.

Chattel Mortgage — Costs and Charges in Respect of Seizure—Statutory Scale—Penalty for Excess—Discretion of Court.]—Section 2 of the North-West Territories Consolidated Ordinances, 1898, c. 34, provides that in respect of seizures under chattel mortgages and bills of sale, the costs and charges shall be such as are fixed in the schedule to the Ordinance; and section 3 provides that if greater or other costs be taken by the person making the distress, the Court may order him to pay treble the amount taken in excess to the party aggrieved. The Interpretation Ordinance (c. 1 of 1898) by section 8, subsection 2, provides that the expression "may" shall be construed as permissive :—Held, that the schedule was not inclusive and dealt only with the costs of what were the ordinary and universal features of realisation by seizure and sale, but did not refer to the costs of other acts which might be agreed upon as necessary and proper in the particular case, as between mortgagor and mortgagee, for the proper realisation of the property seized, and that in any case the Court had a discretion as to the infliction of the penalty. McHugh v. Union Bank of Canada, 82 L. J. P.C. 65; [1913] A.C. 299; 108 L. T. 273; 29 T. L. R. 305—P.C.

g. Ontario.

Assignment of Chose in Action.] — The Ontario statute dealing with the assignment of choses in action is substantially in the same terms as section 25 of the Judicature Act, 1873, and only enables such assignment to be made subject to existing equities. Parsons v. Sovereign Bank of Canada, 82 L. J. P.C. 60; [1913] A.C. 160; 107 L. T. 572; 20 Manson, 94; 29 T. L. R. 38—P.C.

Bank — Agreement between Two Banks — Construction — Purchase or Assignment for Limited Purposes.]—By a deed made in conformity with a resolution passed by the directors of the Ontario Bank, now in liquidation, that the Bank of Montreal should be asked to re-discount the loans of the Ontario Bank and to undertake to meet the demands of its depositors, in consideration whereof the Ontario Bank should transfer such loans and all documents relating thereto and should transfer to the Bank of Montreal all the right, title, and interest in all its debts and choses in action, the Bank of Montreal agreed to purchase by way of discount and re-discount, at the rate mentioned, all the call and current loans and overdue debts of the Ontario Bank, the Bank of Montreal to be entitled to the benefit of such transfer, and on the final adjustment of accounts to pay the sum mentioned in the deed :—Held, that the deed did not constitute an out-and-out sale of the goodwill and assets of the Ontario Bank, but a transfer of assets for the limited purposes specified in the deed. McFarland v. Bank of Montreal, 80 L. J. P.C. 83; [1911] A.C. 96; 103 L. T. 436; 27 T. L. R. 55—P.C.

Common School Lands Fund—Liability to Account for Money Constructively Received—Jurisdiction of Arbitrators.]—An award was made in an arbitration constituted in pursuance of Dominion and Provincial Acts of Parliament for the distribution of the revenues derived from lands set apart by Parliament for common school purposes among the several provinces :—Held, that the arbitrators had only jurisdiction to deal with the sums actually received in respect of each province, and were not competent to deal with any question of constructive receipt of moneys which were not, but might or ought to have been received but for the negligence or omission of any province. Att.-Gen. for Ontario v. Att.-Gen. for Quebec (72 L. J. P.C. 9; [1903] A.C. 39) followed. Att.-Gen. for Quebec v. Att.-Gen. for Ontario, 80 L. J. P.C. 35; [1910] A.C. 627; 103 L. T. 328; 26 T. L. R. 679—P.C.

Electric Power Company — Power to Erect Poles to Carry Power Lines without Leave of Municipality.] — The powers given to the appellants by their Act of incorporation passed in 1902 to enter upon streets for the purpose of erecting poles to carry power lines for the conveyance of electricity, without first obtaining the leave and licence of the municipality are not restricted by the provisions of the Railway Acts. Toronto and Niagara Power

Co. v. North Toronto Corporation, 82 L. J. P.C. 14; [1912] A.C. 834; 107 L. T. 182; 28 T. L. R. 563—P.C.

Mining Claim Recorded but not Patented—Tenant at Will—Execution.]—By section 68 of the Ontario Mining Act a licensee "until he obtains a patent shall be a tenant at will of the Crown in respect of the mining claim":—Held, that this referred only to the relations of the claimant to the Crown before the Crown had parted with its rights by patent, and did not affect the position of the claimant as against other subjects of the Crown; and therefore the interest in a mining claim duly recorded, but not yet patented, is exigible for a judgment debt due from the claimant. McPherson v. Temiskaming Lumber Co. (82 L. J. P.C. 113; [1913] A.C. 145) followed. Clarkson v. Wishart, 83 L. J. P.C. 59; [1913] A.C. 828; 109 L. T. 775; 29 T. L. R. 778—P.C.

Section 123 of the Ontario Mining Act, 1908, gives the Mining Commissioner power to dispense with a transfer in writing executed by the claimant. Ib.

Natural Gas—Conveyance of Land in Fee — Exception of Reservation — Mines and Minerals—Springs of Oil.]—A reservation or exception in a conveyance of land to the respondent in 1867 of "all mines and quarries of metals and minerals, and all springs of oil in or under the said land, whether already discovered or not."—Held, not to include natural gas. Barnard-Argue-Roth Stearns Oil and Gas Co. v. Farquharson. [1912] A.C. 864; 107 L. T. 332; 57 S. J. 10; 28 T. L. R. 590—P.C.

Railway—Minerals under Line—Compensation to Owner for not Working.]—By the common law both of England and Ontario, except so far as altered by legislation, when land is sold with a reservation of the minerals to the vendor, he cannot, in the absence of a special bargain, so work them as to let down the surface. But under the Canadian Railway Act a railway company which has acquired the surface is not, as by the English Railways Clauses Consolidation Act, 1845, deprived of the natural right of support from subjacent and adjacent minerals, but is put on terms to compensate the mineral owner at once for the loss of value caused by the liability to support which rests on him after the titles to the minerals and the surface have been severed, and, in the absence of agreement, the entire amount of compensation is to be ascertained by arbitrators once for all, as at the date of the deposit of the plans; and upon payment of the compensation the mineral owner is restrained from working his minerals excepting under such conditions as may be imposed by the Railway Board. Davies v. James Bay Railway, 83 L. J. P.C. 339; [1914] A.C. 1043; 111 L. T. 946; 30 T. L. R. 633—P.C.

——Railway and Municipal Board—Powers—"Tracks"—Agreement to Keep Road in Proper Repair—Reconstruction.]—A street railway company, by an agreement confirmed by Act of Parliament, were bound where their rails were "laid upon the travelled portion of the road" to "keep clean and in proper repair that portion of the travelled road between the rails, and for eighteen inches on each side of the rails":—Held, that there was no obligation on them to reconstruct this space so as to make it a roadway of an improved character such as the road authority proposed to make of the rest of the road; and that the Ontario Railway and Municipal Board Amendment Act, 1910, s. 3, which gives the Board power to order repairs or improvements or changes in any "tracks," did not give the Board jurisdiction to make an order directing the company to carry out such reconstruction of the roadway. Toronto Suburban Railway v. Toronto Corporation, 84 L. J. P.C. 108; [1915] A.C. 590; 112 L. T. 788—P.C.

Salteaux Indians—Treaty with—Extinction of Indian Interest in Lands—Repayment by Ontario to the Dominion of Outlay in Respect of Lands in Ontario.]—In 1873 the interest in an extensive tract of land of an Indian tribe was extinguished in return for certain payments and the grant of certain rights by the Crown. It was subsequently discovered that the greater part of the land was in Ontario. The Dominion claimed contribution from Ontario in relief of the burden undertaken by the Dominion in respect of the Indians:—Held, that the Dominion Government was not entitled to such contribution, as in concluding the treaty the Dominion was not acting on behalf of or as trustee for Ontario, but for the benefit of the whole Canadian nation. Dictum of Lord Watson in St. Catherine's Milling and Lumber Co. v. Reg. (58 L. J. P.C. 54; 14 App. Cas. 46) disapproved. Dominion of Canada v. Province of Ontario, 80 L. J. P.C. 32; [1910] A.C. 637; 103 L. T. 331; 26 T. L. R. 681—P.C.

Timber — Right to Timber Growing on Mining Locations—Trespass—Subsequent Permission to Trespasser to Retain Timber—Rights of Mining Owner.]—By section 39 of the Mines Act of Ontario all pine trees on Crown lands sold or granted as mining lands are reserved to the Crown, subject to the right of the lessees to cut such trees as are necessary for building, fencing, and fuel, or working the mines, and licensees under the Crown may enter on such lands to cut and remove the timber; and the rights of the Crown in such timber are not affected by the provisions of section 2 of the Crown Timber Act (Rev. Stat. Ont. 1897, c. 32). The Crown granted permission to the appellant company to cut timber upon certain lands. M. and D., subcontractors under the appellants, trespassed upon certain other Crown lands held by the respondents under mining leases, and cut timber thereon. The Crown timber agent, upon being informed of the trespass, stopped M. and D. from cutting any more timber on the respondents' lands, but allowed them to remove the timber already cut by them, and received payment for it:—Held, that the property in the timber so unlawfully cut remained in the Crown, and though the respondents might have had a title to it as against a trespasser they could not recover the value from the appellants after the Crown had allowed them to remove it. Eastern Construction Co. v. National Trust Co., 83 L. J. P.C. 122; [1914] A.C. 197; 110 L. T. 321—P.C.

——Timber Licence — Interest in Land — Execution — Seizure.] — A licence under the Crown Timber Act of Ontario, 1897, to occupy land and fell timber thereon and remove it confers upon the licensee an interest in land liable to seizure and sale under a writ of execution. Glenwood Lumber Co. v. Phillips (73 L. J. P.C. 62; [1904] A.C. 405) approved. Canadian Pacific Railway v. Rat Portage Lumber Co. (10 Ont. L. R. 273) disapproved. McPherson v. Temiskaming Lumber Co., 82 L. J. h. Quebec.

Accident—Contributory Negligence.]—By the law of Quebec contributory negligence on the part of a plaintiff is no defence in an action for damages for injury caused by the negligence of the defendant, but is only a ground for the reduction of damages; but in Quebec, as in England, a plaintiff cannot recover damages if his own negligence is the sole effective cause of the injury complained of. Canadian Pacific Railway v. Fréchette, 84 L. J. P.C. 161; [1915] A.C. 871; 31 T. L. R. 529—P.C.

—— Limitation of Amount Recoverable.] — Article 7322 of the Revised Statutes of Quebec (1909) provides for the payment of "rents" or annuities to workmen injured in the course of their employment calculated with reference to the wages which they were earning at the time of the injury; and by sub-section 2, "The capital of the rents shall not, however, in any case except in the case mentioned in article 7325" (which relates to accidents caused by "the inexcusable fault" of the employer) "exceed two thousand dollars":—Held, that this sub-section applies only to the case in which the workman has exercised the option, given to him by article 7329, of having the capital of the rent due to him paid to an insurance company. Decision of the Court of King's Bench for the Province of Quebec (22 Quebec L. R. K.B. 207) affirmed. Canadian Pacific Railway v. MacDonald, 84 L. J. P.C. 243; [1915] A.C. 1124; 31 T. L. R. 600—P.C.

Action against a Minor.]—By the law of the Province of Quebec minority is an absolute bar to an action, and a minor is incapable of suing or being sued, and if he is sued and served as a defendant he is not thereby made a party to the action at all, and there is no properly constituted action against him. Levine v. Serling (No. 1), 83 L. J. P.C. 295; [1914] A.C. 659; 111 L. T. 355—P.C.

Montreal City Charter — Authorised Expenditure.] — Expenditure authorised by the city council of Montreal, or expenditure under the instructions of the council and carried into effect through the finance committee of the council, is not invalidated by a departure from ordinary routine or infraction of a by-law; nor is a person who takes part in such expenditure liable to the penalties attached by section 14, article 338 of the Montreal City Charter, to acts and defaults of a very different description. Lapointe v. Larin, 81 L. J. P.C. 66; [1911] A.C. 520; 105 L. T. 263—P.C.

Seigniory—Title—Trust—Aboriginal Title or Prescription.]—By an Act of 1840 of Lower Canada—now contained in the Consolidated Statutes of Lower Canada, 1861—the respondents were declared to be a corporation, and the corporation's title to the seigniory of the Lake of Two Mountains was confirmed, and it was enacted that the corporation should hold it as fully as their predecessors for the purposes therein specified and for the support of such other religious, charitable, and educational institutions as might from time to time be approved by the governor of the province:—Held, that the Act placed beyond question the title of the respondents to the seigniory, and that the appellants could not establish an independent title to possession or control in the administration. Corinthe v. St. Sulpice, Montreal, Seminary, 82 L. J. P.C. 8; [1912] A.C. 872; 107 L. T. 104; 28 T. L. R. 549—P.C.

3. Ceylon.

See also Vol. III. 567, 2315.

Partnership—Dissolution—Suit for Partnership Accounts—Parol Evidence of Partnership.] —The Ceylon Ordinance No. 7 of 1840, s. 21, provides that "No . . . agreement, unless it be in writing and signed by the party making the same, . . . shall be of force or avail in law for any of the following purposes: . . . (4) For establishing a partnership where the capital exceeds one hundred pounds. Provided that this shall not be construed to prevent third parties from suing partners, or persons acting as such, and offering in evidence circumstances to prove a partnership existing between such persons, or to exclude parol testimony concerning transactions by or the settlement of any account between partners": —Held, that the Ordinance applied to cases where the parties had acted as if they were partners in fact, and some dispute had arisen as to their partnership rights or property; and therefore a suit for partnership accounts after the dissolution of a de facto partnership could not be maintained in the absence of any agreement in writing between the partners, and that this Ordinance was not affected by Ordinance 22 of 1866, which enacted that the English law of partnership was the law of Ceylon. Anonymous Case (Vander Straaten's Rep. 195) overruled. Judgment of the Supreme Court of Ceylon (11 Ceylon New L. R. 254) reversed. Pate v. Pate, 84 L. J. P.C. 234; [1915] A.C. 1100; 31 T. L. R. 590—P.C.

Possessory Action—Trustee and Manager of Mosque—Forcible Possession.]—The trustee or manager of a mosque who has been in possession for more than the requisite period of a year and a day is entitled under the Ceylon Ordinance 22 of 1871 to bring a possessory action, and to an injunction against persons who have forcibly dispossessed him. Idroos Lebbe Azeez v. Mohamed Ismail Mudliyar, 81 L. J. P.C. 123; [1911] A.C. 746; 105 L. T. 417; 27 T. L. R. 580—P.C.

Title—Grant of Land with Restraint on Alienation — Conveyance by Grantor and Grantee.]—By a deed of gift made in 1882 the donor gave to the respondent a certain property as a gift "absolute and irrevocable," subject to the condition that the donor should have possession and enjoy the income thereof until the donee should reach the age of twenty-five. Then, after the donee should have attained twenty-five, if the donor should be living, the donee was not to be at liberty to alienate the property. The donee attained twenty-five in 1891 and died unmarried and without issue in 1896. By a deed dated December 5, 1893, and registered on December 7, which recited that the donee had attained twenty-five and had been in possession and enjoyment of the property since 1891, the donor granted "liberty power and licence" to the donee to sell and convey the property to the respondent, and a conveyance was executed accordingly. In October, 1893, the respondent bound himself within twelve calendar months to sell to W. "free from all incumbrances whatsoever," the aforesaid premises:—Held, that as the donee under the deed of 1882 was precluded from alienating the property, the deed of October, 1893, was in excess of his rights, and could not stand in the way of the rights effectively given by the deed of December, 1893. Gunatilleke v. Fernando, 81 L. J. P.C. 191; 106 L. T. 306—P.C.

Possession by Co-parceners of Intestate—Presumption of Ouster — Adverse Possession —Prescription of Actions.]—The law of Ceylon by the Limitations Ordinance No. 22 of 1871 is the same as that which prevailed before the Statute of Limitations, 3 & 4 Will. 4. c. 27, by which the possession of any one co-parcener is the possession of the others, and cannot be put an end to by anything short of ouster or its equivalent; and such possession must be adverse to or independent of the title of the other co-owners. Corea v. Appuhamy, 81 L. J. P.C. 151; [1912] A.C. 230; 105 L. T. 836—P.C.

The brother of an intestate who died in 1878 took sole possession of the intestate's property, which he settled upon himself and his son. The co-heirs, his sisters, sold their rights and interest to the appellant, who brought an action claiming to be co-owner:—Held, that the brother's possession was by descent, and enured for the benefit of himself and the co-parceners. Ib.

Joint Will of Husband and Wife — Community of Property — Life Usufruct — Fideicommissum.] — Under a joint will made in 1878 by a husband and wife, who were married in community of property, after bequests to children on marriage or the attainment of twenty-five, it was directed that certain properties, including a synagogue and cottage therein described, were not to be alienated or incumbered, but should devolve on "the lawful heirs of the above-named devisees: in the absence of any such lawful heirs, on the persons whom we institute heirs, or his or her lawful heirs." Upon the death of both of the testators it was stated "The synagogue and Barandeniya Cottage, in Colpetty, to vest in Edwin." The testator died in 1878, the testatrix in 1907. The son Edwin died in 1882 intestate. He was one of the instituted heirs. The testatrix adiated the inheritance and accepted benefits under the will. In an action by Edwin's widow and her second husband,—Held, that the testatrix took a usufruct, and not the dominium in synagogue and cottage, and that Edwin took a vested interest transmissible to his heirs. Held, also, that under the Ceylon Ordinance 15 of 1876 Edwin's widow took by inheritance half of Edwin's property. Samaradiwakara v. De Saram, 81 L. J. P.C. 75; [1911] A.C. 753; 105 L. T. 345—P.C.

Minerals — Action by Surface Owner to Restrain Removal of—Waiver of Rights of Crown after Commencement of Action—Effect of Waiver.]—The respondent was the owner of land under a grant from the Crown which expressly reserved to the Crown all mines and minerals in or upon the said lands, and he brought an action against the owner of adjacent land to restrain him from trespassing on his land and taking minerals from under it, and for the value of the minerals so taken. After the commencement of the action he obtained a written statement from the Crown that no claim was made on the part of the Crown to the minerals in question, "anything in the wording of the Crown grant notwithstanding":—Held, that this waiver of the rights of the Crown had no restrospective effect so as to vest the title to the minerals in the respondent, and that the action would not lie. Fernando v. De Silva, 82 L. J. P.C. 111; 107 L. T. 670—P.C.

Evidence — True Copy — Whether Use of Word "Certify" Necessary.]—The provisions of the Ceylon Evidence Ordinance, 1905, relating to the admissibility in evidence of certified copies of public documents ought to be read as applicable to certificates given before the date of the Ordinance, but in such cases the use of the word "certify" is not essential, provided that it appears that the officer intended to attest the accuracy of the copy. Muniandy Chetty v. Muttu Caruppen Chetty, 30 T. District Court—Jurisdiction.]—The District Court of Kandy has power to award damages for a continuous breach of agreement in respect of the time both before and after action brought. De Soysa (Lady) v. De Pless Pol, 81 L. J. P.C. 12; [1912] A.C. 194 105 L. T. 642—P.C.

Practice — Inclusion in Claim of Different Causes of Action.]—Section 34 of the Civil Procedure Code, 1889, of Ceylon makes it incumbent on a plaintiff to include the whole of his claim in his action, and to ask for the whole of his remedies, but its object is not to compel the inclusion in one action of different claims arising from the same transaction. Therefore where an action was settled upon the terms that the defendant should give to the plaintiff two promissory notes for the amount which an arbitrator found to be due to him, and the plaintiff afterwards sued upon the notes, but failed upon a point of form,—Held, that it was open to him to bring a new action on his original claim. Saminathan v. Palaniappa, 83 L. J. P.C. 131; [1914] A.C. 618; L. R. 41 Ind. App. 142; 110 L. T. 913—P.C.

4. Gold Coast.

Concessions Court—Certification of Validity of Concession—Priority of Certificate—Exclusive Demise.]—By section 8 of the Gold Coast Concessions Ordinance No. 14 of 1900, "No proceedings shall . . . be taken to give effect to any concession" by a native chief "unless such concession has been certified as valid by the Court"; and by section 23, "a certificate of validity shall be good and valid from the date of such certificate as against any person claiming adversely thereto." The respondent company obtained a concession of land with all surface rights, with full and exclusive powers to collect rubber, make clearings, construct farms, and grow rubber and other produce, with liberty to cut and carry away trees and timber; the concession also included all mines, &c. The appellant company obtained a concession of land, which included a part of the land the subject of the respondents' concession, with all mines and minerals, with full and exclusive liberty to sink pits, take and carry away minerals, and cut timber and trees for the use of the mines and the erection of buildings. The respondents' concession was earlier in date than the appellants' concession, but the certificate of the Court validating their concession was later in date than the appellants' certificate:—Held, that the Court below was wrong in dismissing the opposition of the appellants to the grant of a certificate to the respondents, but that, notwithstanding the use of the word "exclusive," the appellants' rights were confined to those of mining lessees with a right to such timber as they required for purposes ancillary to such mining; and that, subject to such rights, they had no power to prevent the respondents from developing the overlapping part of the land as an agricultural and arboricultural property, and that the concessions should be modified by the Court accordingly. Wassaw Exploring Syndicate v. African Rubber Co., 83 L. J. P.C. 316; [1914] A.C. 626; 111 L. T. 54—P.C.

An actual demise of land is not a "concession" within the meaning of the Concessions Ordinances. Ib.

Easement—Grant—Obligation of Owner of Lower Ground to Receive Water Flowing Naturally from Higher Ground.]—The law of Guernsey does not allow of the constitution of a servitude or easement except by express grant, and a contract must be registered in order to affect land in the hands of a successor. But this rule does not apply to the natural right of the proprietor of higher land to have the water which naturally falls on his land discharged on to the contiguous lower land of another proprietor. Gibbons v. Lenfestey, 84 L. Supreme Court—Jurisdiction—China and Corea Order in Council, 1904—British Subject—British Protected Person—Soldier in Indian Regiment—Criminal Charge—Evidence—Confession—Admissibility.]—An alien who has enlisted in a British Indian regiment stationed in China is a person who "enjoys his Majesty's protection" by virtue of the Foreign Jurisdiction Act, 1890, and is therefore subject to the jurisdiction of the Supreme Court of China and Corea. Ibrahim v. Regem, 83 L. J. P.C. 185; [1914] A.C. 599; 111 L. T. 20; 24 Cox C.C. 174; 30 T. L. R. 383—P.C.

A private in an Indian regiment murdered one of the officers. Shortly afterwards, while he was in custody, the commanding officer asked him, "Why have you done such a senseless act?" and he replied, "Some three or four days he has been abusing me, and without doubt I killed him." At the trial the Judge admitted this statement, which was objected to by counsel for the defence. The prisoner was convicted:—Held, that even if the evidence was inadmissible—which semble that it was not—there being ample undisputed evidence aliunde of the guilt of the prisoner, and it being very improbable that the statement influenced the verdict of the jury, there was no such miscarriage of justice as would justify the Judicial Committee in advising an interference in the matter. Ib.

7. Malay States.

Registration of Title—Effect—Rectification of Register—Trustee.]—By section 4 of the Registration of Titles Regulation, 1891, of the Malay States, no instrument is effective to convey any estate in land unless it is registered; and by section 7 a certificate of title issued by the Registrar to any purchaser of land is made conclusive evidence that the person named therein as proprietor of the land is the absolute and indefeasible owner thereof, and the title shall not be subject to challenge except on the ground of fraud or of adverse possession. By the Specific Relief Enactment, 1903, a "trustee" includes every person holding expressly, by implication, or constructively, a fiduciary character. The appellant was in possession of land under a grant which had never been registered. The respondent company bought from the grantor land which included the land so granted to the appellant, with notice of his title, and informed the vendor that they would make a separate arrangement with him. They made no such arrangement, and had all the land registered in their own name :—Held, that they were in the position of trustees for the appellant, that their registered title having been obtained by fraud was not conclusive as against his equitable title, and that he was entitled to a rectification of the register. Loke Yew v. Port Swettenham Rubber Co., 82 L. Contract — Construction — Telegraph — Exclusive Right to Enter on Lands and Work Telegraph.]—By an agreement between the appellants and the respondents, the appellants granted to the respondents the exclusive right to enter on the lands of the railway and to construct, maintain, and operate telegraphs for the respondents' purposes. The respondents further agreed to erect and maintain a wire for the use of the railway for railway purposes only :—Held, that the appellant company was not precluded from the establishment and working of a telegraph system on their own land and for the purposes only of their own business. Reid Newfoundland Co. v. Anglo-American Telegraph Co., 80 L. J. P.C. 20; [1910] A.C. 560; 103 L. T. 145; 26 T. L. R. 614—P.C.

—— Unauthorised User of Special Wire—Account—Lapse of Time—Statute of Limitations.] — The appellants, who were incorporated by an Act of the Newfoundland Legislature, were assignees of a contract under which they were entitled to use a special wire erected and maintained by the respondents, over which they were " not to pass or transmit any commercial messages . . . except for the benefit and account " of the respondents. In fact they used the special wire for all the purposes of their business, including the new and extended lines of railway, their shipping business, and other commercial undertakings :—Held, that in respect of the unauthorised user of the special wire the appellants were accountable as trustees to the respondents for the profits made by such unauthorised user, and were not entitled to the protection of the Limitation Acts, as the Newfoundland Trustee Act, 1898, withholds such protection from a trustee when proceedings are taken to recover property retained by the trustee. Reid-Newfoundland Co. v. Anglo-American Telegraph Co., 81 L. J. P.C. 224; [1912] A.C. 555; 106 L. T. 691; 28 T. L. R. 385—P.C.

Telegraph Cables—Company Carrying on Telegraph Business in or from the Colony—Taxation.]—By an Act passed in 1905 to increase the revenue by imposing taxes upon business transacted by telegraph companies within and in transit through the colony the Newfoundland Legislature imposed upon every company " carrying on any telegraph business in or from the colony " a certain annual tax in respect of every telegraphic cable between the colony and any place outside the colony for the time being belonging to or worked by or on behalf of the company, landed on, extended to, or established in the colony. The appellants were a telegraph company to which by a Newfoundland Act a right of landing cables was given, but which was prohibited from competing with the Government or transporting or receiving business from or to the colony without the permission of the Government unless and until the privilege was granted to some other cable company. No such permission had been given to the appellants or privilege granted to any other cable company :—Held, that the appellants were not liable to taxation under the Act as a company carrying on any telegraph business in or from the colony. Commercial Cable Co. v. Att.-Gen. of Newfoundland, 82 L. J. P.C. 5; [1912] A.C. 820; 107 L. T. 101; 28 T. L. R. 537—P.C.

Steamship Carrying Mails under Contract with Postmaster-General — Exemption from Harbour Dues.] — By section 116, subsection 1 of the Harbours Act, 1908, " Nothing in this Act shall charge with any dues— . . . (d.) Any steamship carrying mails under any contract made with the Postmaster-General, in cases where it is provided by the terms of such contract that such steamships shall be exempt therefrom." By a contract made between the appellant company and the Postmaster-General of New Zealand the company was bound to carry mails between New Zealand and San Francisco, and the contract provided that no charge was to be made or levied under the Act of 1908 at New Zealand ports " for any of the steamships employed in the services under this contract." Under a clause of the contract the company obtained leave to extend their service from New Zealand to Australia, but they were not paid by the Postmaster-General for this extended service :—Held, that a steamship employed on the extended service between Australia and New Zealand was not employed under the contract, and was not entitled to exemption from harbour dues; but that a ship was " carrying mails " under the contract, so as to be entitled to exemption, as soon as she was ready and willing to receive the outgoing mails on board, subject only to coaling and necessary repairs. Union Steamship Co. of New Zealand v. Wellington Harbour Board, 84 L. J. P.C. 169; [1915] A.C. 622; 113 L. T. 203; 31 T. L. R. 292—P.C.

Income Tax—Deductions—Value of Standing Timber Cut during Year.]—A company occupying land, and carrying on the business of saw millers and timber merchants, is not entitled in its assessment for income tax to deduct from the gross proceeds of its business the value of the standing timber cut during the year of assessment. Kauri Timber Co. v. Commissioner of Taxes, 83 L. J. P.C. 6; [1913] A.C. 771; 109 L. T. 22; 29 T. L. R. 671—P.C.

Life Assurance—Paid-up Endowment.]—By section 64 of the New Zealand Insurance Act, 1908, "No policy shall become void for non-payment of premium so long as the premiums and interest in arrear are not in excess of the surrender value as declared by the company issuing the same:—Held, that neither assured nor assurer can contract himself out of this section, or waive its effect, but that it has no application to a policy by which the assurer does not contract to pay any cash surrender value, but to give a fully paid-up endowment. Judgment of the Court below affirmed. Equitable Life Assurance Society of United States v. Reed, 83 L. J. P.C. 195; [1914] A.C. 587; 111 L. T. 50; 30 T. L. R. 415—P.C.

Railway — Level Crossing over Highway — Rights of Public.]—By section 191, subsection 2 of the New Zealand Public Works Act, "Where a road or street crosses a railway on a level the public right of way at such crossing shall cease whenever any engine or carriage on the railway is approaching and within a distance of half a mile from such crossing":—Held, that on the specified approach of a train the public absolute right to pass was suspended, leaving unaffected the question of other rights if persons do in fact pass: that a person attempting to pass was not in the position of a trespasser or a bare licensee, and that the section was no answer to a finding by a jury that a person killed while crossing a level crossing was killed by the negligence of the railway authority. A by-law which requires that "No person shall drive or attempt to drive any vehicle or animal on any part of a public road where the same crosses over or upon a railway on the same level otherwise than at a walking pace, and every person shall before crossing the lines of rail comply with the directions upon the notice boards, 'Stop! Look out for the Engine,'" is unreasonable and cannot be sustained. Decision of the Court of Appeal of New Zealand affirmed. Rex v. Broad, 84 L. J. P.C. 247; [1915] A.C. 1110; 31 T. L. R. 599—P.C.

Settlements—Colonisation—Order in Council — Effect — Native Title to Land — Crown Grant.] — By an Order in Council dated September 2, 1865, and made under the New Zealand Settlements Act, 1863, the Governor of New Zealand declared that certain lands were "a district" within the meaning of the Act, and further declared that such lands were required for the purposes of the Act, and ordered that such lands should be "set apart and reserved as sites for settlements for colonisation agreeably to the provisions of the Act" and further provided that "no land of any loyal inhabitant within the said district, whether held by native custom or under Crown grant, will be taken, except so much as may be absolutely necessary for the security of the country, compensation being given for all land so taken." On October 24, 1874, a Crown grant of a portion of the lands was made to certain loyal natives whose claims had been approved by a Compensation Court:—Held, that the Order in Council did not operate to extinguish the native or any other title of any loyal inhabitant, and that the effect of the Crown grant was only to convey the legal estate out of the Crown, and to transform the native customary title into a freehold title. Te Teira v. Te Roera Tareha (71 L. Will — Insufficient Provision for Wife, Husband, or Children—Discretion of the Court in Ordering such Provision.]—In a case where a man worth from 20,000*l.* to 30,000*l.*, whose first wife had obtained a divorce, had left his whole property for the benefit of his second wife and her children, and the Court in the exercise of its discretion under the New Zealand Family Protection Act, 1908, awarded, with regard to the children by the first wife, 60*l.* a year to one of the married daughters and 40*l.* a year to each of the other two, the sons being able to maintain themselves and having maintained themselves for some years before their father died, their Lordships declined to interfere with the discretion so exercised. Allardice v. Allardice, 81 L. Will—Construction—Codicil to Mutual Will —Fideicommissum.]—A codicil to a mutual will executed by a husband and a wife in the Cape of Good Hope bequeathed property to their two sons, with a provision against alienation, on the understanding that the property "shall remain in the first place for both of them; in the second place the eldest son of our grandchildren shall always have the same right thereto, and after the decease of their parents remain in possession thereof, with this understanding, however, that the other heirs who may still be born shall enjoy equal share and right thereto . . . so that always the eldest son of our grandchildren has the privilege":—Held, that after the death of the two sons of the testators each of the two eldest grandsons was entitled to his father's share absolutely, and not subject to a fideicommissum or restraint on alienation. De Jager v. De Jager (55 L. Lessor and Lessee—Ultra Vires—Consent of the Governor—Claim for Rescission of Contract—Acquiescence in Action of Lessee.]—It is not open to a lessee who has known for years of operations which he alleges constitute a trespass to make such operations subsequently the ground for an action for rescission of the contract of lease. South African Breweries v. Durban Corporation, 81 L. J. P.C. 217; [1912] A.C. 412; 106 L. T. 385—P.C.

The respondents brought an action to recover certain rents and rates in respect of lands leased or contracted to be leased by them to the appellants. The lease was advertised for sale by auction subject to certain conditions, and by section 77 of the Natal Municipal Corporations Act, 1872, the consent of the Lieutenant-Governor of the colony was required to the conditions on which such a lease was put up for sale. One of the conditions of sale made provision as to the erection and non-erection of buildings, and certain penal consequences were attached if the main provisions as to buildings were not complied with. The conditions as a whole were presented to the Lieutenant-Governor, who, by letter, gave his general consent thereto. The appellants set up as a defence (inter alia) to the action that the agreement itself was ultra vires of the respondents by reason of the lease which was tendered having been granted without the consent of the Lieutenant-Governor, and claimed rescission of the lease :—Held, that the provisions of section 77 of the Act of 1872 had been sufficiently complied with even if in the letter of consent the above condition was not specifically mentioned, and that the appellants were not entitled to rescission of the lease. Ib.

The Government of the colony by agreement with the respondents, the city of Durban, executed certain works "for the public good and benefit" on the land leased to the appellants, such works following on arrangements made upon public grounds with the colonial Government, and upon colonial legislation, but the appellants took no objection to the execution of the works :—Held, that the action of the respondents did not amount to a breach of their agreement with the appellants so as to entitle the latter to rescission of the lease. Ib.

Mining Lease—Equitable Mortgage—Registration — Priority.] — A mining lease, which contains power to enter upon the land and work and dispose of the minerals under the land is a lease within the meaning of Act No. 19, 1884, of Natal, and requires registration. In the absence of registration there can be no valid equitable mortgage by deposit of title deeds, and the holder of such mortgage acquires no priority over the unsecured creditors of the mortgagor. Munro v. Didcott, 80 L. Mutual Will — Construction — Surviving Spouse Executor of Joint Estate—Rights of Children.] — By the principle established in Denyssen v. Mostert (41 L. J. P.C. 41; L. R. 4 P.C. 236) mutual wills, "notwithstanding their form, are to be read as separate wills, the dispositions of each spouse being treated as applicable to his or her half of the joint property." Natal Bank v. Rood, 80 L. J. P.C. 22; [1910] A.C. 570; 103 L. T. 229; 26 T. L. R. 622—P.C.

Under such a will there is in the surviving spouse, who is also appointed executor and administrator, no community of property between such spouse and the children after the dissolution of the marriage by death. The children are not liable for losses suffered or incumbrances effected by the surviving spouse. The administrator is not entitled to make a profit out of the deceased spouse's estate. Any profit is held on trust for the beneficiaries. Ib.

By the Roman-Dutch law the children's share is not limited to the legitima portio. Under the law and settled practice of the Transvaal the surviving spouse is entitled to half the estate of the spouse first dying, plus a child's portion. Ib.

11. Seychelles.

Criminal Procedure—Embezzlement—Miscarriage of Justice.] — Section 216 of the Seychelles Penal Code, which makes it a criminal offence in any person entrusted for any purpose with the property of another to "embezzle, squander away, or destroy" any such property to the prejudice of the true owner, is not to be restricted to cases of failure to restore the property in specific form, but extends to ordinary cases of breach of trust and wilful appropriation of the property of another, but should not be extended to a mere case of the mixture of the funds of another with the funds of the bailee without any criminal intention. To extend it to such a case amounts to a grave miscarriage of justice. Lanier v. Regem, 83 L. J. P.C. 116 [1914] A.C. 221; 110 L. T. 326; 24 Cox C.C. 53; 30 T. L. R. 53—P.C.

False Imprisonment—Want of Reasonable and Probable Cause—Onus of Proof.]—The appellant, who was born in Malacca and was a British subject, went to a Chinese temple and took part in a ceremony in connection with a charm against sickness. The police, thinking that the temple was the headquarters of a secret society, on that day made a raid upon it. One of the respondents laid an information against the appellant under the provisions of the Banishment Enactment, 1900, in force in the Federated Malay States, and the other respondent arrested him on a warrant in connection with the disturbance in the temple. The appellant was confined in prison for a fortnight, but ultimately no charge was made against him. The appellant thereupon brought an action for false imprisonment against the two respondents. He gave evidence describing his arrest, denying the existence of any evidence against him, and his ignorance of the reasons for his arrest :—Held, that the appellant had not satisfied the burden of proof imposed upon him by section 18 of the Banishment Enactment, 1900, inasmuch as mere innocence was not even prima facie proof of want of reasonable and probable cause, the burden of which proof lay on the appellant in accordance with the terms of the enactment. Yap Hon Chin v. Jones-Parry, 28 T. III. APPEALS TO PRIVY COUNCIL.

See also Vol. III. 604, 2335.

Prerogative Right to Appeal to the Crown —Final Order.]—An appeal lies to the Crown by its special prerogative from orders either of a provincial Court of Appeal or of the Supreme Court of Canada, even although they are by statute declared to be final, and although they are expressed in the form of an opinion upon which the Courts appealed from are to make the proper orders. Canadian Pacific Railway v. Toronto City, 81 L. J. P.C. 5; [1911] A.C. 461; 104 L. T. 724; 27 T. L. R. 448—P.C.

Misdirection—New Trial—Objection Taken for the First Time on Final Appeal—Negligence—Contributory Negligence.]—It is not open to a party who has not used his opportunity in the Court of Appeal to state for the first time before the Judicial Committee an objection to the verdict of a jury on the ground of misdirection. White v. Victoria Lumber and Manufacturing Co., 80 L. J. P.C. 38; [1910] A.C. 606; 103 L. T. 323—P.C.

In an action for damages for the death of the appellant's son, the jury awarded damages. The majority of the Supreme Court ordered a new trial—one Judge on the ground of contributory negligence on the part of the dead man, the others being of opinion that the damages were excessive. Before the Judicial Committee the further ground was taken of misdirection:—Held, that it was too late to put forward a plea of misdirection, not previously suggested, on the final appeal. Ib.

Re-opening Case — Concurrent Findings of Fact — Fraud — Evidence — Depositions — Death of Persons whose Conduct is Impeached.] — In the case of transactions which have stood unchallenged for many years, there is a general presumption in favour of good faith and validity, and the Court will not draw inferences against the integrity of deceased persons if the known facts and existing documents are capable of a reasonable explanation. Where there have been concurrent findings of fact in the Courts below, but all the evidence before those Courts was taken on depositions, not orally, the Judicial Committee will allow the facts to be re-opened on appeal. Vatcher v. Paull, 84 L. J. P.C. 86; [1915] A.C. 372; 112 L. T. 737—P.C.

Criminal Appeal.] — The Crown has authority by virtue of the prerogative to review the decisions of all colonial Courts, whether the proceedings are of a civil or a criminal character, unless such authority has been expressly parted with; but the Judicial Committee will not interfere with the course of criminal justice in a colony unless it is clearly established that there has been a violation of the natural principles of justice in its very foundations. Arnold v. King-Emperor, 83 L. J. P.C. 299; [1914] A.C. 644; L. R. 41 Ind. App. 149; 111 L. T. 324; 24 Cox C.C. 297; 30 T. L. R. 462—P.C.

A charge to a jury must be read as a whole, and the Judicial Committee will not interfere in the region of fact, unless something gross, amounting to a misdescription of the whole bearing of the evidence, has occurred, though some portions of it may be the subject of difference of opinion. Falkland Islands Co. v. Reg. (1 Moore P.C. (N.S.) 299) approved. Ib.

The Judicial Committee of the Privy Council is not in the position of a Court of Criminal Appeal and does not advise the Crown to interfere in a criminal case unless there has been a violation of the principles of natural justice or a gross violation of the rules of procedure. Special leave to appeal from a conviction for murder refused on the above ground, where it was alleged that the jury had been in communication during the trial with persons who were not their custodians. Armstrong v. Regem, 30 T. L. R. 215—P.C.

The Judicial Committee of the Privy Council have no power to sit as a Court of Criminal Appeal. They can only interfere in a criminal case if what has been done in the Court below is grossly contrary to the forms of justice, or violates fundamental principles. Where there is evidence to go to the jury in a criminal case they will not express any opinion as to the propriety of the verdict, or of the summing-up of the Judge who tried the case. Clifford v. King-Emperor, 83 L. J. P.C. 152; L. R. 40 Ind. App. 241—P.C.

—— Stay of Execution — Prerogative of Pardon.]—The Judicial Committee is not a Court of Criminal Appeal, and has no power to stay the execution of a sentence. The tendering of advice to His Majesty as to the exercise of his prerogative of pardon is not within the province of the Judicial Committee, but is a matter for the Executive Government. Balmukand v. King-Emperor, 84 L. J. P.C. 136; [1915] A.C. 629; L. R. 42 Ind. App. 133; 113 L. T. 55—P.C.

—— Admission of Evidence—Miscarriage of Justice.]—The Privy Council will not interfere with a conviction on the ground of the admission of evidence of a statement made by the prisoner, when in custody, in reply to a question by his superior officer, if the admission of such evidence has not caused any miscarriage of justice. Ibrahim v. Regem, 83 L. J. P.C. 185; [1914] A.C. 599; 111 L. T. 20; 24 Cox C.C. 174; 30 T. L. R. 383—P.C.

—— Costs—Crown.]—The rule laid down in Johnson v. Regem (73 L. J. P.C. 113; [1904] A.C. 817), that the Crown neither pays nor receives costs unless the case is governed by some local statute or there are exceptional circumstances justifying a departure from the ordinary rule, applies to criminal as well as to civil cases. Vaithinatha Pillai v. Regem, 29 T. L. R. 709—P.C.

Leave to Appeal in Forma Pauperis—Costs.] — An order for leave to appeal in forma pauperis takes effect only from the date at which it is made; costs therefore incurred before that date are not affected thereby. Levine v. Serling (No. 2), 83 L. Claim of Right by Prescription — Enjoyment in Pursuance of Claim of Right to Soil.] —The claim to a right of common or profit referred to in section 1 of the Prescription Act, 1832, means a claim to such right, and not a claim to the soil upon which the right is to be exercised. Consequently no right by prescription to a right of common or profit can be established by proof of enjoyment thereof for the period specified in section 1, under a claim of right to the soil. Lyell v. Hothfield (Lord), 84 L. J. K.B. 251; [1914] 3 K.B. 911; 30 T. L. R. 630—Shearman, J.

Turbary—Estovers—Destruction of House to which Rights were Appurtenant—Re-erection of House not on Old Foundations — Intention to Preserve Rights — Continuation of Rights.] — Where an ancient house, to which rights of common of turbary and estovers are appurtenant, is pulled down, and another house is erected in substitution for and in continuance of the old house with the intention of preserving the rights of common, those rights will continue as appurtenant to the new house, even although it is not erected on the foundations of the old house but on a site adjacent thereto, provided that no greater burden is imposed by the new house upon the lands over which the right is enjoyed than was imposed by the old house. Att.-Gen. v. Reynolds, 80 L. J. K.B. 1073; [1911] 2 K.B. 888; 104 L. T. 852—Hamilton, J.

Waste of Manor — Turbary — Estovers — Nuisance — Right of Commoners to Abate — Injunction—Damages.]—The plaintiff, who was lord of the manor of H., had a right to the soil of two heaths, each of which was two hundred acres in extent, subject to the rights of commoners, including rights of turbary and estovers. Trees had grown up on the heaths, and the defendants, who were commoners, believing that they were acting within their rights, felled the trees :—Held, that the plaintiff was entitled to an injunction and damages for trespass, even if it was assumed that the trees constituted a nuisance. Hope v. Osborne, 82 L. J. Ch. 457; [1913] 2 Ch. 349; 109 L. T. 41; 77 J. P. 317; 11 L. G. R. 825; 57 S. J. 702; 29 T. L. R. 606—Neville, J.

Commoners are not entitled to exercise the right of abatement unless, owing to the nuisance, they are completely excluded from the enjoyment of their rights. Unless this is the case, they ought to resort to the Courts for the purpose of ascertaining their rights and enforcing them. Ib.

Interference with Rights of Fellow Commoner — Right of Action by Fellow Commoner.] — Anything by which a commoner's right of common is disturbed, any unlawful consumption or destruction of the herbage, is actionable, even when done by one of the other persons having a right of common. King v. Brown, Durant & Co., 82 L. J. Ch. 548; [1913] 2 Ch. 416; 109 L. T. 69; 57 S. J. 754; 29 T. L. R. 691—Joyce, J.

Certain owners of an enfranchised copyhold, entitled to common of pasture for their cattle levant and couchant over the waste of the manor, damaged the herbage on the waste by conveying goods to and from their premises over the waste :—Held, that the plaintiff, a fellow commoner, was entitled to an injunction to restrain such interference with his rights of common and to damages. Ib.

Obligation to Fence against Animals of Peculiar Disposition — Exceptional Animals.] —The plaintiff was a farmer having commonable rights on the forest of Dartmoor, and the defendant was the occupier of a new take inclosed from the forest which he was admittedly under an obligation to fence against commonable animals. Certain Scotch sheep belonging to the plaintiff escaped from the forest into the defendant's new take by leaping over or breaking through the defendant's fences, and were distrained by the defendant as cattle damage feasant. The plaintiff brought an action against the defendant for illegal distress, alleging that the sheep had escaped into the new take owing to the defendant's fences being of an insufficient character. A referee to whom questions of fact were referred by consent found, expressly or in effect, that Scotch sheep possessed greater activity and jumping power than the ordinary moorland sheep of Dartmoor; that the defendant's fences were sufficient in height and strength to keep out ordinary moorland sheep, but not to keep out Scotch sheep; and that in this respect the defendant's fences resembled the fences on Dartmoor generally, which were all of one and the same character :—Held, that the defendant's obligation to fence was not an absolute obligation to provide fences which would keep out all kinds of sheep including those which, like Scotch sheep, possessed exceptional powers of jumping, but was only a limited obligation to provide such fences as were usual on Dartmoor; and that the defendant was not liable. Coaker v. Willcocks, 80 L. J. K.B. 1026; [1911] 2 K.B. 124; 104 L. T. 769; 27 T. L. R. 357—C.A.

Damage by Cattle of Owner of Soil to Turf of Owner of Turbary Rights.]—An action for trespass will lie for damage caused by the cattle of the owner of the soil and freehold of a bog to turf, cut, and spread on a plot of such bog (not fenced or divided from the residue) by the owner of other lands who enjoys the right to cut and save turf on such plot, where such cattle are depastured by the owner of the soil upon the bog without provision by him for the prevention of such injury by his cattle to the turf. The depasturage of cattle by the owner of the soil of the servient tenement, without such provision against injury to the turf of the dominant tenant so situated is under such circumstances a user by such owner of the soil of his natural rights which is unreasonable in relation to the dominant tenant as prejudicing the value of the incorporeal hereditament in the nature of a profit à prendre enjoyed by the dominant tenant, by endangering the saving of the turf. Cronin v. Connor, [1913] 2 Ir. R. 119—K.B. D.

Town Moor—Rights of Freemen to Herbage—Holding of Fairs—Temperance Festival.]—Interlocutory injunction granted at the instance of the plaintiffs restraining the defendants from bringing roundabouts and shows on to the Newcastle town moor during a temperance festival, such festival not being a "fair" within the meaning of the Newcastle Town Moor Acts, 1774 and 1870. Walker v. Murphy, 77 J. P. 365—Neville, J.

—— "Fair" — "Stint tickets" — Sale of Stint Tickets to Inhabitants not Freemen—Injury to Herbage—Measure of Damages.]—The Corporation of Newcastle-upon-Tyne were the owners in fee of the soil of the Town Moor. By special Acts of 1774 and 1870 the resident freemen and widows of freemen were granted the right of depasturing two milch cows per annum on the moor, for which purpose they were entitled to "stint tickets" in April of each year. These tickets were transferable to any resident inhabitant. The Act of 1774 authorised the corporation at the request of the stewards and wardens of the companies of the town to grant leases for the improvement of the moor, but section 7 provided that no lease should be granted of a part of the moor called the Cowhill where fairs called the Cowhill Fairs were held, nor of another part of the moor called the racecourse, but that they should be preserved for fairs and races as before. The Act of 1870, by section 6, authorised a committee of the stewards and wardens to act for the freemen and widows of freemen "for all purposes relating to the Town Moor," and by section 8 authorised the corporation and the committee to let parts of the moor for agricultural shows or other public purposes. Before 1882 race meetings with accompanying shows were held on the racecourse. In that year they ceased to be held on the racecourse, and instead a temperance festival was annually held thereon, parts of it being let to showmen by the corporation with the assent of the committee. In 1912 the committee, while assenting to the holding of the festival for 1913 on the racecourse, refused to agree to let any part of it to showmen. The corporation nevertheless granted a licence to the defendants, who were showmen, to bring their show on to the racecourse at the festival for that year by which the herbage was damaged. Many of the holders of stint tickets for the year 1912 to 1913 were transferees of freemen. In an action by the committee against the defendants for an injunction and damages,—Held, upon the construction of the Acts, that the show was not a "fair" within section 7 of the Act of 1774, that the corporation had no power by itself to grant the licence; that the committee were entitled to guard the interests of all the stint-ticket holders, whether freemen or not; and that the measure of damages was the amount of injury done to the herbage of the moor. Walker v. Murphy, 83 L. J. Ch. 917; [1915] 1 Ch. 71; 112 L. T. 189; 79 J. P. 137; 13 L. G. R. 109; 59 S. J. 88—C.A.

II. INCLOSURE.

See also Vol. III. 682, 2345.

Inclosure Act—Recitals—Manorial Right to Mines and Minerals — Allocation of Inclosed Lands—Allotments—Ownership of "Soil" in Allotments—Mines and Minerals Reserved.]—The preamble to an Inclosure Act recited that the lords of the manor were owners of the soil of the commons and waste within that manor and of the mines and minerals therein. The Act then provided that the lords of the manor should be allotted one eighteenth part of the inclosed lands "as a full and sufficient recompense for their right to the soil of the said commons," and, in subsequent clauses, enacted that certain encroachments upon the land should thereafter be held by the encroachers "as freehold in fee simple," and that the Commissioners might hold certain lands and defray the expenses of carrying out their award "by sale of the fee simple thereof." The Commissioners in their award declared that all the allotments were "of the nature or tenure of freehold" :—Held, that the words of the preamble drew a distinction between the ownership of the soil and the ownership of the mines and minerals; that the word "soil" was used in the Act in the restricted sense of the surface of the soil; that the allottees took a fee-simple only in the surface of the lands allotted to them, and that the lords of the manor were entitled to the mines and minerals underlying the allotments. St. Catherine's College, Cambridge v. Greensmith, 81 L. J. Ch. 555; [1912] 2 Ch. 280; 106 L. T. 1009; 56 S. J. 551—Neville, J.

Award—"Ancient inclosure"—Jurisdiction of Valuer to Determine.]—Although section 49 of the Inclosure Act, 1845, provides that nothing in the Act shall extend to enable the valuer or the Inclosure Commissioners to determine the title of any lands, the effect of the exception of encroachments in that section is to vest solely in the valuer and the commissioners the decision of the question whether a particular encroachment is or is not an "ancient inclosure" within the meaning of section 52, and whether therefore it is to be "deemed parcel of the land subject to be inclosed" within the meaning of section 50; and as by section 105 every allotment specified and set forth in an inclosure award made by the valuer and confirmed by the commissioners is "binding and conclusive on all persons whomsoever," the defence that the allotment at the time it was dealt with by the valuer was an "ancient inclosure" within section 52 affords no answer to an action by the allottee to recover possession of it. Blackett v. Ridout, 84 L. J. K.B. 1535; [1915] 2 K.B. 415; 113 L. T. 267—C.A.

—— Allotment of Land to Ecclesiastical Corporation Sole—Sixty Years' Possession Partly Before and Partly After Award—Title against Allottee.]—Where, therefore, by an inclosure award made in 1866 a piece of land was allotted to the rector of the parish in compensation for rights of turbary possessed by him as such rector, and the land was then in the occupation of a person who had encroached upon it some years before,—Held, in an action in 1913 by the rector of the parish to recover possession of the land from the successor of the person who had originally encroached upon it, that the defendant could not set up the defence that the encroachment in question was an "ancient inclosure" at the date of the award; that the plaintiff had made out a good prima facie title by production of the award of 1866; and that, as the plaintiff was an ecclesiastical corporation sole, and as the defendant and his predecessor had not been in possession for sixty years since the award, the plaintiffs' right to recover possession was not barred by section 29 of the Real Property Limitation Act, 1833. Chilcote v. Youldon (29 L. J. M.C. 197; 3 E. & E. 7) and Jaeomb v. Turner ([1892] 1 Q.B. 47) discussed. Ib.

III. METROPOLITAN COMMONS.

See also Vol. III. 733, 2348.

Conservators—Statutory Authority—Right of Inhabitants to Turn out Beasts—User—Prescription—Manorial Rights—Uninterrupted Enjoyment.]—A fluctuating and uncertain body, such as the inhabitants of a manor, cannot prescribe for profits à prendre through immemorial user. An inhabitant and ratepayer of a parish cannot claim that he is entitled to rights of common without stint, or alternatively for all beasts levant and couchant, by reason of immemorial user on the part of the inhabitants, unless he can shew that such rights had a legal origin. Mitcham Common Conservators v. Banks, 10 L. G. R. 183; 76 J. P. 413—Swinfen Eady, J.

A claim to rights of common of pasture for cattle levant and couchant on the claimant's lands by prescription in respect of the occupation of lands in the manor, can only be substantiated by shewing that there was uninterrupted enjoyment during thirty years, and that the enjoyment was in respect of commonable beasts, levant and couchant, on the lands in respect of which the claim is made. Ib.

By-laws—Regulations—Breach—Right of Conservators to Grant Preferential Treatment.]—A by-law made by the Conservators of Mitcham Common provided that "no person shall play at cricket or any other game . . . except at such times and under such regulations as the conservators may from time to time prescribe." In virtue of this by-law the conservators made a regulation that "for the safety of the public and the preservation of the turf no one shall play golf . . . unless accompanied by a caddie duly authorised and licensed by the conservators or Prince's Golf Club." The respondents played golf on the common without being accompanied by a caddie:—Held, that the regulation requiring players to be accompanied by a caddie was valid, and that the respondents were liable to a penalty for a breach of the by-law. Mitcham Common Conservators v. Cox; Same v. Cole, 80 L. J. K.B. 1188; [1911] 2 K.B. 854; 104 L. T. 824; 75 J. P. 471; 9 L. G. R. 843; 27 T. L. R. 492—D.

Per Phillimore, J., and Hamilton, J.: If the conservators of a common have not funds to lay out a golf course, or to make, roll, and water proper cricket pitches or bowling greens, and clubs are willing to go to the initial and continuous expense necessary to make and maintain them, there may be circumstances in which the conservators may for the sake of all players give some preference to those who will make and keep the playgrounds. But the preference must be so temporary or so discontinuous as to leave substantial and ample opportunities to the non-preferred and not unduly to interfere with the non-playing public. Further, conservators cannot by requiring licences or permits to be taken out create a preference indirectly which could not be justified directly. Licences or permits are unobjectionable so far as they are part of the machinery of legitimate regulation; as soon as they become mere means of discrimination or hindrances in the way of one class from which other classes are free they cease to be justifiable and cannot be required. Lawful preferential treatment is the exception and is a question of degree. Per Scrutton, J.: The conservators of a common have power to grant preferential treatment to clubs who make and maintain playgrounds on the common. Ib.

—— Requirement of Caddie — Refusal of Caddie Master to Supply.]—By section 19 of the Metropolitan Commons (Mitcham) Supplemental Act, 1891, the conservators were empowered to frame by-laws and regulations for the preservation of order upon the commons. The conservators made a by-law that "no persons shall obstruct or interfere with or annoy any persons who are playing or have made preparation for playing at cricket or any other lawful game," and they made regulations for playing golf, providing that no person who was not a member of the Prince's Golf Club and was not playing with a member should start playing between certain times, that no one should play without a caddie, and that caddies must be obtained through the caddie master. The appellant was caddie master of the club, and the respondent, who was not a member, applied to him, during the time referred to in the first regulation, for a caddie, but the appellant refused to supply a caddie because of the regulation:—Held, that the appellant was not liable to be convicted under the by-law for obstructing the respondent—per Ridley, J., and Darling, J., on the ground that the regulation was valid: per Rowlatt, J., on the ground that there was no duty on the appellant to supply caddies to the public. Harris v. Harrison, 111 L. T. 534; 78 J. P. 398; 12 L. G. R. 1304; 30 T. L. R. 532—D.

COMPANY.

I. FORMATION AND CONSTITUTION.

1. Registration.

Discretion of Registrar to Register—"The United Dental Service, Limited."]—Application was made to the Registrar of Joint-Stock Companies to register the memorandum and articles of association of a company called "The United Dental Service, Limited," which proposed to carry on the business of practitioners in dentistry. The signatories to the memorandum and articles were all unregistered practitioners in dentistry. The Registrar refused to register, on the ground that the object of the company was not lawful :—Held, that the words " United Dental Service " were not a description implying that the persons using it were qualified by diploma, &c., to be or were registered under the Dentists Act, 1878, and that, consequently, the object of the company was not unlawful. Held, further, that the registrar had no discretion to refuse to register on the ground that, even though not unlawful, the title of the company was calculated to mislead the public into the belief that the persons using the title were so qualified. Bellerby v. Heyworth (79 L. J. Ch. 402; [1910] A.C. 377) and Minter v. Snow (74 J. P. 257) applied. Panhaus v. Brown (68 J. P. 435) commented on. Rex v. Registrar of Joint-Stock Companies; Bowen, ex parte, 84 L. J. K.B. 229; [1914] 3 K.B. 1161; 112 L. T. 38; 30 T. L. R. 707—D.

Refusal to Register Name as being Calculated to Deceive—Discretion of Registrar.]—The Registrar of Companies having refused to register a company under the name of the Water Softening Materials Company (Sofnol), Limited, on the ground that the name so nearly resembled that of a company already on the register—Water Softeners, Limited—as to be calculated to deceive, the subscribers to the memorandum of the Water Softening Materials Co. (Sofnol), Lim., applied for and obtained a rule nisi for a mandamus calling upon the Registrar to shew cause why he should not register the company under that name :—Held, that the rule should be discharged, as the Court would not interfere by mandamus with the Registrar's decision. Rex v. Registrar of Companies; Paul, Ex parte, 81 L. J. K.B. 914; [1912] 3 K.B. 23; 107 L. T. 62; 19 Manson, 280; 28 T. L. R. 457—D.

Foreign Company—Obligation to File Documents with Registrar — Company Establishing a "place of business" within the United Kingdom.]—A land investment company, incorporated and having its head office in Canada, employed as agents in the United Kingdom certain Scottish legal firms who issued advertisements inviting applications for investment in the company's debentures to be lodged with them, the agents, and instructing that money invested should be paid into a Scottish bank. The debentures were executed in Ontario and issued to investors in this country through the agents. Attorneys of the company in Scotland exercised on its behalf certain powers with regard to transfers of debentures, confirmation, and probate. The company did not own or pay rent for any office, or pay salary to any official, in the United Kingdom, the remuneration of its representatives here being derived solely from commissions and fees of transference :—Held, that the company had not established a place of business in the United Kingdom within the meaning of section 274 of the Companies (Consolidation) Act, 1908. Lord Advocate v. Huron and Erie Loan and Savings Co., [1911] S. C. 612—Ct. of Sess.

Conclusiveness of Certificate — Power to Enter into Arrangement to Regulate Output and Prices—Trade Union.]—Section 1 of the Companies Act, 1900, does not make the certificate of the Registrar of Companies conclusive that the company in respect of which he has granted a certificate is validly registered and is not in reality a trade union. The section only deals with ministerial acts. The mere fact that in its memorandum and articles of association a company has power to enter into an arrangement for the regulation of the output of, and the price to be obtained for, goods—this not being one of the main objects of the company—does not constitute the company a trade union, and as such incapable of registration under the Companies Act. Edinburgh and District Aerated Water Manufacturers' Defence Association v. Jenkinson (5 Fraser, 1159) distinguished. British Association of Glass-Bottle Manufacturers v. Nettlefold, 27 T. 2. Memorandum of Association.

See also Vol. III. 760, 2355.

Life Assurance — Policies in Relation to Life Ultra Vires.]—A limited company, which, by its memorandum of association was prohibited from carrying on the business of life insurance, issued policies in two different forms. By one of these policies it undertook in consideration of a certain weekly premium to pay the policy-holder the respective sums of 6*l.*, 7*l.* 10*s.*, and 9*l.* at the end of five, ten, and fifteen years respectively; but, in the event of his death before the end of the fifteen years, all premiums paid since the last payment made by the company were to be returned to his personal representatives. By a second policy it undertook, in consideration of a certain premium, to pay the policy-holder a certain sum at the termination of a certain number of years; but, in the event of his death before the end of the term, a certain percentage of the premiums already actually paid was to be returned to his personal representatives :—Held, that policies made in either of these two forms were policies of life assurance, and therefore, as such, ultra vires the company. Joseph v. Law Integrity Insurance Co., 82 L. J. Ch. 187; [1912] 2 Ch. 581; [1913] W.C. & I. Rep. 337; 107 L. T. 538; 20 Manson, 85—C.A.

Friendly Society—Conversion into Limited Company — Members — Validity of Special Resolution.]—It was decided to convert a friendly society registered under the Friendly Societies Act, 1896, into a limited company under section 71 of the Act, and this was effected in 1913 by special resolution. No names were subscribed to the memorandum of association, and no shares had been allotted to any persons. In 1914 the company purported to pass and confirm a special resolution by which the objects clause of the memorandum was altered and extended :—Held, that upon the conversion of a friendly society, under section 71 of the Friendly Societies Act, 1896, into a limited company, the members of the society are not simultaneously converted into members of the company; that at the date of the resolution of 1914 no persons had so far agreed to become members of the company, and that the resolution was not effectively passed. Blackburn Philanthropic Assurance Co., In re, 84 L. J. Ch. 145; [1914] 2 Ch. 430; 21 Manson, 342; 58 S. J. 798—Eve, J.

Conversion of Unlimited Company into Limited Company.] — A company registered as an unlimited company, passed a special resolution resolving that the company should be registered as a limited company, and approving of a memorandum of association altering its existing constitution. The memorandum was headed "Company Limited by Shares"; it set forth the name of the company as concluding with the word "Limited"; and it expressly provided that "The liability of the shareholder is limited." In a petition for confirmation of this memorandum,—Held, that the petition was premature in respect that the company must be re-registered as a limited company under section 57 of the Companies (Consolidation) Act, 1908, before the Court could confirm a memorandum embodying the limitation of liability. Royal Exchange Buildings, Glasgow, In re, [1911] S. C. 1337—Ct. of Sess.

Alteration of—Sanction of Court—Power to Purchase other Undertakings — Power of Amalgamation—Power of Sale.]—The Court under section 9 of the Companies (Consolidation) Act, 1908, may in its discretion sanction very wide alterations of the objects of a company, including a power to purchase other undertakings, a power of amalgamation with other concerns, and a power of sale of the whole of the company's undertaking. New Westminster Brewery Co., In re, 105 L. T. 946; 56 S. J. 141—Joyce, J.

A limited company, which by its memorandum of association had power to amalgamate with any other company carrying on business within the objects of the company, presented a petition for confirmation of a special resolution by which it was proposed to alter its memorandum by adding certain powers, including a power to carry out such an amalgamation by sale of the undertaking of the company. The Court granted the prayer of the petition. Macfarlane, Strang & Co., In re, [1915] S. C. 196—Ct. of Sess.

—— Power to Acquire Similar Businesses.]—A limited company presented a petition for confirmation of a special resolution by which it was proposed to alter its memorandum of association by adding powers to acquire similar businesses; to sell the undertaking of the company; or to amalgamate with any other firm, person, or company. The Court, while confirming the power to acquire similar businesses, refused to confirm the other alterations on the ground that they were not within the alterations which a company was authorised to make by section 9, sub-section 1 of the Companies (Consolidation) Act, 1908. Walker & Sons, Lim., In re, [1914] S. C. 280—Ct. of Sess.

—— Power to Sell Branch Business to another Company for Debentures or Shares—Power to Pay for Debentures or Shares.] — Among the objects of a company as defined by its memorandum of association were the selling of all or any part of its property in such manner and on such terms and for such purposes as the company should think proper; the making and carrying into effect of arrangements with respect to the union of interests or amalgamation, in whole or in part, with any other company having objects similar to those of the company; and the doing of all such other things as were incidental or conducive to the attainment of the company's objects :—Held, that these provisions empowered the company to sell a branch business to a new company formed for the purpose of purchasing it and the business of another company of the same character, in consideration of debentures or shares of the new company; and also to apply its assets in order to provide working capital for the new company, and for that purpose to pay for debentures or shares. Thomas & Co., In re; The Company v. Sully, 84 L. J. Ch. 232; [1915] 1 Ch. 325; 112 L. T. 408—Warrington, J.

—— Extension of Principal Objects—Addition of Objects Incidental to Principal Objects—Company Desiring at Future Time to Carry on New Business—Principles upon which Court will Sanction Alterations in Memorandum—Advertisement of New Objects.]—J. B. & Co., Lim., carried on an extensive business in shipbuilding and the manufacture of armaments, and the T. Co., Lim., carried on an extensive colliery business. Both companies desired to extend greatly the objects of the company as stated in their respective memorandums, and presented petitions under section 9 of the Companies (Consolidation) Act, 1908, for the approval by the Court of certain proposed alterations in the memorandum :—Held, that if a company is considering the present expansion of its principal business by the adoption of other businesses, the Court will consider the desirability of altering its memorandum, but the Court will not meet the possibility of the company some day or other desiring to carry on another principal business, because the company can always come again to the Court when they have a reasonable intention of so doing. Held also, that, as regards subsidiary businesses, every facility would be given, but that it must not be within the discretion of the directors to treat subsidiary objects as principal objects. Brown & Co., In re; Tredegar Iron and Coal Co., In re, 84 L. J. Ch. 245; 112 L. T. 232; 59 S. J. 146—Neville, J.

Proposed alterations in memorandum sanctioned when reduced in number and simplified, and with a clause inserted to the effect that none of the additional objects should be undertaken except as subsidiary objects unless by sanction of a special resolution of the company. Ib.

—— Power to Lease Undertaking.] — The Court under section 9 of the Companies (Consolidation) Act, 1908, may in its discretion sanction alterations of the objects of a company, including a power to lease the whole undertaking of the company. Anglo-American Telegraph Co., In re, 105 L. T. 947; 56 S. J. 141—Joyce, J.

—— Statement of Objects of Company.]—In a petition for confirmation of a memorandum embodying alterations in the constitution of an unlimited company which was about to become a company limited by shares,—Held, that the proposed memorandum must state the objects of the company ad longum, and not by a mere reference to the document which set forth the original constitution of the company. Royal Exchange Buildings, Glasgow, In re, [1911] S. C. 1337—Ct. of Sess.

3. Articles of Association.

See also Vol. III. 786, 2363.

Power in Articles to Sell Member's Shares — Fixed Price — Less than Market Value — Injunction.] — The defendant company's articles empowered the company to determine that the shares of any member should be offered for sale to the other members at not less than 1*s.* a share. The plaintiff was a director and shareholder, and in August, 1914, the company resolved, in spite of the plaintiff's protest, to increase the price of certain articles to the Admiralty and the hospitals. The resolution was afterwards modified, but the plaintiff resigned his membership, and was removed from the directorate, and the company resolved to sell at 1*s.* a share the plaintiff's 1*l.* shares, although their market value was 1*l.* each :—Held, that the plaintiff was entitled to an injunction to restrain the defendant company from acting in pursuance of the resolution. Phillips v. Manufacturers' Securities, Lim., 31 T. L. R. 451—Eve, J.

Arbitration Clause — Action by Member — Application to Stay—Contract between Company and Members — Submission to Arbitration.]—The plaintiff, in 1905, signed a form of application for membership to the defendant company by which he agreed to conform to the rules and regulations of the association, and was informed by a letter from the secretary that he had been elected a member. Article 49 of the articles of association provided that differences between the association and any of the members relating to any of the affairs of the association should be referred to the decision of an arbitrator. In 1914 the plaintiff issued a writ against the association and its secretary, claiming injunctions and declarations in respect of matters which related solely to the affairs of the association, and seeking to enforce his rights under the articles of association of the defendant company. The defendants issued a summons to have the proceedings in the action stayed, pursuant to section 4 of the Arbitration Act, 1889, and to refer the matters in dispute to arbitration in accordance with the terms of article 49 :—Held, that general articles dealing with the rights of members as such should be treated as a statutory agreement between the members and the company, as well as between themselves inter se, and article 49 constituted a submission to arbitration within the meaning of the Arbitration Act, 1889; and that being so, there was a prima facie duty on the Court to act upon such an agreement, and therefore the proceedings in the action must be stayed pursuant to section 4 of that Act. Hickman v. Kent or Romney Marsh Sheep-Breeders' Association, 84 L. In construing section 14, sub-section 1 of the Companies (Consolidation) Act, 1908, the company should be treated as a party to its own articles, and the covenants by the members as covenants with the company; and if a submission is in writing, and is binding on both parties as their agreement or as the equivalent in law to an agreement between them, sections 4 and 27 of the Arbitration Act, 1889, are satisfied. Baker v. Yorkshire Fire and Life Assurance Co. (61 L. Held, further, that the application form for membership, signed by the plaintiff and accepted by the company, constituted a contract between the plaintiff and the company, and was a submission in writing within the meaning of the Arbitration Act, 1889. Ib.

Altering so as to Commit Breach of Contract.]—A company cannot alter its articles so as to commit a breach of contract; and therefore if a contract between the company and another party involves as one of its terms that a particular article is not to be altered, the company is not at liberty to alter that article, and will be restrained by injunction from doing so. Allen v. Gold Reefs of West Africa (69 L. Purchase by Promoter to Re-sell to Company—Sale by Promoters of "benefit of lease" to Company — Promoters having no Binding Agreement for Lease—Promoters not Trustees of Lease for Company.] — On January 10, 1912, the defendants commenced negotiations for the acquisition of a lease of certain premises with a view to selling them to a company which they intended to promote. By January 31, 1912, the main terms of the lease had been arranged, but the settling of plans, &c., delayed completion, so that the lease was not granted to the defendants until May 13, 1912. At no time prior to this date was there any enforceable agreement for the grant of the lease to the defendants. On March 28, 1912, the company, which had been incorporated on March 25, 1912, by a board of directors who were not independent, affirmed a contract whereby the defendants agreed to sell to the company "the benefit of the lease agreed to be granted" to them with the benefit of certain plans and arrangements, and to pay the preliminary expenses of the formation of the company in consideration of 1,500*l.* in cash and shares. The memorandum and articles of the company stated that the company was to enter into this contract. The company paid the consideration, took possession of the premises, and had the lease assigned to them on June 4, 1912. The company claimed that the defendants were liable as promoters to make good to the company such part of the consideration as was attributable to "the benefit of the lease agreed to be granted" to them, on the ground that at the date of the contract the defendants had no beneficial interest in the lease and had subsequently acquired it as trustees for the company:—Held, that the defendants had not obtained the lease as trustees for the company and had made no secret profit, and that, the company having obtained what it bargained for, the action failed. Omnium Electric Palaces, Lim. v. Baines, 83 L. Untrue Statements—Directors' Liability—"Reasonable ground" for Believing Statements to be True—Uncorroborated Statements of Vendor and Promoter.] — The uncorroborated statements of a vendor-promoter of a company afford by themselves no "reasonable ground" to the directors for believing such statements in a prospectus issued by them to be true, so as to relieve the directors from liability to persons subscribing for shares on the faith of the prospectus for the loss or damage sustained by reason of such statements if untrue. Adams v. Thrift, 84 L. J. Ch. 729; [1915] 2 Ch. 21; 113 L. T. 569—C.A.

Misrepresentation — Non-disclosure — Repudiation of Shares — Motion to Rectify Register—Laches and Acquiescence—Explanation of Delay.] — In February, 1910, the applicant was allotted shares in a company. In the middle of May, or at latest by the end of July, the applicant became fully aware of misrepresentations in the prospectus. In December he moved to have his name removed from the register:—Held, that the unexplained delay of five months precluded him from obtaining relief. Christineville Rubber Estates, In re, 81 L. J. Ch. 63; 106 L. T. 260; 19 Manson, 78; 56 S. J. 53; 28 T. L. R. 38—Eve, J.

When a shareholder comes to the Court to be relieved of his shares on the ground of misrepresentation arising from non-disclosure, it is not enough for him to say that had he known the fact he would not have applied for shares; he must be prepared to put his finger on the statements which he relies upon as contradictory of or inconsistent with the facts not disclosed. Brookes v. Hansen (75 L. J. Ch. 450; [1906] 2 Ch. 129) followed. Ib.

——Agreement to Take Shares—Rectification of Register — Fraud.] — Any person who authorises another to act for him in the making of any contract undertakes that the authority so given should not be executed fraudulently, as much as if he had made the contract himself. Therefore, where a shareholder was induced to take shares in a company on the faith of a report made by one of the directors to the company, and published by them in a prospectus, which was not true in fact, and was alleged to have been made fraudulently, he was held entitled to bring an action to have his name removed from the list of shareholders on the ground of fraud, every director being the agent of the company to make the representations contained in the prospectus. Mair v. Rio Grande Rubber Estates, 83 L. J. P.C. 35; [1913] A.C. 853; 20 Manson, 342; 57 S. J. 728; 29 T. L. R. 692—H.L. (Sc.)

—— Statements Founded on Report of Expert—Share Contract—Removal from List of Contributories.]—The prospectus of a rubber and produce company contained—First, extracts from an expert's report as to the nature of the company's property; secondly, statements by directors purporting to be based on the report; and thirdly, estimates of profits by the directors based upon the report. The prospectus was in many respects inaccurate, and was as a whole calculated to mislead:—Held, that the case was not within the exception laid down by Turner, L.J., and Cairns, L.J., in their judgments in Reese River Silver Mining Co., In re; Smith, ex parte (36 L. J. Ch. 618, 620, 622; L. R. 2 Ch. 604, 611, 615), and affirmed in British Burma Lead Co., In re; Vickers, ex parte (56 L. T. 815); for the directors had asked for subscriptions on the faith of their own statements, had given credit to the report, and had represented as facts what was stated therein:—Held, consequently, that the holder of partly paid shares in the company who had subscribed for them in reliance on the prospectus was entitled to have his name removed from the list of contributories in the winding-up of the company. Pacaya Rubber and Produce Co., In re; Burns' Case, 83 L. J. Ch. 432; [1914] 1 Ch. 542; 110 L. T. 578; 21 Manson, 186; 58 S. J. 269; 30 T. L. R. 260—Astbury, J.

Second or Subsequent Prospectus—Omission to Refer to Previous Offer of Shares—Remedy for Non-compliance with Statute—Rescission.]—Rescission is not a remedy available to a person who has applied for and obtained shares in a company upon the footing of a prospectus which failed to comply with the requirements, in the case of a second or subsequent offer of shares, of clause (d) of section 81, sub-section 1 of the Companies (Consolidation) Act, 1908. The applicant's remedy (if any) is an action for damages against the directors or other persons responsible for the prospectus. Wimbledon Olympia, Lim., In re (79 L. J. Statement in Lieu of Prospectus—Inaccurate Statement of Required Particulars—Issue of Shares not Void.]—Where a company which does not issue a prospectus on its formation files with the Registrar of Companies a statement in lieu of prospectus as required by section 82, sub-section 1 of the Companies (Consolidation) Act, 1908, in the form set out in the Second Schedule to the Act, and which in form is reasonably complete, the subsequent issue of shares and debentures of the company will not be void, notwithstanding that the particulars contained in the statement are in fact inaccurate and incomplete, unless the statement is so insufficient as to be illusory and amount to no statement at all. Blair Open Hearth Furnace Co., In re, 83 L. "Paid-up share Capital." —The promoters of the N. Railway Co. obtained an Act which incorporated the Companies Clauses Consolidation (Scotland) Act, 1845, the Companies Clauses Act, 1863, and Acts amending the same. A schedule to the Act contained an agreement between the company and the N. B. Co., whereby the latter company guaranteed a fixed dividend upon "the paid-up share capital" of the N. Co. The N. Co., having failed to obtain sufficient subscriptions to their shares, entered into an agreement with a syndicate whereby the company undertook to issue to the syndicate their whole unissued capital, and the syndicate undertook to construct the railway. It was established by proof that the cost of construction was about 60 per cent. of the face value of the capital issued to the syndicate, and that the syndicate disposed of the shares so issued at less than par:—Held (diss. the Lord President, Lord Kinnear, and Lord Dundas), that the capital so issued to the syndicate was not "paid-up share capital" of the N. Co. in the sense of the agreement with the N. B. Co., and that the N. B. Co. were only bound to contribute to the dividend on so much of the capital of the N. Co. as was issued in consideration of cash or the equivalent of cash. Held, further (diss. Lord Johnston), that it was competent for the Railway and Canal Commissioners, sitting as arbiters, to determine what amount of the capital was issued in consideration of cash or the equivalent of cash. Newburgh and North Fife Railway v. North British Railway, [1913] S. Sale Contract — New Issue — Refusal of Sanction of Treasury—Contract for Sale at an End—Motion by Purchaser.]—Where a contract between two companies shewed that it was to be performed in a short time, and provided for sale, so much to be paid in cash on or before April 15, 1915, "or at a date not being later than one calendar month after the sanction of the Treasury has been obtained to the issue" of certain capital, and there had been an unconditional refusal by the Treasury to sanction the new issue:—Held, that the purchasing company were not entitled to have their contract performed. East Indies Commercial Co. v. Nilambur Rubber Estates, 59 S. Power to Increase Given to Directors—Power to Issue to Company in General Meeting.]—Held, on the construction of the articles of association of the appellant company, that, although the directors had power by their own resolution alone to create new shares, such new shares could not be issued without a resolution of the company in general meeting. Koffyfontein Mines, Lim. v. Mosely, 80 L. Table A—Additional Capital Authorised by Provisional Order—No Special Resolution for Increase—Right of Holders to Share in Distribution of Surplus Assets.]—Where the articles provided that the capital of a certain gas and water company might be increased by special resolution, and Provisional Orders were made under the Gas and Waterworks Facilities Act, 1870, purporting to effect such increase of capital:—Held, that the issue of such additional capital was valid, and that the holders thereof were entitled to be treated as members in the distribution of the surplus assets, although no special resolution had in fact been passed authorising such issue. New Tredegar Gas and Water Co., In re, 59 S. 3. Re-organisation of.

Petition—Advertisement.]—It is not necessary to advertise a petition for re-organisation of share capital. Ashanti Development, Lim., In re, 27 T. L. R. 498—Eve, J.

Resolution for Effecting Modification of Memorandum.]—Section 45, sub-section 1 of the Companies (Consolidation) Act, 1908, provides that "a company limited by shares may, by special resolution confirmed by an order of the Court, modify the conditions contained in its memorandum so as to reorganise its share capital, whether by the consolidation of shares of different classes or by the division of its shares into shares of different classes: "Provided that no preference or special privilege attached to or belonging to any class of shares shall be interfered with except by a resolution passed by a majority in number of shareholders of that class holding three-fourths of the share capital of that class, and confirmed at a meeting of shareholders of that class in the same manner as a special resolution of the company is required to be confirmed, and every resolution so passed shall bind all shareholders of the class":—Held, that to comply with the above proviso a majority of three-fourths in value of the shareholders of the particular class must be present or represented when the resolution is passed; that the resolution must be passed at a meeting; and that voting by proxy is allowable when voting by proxy at general meetings is allowed by the articles of association. Fouear & Co., In re, 29 T. L. R. 350—Sargant, J.

Partly Paid Shares—Subdivision—Division of Unissued Preference Shares.]—In a re-organisation of share capital, in accordance with the provisions of section 45 of the Companies (Consolidation) Act, 1908, a company may divide each of its 1*l.* preference shares, on which 15*s.* is paid, into two different shares of 10*s.*, called respectively the A preference shares and the B preference shares, and may treat the A preference shares as being fully paid and the B preference shares as being 5*s.* paid and 5*s.* uncalled. Vine and General Rubber Trust, In re, 108 L. T. 709; 57 S. J. 610—Neville, J.

Scheme of Arrangement — Alteration of Memorandum—Interference with Preferential Rights.]—The Companies (Consolidation) Act, 1908, s. 45, gives power inferentially to modify preferential rights created by the memorandum of association, so that a preference given to any class of shareholders by the memorandum cannot be interfered with except upon the conditions laid down in that section. Section 120 does not give express authority to alter capital or interfere with preferential rights, and compliance with its conditions in such cases is insufficient. Palace Hotel, Lim., In re (81 L. J. Ch. 695; [1912] 2 Ch. 438), not followed. Doecham Gloves, Lim., In re, 82 L. J. Ch. 165; [1913] 1 Ch. 226; 107 L. T. 817; 20 Manson, 79—Neville, J.

Interference with Privileges Attached to a Class of Shares.]—By a company's memorandum of association the ordinary shares were limited to 300,000*l.*, with certain preferences and privileges attached thereto by the articles, and the memorandum of association forbade any increase of capital which would prejudice such preferential rights. It was proposed by a scheme of arrangement between the company and its ordinary shareholders to issue 100,000 new ordinary shares to the existing ordinary shareholders, such shares to have similar rights and priorities to those of the ordinary shares of the initial capital and to rank pari passu therewith:—Held, that the new issue of shares would in no way prejudice the preferential rights of the existing ordinary shareholders, and therefore that the proposals in the scheme were consistent with the memorandum of association; and held, that the scheme could in any case be sanctioned under section 120 of the Companies (Consolidation) Act, 1908, without compliance with the requirements of section 45, which only applied when it was desired to modify the conditions of the memorandum so as to reorganise the share capital, either (a) by the consolidation of shares of different classes, or (b) by the division of shares into shares of different classes. Palace Hotel, Lim., In re (81 L. J. Ch. 695; [1912] 2 Ch. 438), followed. Doecham Gloves, Lim., In re (82 L. J. Ch. 165; [1913] 1 Ch. 226), overruled. Schweppes, Lim., In re, 83 L. J. Ch. 296; [1914] 1 Ch. 322; 110 L. T. 246; 21 Manson, 82; 58 S. J. 185; 30 T. L. R. 201—C.A.

Decision of Astbury, J. (58 S. J. 139; 30 T. L. R. 96), reversed. Ib.

Meetings of Shareholders.]—A company, whose capital was divided by its memorandum into ordinary and preference shares, proposed to convert certain unissued preference shares into ordinary shares, and to attach to the preference shares a right to participate pari passu with the ordinary shareholders in the surplus profits. A resolution to that effect was passed and confirmed at a general meeting, and also at meetings of the preference shareholders, but there were no separate meetings of the ordinary shareholders. The Court confirmed the special resolution, holding that it was unnecessary that there should have been separate meetings of the ordinary shareholders. Stewart Precision Carburettor Co., In re, 56 S. J. 413; 28 T. L. R. 335—Eve, J.

4. Return of.

Accumulated Profits—Prosperous Company—Resolution for Return on Fully Paid Shares only.]—The issued capital of a limited company consisted of 40,000 preference and 60,000 ordinary shares, all of 5*l.* each. The former and 6,047 of the latter were fully paid, but only 1*l.* per share was paid on the remainder. The company had paid 10 per cent. dividends on its ordinary shares, and had accumulated a large reserve out of undivided profits; and a special resolution was passed and confirmed to return thereout 4*l.* per share on the 6,047 shares. Two of the holders of those shares having moved to restrain the company from acting on the resolution:—Held, that the proposed return was authorised by section 40 of the Companies (Consolidation) Act, 1908. Neale v. Birmingham Tramways Co., 79 L. 5. Reduction of.

See also Vol. III. 876, 2380.

Scheme—Payment off of Part of Class of Shares—Payment by Debentures.]—A scheme for reduction of capital which involves the payment off of some only and not all of one class of shares, and imposes on the shareholders whose shares are to be extinguished the obligation to accept debenture stock in lieu of cash, may, if equitable, be a scheme for the reduction of a company's share capital within section 46 of the Companies (Consolidation) Act, 1908, which may be confirmed by the Court. Nixon's Navigation Co., In re, (66 L. J. Ch. 406; [1897] 1 Ch. 872), followed. De la Rue & Co., In re, 81 L. J. Ch. 59; [1911] 2 Ch. 361; 105 L. T. 542; 19 Manson, 71; 55 S. J. 715—Eve, J.

——Costs of Dissentient Shareholder.]—It may be made a term of confirmation of the scheme that the company should pay the costs of a dissentient shareholder who has assisted the Court by his criticism. Ib.

——Debentures to Bearer — Extraordinary Resolution—Trust Deed—Power to Modify Rights in General Meeting — Consent of Creditors—Sanction of Court.]—A scheme for reduction of capital provided for the transfer of the undertaking from the old company to a new, and (inter alia) that the holders of bearer debentures in the old company should give up half their holding and accept debentures of the new company in satisfaction. The scheme was duly approved, and the usual advertisements published as to creditors. The debenture trust deed provided that the holders in general meeting should have power to modify their rights against the company, and that a resolution passed by a three-fourths majority at a meeting duly summoned should bind all the debenture-holders. A resolution with the requisite majority was accordingly passed approving the scheme. The names of the holders, however, were not included in the list of creditors settled under section 49, subsection 2 of the Companies (Consolidation) Acts, 1908, and some of the holders were not known. The debenture-holders had surrendered half their holding in accordance with the scheme and the new debentures had been issued:—Held, that the resolutions passed at the debenture-holders' meeting, and the surrender of their holding in accordance with the scheme, were together sufficient evidence of consent within the meaning of the Companies (Consolidation) Act, 1908, s. 50, and of rule 17 of the General Order (Reduction of Capital), 1909. Hydraulic Power and Smelting Co., In re, 83 L. J. Ch. 753; [1914] 2 Ch. 187; 111 L. T. 451; 21 Manson, 288—Astbury, J.

Objecting Creditor—Security for Creditor's Debt—Debt Due for Future Rent—Whether Debt Contingent.]—A company occupying premises under a lease of which four years had still to run presented a petition for confirmation of a resolution to reduce its capital. The landlords of the premises objected to the reduction of capital unless provision was made to secure the payment of their rent during the remainder of the lease. The company offered to appropriate in security a sum less than the full amount of the rents to become due, and maintained that, the landlords' debt being contingent, the Court should approve of the offer as sufficient:—Held, that, as the company admitted the full amount of the debt, and as that amount was neither contingent nor unascertained, the case fell under section 49, sub-section 3 (i) of the Companies (Consolidation) Act, 1908, and the company was bound to provide security for the full amount of the debt; and on the company stating that they were not prepared to do so, the Court dismissed the petition. Palace Billiard Rooms, Lim. v. City Property Investment Trust Corporation, [1912] S. C. 5—Ct. of Sess.

Capital Consisting of Stock only.]—When the capital of a company consists only of stock, a reduction of the capital of the company can be effected by cancelling a part of the stock. House Property and Investment Co., In re, 106 L. T. 949; 56 S. J. 505—Neville, J.

Minute — Shares Paid up in Different Amounts—Numerous Groups of Shares.]—The minute for reduction of capital, drawn up in accordance with section 51 of the Companies (Consolidation) Act, 1908, must contain, among other particulars, the denoting numbers of the shares referred to in it, but the notice of the registration of such minute need not contain such denoting numbers; but may be in such shortened form as the Court may direct. Oceana Development Co., In re, 56 S. J. 537—Swinfen Eady, J.

Minute—Number of Forfeited Shares.]—A company had power under its articles to reissue forfeited shares as paid up to the amount which had been paid or as wholly unpaid. The company resolved to reduce its capital by writing off lost capital, including five shares on each of which 2*s.* 6*d.* had been paid, but which had been forfeited for non-payment of calls:—Held, that the numbers of these five shares must be set out in the minute confirming the reduction of capital. Oceana Development Co., In re (56 S. J. 537), followed. Wolf & Son, Lim., In re, 57 S. J. 146—Neville, J.

Preference and Ordinary Shares—Alteration of Preferential Rights Defined by Memorandum.]—Where a company, acting under the provisions of section 120 of the Companies (Consolidation) Act, 1908, reduces its capital by a compromise between different classes of shareholders, whereby each class of share is written down in value and the dividend due to the preference shareholders is reduced, such compromise is not a consolidation of shares of different classes, or division of shares into shares of different classes, within the meaning of section 45 of the same Act, and the formalities required by the latter section need not be observed. Palace Hotel, Lim., In re, 81 L. J. Ch. 695; [1912] 2 Ch. 438; 107 L. T. 521; 19 Manson, 295; 56 S. J. 649—Swinfen Eady, J.

Section 45 of the Companies (Consolidation) Act, 1908, is not an enabling section, but a section limiting the general power to make arrangements under section 120 of that Act. Its application is confined to the two cases mentioned in the section—namely, where it is proposed to alter the memorandum of association either (a) by the consolidation of shares of different classes, or (b) by the division of shares into shares of different classes. In other cases where a scheme of arrangement interferes with rights conferred by the memorandum compliance with section 120 of the Act is sufficient. Palace Hotel, Lim., In re (81 L. J. Ch. 695; [1912] 2 Ch. 438), and dictum of Cozens-Hardy, M.R., in Schweppes, Lim., In re (83 L. J. Ch. 296, 301; [1914] 1 Ch. 322, 330), followed. Nordberg, Lim., In re, 84 L. J. Discretion of Court to Enquire into Reasons of Reduction.]—The Court confirmed a resolution for reduction of the capital of a company which proceeded on the statement that capital had been lost, although from the report of an accountant, to whom the Court had remitted the matter, it appeared that no capital had in fact been lost. Caldwell & Co. v. Caldwell, [1915] S. C. 527—Ct. of Sess.

Per Lord Skerrington: Although under the Companies (Consolidation) Act, 1908, the Court has an absolute discretion to confirm or refuse to confirm a reduction of capital, yet the question whether capital has been lost is regarded by the statute as one which is to be disposed of by the company. There may possibly be cases where it would be the duty of the Court to enter into an enquiry on the subject, but they would be very exceptional. Ib.

Shares Forfeited after Part Payment—Power to Treat as Unissued.]—It was provided by one of the articles of association of a company that every share which should be forfeited should thereupon become the property of the company, and the directors might sell, re-allot, or otherwise dispose of the same upon such terms and in such manner as they should think fit. On a petition for reduction of capital,—Held, that the forfeited shares could be treated as unissued and with nothing paid thereon, although the sum of 82*l.* 7*s.* 6*d.* had in fact been paid in respect of them. The principle of Oceana Development Co., In re (56 S. J. 537), applied. Victoria (Malay) Rubber Estates, In re, 58 S. J. 706—Astbury, J.

Assent of Shareholders—Jurisdiction of Court.]—Circumstances in which the Court has jurisdiction to sanction a scheme for the reduction of the capital of a company with the assent of the majority of the shareholders. Showell's Brewery Co., In re, 30 T. L. R. 428—Astbury, J.

Dispensing with Words "and reduced"—Company Carrying on Business Abroad.]—It is not the general practice to allow the use of the words "and reduced" to be dispensed with in the case of companies carrying on business abroad. Lindner & Co., [1911] W. N. 66—Joyce, J.

——Common Seal.]—On a petition to confirm a reduction of the capital of a company, the Court dispensed with the use of the words "and reduced" on the common seal of the company. Knowles & Sons, Lim., In re, 57 S. J. 212—Neville, J.

Failure to Insert Words "and reduced."]—Petition for confirmation of reduction of capital refused in respect of the omission, on and from the presentation of the petition, to add the words "and reduced" as part of the name of the company, in accordance with section 48 of the Companies (Consolidation) Act, 1908. Clark & Co., In re, [1911] S. C. 243—Ct. of Sess.

III. DIRECTORS.

1. Appointment and Removal.

a. Appointment.

Agreement that Particular Body may Nominate Directors—Specific Performance—Contract of Service—Injunction.]—An agreement that a shareholder, so long as he continues to hold shares, shall have the right of appointing or nominating a director of the company is not unenforceable specifically as a contract of service, but is capable of being enforced by injunction; though the Court will not by injunction force the company to accept on its board persons who are unfit or thoroughly unacceptable as directors. Bainbridge v. Smith (41 Ch. D. 462) distinguished. British Murac Syndicate v. Alperton Rubber Co., 84 L. J. Ch. 665; [1915] 2 Ch. 186; 113 L. T. 373; 59 S. J. 494; 31 T. L. R. 391—Sargant, J.

Whether Appointment by Board or at Meeting of Company.] — The articles of association of a company provided that "the directors may from time to time appoint additional directors, but so that the total number of directors shall not exceed the prescribed maximum" :—Held, that the company had delegated to the board of directors the power of appointing additional directors, and therefore that the purported appointment by the company at an extraordinary general meeting of the defendants as additional directors was invalid. Blair Open Hearth Furnace Co. v. Reigart, 108 L. T. 665; 57 S. J. 500; 29 T. L. R. 449—Eve, J.

Named First Directors — Provision for "Continuing" Directors to Act—Acts by Less than Minimum Number of Directors—Validity.]—The articles of association of a company provided that the number of directors should not be less than four; that two named persons should be the first directors; that these two named directors should have power to appoint further directors; and that "continuing" directors should be empowered to act, notwithstanding any vacancy in their body, provided that they constituted a certain fixed quorum :—Held, that all these provisions must be read together; but that the provision that the directors should not be less than four was imperative; that the two named first directors were accordingly not capable of acting by themselves (except to appoint the necessary two additional directors); and that these two named first directors, and a third whom they had appointed, were not "continuing" directors within the meaning of the articles, so as to be capable, in the absence of the appointment of a fourth director, of acting on behalf of the company. Sly, Spink & Co., In re; Hertslet's Case; Macdonald's Case, 81 L. J. Ch. 55; [1911] 2 Ch. 430; 105 L. T. 364; 19 Manson, 65—Neville, J.

Occasional Vacancy—Less than Prescribed Number of Directors Remaining—Power of Election by Sole Remaining Director—Allotment of Shares—Irregularity.]—A light railway company was incorporated by an Order which was confirmed by the Board of Trade under the Light Railways Act, 1896. The Order incorporated the Companies Clauses Consolidation Act, 1845, and provided that the number of directors should be five, but that it might be varied so as not to be less than three, and that there should be a share qualification of directors, and that the quorum of a meeting of the directors should be three, but that if the number of directors was reduced to three the quorum should be two. Three persons were named in the Order as the first directors, together with two other persons to be nominated by them. These latter were never nominated, but the number of the directors was properly reduced to three, and the three named directors were continued in office. Two of them subsequently ceased to be directors. The sole remaining director thereupon purported to appoint two other persons to be directors who had not the necessary qualification as shareholders at the time of their appointment. At the same meeting or subsequently on the same day the necessary qualification shares were duly allotted to the newly appointed directors, all the parties honestly believing that it was sufficient that, if contemporaneously with, although in point of time immediately after, the appointment the qualifying shares were obtained :—Held, that, having regard to the interpretation clause, section 3 of the Companies Clauses Consolidation Act, 1845, which provides that "words importing the plural number only shall include the singular number," the only remaining director could exercise the powers conferred on "the remaining directors" by section 89 of the Act, and could validly elect new directors to fill up the vacancy caused by the retirement of his two colleagues; but that, as he could only appoint persons who had the requisite qualification as shareholders at the time of their appointment, the subsequent obtaining of the qualification shares did not validate the purported appointment of the two new directors. Held, however, that, as all the parties in the transaction were acting in good faith, their acts as directors or de facto directors were protected by section 99 of the Act, and that therefore, notwithstanding the subsequent discovery of the defect in the appointment of the new directors, the allotment of the shares to them was valid. Channell Collieries Trust v. St. Margaret's, Dover, and Martin Mill Light Railway, 84 L. b. Disqualification.

Vacating Office — "If concerned in or participates in profits of any contract with company."]—By the articles of association of a company it was provided that the office of director should be vacated in certain events, one of which was : "If he is concerned in or participates in the profits of any contract with the company" :—Held, that under this provision a director vacated his office if he was concerned in any contract with the company, although he might not have participated in any profits therefrom; and further, that the provision was not confined to cases where the director was personally concerned in contracts with the company. Star Steam Laundry Co. v. Dukas, 108 L. T. 367; 57 S. J. 390; 29 T. L. R. 269—Farwell, L.J.

——Acceptance of any other Office in Company—Solicitor of Company Appointed Director.]—The articles of association of a company provided that the directors were to be not more than five or less than three in number, and that a director should ipso facto vacate his office if he accepted or held any other office of the company except that of managing director or manager. A resolution having been passed that a firm of solicitors, two of whom were directors of the company, should be solicitors to the company :—Held, that the resolution to appoint two of the directors to act as solicitors to the company did not disqualify those directors, and therefore that a debenture issued to the plaintiff by the directors was not void as being issued without authority. Harper's Ticket Issuing and Recording Machine, In re, 57 S. J. 78; 29 T. L. R. 63—Eve, J.

——If Holder becomes Bankrupt, Lunatic, or "Insolvent."]—By one of the articles of association of the defendant company it was provided that "the office of a director shall ipso facto be vacated if he become bankrupt, lunatic, or insolvent. . . ." In June, 1910, the plaintiff, who was at that time a director of the defendant company, was financially involved. He had three principal creditors to whom he owed considerable sums, and he wrote to them asking them to accept a composition, holding out as an inducement to them to do so the statement that his other creditors had agreed to accept a composition of about one-seventh of their claims. The claims of these three creditors were settled in August, 1910, upon the terms suggested:—Held, that the plaintiff had in June, 1910, become insolvent within the meaning of the article of association, and therefore that he had ceased to be a director of the defendant company. James v. Rockwood Colliery Co., 106 L. T. 128; 56 S. J. 292; 28 T. L. R. 215—D.

——Insolvency—Notorious and Avowed Insolvency.]—By the articles of association of the defendant company, which was incorporated in February, 1912, the office of a director was to be vacated if he (inter alia) became bankrupt or insolvent or compounded with his creditors or became of unsound mind. C. was one of the first directors, and was appointed chairman, and was entitled to a salary at the rate of 150*l*. a year as director and chairman. C. assigned to the plaintiffs his salary as director and chairman for the quarter ending February 1, 1913. The plaintiffs having sued as assignees of the debt, the defendants alleged that C. had become insolvent before the beginning of the quarter, and had thereby ceased to be a director. It was proved that between 1908 and 1912 seventeen bankruptcy petitions were presented against C. in the London Bankruptcy Court, and between 1909 and 1913 twelve bankruptcy petitions were presented against him in the County Court, all of which were dismissed by consent, though C. paid nothing in respect of any of them. C. was called as a witness, and admitted that in the summer of 1912 he did not meet his liabilities immediately as and when they became due, but he said that he never instructed his solicitor to settle with his creditors, nor did he ever have a meeting of his creditors. He was cross-examined on a letter written by his solicitor to a creditor in December, 1912, stating that C.'s affairs were very embarrassed, and that it was intended to ask his creditors to give him time, and also on an affidavit made by himself in the same month stating that he intended to make an offer to his creditors. The Judge of the City of London Court found that C. was in fact and within the meaning of the articles of association insolvent during the whole of 1912 and the early part of 1913, and he gave judgment for the defendants:—Held, that, assuming the word "insolvent" in the articles of association to refer to such a notorious or avowed insolvency as was spoken of in Reg. v. Saddlers' Co. (32 L. J. Q.B. 337; 10 H.L. C. 404), there was evidence on which the Judge of the City of London Court could find that C. was at the relevant time insolvent within the meaning of the articles of association. London and Counties Assets Co. v. Brighton Grand Concert Hall and Picture Palace (84 L. 2. Authority and Powers.

Appointment of Managing Director.]—The directors of a company were empowered by the 99th article of association to appoint a managing director, and by the 113th article to carry on the management of the business of the company, subject to such regulations as might be prescribed by the company in general meeting. The directors appointed one of their number as managing director, contrary to the wishes of a majority of the shareholders, who at a general meeting carried a resolution that another should be appointed:—Held, that the appointment of a managing director was vested in the directors, and was outside the provisions of article 113. Logan v. Davis, 104 L. T. 914; 55 S. J. 498—Warrington, J. Appeal dismissed, 105 L. T. 419—C.A.

——Power to Revoke Appointment—Appointment without Reservation of Power to Revoke—Ultra Vires—Dismissal of Managing Director.]—By the articles of association of the defendant company the directors might appoint one or more of their number to be managing director or managing directors on such terms as to remuneration and for such period as they might deem fit, and might revoke such appointment. In 1908 the directors entered into an agreement with the plaintiff by which they appointed him a managing director of the company. The agreement provided that the plaintiff should hold the office so long as he should remain a director of the company and retain his due qualification and should efficiently perform the duties of the said office. The plaintiff was to have the right of resigning his office at any time on giving six calendar months' notice in writing, but no corresponding right was given to the company. In 1912 the directors revoked the appointment of the plaintiff as managing director, notwithstanding that he was still director of the company and retained his due qualification and had efficiently performed the duties of his office. The plaintiff claimed damages from the company for breach of the agreement and for wrongful dismissal:—Held, that the plaintiff was entitled to recover; for the directors were not empowered by the articles of association to revoke the appointment at will or otherwise than in accordance with the terms of the agreement. Nelson v. Nelson & Sons, Lim., 83 L. Board Meeting—Converting Casual Meeting of Directors into Board Meeting.]—If directors of a company are willing to hold a meeting of the board they may hold one under any circumstances; but a casual meeting of the two directors, even at the company's office, cannot be converted into a board meeting if one of them denies that it is a board meeting, and has not received a notice sent by the other as chairman of the board calling a board meeting. Barron v. Potter; Potter v. Berry (No. 1), 83 L. J. Ch. 646; [1914] 1 Ch. 895; 110 L. T. 929; 21 Manson, 260; 58 S. J. 516; 30 T. L. R. 401—Warrington, J.

Directors Unable or Unwilling to Exercise Powers — Deadlock — Right of Company to Exercise Powers.]—Although in cases where there is a board of directors ready and willing to act a limited company cannot, except by an alteration of the articles of association, override powers conferred on the directors by the articles, the company can itself exercise those powers if a deadlock exists owing to the fact that the directors are unable or unwilling to exercise them, and are for practical purposes a non-existing body. Observations of Cotton, L.J., and Fry, L.J., in Isle of Wight Railway v. Tahourdin (53 L. J. Ch. 353; 25 Ch. D. 320) applied. Ib.

Contract with Another Company in which Director Holds Shares — Shares Held as Trustee—Conflict of Duties and Interests—Notice—Rescission.]—Where a director of a company is a shareholder in another company, whether beneficially or as a trustee, he is precluded, without regard to the quantum of his holding, from dealing on behalf of the company of which he is a director with the other company, unless and so far as he is authorised so to do by the articles. If the other company has notice of the irregularity, a contract so entered into may be rescinded if rescission be possible. Transvaal Lands Co. v. New Belgium (Transvaal) Land and Development Co., 84 L. J. Ch. 94; [1914] 2 Ch. 488; 112 L. T. 965; 21 Manson, 364; 59 S. J. 27; 31 T. L. R. 1—C.A.

Preventing Director from Performance of Duties — Interlocutory Injunction.]—Circumstances in which the Court will grant an interlocutory injunction restraining interference with the director of a limited company in the performance of his duties as such director. Grimwade v. B.P.S. Syndicate, 31 T. L. R. 531—Eve, J.

Management — Balance Sheet Containing Under-valuation of Assets—Creation of Secret Reserve Fund—Ultra Vires.]—A shareholder in a limited company brought an action against the company and the directors for a declaration that the defenders were not entitled to issue balance sheets in which the stock on hand was entered at less than its true value with the object and result of concealing that profits had been earned in excess of those shewn in the balance sheets; and for interdict against the issuing of such balance sheets. The pursuer did not charge the directors with fraud, and he admitted that the balance sheets had been passed by the auditors and approved by general meetings of the company, but he averred that the actings complained of were ultra vires:—Held, that the action must be dismissed on the ground that the valuation of the stock was a matter within the discretion of the directors subject to the approval of the shareholders, and that there was no relevant averment that the company or the directors had acted ultra vires. Newton v. Birmingham Small Arms Co. (75 L. J. Ch. 627; [1906] 2 Ch. 378) distinguished. Young v. Brownlee & Co., [1911] S. C. 677—Ct. of Sess.

Per Lord Kinnear: The purpose of the balance sheet is primarily to shew that the financial position of the company is at least as good as there stated, not to say that it is not, or may not be, better. Ib.

Semble (per Lord Dundas): It is not illegal for directors to make a low valuation of stock or other assets, in order to create a reserve in view of future and contingent liabilities. Ib.

3. Contracts by Directors with Company.

Contract of Service for Term — Fixed Salary — Negative Covenant Restraining Trading — Breach — Interdependent Obligations—Winding-up Order—Specific Performance—Injunction.]—A director of a company in July, 1903, entered into a contract of service with the company. By clause 1 he became bound and entitled to hold office as director for seven years at a fixed salary, and by clause 5 he covenanted that he would not at any time thereafter, while he should hold the office of director or within seven years after ceasing to hold such office, either solely or jointly with, or as manager or agent for, any other person or persons or company, directly or indirectly carry on the businesses of engineers or ironfounders that would compete with or be detrimental to the business carried on by the company. In April, 1909, a receiver and manager was appointed in a debenture-holders' action against the company, and in November, 1909, a compulsory winding-up order was made. The receiver gave notice to the director that the company no longer required his services. The director thereupon set up business as an engineer and ironfounder close to the company's premises, and sent out circulars asking for orders from the customers of the company. Prior to the winding-up he had had copies made of the lists of such customers for his own purposes, and he had made use of them in issuing the circulars. The receiver in the name of the company brought an action against him for an injunction to restrain him from carrying on business in breach of clause 5 of the contract and for an order for the delivery up by him of all copies of lists of customers in his possession or under his control:—Joyce, J., held that the obtaining of the lists of customers by the defendant for his own private purposes was a gross breach of his duty towards the plaintiff company, and he made the order asked for by them. Held, also, by Joyce, J., and the Court of Appeal (Buckley, L.J., dissenting), that the contract on the part of the plaintiff company had been broken by the winding-up order; that they were not entitled against the defendant to specific performance of clause 5 without performing clause 1 in his favour, which they could not do; and that consequently the restrictive covenant was not binding upon him, and the plaintiff company could not obtain against him the equitable relief by injunction which they claimed. Principle of General Bill-posting Co. v. Atkinson (78 L. J. Ch. 77; [1909] A.C. 118) applied. Measures Brothers, Lim. v. Measures, 79 L. J. Ch. 707; [1910] 2 Ch. 248; 102 L. T. 794; 18 Manson, 40; 54 S. J. 521; 26 T. L. R. 488—C.A.

Buckley, L.J., was of opinion that clauses 1 and 5 were not interdependent contracts: that the performance of clause 1 was not a condition precedent to the continuance of the restriction in clause 5; and that therefore in the events which had happened that clause remained binding upon the defendant, and the plaintiff company were entitled to an injunction. Ib.

4. Liability.

Fiduciary Position — Land Company — Property Held to Manage and Realise for Client—Costs of Keeping Accounts—Directors Employed as Solicitor, Auctioneer, &c.]—A limited company agreed with the plaintiff to manage, develop, and realise the plaintiff's property, on terms under which the company was to become entitled to one-third of the ultimate profit. In the course of such management the company paid a special salary to their secretary for keeping the books of account of the property. The company also (as the articles of association allowed), first, employed a firm of solicitors, of which one of the directors was a member, to act professionally in connection with the property, and paid their bills of costs, including profit items; secondly, employed another director, who was an estate agent, to manage at a salary the working of some sand and gravel pits; and thirdly, employed another director, who was an auctioneer, to conduct the sales of the property at usual commission. In an action for account brought by the plaintiff impeaching these disbursements,—Held, that on the true construction of the agreement the company were bound to keep the accounts at their own expense as part of the consideration moving from the company, and that the secretary's salary must be accordingly disallowed. Held also (dissentiente Fletcher Moulton, L.J.), that if the employment and remuneration were in other respects proper, the payments made by the company to the three directors ought not to be disallowed on the mere ground that the company employed their own directors, who stood in no fiduciary relation to the plaintiff and were entitled to be paid remuneration for these services as between themselves and the company. Bath v. Standard Land Co., 80 L. Purchase of Shares — Amalgamation — Rights of Shareholders.]—The appellants, the directors of a company, represented to the respondents, who were shareholders in the company, that it was necessary for the directors to secure the consent of the majority of the shareholders in order to effect an amalgamation with another company and induced the respondents to give them options to purchase their shares. The appellants exercised these options, and the amalgamation took place and the appellants made a profit:—Held, that the appellants were trustees of this profit for the benefit of the respondents. Allen v. Hyatt, 30 T. L. R. 444—P.C.

Personal Liability—Breach of Trust—Sums Paid to Company for Specified Purpose Applied to Another Purpose.]—A limited company, which consisted of two shareholders only who were also its sole directors, received from their foreign correspondents a sum of 1,000*l.* for the purpose, expressed in a covering letter, of meeting three named bills drawn by them upon the company which were shortly to become due. The company did not meet the bills at maturity, but the 1,000*l.* was applied, to the extent of 600*l.*, in repaying to one of the directors outlays averred to have been incurred by him on behalf of the company. In an action by the foreign correspondents against the two directors personally, to which the company were not called as defenders,—Held, that the directors' actings constituted not merely breach of contract, but breach of trust, for which they were personally liable, and decree pronounced against them, jointly and severally, for payment of the 600*l.* claimed. Brenes & Co. v. Downie, [1914] S. C. 97—Ct. of Sess.

Observations (per Lord Johnston) on the difference in the matter of responsibility between directors of merely nominal companies consisting of two members and directors of ordinary companies consisting of a large number of members. Ib.

——Action against Director and Company—Contract made by Director for Work to be done by the Company—Retention of Money Received—Agreement with Co-directors not to Account — Internal Management.]—The managing director of a limited company carrying on a laundry business entered into contracts for laundry work in his own name, on behalf of the company, with a customer. The work was done by the company, and the director received the amounts due under the contracts, and paid over a portion to the company, but did not account for the amounts received by him. This was in consequence of an alleged arrangement with his co-directors that he was not to account for profits. The company declined to call upon the director for an account, whereupon two shareholders brought an action against the company and the director, claiming that the director was a trustee for the company of all moneys received under the contracts, and asking for an account.

The company pleaded that the complaint was conversant with a matter of internal management, over which the Court had no jurisdiction. The defence of the director was that if there was any cause of complaint against him, which he did not admit, it was only enforceable at the suit of the company:—Held, that the transaction was illegal and ultra vires, and that the action was maintainable and the plaintiffs entitled to the relief sought. Cockburn v. Newbridge Sanitary Steam Laundry Co., [1915] 1 Ir. R. 237—C.A.

Penalty—Failure to Hold General Meeting During Year—Failure to Forward to Registrar List of Members—Default of Directors.]—The direction in section 26, sub-section 1 of the Companies (Consolidation) Act, 1908, to every company to make out and forward to the Registrar of Companies "a list of all persons who, on the fourteenth day after the first or only ordinary general meeting in the year, are members of the company," and also a summary as to the capital and shares of the company, is mandatory; and the obligation to forward the list every year is independent of whether or not the ordinary general meeting of the company is held in the year. Therefore, where the directors of a company are summoned under section 26, sub-section 5 of the Act of 1908, for knowingly and wilfully permitting default to be made by the company in complying with the requirements of section 26, it is no defence for them to set up that the holding of the ordinary general meeting of the company is a condition precedent to the obligation to send in the list arising, and that as the meeting had not been held the list of members could not be sent in, when they were themselves parties to the meeting not being held. Park v. Lawton, 80 L. J. K.B. 396; [1911] 1 K.B. 588; 104 L. T. 184; 75 J. P. 163; 18 Manson, 151; 27 T. L. R. 192—D.

Misfeasance—Qualification Shares—Shares Received to Hold in Trust for Promoter—Blank Transfers.]—Articles of association of a company provided that the qualification of a director should be "the holding of at least 100 shares in the company." Some of the directors accepted their qualifying shares from the promoter of the company on the terms that they should hold them in trust for him and should execute (as they in fact did) blank transfers so that he might deal with the shares as he might require:—Held, that they were guilty of misfeasance, and that each must contribute to the assets of the company (which had gone into liquidation) a sum equal to the par value of his shares, shares having been allotted to other parties at par. London and South-Western Canal Co., In re, 80 L. J. Ch. 234; [1911] 1 Ch. 346; 104 L. T. 95; 18 Manson, 171—Swinfen Eady, J.

—— Breach of Trust—Liability for Negligence—Independent Enquiries—Adopting an Agreement to Carry out which the Company was Formed—Discretion.]—When a company is formed to carry out a particular contract, a director who has a discretion given to him by the articles is bound to exercise his discretion before adopting the contract. Brazilian Rubber Plantations and Estates, In re (No. 1), 80 L. J. Ch. 221; [1911] 1 Ch. 425; 103 L. T. 697; 18 Manson, 177; 27 T. L. R. 109—Neville, J.

In estimating whether directors have given a proper price for property, a great distinction may be drawn between a cash price and a price to be paid in shares, for in the latter case the value of the consideration paid to the vendors depends upon the success of the company. Ib.

A director is not bound to bring any special qualifications to his office. He may undertake the management of a rubber company in complete ignorance of everything connected with rubber, without incurring responsibility for the mistakes which may result from such ignorance. He is not bound to take any definite part in the conduct of the company's business, but so far as he does undertake it he must use reasonable care in its dispatch. Ib.

Where a prospectus discloses all the facts, which are proved to have been before the directors, and the directors accept a position on the basis of which, with notice of the facts, all its shareholders join the company, there is a difficulty in saying that the position was one which no reasonable man would accept. Ib.

——Articles of Association—"Directors not to be liable for loss, unless occasioned by own dishonesty."]—An article of association provided that: "No director shall be liable . . . for any loss, damage, or misfortune whatever, which shall happen in the execution of the duties of his office or in relation thereto, unless the same happens through his own dishonesty":—Held, that an action by the company against its directors for negligence, where no dishonesty was alleged, could not, in view of the article, have succeeded. Ib.

——Liability of Director by Summary Procedure.]—The misfeasance section (215) of the Companies (Consolidation) Act, 1908, creates no new right, and only provides, as did section 165 of the Companies Act, 1862, a summary procedure for enforcing against directors or other officers of a company liability for breach of trust or other misconduct which, prior to the Act, might have been enforced by action; and to bring a case within the section it is essential to shew that pecuniary loss resulted to the company from the acts or defaults constituting the alleged misfeasance. Canadian Land Reclaiming and Colonizing Co.; Corentry and Dixon's Case (14 Ch. D. 660, 668), followed; Carendish Bentinck v. Fenn (57 L. J. Ch. 552; 12 App. Cas. 652) applied. Irish Provident Assurance Co., In re, [1913] 1 Ir. R. 352—C.A.

Winding-up—Provision for Retirement of Directors at Ordinary General Meeting—Failure to Hold such Meeting—Proof for Fees.]—Where a company sold all its undertaking and assets in consideration of receiving shares in another company, and charged the shares so received as security for certain money advanced :—Held, that, although after the sale the duties of the directors were diminished, they did not altogether cease, and that the directors were entitled to continue to receive the remuneration fixed by the articles of association. Consolidated Nickel Mines, Lim., In re, 83 L. Articles of association of a company provided that general meetings should be held once in every year, and that at the ordinary general meeting in 1906 all the directors should retire from office. Section 49 of the Companies Act, 1862 (which was at the time in force), also provided that a general meeting should be held once at the least in every year. No general meeting of the company was held or called in the years 1906 and 1907, but the directors of the company continued to act as such :—Held, that the directors vacated office on December 31, 1906, that being the last day on which a meeting of the company for that year could have been held, and that they were not entitled to remuneration from thence onward until they were duly re-elected. Ib.

IV. AUDITORS.

Conclusiveness of Certificate.] — Where a certificate of auditors is based on a wrong principle it is not conclusive and binding on the parties. Johnston v. Chestergate Hat Manufacturing Co., 84 L. J. Ch. 914; [1915] 2 Ch. 338; 59 S. J. 692—Sargant, J.

Alleged Negligence — Right of Access to Company's Books by Auditors—Refusal of Directors to Allow Access—Action by Auditors —Application by Auditors for Interim Injunction against Directors.]—Where the directors of a registered company allege that a loss sustained by the company might have been avoided but for negligence on the part of the auditors of the company, and refuse to allow the auditors to see any of the company's books, and the auditors bring an action against the company and the directors claiming access to the books, the Court will not on an interlocutory application in the action by the auditors make an order requiring the defendants to give the auditors access to the books, at all events before a general meeting of the company has been held at which the shareholders have had an opportunity of stating whether or not they desire that the auditors should continue to act as such. Cuff v. London and County Land and Building Co., 81 L. J. Ch. 426; [1912] 1 Ch. 440; 106 L. T. 285; 19 Manson, 166; 28 T. L. R. 218—C.A.

Examination of Books—Extent of Obligation.]—An auditor who is appointed to investigate the condition of a business is bound to make a reasonable and proper investigation of the accounts and stock sheets, and if, as a reasonably prudent man, he ought to conclude on that investigation that something is wrong, it is his duty to call his employer's attention to the fact. In making his investigation he is entitled to rely on documents vouched by servants of the business, unless he has reason for believing those servants to be dishonest. Squire Cash Chemist, Lim., or Mead v. Ball, 27 T. L. R. 269—Lord Alverstone, C.J. See s.c. in C.A., infra.

An action was brought by the plaintiff against the defendants claiming to recover damages in respect of their alleged negligence in the performance of their duties as accountants in the examination of the accounts of a business in which he was then proposing to invest money, and in which he subsequently did so invest :—Held, that the plaintiff had failed to shew that the alleged negligence of the defendants had induced him to invest his money in the business, and had thus caused the loss that he had sustained. Squire Cash Chemist, Lim. v. Ball, Baker & Co., 106 L. T. 197; 28 T. L. R. 81—C.A.

Per Cozens-Hardy, M.R. : Although it is not the duty of accountants to take stock in auditing the accounts of a business, they may well call for explanations of particular items in the stock sheets. Ib.

Balance Sheet — Responsibility — Commission for Obtaining Subscriptions — Unauthorised Payment — Solicitor-Director — Profit Costs.]—Auditors of a company are bound to make themselves acquainted with their duties under the Companies Acts and under the articles of the company whose accounts they are auditing. If the balance sheet which they have audited does not shew the true financial condition of the company and the company thereby suffers damage, the onus is upon the auditors of shewing that such damage is not the result of any breach of duty on their part. Republic of Bolivia Exploration Syndicate, Lim., In re (No. 2), 83 L. J. Ch. 235; [1914] 1 Ch. 139; 110 L. T. 141; 21 Manson, 67; 58 S. J. 321; 30 T. L. R. 146 —Astbury, J.

Semble, adequate warning or identification in the audited accounts as to wrongful payments appearing in the accounts, bringing such wrongful payments to the notice of the company, will free the auditors from further liability. Ib.

A company was incorporated in March, 1907, and V. was appointed the solicitor to the company. One of the objects of the company, mentioned in the memorandum of association, was to pay commissions for procuring the subscription of its shares, but Table A applied to the company, which contains no power to pay commission as required by section 89 of the Companies (Consolidation) Act, 1908; and no power was given to the directors to contract with the company. In June, 1907, V. was appointed a director. In November, 1907, auditors of the company were appointed. Payments between March and December, 1907, were made by the company to V. as agreed costs for incorporation, of which 150*l.* represented profit costs. At a meeting of the directors on March 16, 1908, it was resolved that a commission of 10 per cent. should be paid to X. for introducing subscribers, and 338*l.* was subsequently so paid by the company. Between December, 1907, and September, 1911, further sums were paid by the company to V. for costs, of which 50*l.* represented profit costs. The first balance sheet was produced at a general meeting, and contained the item of 338*l.* paid by way of commission. The auditors had passed this balance sheet with the usual note at the foot stating that the balance sheet represented a true and correct view of the company's accounts. The balance sheet was, after discussion, passed by the shareholders. A subsequent balance sheet containing further sums paid to V. for costs, and approved by the auditors, was passed by the shareholders. In the winding-up of the company the liquidator claimed to recover the sums of 150*l.*, 338*l.*, and 50*l.* from the auditors :—Held, as to the sum of 338*l.* paid for commission, that the auditors had not failed in their duty, especially as the balance sheet clearly stated for what purpose the sum had been paid and the shareholders approved the balance sheet after discussion; and as to the sums representing profit costs paid to V., that in the special circumstances the auditors had not failed in their duty in this case either. Ib.

Semble, as to the sums paid for commission and profit costs, since it did not appear that, if their attention had been called to the illegality of those payments, the shareholders would have taken proceedings against the directors to recover them, therefore no damage had resulted to the company. Ib.

Remuneration—Commission—Percentage on Annual "Net" Profits—Deduction of Income Tax.] — Income tax is part of the "net" profits available for dividend, and where a manager was to have a percentage of "the net profits (if any) of the company for the whole year" and "net" profits were defined in the agreement to mean "the net sum available for dividends as certified by the auditors of the company after payment of all salaries, rent, interest at the rate of 5 per cent. per annum upon capital, and after making such allowances for depreciation as the auditors of the company may advise,"—Held, that the manager was entitled to be paid his percentage on the net profits before deduction of the tax. Agreement of Service—Cumulative Salary—Payment only out of "Profits (if any) arising from the business"—Debentures in another Company—Value not Estimated in Balance Sheet—Realisation by Liquidator—Proceeds—Undrawn Profits.]—Two persons entered into an agreement of service with a company as its technical advisers at a fixed salary, which they were not to be entitled to draw "except only out of profits (if any) arising from the business of the company which may from time to time be available for such purpose, but such salary shall nevertheless be cumulative, and accordingly any arrears thereof shall be payable out of any succeeding profits available as aforesaid." The agreement was to determine ipso facto on the winding-up of the company. The business of the company included the buying and selling of debentures, and in the course of such business it acquired debentures in another company, which were included in the yearly balance sheets, but their value was not therein estimated. The company was wound up voluntarily and the liquidator realised all its assets, including the debentures. There was no goodwill and no fixed capital. All the creditors, other than the two technical advisers, whose salary was in arrear, were paid in full, and after repayment to the shareholders of their subscribed capital there remained a surplus in the hands of the liquidator :—Held, that the debentures were profits arising from the business of the company, that the entire proceeds realised by the liquidator ought to be treated as undrawn profits arising from such business, and that consequently the surplus in his hands was available for the payment of the arrears of salary. Bridgewater Navigation Co., In re (60 L. Bill of Exchange—Acceptance on Behalf of Limited Company—Name of Company Repressed in Address of Bill—"Ltd." for "Limited."]—It is a sufficient compliance with the requirements of section 63 of the Companies (Consolidation) Act, 1908, that in a bill of exchange addressed to a limited company the company's name is correctly stated in the address without being also stated in the acceptance; and the company's name is correctly stated although the abbreviation "Ltd." is used instead of the complete word "Limited." Stacey & Co. v. Wallis, 106 L. Compromise of Managing Director's Claims.]—A bona fide compromise of reasonable claims made by a managing director against the company, by payment of a sum of money out of capital of the company, is not illegal. Irish Provident Assurance Co., In re, [1913] 1 Ir. R. 352—C.A.

A bona fide transaction with a company impeachable only on the ground of being ultra vires will be set aside only on the terms that both parties be restored to their original rights. Ib.

Company Purchasing its Own Shares.]—It is ultra vires for a company to purchase its own shares, or to advance capital of the company to a director to do so. Trevor v. Whitworth (57 L. J. Ch. 28; 12 App. Cas. 409) applied. Irish Provident Assurance Co., In re, [1913] 1 Ir. R. 352—C.A.

Sale of Assets to New Company for Shares —Distribution of Consideration — Memorandum of Association — Objects — Articles of Association—Resolution—Special Resolution—Dissentients.]—Where the memorandum of association of a company gives power to sell its business and property to another company in consideration of shares and power to distribute such shares among its members, a resolution to sell in consideration of shares is not a sufficient compliance with section 192, subsection 1 of the Companies (Consolidation) Act, 1908, unless passed as a special resolution, even where special resolutions have been passed for voluntary liquidation and to prescribe the mode of distribution among the members of the shares to be received as consideration. The rights given to dissentients by section 192, sub-section 3, necessitate the passing as a special resolution of some resolution authorising the liquidator to receive shares as consideration for a sale. Etheridge v. Central Uruguay Northern Extension Railway, 82 L. J. Ch. 333; [1913] 1 Ch. 425; 108 L. T. 362; 20 Manson, 172; 57 S. J. 341; 29 T. L. R. 328—Joyce, J.

Semble, where the Companies (Consolidation) Act, 1908, requires a resolution to be passed as a special resolution, so long as the course of procedure expressly indicated by section 69 is followed the resolution is not invalidated by the omission of any further formality required by the articles of the particular company in regard to special resolutions. Ib.

Sale of Company by Promoters—Promotion of another Company by Same Promoters—Promoters only Persons Interested—Amalgamation—Sale of Amalgamated Companies —Promoters' Claim as Creditors — Ultra Vires.]—A syndicate of four persons purchased bonds of a railway company which had become bankrupt, and was not being worked. The syndicate spent a substantial sum in improving the railway and bought up a judgment against the company. They then procured the incorporation of another company with power to acquire and construct railways, in which all the shares really belonged to the members of the syndicate. The original company was transferred to the company thus incorporated and the amalgamated company was sold. The respondents, to whom the syndicate had assigned their rights, claimed to rank as creditors against the purchase money :—Held, that the members of the syndicate were entitled to rank above the unsecured creditors and were not in a fiduciary position, and that the claim must be allowed. Att.-Gen. for Dominion of Canada v. Standard Trust Co. of New York, 80 L. J. P.C. 189; [1911] A.C. 498; 105 L. T. 152—P.C.

Lease by Company of its Property—Approval of Lease by Majority of Shareholders — Power of Majority to Bind Minority.]—Where a dissentient minority of shareholders in a company seek redress against the action of the majority they must shew that such action is ultra vires, or that the majority have abused their powers or are depriving the minority of their rights. Dominion Cotton Mills Co. v. Amyot, 81 L. J. P.C. 233; [1912] A.C. 546; 106 L. T. 934; 19 Manson, 363; 28 T. L. R. 467—P.C.

Two shareholders in a cotton company brought an action to set aside a lease of the company's mills. The company was incorporated by letters patent, which were afterwards superseded by an Act of the Parliament of Canada, which in express terms authorised the company to dispose of its mills. The lease was approved by a resolution of the company in a general meeting :—Held, that the lease was not ultra vires of the company, being expressly authorised by the Act of Parliament, and that its terms were intended to be, and in fact were, fair, and based on a fair and liberal valuation. Burland v. Earle (71 L. Assets Insufficient — Floating Security — "Without any preference or priority"—Payment of Interest to Some Debentureholders to Later Date than to Others—Other Holders not Entitled to Preferential Payment of Arrears.]—Where debentures ranking pari passu without any preference or priority are secured by a floating charge on the undertaking and property of a company, and the assets are insufficient to pay in full the principal of the debentures and arrears of interest, the assets ought to be distributed rateably in accordance with the amounts due for principal and interest, although some of the debentureholders have been paid interest down to a later date than others. Those others are not entitled to any preferential payment of their arrears. Midland Express, Lim., In re; Pearson v. Midland Express, Lim., 83 L. J. Ch. 153; [1914] 1 Ch. 41; 109 L. Assignment of Book Debts—Rights of Mortgagee — Rents in Arrear — Floating Charge—Customs "Drawbacks"—Notice.]—A brewery company created debenture stock secured by a trust deed. By that trust deed the company specifically mortgaged to the trustees certain freehold and leasehold properties and created a general charge on the assets of the company. In the course of business they shipped through shipping agents beer for foreign ports and became entitled to certain drawbacks provided for by the Inland Revenue Act, 1880. Those drawbacks became a debt due from the Crown to the firm of brewers, and they were assigned by them to the trustees for their bankers. No notice of this assignment was given to the Crown authorities by the assignees. A receiver for the debenture-holders took possession and gave notice to the Crown authorities having at that time knowledge of the previous assignment to the trustees for the bank:—Held (following Ward v. Royal Exchange Shipping Co., 58 L. T. 174), that as the company had power by their contract with the debenture-holders to deal with the drawbacks, the debenture-holders could not with notice of the assignment obtain priority to the assignees by giving notice to the Crown authorities. Ind, Coope & Co., In re; Fisher v. The Company, 80 L. J. Ch. 661; [1911] 2 Ch. 223; 105 L. T. 356; 55 S. J. 600—Warrington, J.

Charge on Specific Articles—Usual "floating charge"—Condition—Fixed Charge not Altered thereby.]—Where a debenture gave a charge on specific articles, but one condition contained the words commonly used in reference to floating charges, "but so that the company is not to be at liberty to create any mortgage or charge in priority to or pari passu with the said debentures":—Held, that these words could not be constructed as implying the creation of a floating charge contrary to the specific charge already given by the debenture. Gregson v. Taplin & Co., 112 L. T. 985; 59 S. J. 349—Sargant, J.

Charge on Present and Future Assets—Property Subsequently Acquired—Loan to Effect Purchase — Equitable Charge.]—In 1901 the defendant company issued a series of debentures secured by way of floating charge on its property both present and future. By a condition indorsed on the debentures the company was precluded from creating any other mortgage or charge to rank equally with or in priority to these debentures. In 1904 the company, being unable to find the purchase money to effect a purchase of some new works, obtained the promise of a loan of 1,000*l.* from R. on the condition that the loan was to be secured by a first charge on the works. Thereupon the company entered into an agreement to purchase the property for 1,100*l.* and paid a deposit of 150*l.* The same solicitor acted for all parties, and on the date fixed for completion R. gave a cheque for 1,000*l.* to the company, which paid it into its own account and drew 950*l.* in cash to complete the purchase. At the completion the solicitor took possession of the title deeds on R.'s behalf, and a few days later the company executed an equitable charge on the works in R.'s favour to secure the loan. The solicitor never knew of the debentures, and made no enquiry on R.'s behalf as to whether the company was precluded from granting a first charge:—Held, that R.'s equitable charge was entitled to priority over the debentures because in equity the company had only acquired the equity of redemption in the works subject to R.'s charge of 1,000*l.* Connolly Brothers, Lim., In re; Wood v. Connolly Brothers, Lim., 81 L. J. Ch. 517; [1912] 2 Ch. 25; 106 L. T. 738; 19 Manson, 259—C.A.

Mortgage of Land of Company—Notice—Debenture Issued to Director having Notice of Prior Mortgage.]—The equitable doctrine of notice is not applicable to section 93 of the Companies (Consolidation) Act, 1908. Consequently a debenture which has been duly registered under section 93 of the Companies (Consolidation) Act, 1908, takes priority over a prior unregistered mortgage even in a case where the debenture-holder took his debenture with notice of the prior mortgage. Edwards v. Edwards (45 L. Decision of Astbury, J. (84 L. J. Ch. 134), reversed. Ib.

Specific Mortgage by Debenture—Floating Charge—No Power to Create Further Charge in Priority to Debentures.]—By a debenture trust deed dated August 21, 1899, a company gave a specific charge on certain properties and a floating charge on all its assets present and future to secure an issue of debentures, but reserved power to dispose of its assets in the ordinary course of its business, but not "to create any further charge on or over its undertaking or property generally to rank pari passu with or in priority to or otherwise than subject to and in subordination to the security" thereby constituted. On September 7, 1903, the company gave a specific charge (inter alia) on property which it had acquired since the date of the deed of August 21, 1899, to secure another issue of debentures, and it also gave a floating charge on all its assets both present and future subject to the first issue of debentures:—Held, that once the floating charge created by the deed of August 21, 1899, had crystallised, the debenture-holders under that deed obtained a charge on all the property, including that acquired subsequently, ranking in priority to the security of the debenture-holders under the deed of September 7, 1903. Stephenson & Co., In re; Poole v. The Company, 83 L. J. Ch. 121; [1913] 2 Ch. 201; 107 L. T. 33; 20 Manson, 358; 56 S. J. 648—C.A.

Second Series of Debentures Purported to be Issued to Rank Pari Passu with First Series—Priority.]—In the absence of any special provision to the contrary, a limited company cannot create a second floating charge ranking in priority to or pari passu with a first floating charge. Cope & Sons, Lim., In re; Marshall v. The Company, 83 L. J. Ch. 699; [1914] 1 Ch. 800; 110 L. T. 905; 21 Manson, 254; 58 S. J. 432—Sargant, J.

Fixtures—Hire-purchase Agreement—Subsequent Issue of Debentures—Appointment of Receiver.] — By an agreement made between the applicants and the defendant company the applicants agreed to erect and complete a sprinkler installation for the protection of the defendants' premises from fire.

By the agreement the sprinkler was to be paid for by instalments; in default of payment of any one instalment the whole of the unpaid instalments were to become payable; and it was agreed that the sprinkler should remain the property of the vendors until the entire sum should have been paid. Subsequently to the date of this agreement the defendant company issued debentures, and thereafter a receiver was appointed on behalf of the debenture-holders. The applicants not having been paid the full amount of the sprinkler installation claimed to be entitled to enter upon the defendant company's premises and remove the installation :—Held, that the applicants were entitled to remove the installation, notwithstanding the appointment of the receiver. Morrison, Jones & Taylor, Lim., In re; Cookes v. The Company, 83 L. J. Ch. 129; [1914] 1 Ch. 50; 58 S. J. 80; 30 T. L. R. 59—C.A.

Trustees' Remuneration — First Charge therefor upon Sale by Trustees—Sale under Order of Court—Payment into Court—Lien.]—Trustees for first debenture stockholders were by their deed of trust empowered, upon their security becoming enforceable, to sell the mortgaged premises and to hold the moneys to arise from any such sale upon trust thereout, first to pay costs and expenses "including the remuneration of the trustees," and then to distribute among the stockholders; and the trustees were to be paid "in each and every year during the continuance of this security as and by way of remuneration for their services as trustees" 250 guineas per annum. The security became enforceable. A receiver was appointed. In an action by prior lien debenture-holders the mortgaged premises were sold and the proceeds of sale paid into Court. The trustees joined in the conveyance, but they did not themselves sell the property or receive the purchase money. After satisfying the prior lien debenture-holders a surplus remained in Court :—Held, that the rights of the trustees were not to be prejudiced by the order for payment into Court, and that they were entitled to a first charge on the funds in Court for their full remuneration in priority to the first debenture stockholders until the trusts of their deed should be finally wound up. Piccadilly Hotel, Lim., In re; Paul v. Piccadilly Hotel, Lim., 81 L. ——Debentures—Trust Deed—Payment into Court — "Continuance of security" — Remuneration only while Services Rendered—Work Done by Trustee's Solicitor.]—By a trust deed securing the debenture stock of a company the trustees were to hold the proceeds of conversion of the property charged upon trust in the first place to pay or retain the costs and expenses incurred in the execution of the trust, "including therein their own remuneration." The deed provided that the company should "during the continuance of this security" pay to the trustees as and by way of remuneration for their services an annual sum. In an action by debenture stockholders a receiver was appointed and the property was sold in the action and the proceeds paid into Court :—Held, that the trustee was entitled to remuneration out of the proceeds of sale, but only down to the appointment of the receiver, after which date there were, in substance, no services rendered by the trustee other than work done by his solicitor and included in his costs of the action, for which no remuneration could be allowed to the trustee. Locke & Smith, Lim., In re; Wigan v. The Company, 83 L. Assignment of Debt.]—A limited company, in consideration of an advance from their bankers, executed an assignment which, after reciting that the company were entitled to 80*l.* 7*s.* from the defendant, that it had been agreed that that debt should be assigned to the bankers, and that by a letter of even date the defendant had been directed by the company to pay the debt in question to the bankers, assigned unto the bankers so much of the defendant's debt "as may be necessary to indemnify the assignees" for the amount advanced by them to the company. After executing that deed the company wrote to the defendant requesting him to pay the debt due to them to the bankers. A few days later the company went into voluntary liquidation. The assignment to the bankers was not registered. The liquidator claimed to recover the debt from the defendant on the ground that the assignment to the bankers, being unregistered, was void as against him, but the defendant insisted upon paying the debt to the bankers : —Held, that the liquidator was entitled to recover, inasmuch as by section 93 of the Companies (Consolidation) Act, 1908, the unregistered assignment was void as against him. Saunderson & Co. v. Clark, 29 T. L. R. 579—Lush, J.

It is impossible for the parties to a transaction by way of mortgage or charge to alter the effect of section 93 of the Companies (Consolidation) Act, 1908, by adopting a form which does not accord with the real transaction between them. Ib.

Charge on Book Debts—Re-insurance Contract.]—On May 5, 1909, a re-insurance contract was entered into between an insurance corporation (re-insurers), the applicants (re-insured), and a third party. The contract contained elaborate provisions for the payment of premiums and recoupment of losses and claims under which no premiums were payable direct to the re-insurers, but the aggregate premiums, less the aggregate losses and claims, were made payable to the third party, who was to pay them into a joint account. The current balances to the credit of the joint account were to be held on trust to recoup the re-insured losses and claims. No part of the balance was payable to the re-insurers until 1913, when the actual profit for the year 1910 was to be ascertained and paid to the re-insurers, less a sum held in reserve to provide for unascertained liabilities, and not paid over until all risks had run off. The liquidator of the Law Car Corporation contended that the contract was a charge on book debts of the corporation within section 93, sub-section 1 (c), and, not having been registered, was void against him :—Held, that the contract on its true construction created no charge on the book debts, and therefore did not require registration. Law Car and General Insurance Corporation, In re, 55 S. J. 407—Swinfen Eady, J.

—— Letters of Hypothecation on Shipments or the Proceeds thereof—Shipment of Goods by Company on Bills of Lading to Customers' Order.]—The plaintiffs made advances to the defendant company by accepting their drafts. The company shipped goods to their customers abroad and gave the plaintiffs duplicates of the bills of lading, copies of the invoices, and in each case a letter hypothecating "the shipments or the proceeds thereof." The goods shipped were sold on six months' credit and on the terms of all charges from the warehouse in this country being paid by the customers. The bills of lading were made out to the customers' order, and the customers had no notice of the letters of hypothecation. The defendant company having gone into liquidation, the plaintiffs claimed to be secured creditors in respect of the drafts accepted by them, and to be entitled to the proceeds of the goods hypothecated to them by the defendant company :—Held, that each letter of hypothecation gave a mortgage or charge, not on the goods comprised in the shipment, but on the proceeds thereof, and that it constituted a charge on the book debts of the defendant company within section 93 of the Companies (Consolidation) Act, 1908, and as it was not registered it was void as against the liquidator within that section. Ladenburg v. Goodwin, Ferreira & Co., 81 L. Deed Securing Bonus to Allottees of Debentures Stock.]—In order to give additional benefits to the allottees of an issue of its debenture stock, a company also issued "bonus certificates" to them secured by a trust deed. The trust deed recited that the company was negotiating an arrangement for certain dealings in land, and by clause 1 the company covenanted to pay the trustees one-fourth of all profits therefrom not exceeding the nominal amount of debenture stock issued. Clause 2 provided that meanwhile one-fourth of all such profits in each year should be paid to the trustees before September 30 following, with interest thereon in default; and by clause 4 the company charged all its rights and interests both present and future under or by virtue of such arrangement, and all profits from time to time received or derived therefrom, with the payment of all moneys from time to time payable under clauses 1 and 2, and as a security for the due performance by the company of all the obligations imposed upon it by that deed. Clause 5 provided for the issue of bonus certificates to the allottees of stock and for transfers and dealings therewith :—Held, that the trust deed constituted a mortgage or charge for the purpose of securing an issue of debentures, and was also a floating charge on the undertaking or property of the company, and therefore required registration under the Companies Act, 1900, s. 14, sub-ss. 1 (a) (d). Hoare v. British Columbia Development Association, 107 L. T. 602—Neville, J.

Agreement for Pledge of Goods—Constructive Delivery.]—A distillery company, with power to create debentures and to borrow on mortgage, having issued a first series of debentures, proceeded to issue a second series of debentures which provided that, although nothing therein contained should be taken to authorise the creation of any mortgage or charge on the property of the company in priority to such debentures, the company might by delivery warrant or other means pledge to their bankers or others their manufactured whisky, to secure advances for the purposes of the company's business. The plaintiff advanced moneys to the company on the security of their manufactured whisky lying in the bonded warehouse of the company as follows: On the occasion of each advance the name of the plaintiff was entered in the company's stock book opposite the particulars of whisky intended to be pledged, and a delivery warrant and invoice, each containing particulars of such whisky, were delivered to the plaintiff. The assets of the company, including the whisky pledged to the plaintiff, were realised by the receiver appointed in an action brought on behalf of the first debenture-holders, and proved insufficient to pay the plaintiff's claim and those of the second debenture-holders in full. In an action by the plaintiff against the trustees for the second debenture-holders and the company,—Held (Cherry, L.J., dissenting), first, that the agreement to pledge, followed by the transfer of specific whisky into the plaintiff's name in the books of the company, effected a valid pledge of the whisky so transferred, independently of the warrants, and that the plaintiff was entitled to the security so obtained in priority to the second debenture-holders; and secondly, that the warrants delivered to the plaintiff did not require registration as bills of sale under section 14 (c) of the Companies Act, 1900, and section 4 of the Bills of Sale Act. Doherty v. Kennedy, [1912] 1 Ir. R. 349—C.A. See S. C. in H.L., sub nom. Dublin City Distillery v. Doherty (infra).

Lien for Advances.]—A company issued debentures which purported to create a floating charge on the general assets of the company, and were further secured by a trust deed; the debentures were not registered under section 14 of the Companies Act, 1900 :—Held, that the debentures were void for want of registration so far as they purported to create a general floating charge on the general assets of the company, but that the holders were entitled, as cestuis que trust under the trust deed, to a valid lien on the debentures, so far as they affected the freehold and leasehold properties comprised in that deed, for the amount of the advances made by them. Dublin City Distillery v. Doherty, 83 L. Time for Registration—Deposit to Secure Overdraft—Date of Creation of Charge.]—The period of twenty-one days within which under section 93 of the Companies (Consolidation) Act, 1908, every mortgage or charge created by a company must be registered, begins to run from the date of the execution of the instrument creating the mortgage or charge and not from the date of the first advance made under the instrument. Esberger v. Capital and Counties Bank, 82 L. J. Ch. 576; [1913] 2 Ch. 366; 109 L. T. 140; 20 Manson, 252—Sargant, J.

In September, 1910, a company obtained an overdraft from their bankers upon deposit of title deeds and execution of a memorandum of charge. The memorandum was executed in due form by the company, but was left undated. The overdraft continued, and subsequently the manager of the bank filled in the date in the memorandum as June 14, 1911. The memorandum was not registered with the registrar of companies until July 3, 1911. The company eventually went into voluntary liquidation:—Held, that the memorandum of charge was not registered in due time as provided by section 93 of the Companies (Consolidation) Act, 1908, and was consequently void as against the liquidator and creditors of the company. Ib.

Extension of Time for—Repeal of Act of 1900.]—Section 15 of the Companies Act, 1900, empowered the Court to extend the time for the registration of debentures in certain cases. Section 286 of the Companies (Consolidation) Act, 1908, repealed the Companies Act, 1900:—Held, that the right given by section 15 of the Act of 1900 to apply to the Court for an extension of time was preserved, notwithstanding the repeal of that Act by the operation of section 38, sub-section 2 of the Interpretation Act, 1889. Lush & Co., In re, 108 L. Insolvent Company — Floating Charge Created within Three Months of Winding-up—Validity.]—Section 212 of the Companies (Consolidation) Act, 1908, precludes an insolvent company from creating floating charges within three months of the commencement of its winding-up, except for money actually paid which comes into the assets of the company and is available for creditors. In 1904 directors of a company guaranteed its overdraft at the bank up to 2,000*l.* In February, 1910, the bank was pressing the company and directors in regard to the overdraft then existing and the guarantee; and at a meeting of directors it was resolved that the company should pay the bank 1,500*l.* in respect of the overdraft. It was further agreed, though the agreement did not appear in the minutes, that in consideration of the guaranteeing directors finding the 1,500*l.* they should receive debentures to cover them in respect of the payment, in addition to debentures already held by them; and three of them accordingly sent the company cheques for 500*l.* each, whereupon the company sent its cheque to the bank. In March, 1910, at a further directors' meeting, a resolution was passed for the issue of debentures for 500*l.* to each of the three directors; but the debentures were never actually issued, nor was there any entry in the register regarding them. In April, 1910, a resolution for the voluntary winding-up of the company was passed:—Held, without deciding whether the charge (if any) created by the agreement required registration, that it was invalid under section 212. Orleans Motor Car, In re: Smyth v. The Company, 80 L. J. Ch. 477; [1911] 2 Ch. 41; 104 L. T. 627; 18 Manson, 287—Parker, J.

Guarantee of Issue—Release of Guarantor—Majority Binding Minority — "Arrangement or compromise."]—An arrangement whereby the guarantors of an issue of debentures are released from their guarantee, the interest on the debenture debt is increased, new trustees of the trust deed securing the debentures are appointed, and the sinking fund discontinued, is an "arrangement or compromise" which the Court has jurisdiction to sanction under the Joint-Stock Companies Arrangement Act, 1870. Shaw v. Royce, Lim., 80 L. J. Ch. 163; [1911] 1 Ch. 138; 103 L. T. 712; 18 Manson, 159; 55 S. J. 188—Warrington, J.

A resolution making such an arrangement and carried by the requisite majority at a meeting of the debenture-holders of a company is binding upon the minority. Ib.

Resolution to Issue Debentures — Effect of Interested Directors Voting.]—By a deed executed in 1895 property of a company was conveyed to trustees for the holders of second debentures to be thereafter issued. The articles of association of the company provided that no director should vote in respect of any matter in which he was individually interested. They fixed the quorum of directors at two. At a meeting of directors held on May 12, 1903, at which three directors (two of them being D. and K.) were present, it was resolved that certain second debentures should be issued in trust for D. and K. as security for advances made by them to the company, which debentures were subsequently issued:—Held, that as D. and K. were interested parties there was no quorum competent to vote on the resolution, and the resolution was invalid. Greymouth Point Elizabeth Railway &c. Co., In re (73 L. J. Ch. 92; [1904] 1 Ch. 32), followed. Cox v. Dublin City Distillery (No. 2), [1915] 1 Ir. R. 345—C.A.

At a meeting of directors held on May 16, 1903, at which five directors (including C. and T.) were present, each of the directors present agreed to advance a certain sum to provide new plant, and it was resolved to issue certain second debentures in trust for those making such advances as security for the sums. At a meeting of directors held on June 25, 1903, at which C. and T. were not present, these debentures were issued:—Held, that the resolution of May 16 was invalid, and that the debentures issued to C. and T., having been issued in pursuance of that resolution, were void, notwithstanding that C. and T. were not present at the meeting at which the debentures were issued. Ib.

At a meeting of directors held on January 20, 1904, at which K., D., and H. were the directors present, it was resolved to issue certain second debentures in trust for persons making advances to the company as security for such advances, and in pursuance of this resolution second debentures were issued in trust for C. and T. (directors). In pursuance of the same resolution second debentures were also issued to K. and D.:—Held, that the resolution of January 20, 1904, was invalid, and that the debentures issued to C. and T. in pursuance of it were void. Held also, that the holders of the void debentures could not claim the benefit of the trust deed of 1895. The effect of the decision in Doherty v. Kennedy or Dublin Distillery v. Doherty ([1912] 1 Ir. R. 349, 363; 83 L. J. P.C. 265; [1914] A.C. 823) as to the right of a holder of invalid debentures to rely on the trust deed securing them considered. Ib.

In pursuance of the resolutions of May 16, 1903, and January 20, 1904, certain second debentures were issued in trust for persons who were outsiders and had no notice of any irregularity in the resolutions:—Held, that such debentures were valid, and that their validity could not be questioned either by the company or the holders of other second debentures. County of Gloucester Bank v. Rudry Merthyr Steam and House Coal Colliery Co. (64 L. J. Ch. 451; [1895] 1 Ch. 629) followed. Mowatt v. Castle Steel and Iron Works Co. (34 Ch. D. 58) distinguished. Ib.

In the course of the present action, which was brought by a holder of first debentures, D. and K. applied to the Judge for liberty to institute a joint action to establish their rights in respect of (inter alia) the second debentures issued to them. An order was made on this application, giving D. liberty to proceed with an action against the trustees of the second debenture holders and the company for the purpose of establishing the rights of the applicants. The action was brought by D. in his own name alone, and dealt with his rights only. It resulted in a judgment in his favour as regarded his debentures. The validity of the debentures issued to K., C., and T. having been challenged in the present proceedings by the other second debenture holders and by the liquidator of the company:—Held, that K., C., or T. could not rely on this judgment by way of estoppel. What is necessary to constitute a test action considered. Ib.

Covenant to Pay On or After Named Day —Debentures to be Paid to be Determined by Ballot—Right of Holder to Payment—Construction—Reference to Prospectus.]—In 1892 a company issued a series of debentures. The prospectus stated that the debentures would be redeemable at the option of the company on or after January 1, 1898, on the company giving six months' notice of its intention. The debentures to be repaid would be determined by ballot. The accompanying application form contained an agreement to accept the debentures allotted on the terms of the prospectus. Each debenture contained a covenant by the company to pay, on or after January 1, 1898, the amount secured to the party therein named or other the registered holder for the time being, and a provision that the debentures to be paid off would be determined by ballot, and six months' notice would be given by the company of the debentures drawn for payment. The company not having paid off any of the debentures, or held any ballot, the plaintiff, who was the transferee and registered holder of a debenture, in 1909 gave the company notice demanding payment of the sum thereby secured within six months, and on the company's failing to pay brought an action to enforce payment:—Held (following Chicago and North-West Granaries Co., In re, 67 L. J. Ch. 109; [1898] 1 Ch. 263), that the Court could not, in construing the debenture, refer to the prospectus; that on the true construction of the covenant the sum covenanted to be paid was presently due and payable; and that the provision respecting a ballot did not relieve the company from liability to pay unless it elected to hold a ballot, since a covenant to pay, with a proviso that it should be enforced only at the covenantor's option, would be void for repugnancy. Watling v. Lewis (80 L. J. Ch. 242; [1911] 1 Ch. 414) applied. Tewkesbury Gas Co., In re; Tysoe v. The Company, 80 L. J. Ch. 723; [1912] 1 Ch. 1; 105 L. T. 569; 18 Manson, 395; 56 S. J. 71; 28 T. L. R. 40—C.A.

Guarantee—Re-insurance by Guarantors—Winding-up—Security Enforceable—Guarantors Trustees for Debenture-holders—Right of Debenture-holders to Insurance Moneys.]—A guarantee society entered into a guarantee with the debenture-holders of a limited company for the payment of the principal and interest due to them. The society were also appointed trustees for the debenture-holders at an annual remuneration. The company went into liquidation, and the society went into possession of the security on behalf of the debenture-holders. Subsequently the society also went into liquidation, and a scheme of arrangement was agreed to by creditors and confirmed by the Court. The society had previously re-insured their liability upon the debentures, and were entitled to payment of the full amount due under this contract:—Held, that the debenture-holders had no claim to the money received by the society under the re-insurance contract, but that it must be applied as part of the general assets of the society. Law Guarantee Trust and Accident Society, In re; Godson's Claim, 84 L. J. Ch. 510; [1915] 1 Ch. 340; 112 L. T. 537; [1915] H. B. R. 103; 59 S. J. 234—Neville, J.

Floating Charge — Judgment Creditor — Garnishee Order Nisi — Garnished Debt

Claimed by Debenture-holder—No Appointment of Receiver — Interpleader — Right of Judgment Creditor to have Garnishee Order made Absolute.]—A limited company, to secure the repayment of money advanced to them, issued a debenture whereby they charged with such repayment all their undertaking and all their property and assets. A creditor of the company having commenced an action against the company in the County Court, the debenture-holder gave notice to the company to pay off the debenture, which notice was not complied with. Judgment having been given against the company in the County Court action, the judgment creditor obtained a garnishee order nisi attaching the balance standing to the credit of the company in their account with their bankers. The debenture-holder gave notice to the bankers, and also to the company and to the judgment creditor, claiming that he was entitled to have the bank balance paid to him; but he did not take any other step to enforce his security. The bankers interpleaded, and the County Court Judge gave judgment in the interpleader proceedings for the judgment creditor against the debenture-holder and directed that the garnishee order nisi should be made absolute:—Held, that, as nothing had happened to convert the debenture-holder's floating charge into a specific charge, the garnishee order nisi was rightly made absolute. Evans v. Rival Granite Quarries Co., 79 L. J. K.B. 970; [1910] 2 K.B. 979; 18 Manson, 64; 54 S. J. 580; 26 T. L. R. 509—C.A.

Unpaid Calls—Specific Performance.]—The plaintiffs were a limited company, and the defendant an allottee of certain debentures created by them. The debentures were issued on the terms of a debenture prospectus, which contained provisions that the debentures should be payable "on application 1*l.*, on allotment 1*l.*, and the balance as required in calls not to exceed 4*l.* per debenture at intervals of not less than four months," and that non-payment of any instalment would render all previous payments liable to forfeiture "in the same manner as under articles 36 to 45 of the company's articles of association shares are forfeitable on which calls are in arrear." The debentures were allotted on May 26, 1913. On June 23, 1913, the plaintiffs made a first call payable on July 5, and on October 23, 1913, a second call payable on November 8. The defendant failed to pay these calls. Subsequently, the company forfeited the debentures standing in his name. Article 43 of the articles of association, one of the articles mentioned above dealing with the forfeiture of shares for non-payment of calls, provided that a shareholder whose shares had been forfeited should nevertheless be liable for all calls made and not paid at the time of the forfeiture. The plaintiffs under this article claimed the amount of the calls as being specific performance of the contract between them and the defendant. The defendant argued that no action could lie for an agreement to advance money such as this. South African Territories, Lim. v. Wallington (67 L. J. Q.B. 470; [1898] A.C. 309), and on the terms of the debenture prospectus the calls and forfeiture were bad, the first call having been made within four months after allotment:—Held: First, that the plaintiffs, having forfeited the debentures, were not in a position to ask for specific performance; secondly, that on the authority of South African Territories, Lim. v. Wallington (67 L. J. Q.B. 470; [1898] A.C. 309) they had here no right to recover with respect to the debentures apart from specific performance; thirdly, that in order to make article 43 apply to the debentures clearer language should have been used than the general words above quoted; and fourthly, that the first call was bad, as being at a less interval than four months after May 26, 1913; the second call was good. Kuala Pahi Rubber Estates v. Mowbray, 111 L. T. 1072—Horridge, J.

Distribution of Assets—Debenture Stock Partly Paid up—Right of Holders to Participate Rateably in Assets—Obligation First to Pay up in Full—No Legal Debt.]—A debenture stock trust deed made in 1902 provided that the trustees for the debenture-holders should hold the proceeds arising from any sale or conversion of the property comprised in or charged by the trust deed after payment of costs and expenses in payment of arrears of interest; and secondly, in paying back to the stockbrokers pari passu in proportion to the stock held by them respectively all the principal moneys owing in respect of the stock held by them respectively. The trustees in 1906 took possession of all the property comprised in the trust deed and realised it. Certificates were issued to the stockholders on payment by them of the amount payable on application, but some of the stockholders had not paid up the full amount on their stock, all instalments having become payable prior to 1904. On the distribution of the proceeds by the trustees the question arose whether those holders who had not paid up in full, against whom no proceedings had been taken, were entitled to participate rateably in the distribution without first paying all instalments due on the stock held by them:—Held, that the partly paid-up stockholders were entitled, without first making their stock fully paid-up stock, to participate in the assets rateably with the stockholders who had paid up in full, as the contract to take up and pay for debentures was made prior to the Companies Act, 1907, s. 16, and could not be enforced by an order for specific performance, the company being entitled to damages only. The principle, therefore, of Cherry v. Boultbee (9 L. J. Ch. 118; 4 Myl. & Cr. 442) was not applicable, that principle having been applied only where the obligation to contribute was a legal obligation in the sense of a debt. Rhodesia Goldfields, In re; Partridge v. Rhodesia Goldfields (79 L. Moneys Overpaid by Mistake to Certain Debenture-holders—Order to Bring Back into Court Moneys Overpaid.]—In a debenture-holder's action brought by trustees for debenture-holders against an insolvent company, the realised assets were insufficient to pay debenture-holders in full. The allocation schedule was, by mistake, framed on the basis that certain banking companies, who held debentures as security for advances made by them to the company, should receive dividends on the amounts of the debts due to them, instead of on the face value of their debentures. As a result the amount allocated to the banking companies was less than it should have been, and certain debenture-holders, directors of the company and parties to the action, were consequently overpaid. Upon motion by the plaintiff, who had carriage of the suit, the directors were ordered to bring back into Court the amounts by which they had been overpaid. Platt v. Casey's Drogheda Brewery Co., [1912] 1 Ir. Scheme Affecting Rights of Holders — Making Special Provision for Special Interests —Right of Interested Debenture-holder to Vote on Scheme—Bribe.]—While the powers conferred by a trust deed on a majority of debenture-holders must be exercised bona fide, and the Court will interfere to prevent unfairness or oppression, each debenture-holder may vote with regard to his interests, though they be individual and peculiar to himself; and where there is a diversity of interest as between different debenture-holders the making of special provision for special interest may be necessary and fair. Such a provision, if made openly, is not a bribe; and a debenture-holder is not precluded from voting on a scheme containing it merely because he is interested thereunder. Goodfellow v. Nelson Line, 81 L. Remuneration of Trustee — Debentures – Trust Deed—Payment into Court—"Continuance of security"—Remuneration only while Services Rendered—Work Done by Trustee's Solicitor.] — By a trust deed securing the debenture stock of a company the trustees were to hold the proceeds of conversion of the property charged upon trust in the first place to pay or retain the costs and expenses incurred in the execution of the trust, "including therein their own remuneration." The deed provided that the company should "during the continuance of this security" pay to the trustees as and by way of remuneration for their services an annual sum. In an action by debenture stockholders a receiver was appointed and the property was sold in the action and the proceeds paid into Court :—Held, that the trustee was entitled to remuneration out of the proceeds of sale, but only down to the appointment of the receiver, after which date there were, in substance, no services rendered by the trustee, other than work done by his solicitor and included in his costs of the action, for which no remuneration could be allowed to the trustee. Locke & Smith, Lim., In re; Wigan v. The Company, 83 L. Foreclosure—Appointment of Receiver and Manager—No Previous Application to Court.]—Section 1, sub-section 1 (b) of the Courts (Emergency Powers) Act, 1914, which forbids any person to "foreclose" except after application to the Court, does not apply to the commencement of a foreclosure action or a debenture-holder's action; nor does the sub-section preclude the Court from appointing a receiver and manager if no such application has been made. Farnot, Eades, Irvine & Co., In re; Carpenter v. The Company, 84 L. Realisation — Mortgagee in Possession — Consent of Mortgagor—Emergency Powers.]—By section 1, sub-section 1 (b) of the Courts (Emergency Powers) Act, 1914, "No person shall . . . realise any security (except by way of sale by a mortgagee in possession)" except after an application to the Court :—Held, that the words "mortgagee in possession" are not limited to mortgagees in possession of real estate, or to mortgagees who have obtained possession without the consent of the mortgagor. Ziman v. Komata Reef Gold Mining Co., 84 L. b. Right to Payment.

Right of Company to Compel Payment—Interest to Date only.]—Where debentures become enforceable on the happening of certain events, the debenture-holders have a right to require payment on the happening of those events, but they do not put the debenture-holders in a position of being compelled to accept payment. Where the events are entirely within the control of the company to determine whether they shall happen or not, the company cannot by determining the event compel the debenture-holder to accept his money at a moment's notice. General Motor Cab Co., In re (No. 2), 56 S. J. 573—Eve, J.

Principal Payable "on presentation at Lloyds Bank" — Default — Condition Precedent—Pleading.]—A company had borrowing powers up to 3,000*l.*, and in July, 1913, its bank account was overdrawn by that amount. Thereupon the plaintiff and two others, in pursuance of a previous agreement and at the request of the directors, each handed to the chairman of the company a cheque for 1,000*l.* to be paid into the bank in reduction of the overdraft; each received in exchange a debenture for 1,000*l.*, subject to the following conditions indorsed thereon : "(3) The principal moneys hereby secured shall immediately become payable . . . if the registered holder shall serve notice upon the company requiring payment of the principal moneys and interest (if any) and the company has made default . . . for three days after such service :" "(12) the principal moneys . . . will be paid at Lloyds Bank Limited, 222 Strand, W.C., or other the company's bankers for the time being, on presentation of this debenture, which must be surrendered on payment." On July 22, 1913, the plaintiff gave notice to the company requiring payment of principal and interest within three days, but neither principal nor interest was paid, and the plaintiff in November, 1913, commenced a debenture-holder's action claiming the usual relief. The defence stated in general terms that the money was not due :—Held, that there had been default in payment of interest under condition 3, and that therefore compliance with condition 12 as to presentation for payment was not necessary in order to render the principal payable; but that if presentation had been requisite, it was a condition precedent and should have been pleaded in defence. Held, also, that the cheque was handed by the plaintiff to the company as a conditional payment for the purpose of reducing the overdraft at the bank, and that the borrowing had not been in excess of the powers of the company. Wrexham, Mold, and Connah's Quay Railway, In re (68 L. c. Receiver and Manager.

See also Vol. III. 1127, 2453.

When Assets are in Jeopardy.]—In a debenture-holders' action for the appointment of a receiver on the ground of jeopardy, where the security is not yet enforceable upon other grounds, it is not sufficient for the plaintiff to shew that the proceeds of the assets if realised will not be sufficient to pay off the debentures. The assets are not in jeopardy unless they are likely to be seized by creditors to pay claims not having priority to the debentures. Victoria Steamboats, Lim., In re; Smith v. Wilkinson (66 L. J. Ch. 21; [1897] 1 Ch. 158), distinguished. New York Taxicab Co., In re; Seguin v. The Company, 82 L. J. Ch. 41; [1913] 1 Ch. 1; 107 L. T. 813; 19 Manson, 389; 57 S. J. 98—Swinfen Eady, J.

The business of a company having come to an end, the directors proposed to distribute a reserve fund consisting of accumulated profits by way of dividend among the shareholders. The company's assets were of little value, and were quite insufficient to pay debenture-holders who had a floating charge on the assets :—Held, upon motion by the debenture-holders for a receiver, that the applicants had a lien on the fund in question, and that, although under the express terms of the debenture trust deed the security was not enforceable, they were entitled to the appointment of a receiver upon the ground of jeopardy. New York Taxicab Co., In re; Seguin v. The Company (82 L. J. Ch. 41; [1913] 1 Ch. 1), distinguished. Tilt Cove Copper Co., In re; Trustees, Executors, and Securities Insurance Corporation v. The Company, 82 L. J. Ch. 545; [1913] 2 Ch. 588; 109 L. T. 138; 20 Manson, 288; 57 S. J. 773—Neville, J.

Jeopardy—What is.]—There is jeopardy, entitling to the appointment of a receiver, where, at a directors' meeting, the auditor's unchallenged statement was that, if the amount of the principal secured by the debentures could be realised after clearing off the company's liabilities, that was as much as could be hoped for; and where the evidence also went to shew that, just prior to the meeting, the plaintiff in this debenture-holders' action had been informed by one of the directors that the company's funds and credit were exhausted, but that the creditors were being held off temporarily by the personal credit of that director, and that the employees at one of the branches of the business had been, or were about to be, dismissed, and had heard aliunde that the premises of that branch had been put into agents' hands for the purpose of letting them. Tilt Cove Copper Co., In re: Trustees, Executors, and Securities Corporation v. The Company (82 L. J. Ch. 545; [1913] 2 Ch. 588), and Victoria Steamboats, In re; Smith v. Wilkinson (66 L. J. Ch. 21; [1897] 1 Ch. 158) followed. Braunstein & Marjolaine, Lim., In re; Philipson v. The Company, 112 L. T. 25; 58 S. J. 755—Sargant, J.

Where judgments have been recovered against a company and execution is likely to issue, there is jeopardy within the meaning of New York Taxicab Co., In re; Seguin v. The Company (82 L. J. Ch. 41; [1913] 1 Ch. 1. Grigson v. Taplin & Co., 85 L. J. Ch. 75; 112 L. T. 985; 59 S. J. 349—Sargant, J.

The amount of property contained in the specific charge being ample,—Held, that the fact of jeopardy did not of itself entitle the plaintiff to the appointment of a receiver and manager of the whole of the assets and business of the company, but only to have a receiver appointed of the assets specifically charged. Ib.

Condition in Debentures—Voluntary Winding-up — Reconstruction — Principal Moneys Due—Immediately Payable.]—Where one of the conditions indorsed on a series of debentures issued by a company was that the principal moneys thereby secured should become immediately payable if an order was made or an effective resolution was passed for winding up the company otherwise than for the purposes of reconstruction and the company passed a resolution for the voluntary winding-up of the company for the purposes of reconstruction :—Held, that, notwithstanding the condition, the principal moneys became due at the commencement of the winding-up and that the debenture-holders were entitled to the appointment of a receiver. Hodson v. Tea Co. (49 L. J. Ch. 234; 14 Ch. D. 859) and Wallace v. Automatic Machines Co. (63 L. J. Ch. 598; [1894] 2 Ch. 547) applied. Crompton & Co., In re; Player v. Crompton & Co., 83 L. J. Ch. 666; [1914] 1 Ch. 954; 110 L. T. 759; 21 Manson, 200; 58 S. J. 433—Warrington, J.

Condition for Appointment — Consent of Majority in Value of Debenture-holders—Equitable Mortgagee—"Majority in value"—Power of Court.]—Debentures issued by a company contained a condition that at any time after the principal moneys had become due any debenture-holder, with the consent in writing of the holders of a majority in value of the debentures, might appoint by writing a receiver and manager of the business of the defendant company. Two hundred debentures had been issued, of which the plaintiffs held sixty, C. held fifty-five, L. held sixty-five, and T. held twenty. L. had deposited sixty-four of his debentures with the plaintiffs as security for a loan. C. appointed a receiver and manager with the consent of T. and L. but without the consent of or notice to the plaintiffs:—Held, in a debenture-holder's action, that as the plaintiffs were registered holders of sixty debentures and equitable mortgagees of sixty-four debentures, the receiver and manager had not been properly appointed without their consent, and that a receiver and manager should be appointed by the Court. "Slogger" Automatic Feeder Co., In re; Hoare v. The Company, 84 L. J. Ch. 587; [1915] 1 Ch. 478; 112 L. T. 579; [1915] H. B. R. 138; 59 S. J. 272—Neville, J.

Applications to Court.]—Where a receiver is appointed by the Court in an action, and a difficulty arises in the execution of his duties, he ought, as a general rule, to submit the matter to the party having carriage, who is the proper person to bring it before the Court. The receiver should not himself bring the matter before the Court except under special circumstances. Windschuegl v. Irish Polishes, Lim., [1914] 1 Ir. R. 33—Barton, J.

Defendant a Debenture-holder — Receiver for Debenture-holder Appointed by the Court —Leave to Carry on Proceedings—Discretion of Court—Rights of Mortgagees.]—The first mortgagees of a trading company's property purported in exercise of their power of sale to sell the mortgaged property to a rival company. The company and a debenture-holder (who was in the position of second mortgagee) then commenced an action against the purchasers and the first mortgagees to set aside the sale, on the ground that it was not bona fide and was at grossly inadequate price. Thereupon the purchasers bought up this debenture and instituted a debenture action in the name of the holder for the appointment of a receiver, so as to deprive the company, if possible, of the means of prosecuting the action. A receiver was duly appointed by the Court, and upon the application of the purchasers the Court then ordered the company to give security for the costs of the action which had been brought against them. It was further ordered in chambers that the receiver should be at liberty to carry on the action and to have his costs of proceedings out of the company's assets. The purchasers moved to discharge this order on the ground that the receiver would be using assets, upon which as debenture-holders they had a first charge, to pay for proceedings brought against themselves:—Held, that where a receiver has been appointed by the Court neither mortgagor nor mortgagee has any right to say whether proceedings shall be carried on by the receiver or not; the matter is in the discretion of the Court, and in sanctioning such proceedings by the receiver the Court will have regard to the interests of all parties: and that the order made in chambers was right. Viola v. Anglo-American Cold Storage Co., 81 L. J. Ch. 581; [1912] 2 Ch. 305; 107 L. T. 118; 19 Manson, 287—Swinfen Eady, J.

Liability of Receiver and Manager to Account to Trustee in Bankruptcy.]—A debtor, having sold his business to a company, shortly afterwards became bankrupt, with the result that eventually the sale was set aside as fraudulent and void. Some months before the sale was set aside a receiver and manager had been appointed at the instance of the debenture-holders of the company, and he carried on the business until the date of the order setting aside the sale, when, by order of the Court, he transferred the business to the trustee in bankruptcy of the bankrupt vendor:—Held, upon the application of the trustee in bankruptcy, that the debenture-holders and their receiver and manager were jointly and severally liable as trespassers to pay to the trustee in bankruptcy the value of any property of the bankrupt of which they were in possession, or of which they had taken possession, and which they had converted, and that they must deliver to the applicant all such property of the bankrupt as remained in their possession unconverted. Vaughan, Ex parte; Riddeough, in re (14 Q.B. D. 25), followed. Ely, In re; Ely & Co., ex parte (82 L. T. 501), distinguished. Goldburg, In re; Page, ex parte, 81 L. J. K.B. 663; [1912] 1 K.B. 606; 106 L. T. 431; 19 Manson, 138—Phillimore, J.

Order for Goods — Personal Liability — Summons for Payment.]—In a debenture-holders' action against a company a receiver and manager was appointed, and he was empowered by an order made in the action to borrow not more than 300*l.* to carry on the business. The receiver and manager gave an order for goods on the understanding that he was not to be personally liable. In giving this order he was contracting in excess of the sum of 300*l.* During the proceedings in the action a summons was taken out by the creditor for an order that the receiver and manager should pay him out of the assets or out of his own moneys. The creditor knew that it was doubtful whether his and similar debts could be paid in full out of the assets:—Held, that the creditor was not entitled to an order for payment on the summons. Hawkins & Co., In re; Brieba v. Hawkins & Co., 31 T. L. R. 247—Astbury, J.

Liability of Receiver for Rent.]—The receiver of a company's assets, who has been appointed in a debenture-holders' action, is not liable, where premises have been leased to the company and he has sold the assets, including the tenancy, to pay rent for the period subsequent to that during which he has been in beneficial occupation. Abbott & Co., In re; Abbott v. The Company, 58 S. J. 30; 30 T. L. R. 13—Sargant, J.

An under-lease was granted to E. as trustee for a company. The company issued debentures to B. to secure money advanced, and gave him an equitable mortgage of the property. B. brought a debenture-holders' action, in which a receiver was appointed, who took possession. The lessor brought an action against the lessee for possession and rent, and obtained judgment. The judgment was stayed upon terms which were not complied with, and the receiver remained in possession for some time. The lessor applied in the debenture-holders' action for an order that the receiver should pay the rent for the period during which he was in possession, either out of assets in his hands or personally as a trespasser :—Held, that the effect of the judgment while subsisting was to prevent the lessor from asserting any rights against the persons in possession, and the receiver was not liable for the rent. Westminster Motor Garage Co., In re; Boyers v. The Company, 84 L. J. Ch. 753; 112 L. T. 393—Eve, J.

Position of Receiver—Officer of Court to Discharge Certain Duties.]—The receiver and manager of a company appointed by the Court in a debenture-holders' action is an officer of the Court put in to discharge certain duties, and is not the agent either of the debenture-holders or of the company, which still remains in existence. Parsons v. Sovereign Bank of Canada, 82 L. J. P.C. 60; [1913] A.C. 160; 107 L. T. 572; 20 Manson, 94; 29 T. L. R. 38—P.C.

Assignment of Debt by Receiver—Breach of Contract—Right of Set-off.]—A receiver, having delivered goods to a customer of the company under a contract made by the company before his appointment, assigned the amounts due for such goods to a bank, and afterwards cancelled the contract made by the company. Notice of the assignment to the bank was not given to the customer until after the contract had been cancelled :—Held, that in an action brought by the bank against the customer to recover the debt so assigned the customer was entitled to set off damages sustained by the cancellation of the contract. Ib.

Existing Contracts — Onerous Contracts—Duties of Receiver and Manager.]—A holder of debentures in a colliery company, having commenced an ordinary debenture-holders' action, obtained an interlocutory order for the appointment of a receiver and manager of the property and undertaking of the company. Before this date the company had entered into a number of forward contracts for the supply of coal during 1912 at prices below the existing market price, and the performance of these contracts would practically exhaust the whole output of the colliery. In these circumstances the plaintiff applied for leave for the receiver and manager to disregard these contracts :—Held, that the Court would not make a general order allowing its officers to abandon the whole of the company's contracts merely because the property of the company could then be sold to greater advantage. Newdigate Colliery Co., In re; Newdegate v. The Company, 81 L. J. Ch. 235; [1912] 1 Ch. 468; 106 L. T. 133; 19 Manson, 155; 28 T. L. R. 207—C.A.

It is the duty of the receiver and manager of a company's property and undertaking to protect both alike from injury, and he is not entitled to act so as to injure the goodwill of the undertaking simply because he will thus enhance the value of the property apart from the undertaking. Ib.

——Completion of Contracts Entered into by Company.]—The Court refused to sanction the borrowing of money by a receiver and manager in order to complete a contract entered into by the company, where no direct profit could result from its completion and where there was no evidence that any indirect profit could ensue. Newdigate Colliery Co., In re (supra), considered. Thames Ironworks Co., In re; Farrer v. The Company, 106 L. T. 674; 56 S. J. 413; 28 T. L. R. 273—Parker, J.

A holder of debentures in a mining company, having commenced an ordinary debenture-holders' action, obtained the usual order for the appointment of a receiver and manager of the property and undertaking of the company. Before the date of issue of the debentures the company had entered into an agreement with certain agents by which it was agreed that they should for a period of fifteen years be the sole agents of the company for the whole world for the sale of copper and silver from the company's mines which the company might desire to sell on certain terms as to commission. The debentures were in the form of a charge on the undertaking of the company, but were in no way subject to the performance of the agreement. The goodwill of the company was of no value, and the assets of the company were insufficient to satisfy the claims of the debenture-holders. In these circumstances the plaintiff applied for leave for the receiver and manager to disregard the agreement :—Held, that as the agreement in no way affected the value of the goodwill of the business there was no obligation on the receiver to carry it into effect, and that the application ought to be granted. Newdigate Colliery Co., In re; Newdegate v. The Company (81 L. J. Ch. 235; [1912] 1 Ch. 468), distinguished. Great Cobar, Lim., In re; Beeson v. The Company, 84 L. J. Ch. 468; [1915] 1 Ch. 682; 113 L. T. 226; [1915] H. B. R. 79—Warrington, J.

Receiver Appointed under Power in Debenture—Right to Remuneration—Liability of Debenture-holders.]—A condition indorsed on debentures of a company gave a power to the holders of the majority of the debentures to appoint a receiver who should have power to take possession of the property charged, to carry on the business of the company, to sell the property charged, and to make any arrangements in the interest of the debenture-holders. The condition also provided that all moneys received by such receiver should, after providing for the matters specified in the first three paragraphs in clause 8 of section 24 of the Conveyancing and Law of Property Act, 1881, and for the purposes aforesaid, be applied in or towards satisfaction pari passu of the debentures; and the foregoing provisions of the condition were to take effect as and by way of variation and extension of the provisions of sections 19 and 24 of that Act, which provisions so varied and extended were to be regarded as incorporated in the condition :—Held, that a receiver appointed under the power was the agent of the debenture-holders and not of the company, and that he was entitled to maintain an action for reasonable remuneration against the debenture-holders who had appointed him. Vimbos, Lim., In re (69 L. J. Ch. 209; [1900] 1 Ch. 470), and Robinson Printing Co. v. Chic, Lim. (74 L. J. Ch. 399; [1905] 2 Ch. 123), followed. Deyes v. Wood, 80 L. J. K.B. 553; [1911] 1 K.B. 806; 104 L. Sale of Undertaking—Company in which Public have an Interest.]—The Crystal Palace Co. is not a company formed for public purposes within the principle of Gardner v. London, Chatham, and Dover Railway (L. R. 2 Ch. 201). Therefore, when the company issued debenture stock giving a charge on its undertaking and property,—Held, that the Court had power, on the application of holders of the debenture stock, to order a sale of the property and undertaking. Saunders v. Bevan, 107 L. 5. Redemption.

See also Vol. III. 2460.

Principal Immediately Payable.]—Where the principal moneys secured by debentures have become immediately payable according to a condition indorsed on the debentures, on the ground that an order has been made for the winding-up of the company, the company or the guarantors of the loan are entitled to redeem the security, and the debenture-holders have no option to refuse payment unless the debenture itself so provides. General Motor Cab Co., In re (56 S. J. 573), explained. Consolidated Goldfields of South Africa v. Simmer and Jack East, Lim., 82 L. J. Ch. 214; 108 L. T. 488; 20 Manson, 142; 57 S. J. 358—Swinfen Eady, J.

Contract by Advertisement — Breach of Trust.]—The appellants were trustees for the bondholders of a copper company under a mortgage deed by which a certain sum was set aside for the redemption or retirement of bonds of the company, for which they were trustees. The appellants having received $170,000 from the copper company for the redemption of bonds, advertised in accordance with the terms of the mortgage deed inviting tenders, stating amount offered, and price of bonds for sale to them. The respondent offered bonds for $10,000 at $82 per bond of $100. This offer was declined, and the appellants succeeded in obtaining bonds for $200,000—namely, $39,400 at rates less than $80 per cent., and $160,600 at a rate exceeding $86 per cent.—costing exactly $170,000. In an action by the respondent for breach of trust, or alternatively for breach of contract in refusing to purchase the bonds offered for sale in response to the advertisement inviting tenders of bonds under the terms of the mortgage deed,—Held, that the appellants, having acted in good faith and in the exercise of an honest judgment and in the interest of the bondholders as a whole, had not been guilty of a breach of trust, and were not bound to accept the lowest tender for a comparatively small number of bonds. National Trust Co. v. Whicher, 81 L. J. P.C. 182; [1912] A.C. 377; 106 L. T. 310—P.C.

Sale of Assets by Company—Redeeming Debentures at Lowest Tender—Dissentients' Rights.]—A company has no power to sell the assets charged by its debentures and with the proceeds to redeem such of the debentures as are offered at the lowest price, even though it is empowered to do so by a majority of the debenture-holders at a meeting held in accordance with the terms of the debenture trust deed. New York Taxicab Co., In re; Seguin v. The Company, 82 L. J. Ch. 41; [1913] 1 Ch. 1; 107 L. T. 813; 19 Manson, 389; 57 S. J. 98—Swinfen Eady, J.

6. Conversion and Exchange on Sale of Assets.

Conversion of Terminable Debentures into Perpetual Debenture Stock — Arrangement between Company and Creditors.]—On a petition under section 120 of the Companies (Consolidation) Act, 1908, at the instance of a company which was being wound up, the Court sanctioned an arrangement whereby debentures and debenture bonds, repayable at periods of from three to five years, were converted into debenture stock, repayable only on the occurrence of certain contingencies. Shandon Hydropathic Co., In re, [1911] S. C. 1153—Ct. of Sess.

Conversion of Redeemable into Irredeemable or Perpetual Debentures—Resolution by Majority of Debenture-holders — Power of Majority to Bind Minority.]—Where a debenture trust deed provides that the debenture-holders shall have power, exercisable by extraordinary resolution, to sanction any modification of the rights of the debenture-holders against the company or against its property whether such rights should arise under the debentures or under the trust deed, a majority of the debenture-holders may, by extraordinary resolution passed in accordance with the terms of the trust deed, convert redeemable debentures into irredeemable or perpetual debentures. Northern Assurance Co. v. Farnham United Breweries, 81 L. J. Ch. 358; [1912] 2 Ch. 125; 106 L. T. 527; 19 Manson, 178; 56 S. J. 360; 28 T. L. R. 305—Joyce, J.

Sale of Assets—Exchange for Debenture Stock in Purchasing Company.]—The debenture stock deed of a company contained a majority clause giving a general meeting of the stockholders "power to agree to accept any other property or securities instead of the stock, and in particular any debentures or debenture stock of the company," and "power to sanction any scheme for the reconstruction of the company or for the amalgamation of the company with any other company." The company agreed to sell its assets to another company, the debenture stock of the vendor company to be exchanged for debenture stock of the purchasing company, and the agreement being conditional on its approval by the stockholders. A resolution of approval was passed by them:—Held, that the proposed scheme came within the majority clause and the trustees of the deed could properly act on it. Hutchinson & Sons, Lim., In re: Thornton v. The Company, 31 T. L. R. 324—Sargant, J.

VIII. MEETINGS OF SHAREHOLDERS.

See also Vol. III. 1190, 2469.

Proxy—Lodgment at Office—Poll not an Adjournment.]—Where the articles of association of a company require that proxies be lodged at the office forty-eight hours before the time fixed for holding the meeting or adjourned meeting at which they are to be used, and at the meeting a poll is demanded and fixed for a later date, then proxies obtained after the meeting cannot be used for voting on the poll. Shaw v. Tati Concessions, Lim., 82 L. J. Ch. 159; [1913] 1 Ch. 292; 108 L. T. 487; 20 Manson, 104; 57 S. J. 322; 29 T. L. R. 261—Swinfen Eady, J.

A poll is not an adjournment, but a continuation of the meeting for voting purposes, but for nothing else. Ib.

——Objections to Votes to be Made at Meeting Only—Appointment of Proxy by Corporation to be under its Common Seal—Foreign Corporation having no Common Seal—Representative of a Company—Admitting Votes on Production of Copy of Resolution.]—The articles of association of a company provided that no one should be entitled to act as proxy for other shareholders unless he was himself a shareholder, but that no objection was to be made to the validity of any vote except at the meeting or poll at which it was tendered, and that every vote, whether given personally or by proxy, not disallowed at the meeting or poll was to be deemed valid for all purposes. The articles also provided that the instrument appointing a proxy should be in writing under the hand of the appointer or his attorney duly authorised, or, if such appointer were a corporation, under its common seal. At a general meeting of the company the chairman admitted votes rendered under a proxy to C., who was not a shareholder, and failing him to D., who was a shareholder. No objection was taken at the meeting to these votes. The chairman also admitted votes tendered by W. as the representative of another company, under a resolution passed pursuant to section 68 of the Companies (Consolidation) Act, 1908, on the production of a copy of the resolution signed by W. as chairman of the other company and by its secretary. The chairman of the meeting rejected, however, votes by proxy appointed under a power of attorney signed by two directors of a foreign company which had no common seal:—Held, that the votes tendered under the proxy to C. and D., and those tendered by W., were rightly admitted; but that the provision of the articles requiring the appointment of a proxy by a corporation to be under its common seal was limited to English corporations, and did not extend to foreign corporations which have no common seal, and that these votes therefore ought to have been admitted. Colonial Gold Reefs, Lim. v. Free State Rand, Lim., 83 L. J. Ch. 303; [1914] 1 Ch. 382; 110 L. T. 63; 21 Manson, 42; 58 S. J. 173; 30 T. L. R. 88—Sargant, J.

——Alien Enemy Shareholder — Right of Voting—Foreign Bank—Branch in England—Exercise of Right on Behalf of Branch.]—An alien enemy who is a shareholder in an English company is not entitled, during the war, to exercise the right of voting by employing a British subject as proxy at a meeting of the shareholders of the company, and where the alien enemy is a banking company with a branch in England such right of voting is not within clause 6 of the Trading with the Enemy Proclamation No. 2, and cannot be exercised during the war on behalf of the branch. Robson v. Premier Oil and Pipe Line Co., [1915] 2 Ch. 124; 59 S. J. 475; 31 T. L. R. 420—C.A.

Extraordinary General Meeting — Requisitions for—Validity.]—The holders of 690 shares in a company, upon which shares all calls then due had been paid, sent in requisitions to the directors of the company requesting them, in accordance with section 66 of the Companies (Consolidation) Act, 1908, to call an extraordinary general meeting. The issued share capital of the company was 22,357 shares, but it was admitted that the number of shares upon which all calls or other sums then due had been paid did not exceed 5,094:—Held, that the words "upon which all calls or other sums then due have been paid" in section 66, sub-section 1, refer to the "issued share capital," and therefore that the requisitions had been sent in by "the holders of not less than one-tenth of the issued share capital of the company upon which all calls or other sums then due" had been paid, and that the directors were bound to call a meeting. For the purpose of satisfying the requirements of sub-section 2 of section 66 it is not necessary that the requisitions should be in identical form. Fruit and Vegetable Growers' Association v. Kekewich, 81 L. J. Ch. 499; [1912] 2 Ch. 52; 106 L. T. 1007; 19 Manson, 206; 56 S. J. 502; 28 T. L. R. 411—Warrington, J.

Statutory Meeting—Notice—Shares—Allotment as Fully Paid—Consideration.]—The T. company, a private company incorporated under the Companies (Consolidation) Act, 1908, entered into a contract with the L. company, under which the L. company assigned to it an agreement for a lease of a building site and undertook to build and equip a theatre thereon in consideration of 9,000*l.*, which was to be satisfied by the allotment to the L. company of 36,000 fully paid five-shilling shares in the T. company. The L. company went into voluntary liquidation before completing the theatre, and did not complete it, and the landlord re-entered upon the land, and the agreement for a lease was thereby terminated. The liquidator of the L. company agreed to sell to the defendants some of these 36,000 shares, and the agreement provided that the defendants might avoid it if it should be found that the requirements of the Companies (Consolidation) Act, 1908, had in any way been infringed by the T. company. The articles of the T. company provided for the holding of the statutory meeting within the statutory limit; they also provided that the notices convening general meetings should state the nature of the business to be transacted thereat. The T. company held only one meeting which could in point of date have been the statutory meeting, but the notice convening it referred only to the business of confirming a special resolution passed at an earlier meeting. The defendants eventually avoided the agreement to purchase the shares. In an action brought by the liquidator for specific performance they contended (inter alia) that the T. company had infringed section 65 of the Companies (Consolidation) Act, 1908, by not holding a statutory meeting, and that the building agreement with the L. company was ultra vires the T. company, inasmuch as it provided for the issuing of fully paid shares in præsenti in consideration of a contract to be carried out in futuro, and thereby substituted for the statutory liability of the shareholder in respect of payment for the shares an action sounding in damages only :—Held, that if the only meeting which in point of date could have been the statutory meeting was intended to be such, it was not properly convened for the purpose, since the notice convening it did not state it was to be the statutory meeting, and that the T. company never in fact held its statutory meeting; and that, inasmuch as it thereby failed to comply with section 65 of the Companies (Consolidation) Act, 1908, the defendants were justified in avoiding the contract to purchase the shares. Gardner v. Iredale, 81 L. J. Ch. 531; [1912] 1 Ch. 700; 106 L. T. 860; 19 Manson, 245—Parker, J.

Form of Notice of Special Resolution—Extraordinary Resolution.]—It is not necessary that the notice convening a meeting at which a special resolution is to be passed should state that such resolution is to be proposed as an extraordinary resolution. Subsection 2 (a) of section 69 of the Companies (Consolidation) Act, 1908, only refers to the passing of the resolution, not to the calling together of the meeting for the purpose of passing it. Penarth Pontoon Shipway and Ship Repairing Co., Lim., In re, 56 S. J. 124—Swinfen Eady, J.

—— Misleading Notice of.] — The defendant company held nearly all the shares in a subsidiary company. Four of the five directors of the defendant company were also directors of the subsidiary company. In 1907 the subsidiary company increased their directors' remuneration from 2,500*l.* a year to 2,500*l.* a year and a sum equal to 20 per cent. of the net profits, after paying 10 per cent. to the ordinary shareholders. The directors of the defendant company exercised its voting powers to pass the article giving this increased remuneration without obtaining the sanction of the shareholders of the defendant company. In 1914 the defendant company issued notice of an extraordinary general meeting to pass resolutions—first, ratifying the payments which had been made to the directors of the subsidiary company; and thirdly, to insert an article authorising their directors, as directors of subsidiary companies, to receive remuneration without accounting for it, and to exercise the voting power of the defendant company as they should think fit. The notice stated the article of the subsidiary company giving the increased remuneration, but gave no information as to the amount which had been received thereunder. At the meeting, the chairman stated that the directors' fees from the two companies since 1881 and 1883 had averaged 320*l.* per annum for each director. This statement was untrue. The total amount for fees and percentages received by the directors of the subsidiary company for the previous seven years was 44,876*l.* The resolutions were duly passed and confirmed as special resolutions. The plaintiff, a shareholder of the defendant company, in an action on behalf of himself and all other shareholders for a declaration that these special resolutions were not binding upon the defendant company, moved for an injunction to restrain the directors of the subsidiary company from acting upon them :—Held, that the notice was misleading and was not such a satisfactory statement of the facts as the shareholders were entitled to, and that the plaintiff could maintain the action without joining the company as plaintiff, and that the injunction must be granted. Baillie v. Oriental Telephone and Electric Co., 84 L. Issue of New Shares — One Person a "Meeting."] — Where the memorandum and articles of a company provided that no new shares should be issued so as to rank equally with 10,000 original preference shares unless such issue was sanctioned by an extraordinary resolution of the holders, and all the preference shares passed at a separate "meeting" of such holders, and that a modification or variation of the rights of any class of shares might be effected when sanctioned by an extraordinary resolution of the holders of the shares of such class passed as a separate "meeting" of such holders, and all the preference shares were held by one person,—Held, that on the true construction of the memorandum and articles the sole preference shareholder could constitute a "meeting" to consent to a modification of the rights of preference shareholders. Sharpe v. Dawes (46 L. J. Q.B. 104; 2 Q.B. 26) and Sanitary Carbon Co., In re (12 L. J. N.C. 183; [1877] W. N. 223), distinguished. East v. Bennett Brothers, Lim., 80 L. J. Ch. 123; [1911]

Voting—Special Resolution.]—At an extraordinary general meeting of a company, convened to consider a proposed special resolution to reduce capital, the resolution was passed by less than the requisite statutory majority, but the minute of meeting bore that the chairman declared the resolution carried:—Held, that the resolution could not receive effect notwithstanding the terms of section 69 of the Companies (Consolidation) Act, 1908, as it was plain on the face of the proceedings that the resolution had not been carried by the requisite majority. Clark & Co., In re, [1911] S. C. 243—Ct. of Sess.

Resolutions — Mode of Putting.] — The putting of two resolutions before an extraordinary general meeting en bloc and not separately is irregular. Blair Open Hearth Furnace Co. v. Reigart, 108 L. T. 665; 57 S. J. 500; 29 T. L. R. 449—Eve, J.

Resolutions Carried on Show of Hands — Opposition by Owners of Majority of Shares—Joint Holdings—Inability to Demand Poll—Interlocutory Injunction.] — A company's articles provided that at general meetings resolutions were to be decided by a numerical majority of votes unless a poll was demanded by three members, and that when two or more persons were entitled to a share the one whose name stood first on the register should be the only one entitled to vote. The plaintiffs, who numbered more than three, held a majority of shares, and they opposed certain resolutions, which were, however, carried on a show of hands. Owing to some of the plaintiffs' shares being jointly held, they only counted as two persons, and so did not amount to the three persons necessary for the demand of a poll. The plaintiffs brought an action to restrain the carrying out of the resolutions, and asked for an injunction until the trial:—Held, that without prejudice to the question whether the plaintiffs would be entitled to an injunction at the trial, they should have an interlocutory injunction. Cory v. Reindeer Steamship, Lim., 59 S. Classes of Shareholders—Sale to New Company for Shares — Provision for Dissentient Shareholders.] —A scheme for reconstruction and arrangement as between the company and the various classes of members, which makes due provision for the rights of dissentient shareholders, may be sanctioned by the Court as well under section 120 as under section 192 of the Companies (Consolidation) Act, 1908. Canning Jarrah Timber Co., In re (69 L. "Compromise or arrangement" — Sale of Assets to New Company—Payment in Shares of New Company—Power to Impose Scheme on Dissentient Shareholders — Sanction of Court.]—A scheme which provides that a new company should be formed to which the whole undertaking of an existing company is to be sold in consideration of the discharge by the new company of the debentures of the existing company and the allotment to the holders of shares in the existing company of shares in the new company, but without making any provision for dissentient shareholders of the existing company, is not a "compromise or arrangement" that can be sanctioned by the Court under section 120 of the Companies (Consolidation) Act, 1908. Canning Jarrah Timber Co., In re (69 L. Receiver in Debenture-holder's Action—Conditional Contract for Sale—Petition by Liquidator to Sanction Scheme of Arrangement—Summons by Receiver to Approve Conditional Contract of Sale.]—Where a company is in liquidation and a receiver has also been appointed in a debenture-holder's action, and where there is before the Court both a petition by the liquidator to sanction a scheme of arrangement and also a summons by the receiver to approve a conditional contract of sale,—Held, that one order can be made on the two applications. Durham Collieries Electric Power Co., In re; Power v. The Company, 57 S. J. 558—Neville, J.

Rights of Majority against Minority—Sanction of Court.] — Where there was no mala fides or fraud in a proposed scheme of reconstruction of a company, nor was it a sham or device, although the result would be that the majority of the shareholders would obtain control of the undertaking of the company and compel the minority to accept a cash payment in lieu of shares in a new company to which that undertaking was to be sold, it was held that the scheme was one that ought not to be interfered with by the Court. North-West Transportation Co. v. Beatty (56 L. Arrangement — Voluntary Liquidation — Sanction of Court—Form of Order.]—When it is desired to obtain the sanction of the Court to a scheme of arrangement under section 120 of the Companies Consolidation Act, 1908, the practice is to obtain upon originating summons an order convening the requisite meeting or meetings to consider the scheme; if the necessary majority is obtained, the sanction of the Court may then be sought on petition. Form of order, in the case of a company in voluntary liquidation, sanctioning a composition with creditors. Clarke & Co., In re, [1912] 1 Ir. R. 24—M.R.

Deceased Shareholder—"Member"—Rights of Executors not Registered as Members.]—The term "member" in section 192 of the Companies (Consolidation) Act, 1908, includes the estate of a deceased member; and, where due notice of the death and probate is given to the company, the executors, though not registered as members, are entitled to execute the right of dissent from a proposed reconstruction scheme which is given to members under sub-section 3. Llewellyn v. Kasintoe Rubber Estates, 84 L. Articles of Association — Effect of.] — The articles of association of a company provided that a "person entitled to a share in consequence of the death or bankruptcy of a member shall not be entitled to . . . exercise the rights and privileges of a member, unless and until he shall have elected to be and shall have been registered as the holder of the share":—Held, that the article in question did not interfere with the rights of deceased shareholders as such, but only with the rights of executors and others in a representative capacity to exercise the privileges of members in their own behalf. Ib.

X. RETURNS TO REGISTRAR OF COMPANIES.

Annual Returns — Summary in Form of Balance Sheet—Liabilities and Assets—Values of "Fixed assets"—Goodwill, Trade Marks, Machinery, Furniture, and Fixtures Included in one Item.]—The statement in the form of a balance sheet forwarded by the respondents, a public company, to the Registrar of Companies, in purported compliance with section 26, sub-section 3 of the Companies (Consolidation) Act, 1908, contained under the heading "Assets" the following entry: "Goodwill, trade marks, machinery, furniture and fixtures 100,007*l.* 16*s.* 5*d.*—Goodwill and trade marks at the sum at which they were taken over by the company. Machinery, furniture and fixtures at cost, less depreciation":—Held, that the statement in this form was defective, and did not comply with the requirements of section 26, sub-section 3, as it did not state separately the value of the goodwill and trade marks and the value of the machinery, furniture, and fixtures. Galloway v. Schill, Seebohm & Co., 81 L. Per Lord Alverstone, C.J.: It was not a compliance with the requirements of the section to include in one item assets part of which was valued on one principle, and the remainder was valued on a different principle. Per Pickford, J.: It was not a compliance with the requirements of the section to include in one item tangible and intangible assets. Ib.

"Private company"—Articles of Association—Provision for Limitation of Number of Members to Fifty—Number of Members in Fact Exceeding Fifty—Failure to Forward to Registrar Audited Balance Sheet.]—Under section 121 of the Companies (Consolidation) Act, 1908, a "private company" is a company "which by its articles" (inter alia) limits the number of its members (exclusive of persons who are in the employment of the company) to fifty. Such a company does not cease to be a "private company," merely because the number of its members in fact exceeds fifty, so as to render the company liable to a penalty for not forwarding to the Registrar of Companies a statement in the form of a balance sheet audited by the company's auditors, as is required by section 26, sub-section 3, to be done by all companies except private companies. Park v. Royalties Syndicate, Lim., 81 L. Stock—Issue by Municipal Corporation—"Redeemable."]—By the Edinburgh Corporation Stock Act, 1894, the Corporation of Edinburgh, where they had any unexhausted statutory borrowing power, were authorised to exercise such power by the creation of redeemable stock; and by the Edinburgh Improvement and Tramways Act, 1896, the corporation, in addition to the powers contained in the Act of 1894, were authorised to create and issue a new class of stock to be "redeemable at the option of the Corporation at one and the same period to be fixed by the Corporation but not exceeding sixty years from the first issue of such stock." In pursuance of this power the corporation issued stock to a period of thirty years from May 15, 1897:—Held, that the corporation were not bound, on the application of the holders, to redeem the stock immediately on the expiration of that period, but had merely an option to do so. Edinburgh Corporation v. British Linen Bank, 82 L. Sale of Shares—Warranty—Breach—Warranty or Representation.]—The respondent asked the local manager of the appellants, a firm of rubber merchants, who had underwritten a large number of shares in a rubber and produce company then in the course of formation, whether his firm were bringing out a rubber company. He replied that they were. The respondent then asked him whether the company was all right. The manager replied that his firm were bringing it out, to which the respondent rejoined that that was good enough for him. In answer to further enquiries the manager told the respondent that he could let him have 5,000 shares at a certain premium. The respondent agreed to take the shares, which were subsequently allotted to him. The shares having fallen in value, the respondent brought an action against the firm for fraudulent misrepresentation and for breach of warranty, the alleged warranty being that the company was a rubber company. The jury found that the company could not be properly described as a rubber company; that there was no fraudulent misrepresentation; but that the manager had given a warranty as alleged :—Held, that there was no evidence upon which the jury could properly find that the appellants gave any such warranty as alleged. Heilbut, Symons & Co. v. Buckleton, 82 L. K.B. 533, at p. 536; [1901] 2 K.B. 215, at p. 221), that in determining whether or not a representation was intended to amount to a warranty "a decisive test is whether the vendor assumes to assert a fact of which the buyer is ignorant, or merely states an opinion or judgment upon a matter of which the vendor has no special knowledge, and on which the buyer may be expected also to have an opinion and to exercise his judgment," cannot be supported—per Lord Moulton; the Lord Chancellor (Viscount Haldane) concurring. Ib.

Agreement to Sell Shares—Construction—"Timber."]—The respondent agreed to sell to the appellants at an agreed price shares in a saw mills company which had extensive rights of cutting timber over a large area of ground for long periods of time. The agreement contained a provision to the effect that the vendor was to give a satisfactory guarantee to the purchasers "that the quantity of timber on the different tracts of land as shewn by the statement . . . attached hereto . . . is true and accurate"; and in the event of the quantity of timber on the said various tracts failing, on verification, to reach the quantity represented in the attached statement, the vendor was to repay to the purchasers the amount of shortage :—Held, that the word "timber" must be held to mean all timber trees growing on the land which were reasonably fit for use in such a business as that carried on by the company, and should not be restricted to such trees as were at the date of the agreement capable of being felled and sold at a profit at the then current prices. Swift v. David, 107 L. Prohibition of Payment of Commission—Private Company.]—The prohibition in section 89, sub-section 2 of the Companies (Consolidation) Act, 1908, of payment of commission by a company to any person in consideration of his subscribing or procuring subscriptions for shares in the company (except in the cases enumerated in sub-section 1), applies to private as well as to public companies. Dominion of Canada General Trading and Investment Syndicate v. Brigstocke, 80 L. Underwriting Letter — Clause Allowing Variation—Material Variations in Prospectus as Drafted and as Settled and Published—Alteration of Risk — Discharge of Underwriters.]—The defendants signed an underwriting letter undertaking to apply for five hundred shares in a company which was being promoted. By clause 8 of the letter the obligation thereunder was to hold good notwithstanding any variation between the draft prospectus submitted to the defendants and the prospectus as finally settled and published. The draft prospectus stated that the minimum subscription on which the directors might proceed to allotment was 15,000*l.*, which had been underwritten at a commission of 5 per cent. thereon, and an overriding commission of 2½ per cent., payable by the company. The prospectus as finally settled and published stated that the minimum subscription was fixed by the articles of association at the nominal sum of 100*l.*, and that as 5,000 shares had been underwritten the directors would proceed to allotment, and it was considerably varied or altered from the draft prospectus in other respects :—Held, that, notwithstanding the provisions of clause 8 of the underwriting letter, the defendants were not bound to take up and pay for the shares, as the alterations made in the prospectus as finally published had created an essentially different risk from that which the defendants had undertaken. Warner International and Overseas Engineering Co. v. Kilburn, Brown & Co., 84 L. —— Allotment of Shares by way of Commission—Death of Promoter before Completion of Contract — Personal Services — Validity of Contract.]—By an agreement dated November 30, 1912, a promoter agreed to form an English company to acquire the English trading rights of a French company and to place the ordinary shares of the English company at par by three fixed dates, in consideration whereof the French company agreed to sell these rights to the English company in terms of an agreed draft, and that the promoter should be at liberty to stipulate for the issue to him of 5 per cent. of the ordinary shares of the English company fully paid. The capital of the English company was to be 105,000*l.* divided into 100,000 ordinary shares of 1*l.* each and 100,000 participation shares of 1*s.* each. By an agreement of December 9, 1912, the promoter agreed with the English company to procure the French company to sell the said rights to the English company in the terms of the agreed draft, in consideration of his being allotted 5,000 ordinary shares in the English company fully paid. By a second agreement of December 9, 1912, the French company agreed to sell the said rights to the English company in the terms of the agreed draft in consideration of receiving the 100,000 participation shares fully paid and 10 per cent. of the ordinary shares as and when subscribed, and upon the express condition that the ordinary shares were subscribed by the dates specified in the agreement of November 30, 1912. The English company was incorporated on December 10, 1912, with the above-mentioned capital and with the object of carrying out the two agreements of December 9, 1912, and by its articles was empowered to pay a commission not exceeding 10 per cent. to any person procuring subscriptions for its ordinary shares. The prospectus of the same date stated, "No underwriting commission has been or will be paid." It also stated the consideration which the French company were to receive and that the promoter was to be allotted 5,000 ordinary shares fully paid. The promoter placed the first lot and part of the second lot, but died in February, 1913, without having placed the remainder. The French company claimed to prove against his estate in bankruptcy for damages for breach of the agreement of November 30, 1912:—Held, that the agreement was not for personal services by the promoter and was enforceable against his estate. Held, also, that the three agreements did not form one tripartite agreement. Semble, that if they did they did not contravene section 89 of the Companies (Consolidation) Act, 1908. Worthington, In re; Pathé Frères, ex parte, 83 L. —— Liability of Executor — Remoteness of Damage.]—The liability on a contract to apply for shares under an underwriting agreement passes to the executors of the person contracting, as the contract is not one involving personal skill, and if the person contracting had notice that the object of the other party to the contract was that he might be enabled to perform another underwriting agreement the damages are not too remote to be recoverable. Warner Engineering Co. v. Brennan, 30 T. b. Payment.

Shares not Paid for in Cash—Contract in Writing—Leave to File Memorandum with Registrar.]—The Court gave leave to file with the Registrar of Joint-Stock Companies a memorandum in writing specifying the consideration for which the seven signatories' shares in a company were issued in 1889, and ordered that on such memorandum being filed it should, in relation to such shares, operate as if it were a sufficient contract in writing within the meaning of section 25 of the Companies Act, 1867, and had been duly filed before the issue of such shares. Wilkinson Sword Co., In re, 57 S. J. 340; 29 T. L. R. 242—Swinfen Eady, J.

Payment in Advance of Calls — Loans — No Power to Repay.]—A company was authorised by its articles of association to receive from any member willing to advance the same all or any part of the moneys due upon his shares beyond the sums called for, and to pay interest thereon. The company issued ordinary shares on several occasions, on each issue the shareholders being given the option of paying the balance due on their respective shares in anticipation of calls, such balance to bear interest at 4 per cent. Some of the shareholders exercised this option:—Held, that the moneys so paid in advance of calls were not to be regarded as a loan to the company, and could not be repaid to the shareholders by the company. London and Northern Steamship Co. v. Farmer, 111 L. T. 204; 58 S. J. 594—Joyce, J.

Allotment as Fully Paid—Consideration.]—There is no objection to an agreement by a limited company that a debt which it presently owes shall be satisfied by the allotment of fully paid shares of the same nominal amount. If a building agreement between two companies can be read as a contract to build a theatre in consideration of 9,000*l.* payable upon the sealing of the agreement, with a provision that the 9,000*l.* should be satisfied by the issue of fully paid shares to that amount, it will be valid. Gardner v. Iredale, 81 L. 3. Rescission of Agreement.

Misrepresentation by Director—Liability of Company for Misrepresentation.] — In an action by the plaintiff company for a call on 5,000 shares, the defendant denied liability, and counterclaimed a rescission of her contract to take shares and a return of the sum she had paid on her application for shares and on their allotment to her. In answer to questions left to them the jury found—first, that the defendant was induced to apply for shares by representations fraudulently made by one L., a director of the plaintiff company; secondly, that the representations were made both before and after the company had been incorporated and L. had become a director; and thirdly, that they were made for the purposes of the company and in its supposed interests. It appeared that after the formation of the company all the interested parties —directors and signatories—well knew that L. was continuing what he had been doing previously—namely, endeavouring to raise money on behalf of the company:—Held (Kennedy, L.J., dissenting), that in these circumstances L. was the agent of the company, that the company was bound by his acts, and that the defendant was entitled to judgment on the claim and counterclaim. Hilo Manufacturing Co. v. Williamson, 28 T. L. R. 164—C.A.

Unpaid Calls — Notice to Forfeit Shares — Practice — Interim Injunction to Restrain Forfeiture.]—Where the plaintiff in an action to rescind a contract to take shares in a company receives notice from the company that his shares are liable to be forfeited if a call in respect of them is not paid, he is entitled to an interim injunction until the trial of the action to restrain the company from forfeiting the shares. Ripley v. Paper Bottle Co. (57 L. Sale of Concession to Company—Payment by Fully Paid-up Shares of Issued Capital and Agreement to Allot Proportion of Future Issue of Shares as Fully Paid up—Validity.]—A limited company cannot for a fixed present consideration validly contract that an indefinite amount of future share capital shall from time to time be issued upon the terms that all liability thereon for calls shall be at once extinguished without any contemporaneous payment by the allottees. Hong Kong and China Gas Co. v. Glen, 83 L. J. Ch. 561; [1914] 1 Ch. 527; 110 L. T. 859; 21 Manson, 242; 58 S. J. 380; 30 T. L. R. 339—Sargant, J.

A company, registered under the Joint-Stock Companies Act, 1856, in consideration of receiving a concession for supplying gas, contracted in 1862 to allot to the vendor 400 shares of 10*l.* each of the company's capital and to provide 4,000*l.* to be immediately applied in paying up the 400 shares in full. It further agreed that if and whenever the company should increase its capital the company would allot to the vendor, his executors, administrators, or assigns, such further number of shares as should be equal to one fifth part of the increased capital so from time to time actually paid up, and would pay to the vendor or his executors, administrators, or assigns, a sum equal to the nominal amount of the shares so from time to time allotted to him or them, which sum or sums so paid should be immediately applied in paying up in full the shares so allotted. In an action raising the question whether such part of the agreement as referred to increases of capital was binding upon the company,—Held, that the agreement was valid in so far as it created an obligation to allot to the vendor, his executors, administrators, or assigns, one-fifth of the increased capital from time to time of the company, but that it was void, as being contrary to the requirements of the Joint-Stock Companies Act, 1856, in so far as it purported to relieve the allottee or allottees from liability to pay up all or any part of the nominal amount of such share capital. Wragg, Lim., In re (66 L. J. Ch. 419; [1897] 1 Ch. 796), considered and distinguished. Ib.

Issue to "company or to its nominees"—Exercise of Option.]—A company sold its business, and all its assets, except uncalled capital, to another company, and the latter company agreed to issue to the former or to its nominees certain shares which were to be in a precisely corresponding position as the shares of the selling company in respect of being fully paid or of having an uncalled liability. The purchasing company purported to issue the shares, on most of which there was a large liability, to the selling company without giving it an opportunity of naming any nominees:—Held, that the allotment of the shares in these circumstances was not warranted. National Standard Life Assurance Corporation, In re, 27 T. L. R. 271—Swinfen Eady, J.

Power to Convert Shares into Stock—Direct Issue of Stock—Issue of Stock at a Discount—Reduction of Rate of Interest on Preference Shares—Issue of Bonus Stock to Compensate for Reduction—Validity of Issues.]—A company, which had power to convert its paid-up shares into stock, created new fully paid stock that had not thus been converted from shares, and issued it directly for equivalent valuable consideration to a certain class of its members. To another class of its members it issued stock directly, only 50 per cent. of which was paid up. It also, as part of a scheme for the re-adjustment of its capital, issued directly a certain amount of new fully paid-up stock as a bonus to certain of its preference shareholders in order to compensate them for the loss that they would otherwise have incurred by the reduction of the former rate of interest on their preference shares. A considerable period (amounting in the case of the 50 per cent. paid-up stock to at least twelve years) had elapsed since the commission of these irregularities, and dividends had been paid on all the various kinds of stock. The company was afterwards voluntarily wound up, and a sum of money remained for division among its members after the payment of all its creditors:—Held, that the direct issue for equivalent valuable consideration of new fully paid-up stock, though irregular in form, was substantially the same as a prior issue of fully paid-up shares and their subsequent conversion into stock; and that this irregularity had been waived by lapse of time, so that the stock was now entitled to rank in the distribution of assets exactly as though it had been first issued as shares and then converted. Held, however, that the issue of the 50 per cent. paid-up stock was ultra vires the company, and thus wholly invalid, and that its holders could now, accordingly, neither be called on to contribute the remaining 50 per cent., nor share in the distribution of the assets of the company. Held also, that its holders could not now claim as creditors in the winding-up for the return of the money that they had actually paid, inasmuch as any claim that they might otherwise have had was now barred by the Statute of Limitations. Home and Foreign Invest- ment and Agency Corporation, In re, 81 L. J. Ch. 364; [1912] 1 Ch. 72; 106 L. T. 259; 19 Manson, 188; 56 S. J. 124—Swinfen Eady, J.

Semble, whether it would not anyhow be now too late for them to assert any such claim (whatever might otherwise be its validity), having reference to the fact that the claims of creditors had already been dealt with in the winding-up. Ib.

Held, further, that the issue of the bonus stock was wholly ultra vires the company, and that its holders were now neither liable to be called upon to pay for it, nor entitled to share in the distribution of assets, on the footing that they held a corresponding number of shares in the company. Ib.

Issue of Shares to Directors at a Price Below their True Value—Resolution of the Company—Right of Directors to Vote.]—By a resolution passed at an extraordinary general meeting of the company, it was resolved that certain unissued shares should be issued to the directors at par, though the true value of the shares was much greater. The directors held a majority of the shares in the company, and the resolution was carried by their votes:—Held, that, although the value of the portion of the assets of the minority was decreased and the value of the portion of the assets of the majority was increased by an amount greater than the sum paid for the new shares, the resolution was binding on the minority and could not be set aside. Ving v. Robertson & Woodcock, Lim., 56 S. J. 412—Warrington, J.

Allotment of Shares at a Discount—Certificate Stating that Shares Fully Paid.]—The partners in a foundry, with the object of forming a syndicate to acquire the business, obtained deposits of sums of money from a number of persons. The project of forming the syndicate having failed, the partners floated a limited company, proposed to the depositors that their deposits should be applied in taking shares, and offered to each of them a number of shares in proportion to, but of greater face value than, the amount of his deposit. The company having gone into liquidation, one of the depositors who had been allotted shares and had received from the company share certificates which stated that the shares allotted to him were fully paid, though in fact they were not, was sued by the liquidators for the price of his shares:—Held, that as the defender had accepted the shares in bona fide reliance on the statements in the certificates that they were fully paid, the company was barred from maintaining that they were not fully paid. Penang Foundry Co. v. Gardiner, [1913] S. C. 1203—Ct. of Sess.

Irregular Issue.]—(1) The irregularity committed by a company in issuing fully paid stock without first issuing shares is an irregularity which does not affect the real substance of the transaction, and will not in equity be held to avoid the transaction, but can be ignored, and the stock will accordingly be deemed to have been properly issued. (2) A company in certain circumstances has power to convert its shares into stock. (3) The issue of bonus shares being wholly ultra vires in this case such shares were treated as non-existent, and the holders thereof were accordingly neither liable to pay calls thereon nor entitled to rank as creditors against the company. Home and Foreign Investment and Agency Co., In re, 56 S. J. 124—Swinfen Eady, J.

5. Calls.

See also Vol. III. 1398, 2510.

Making Calls on Certain Members Exclusively of Others — Validity — Difficulty of Recovering Previous Calls—Implied Equality between Members.]—There is prima facie an implied condition of equality between shareholders in a company, and it is prima facie entirely improper for directors to make a call on part of a class of shareholders without making a similar call on all the members of that class. Preston v. Guyon or Grand Collier Dock Co. (10 L. J. Ch. 73; 11 Sim. 327) followed. Galloway v. Hallé Concerts Society, 84 L. J. Ch. 723; [1915] 2 Ch. 233; 59 S. J. 613; 31 T. L. R. 469—Sargant, J.

Even if under the articles of association calls can be so made, the power is exercisable only in a proper case; and the fact that the members in question have been dilatory in paying previous calls, and have caused the company trouble and expense in enforcing them, is not a sufficient reason. Ib.

Unpaid Calls—Winding-up—Bank Overdraft of Company—Director's Personal Guarantee—Payments under Guarantee — Satisfaction of Future Calls — Set-off.]—The director of a company agreed to obtain an overdraft from a bank, in favour of the company, upon his personal security. The board passed a resolution that any payments made by the director under his guarantee might be treated by him as payments in advance of any future calls upon his shares. The company going into liquidation, the director paid the amount of the overdraft:—Held, that a claim by the director to deduct the payment made by him from calls against him made by the liquidator was indistinguishable from a claim to set off debts against calls, and was inadmissible. Paraguassu Steam Tramroad Co., In re; Black & Co.'s Case (42 L. 6. Preference Shares.

See also Vol. III. 1432, 2515.

Right to Participate in Profits—Articles of Association—Construction.]—The articles of association of the respondent company provided that "subject to any priorities which may be given upon the issue of any new shares, the profits of the company available for distribution shall be distributed as dividend among the members in accordance with the amounts paid on the shares held by them respectively." In accordance with a power given by the articles of association fully paid preference shares were issued entitled to a cumulative preference dividend at the rate of 10 per cent., to rank both as regards capital and dividend in priority to the other shares. In an action brought by a preference shareholder for a declaration that the preference shares were entitled to rank for dividend pari passu with the ordinary shares in the distribution of any profits of the company, after providing for a cumulative dividend of 10 per cent. on the ordinary shares,—Held, that upon the true construction of the articles of association the preference shareholders were not entitled to anything beyond a cumulative dividend of 10 per cent. Will v. United Lankat Plantations Co., 83 L. J. Ch. 195; [1914] A.C. 11; 109 L. T. 754; 21 Manson, 24; 58 S. J. 29; 30 T. L. R. 37—H.L. (E.)

Uncapitalised Surplus — Distribution as between Preference and Ordinary Shares after Return of Paid-up Capital.]—The express gift or attachment to preference shares, on their creation, of preferential rights, whether in respect of dividend or return of capital, is prima facie a definition of the whole of their rights in these respects, and negatives any further or other right to which, but for the specified rights, they would have been entitled. The canon of construction applied in Will v. United Lankat Plantations Co. (81 L. J. Ch. 718; [1912] 2 Ch. 571) to the rights of preference shares with regard to dividend applied to the rights of such shares in a winding-up. Espuela Land and Cattle Co., In re (78 L. J. 7. Certificate.

See also Vol. III. 1441, 2517.

Estoppel.] — A partnership applied to a limited company for the allotment to them of a thousand shares, and forwarded a cheque in satisfaction of all existing and future calls in respect of these shares. This cheque, however, was wrongly credited in the books of the company, without the knowledge and consent of the partnership, in part payment of four thousand shares allotted to a promoter of the company. Subsequently a member of the partnership was elected a director of the company; and after his election a certificate for a thousand fully paid-up shares was issued to the partnership. This certificate was signed by the director who was also a member of the partnership; and the numbers of the shares comprised in this certificate were identical with the numbers of one thousand out of the four thousand shares already allotted (as partly paid up) to the promoter of the company. Ultimately these last thousand shares were transferred by the promoter to the partnership. These particular thousand shares were entered on the register of the company as being only partly paid up. The company having been wound up, and the partnership having been placed on its list of contributories as the owners of one thousand shares only partly paid up,—Held, that the company was estopped by the certificate issued to the partnership (in which the shares were described as being fully paid up) from now setting up that the shares were not in fact fully paid up; and this in spite of the facts that one of the directors who signed the certificate was also a member of the partnership; that (had he investigated the books of the company) he might have discovered the actual facts of the case, and that the partnership had subsequently accepted from the promoter the transfer of the thousand shares in question. Coasters, Lim., In re, 80 L. "Default or unnecessary delay" in Registering Transfer—Company on Eve of Liquidation.] — A holder of shares in a limited company executed a transfer of his shares, and forwarded it to the company with a request that it should be registered. The transfer was received and acknowledged by the company two days afterwards. On the day on which the transfer was dispatched the company sent a notice to the transferor intimating that a general meeting of the company was to be held ten days later for the purpose of considering a resolution that the company should be wound up in respect that by reason of its liabilities it was unable to continue its business. At the general meeting it was resolved that the company should be wound up, and as the directors had not removed the shareholder's name from the register his name was included by the liquidator in the list of contributories. The shareholder having presented a petition under section 32 of the Companies Act, 1908, for rectification of the register by removal of his name therefrom, and also for removal of his name from the list of contributories, the Court refused the petition, holding that the directors had not been guilty of default or unnecessary delay in refraining from removing his name from the register. Dodds v. Cosmopolitan Insurance Corporation, [1915] S. C. 992—Ct. of Sess.

Opinions expressed that, in the circumstances, the directors would have committed a grave breach of duty if they had removed the petitioner's name from the register. Ib.

8. Dividends.

Different Classes of Shareholders—Different Maximum Rates—Making up Deficiencies of Previous Dividends—Preserving Proportions of Rates.] — Section 75 of the Waterworks Clauses Act, 1847, and the other sections following it and relating to the payment of dividends, have reference to the maximum amount which a company may distribute in dividend, and have no reference to the rights of shareholders inter se. Weymouth Waterworks Co. v. Coode, 81 L. J. Ch. 11; [1911]

2 Ch. 520; 104 L. T. 587; 18 Manson, 385—Parker, J.

A waterworks company was incorporated by Acts of 1797 and 1855, the later Act incorporating the Waterworks Clauses Act, 1847, and authorising the issue of a capital of 40,000*l.* The Act did not prescribe any maximum rate of dividend. By an Act of 1897 the company was authorised to raise additional capital to the amount of 60,000*l.* The Act provided that, except as otherwise in it provided, the new capital and its holders were to be subject and entitled to the same liabilities, rights, and privileges as if it were part of the existing capital; but the Act contained a provision limiting the dividend on the new capital to 5 per cent. per annum unless a larger dividend should at any time be necessary to make up deficiencies of previous dividends. There were such deficiencies on both classes of capital, and an anticipated annual surplus available towards making them up:—Held, that in making up deficiencies the company must preserve between the total amounts paid by way of back dividends to the holders of the two classes of capital the proportion of 10 per cent. and 5 per cent. prescribed by section 75 of the Waterworks Clauses Act, 1847, and the Act of 1897, as the maximum dividends on the two classes respectively, until all the arrears were wiped off. Ib.

Bonus Dividend out of Reserve Fund—Issue of New Shares—Option to Take New Shares or Retain Dividend—Capital or Income—Intention of Company.]—A limited company distributed its reserve fund, consisting of undivided profits, amongst its shareholders by means of a bonus dividend. The shareholders had the option of retaining the dividend or applying it in the purchase of new shares of the company. The intention of the company was, however, that the dividend should be applied in taking up the new shares, and should not be retained. Trustees had trust moneys invested in the company. They had no power to invest in the new shares, but they applied their dividend in purchasing them pending a decision as to whether, as between tenant for life and remainderman, it was capital or income:—Held, that the bonus dividend was capital, the intention of the company being the deciding factor, notwithstanding the option given to the shareholders. Held, further, that, as between tenant for life and remainderman, trustee shareholders have no option, but must take the greatest benefit offered by the company. Boueh v. Sproule (56 L. "Holder" of Shares—Person Owning Right in Shares, but not on Register.]—The articles of association of a limited company stated that the company should have a lien on shares for debts due to it by "the holder" of the shares. A shareholder, in security for debts due by him to two banks, transferred to nominees of the banks certain shares of which he was the registered holder, and they were registered in the names of the banks' nominees; and he also purchased certain other shares and registered them in the names of the same nominees. After the shareholder's death his estates were sequestrated. The banks, having recovered payment of the debts due to them from other securities, were prepared to transfer the shares in question to the trustee in the sequestration, whereupon the company claimed a lien over the shares in respect of a debt due to it by the deceased:—Held, that "holder" in the articles of association meant "registered holder"; and, as the deceased was not the registered holder of the shares, that the company had no lien over them for his debt. Paul's Trustee v. Justice, [1912] S. Pledge of Certificates — Blank Transfer — Estoppel.]—The plaintiff employed a firm of stockbrokers to buy for him shares in a Colonial railway, and the brokers did so. The shares were registered in the name of one H., the certificates were in his name, and the transfers on the back had been signed by him in blank. On the brokers' suggestion the plaintiff left the certificates with them and subsequently consented to the shares being put into other names. The brokers deposited the shares with the defendant bank as security for loans, and at the broker's request the shares were put in the names of the bank's nominees. The defendant bank took the shares in good faith. In an action by the plaintiff against the defendant bank to recover the share certificates :—Held, that the bank was not put upon enquiry by the mere fact of the brokers depositing the shares as security for their own account; that the transfer from H.'s name was not an intimation to the bank that the shares did not belong to the brokers and did not put the bank upon enquiry; that the principle of Colonial Bank v. Cady (60 L. J. Ch. 131; 15 App. Cas. 267), that any one who signs a transfer on a certificate in blank and hands it to another person knows that third persons would think that that person had authority to deal with it, extends to a person who without having had such a certificate in his possession leaves it in the hands of his broker, and that therefore the plaintiff was estopped from recovering the certificates from the defendants. Fuller v. Glyn, Mills, Currie & Co., 83 L. Sale of Goods—Limited Company—Order—Name of Company not Mentioned — Personal Liability—"Holder of order for goods."]—By section 63, sub-section 3 of the Companies (Consolidation) Act, 1908, if any person, on behalf of a limited company, signs on behalf of the company any bill of exchange or order for goods, wherein its name is not mentioned, he shall be personally liable to the "holder" of such bill of exchange or order for goods :—Held, that, though the word "holder" was not appropriate to orders for goods, as it was in the case of bills of exchange, it meant in the case of orders for goods the person to whom the orders had been given. Civil Service Co-operative Society v. Chapman, 30 T. Action by Shareholder against Director and Company — Contract made by Director for Work to be done by the Company—Retention of Money Received — Agreement with Co-directors not to Account — Internal Management.]—The managing director of a limited company carrying on a laundry business entered into contracts for laundry work in his own name, on behalf of the company, with a customer. The work was done by the company, and the director received the amounts due under the contracts, and paid over a portion to the company, but did not account for the amounts received by him. This was in consequence of an alleged arrangement with his co-directors that he was not to account for profits. The company declined to call upon the director for an account, whereupon two shareholders brought an action against the company and the director, claiming that the director was a trustee for the company of all moneys received under the contracts, and asking for an account. The company pleaded that the complaint was conversant with a matter of internal management, over which the Court had no jurisdiction. The defence of the director was that if there was any cause of complaint against him, which he did not admit, it was only enforceable at the suit of the company :—Held, that the transaction was illegal and ultra vires, and that the action was maintainable and the plaintiffs entitled to the relief sought. Cockburn v. Newbridge Sanitary Steam Laundry Co., [1915] 1 Ir. Jurisdiction to Transfer Action in King's Bench Division to Chancery Division—Discretion.] — Rule 42 (1) of the Companies (Winding-up) Rules, 1909, provides that "Where an order has been made in the High Court for the winding-up of a company the Judge shall have power, without further consent, to order the transfer to him of any action, cause or matter pending in any other Court or Division brought or continued by or against the company." Certain shareholders of a company brought an action in the King's Bench Division to set aside an agreement of compromise entered into between the plaintiffs and the defendant company and its directors, upon the ground that it had been obtained by fraud and misrepresentation, and for other relief. The company was subsequently ordered to be compulsorily wound up, and, the liquidator having applied that the action should be transferred to the winding-up Judge in the Chancery Division, the Judge, being of opinion that he had jurisdiction under rule 42 (1) to do so, although the directors were added as defendants, ordered the action to be transferred to him. On appeal by the plaintiffs from that order,—Held, that the object of rule 42 being to give to the winding-up Court control over the whole assets of a company, the Judge had jurisdiction to make the order in question, and that, as it was in the circumstances a proper one, the Court of Appeal would not interfere with the discretion exercised by the Judge. Pacaya Rubber and Produce Co., In re, 82 L. Leave to Commence Fresh Action in Scotland—Fruits of Previous Action.]—Leave was granted under section 142 of the Companies (Consolidation) Act, 1908, to the applicants to bring a fresh action in Scotland after the winding-up order had been made, when it was shewn that such fresh action was in reality only a method of obtaining the fruits of a previous action. National Provincial Insurance Corporation, In re; Cooper v. The Corporation, 56 S. All its assets were in Portsmouth, and the office of the company had been there for a considerable time during the six months preceding the petition for winding-up :—Held, that by virtue of sub-section 7 of section 131 of the Companies (Consolidation) Act, 1908, the Judge of the Southsea County Court had jurisdiction to hear the petition. Southsea Garage, in re, 55 S. Unregistered Friendly Society — "Unregistered company."]—A friendly society which has not been registered under the Friendly Societies Acts or any other Acts may be compulsorily wound up by the Court as "an unregistered company" under the Companies Consolidation Act, 1908, ss. 267 and 268, and an order will be made, if a great majority of members desire it, although an action is pending in which the society could be wound up. Victoria Society, Knottingley, In re, 82 L. 3. Petition.

Company's Name, Slight Error.]—Although it is an old-standing rule that an error in the name of a company in the winding-up advertisement renders the advertisement absolutely void, and although it is desirable that in almost every case this old-standing rule should be adhered to, there are cases where the mistake is of such a very trifling character that no one could possibly be misled by it, and in such a case the Court can exercise the discretion of waiving the formal defect under rule 217. L'Industrie Verrière, Lim., In re, 58 S. J. 611—Astbury, J.

Discretion — Emergency Powers. — Where the only assets of a company are unrealisable owing to the war, and a judgment creditor presents a petition to wind up the company, no creditors opposing the petition, an order to wind up the company was made, the Court deciding that it had no discretion under the circumstances, and that the Courts (Emergency Powers) Act, 1914, was not applicable; therefore the petitioner was entitled to the order ex debito justitiæ. Company (0,022 of 1915), In re; Company (0,023 of 1915), In re (84 L. J. Ch. 382; [1915] 1 Ch. 520), applied. Western of Canada Oil, Lands, and Works Co., In re (43 L. J. Ch. 184; L. R. 17 Eq. 1, 7), followed. Globe Trust Lim., In re, 84 L. J. Ch. 903; 113 L. T. 80; 59 S. J. 529; 31 T. L. R. 280—Astbury, J.

Opposition of Minority of Creditors — Opponents Interested in Preservation of Company.]—A petition to wind up a company on the ground of its inability to pay its debts ought not to be refused or ordered to be stayed until after the war merely because it is opposed by creditors representing a minority in amount, and the less weight should be given to the wishes of such creditors where it appears that they are interested in preventing a forced realisation of the assets of the debtor company. Oilfields Finance Corporation, In re, 59 S. J. 475—C.A.

Majority of Unsecured Creditors Opposing—Business Carried on by Debenture-holder — "Just and equitable."] — The Court is not bound to exercise its discretion by refusing to make a winding-up order merely on the ground that a majority in number and value of creditors oppose the petition. Clandown Colliery Co., In re, 84 L. J. Ch. 420; [1915] 1 Ch. 369; 112 L. T. 1060; [1915] H. B. R. 93; 59 S. J. 350—Astbury, J.

A creditor's petition against a colliery company was supported by three trade creditors, their debts amounting to 485*l.*, but was opposed by the company, the chairman, and sixteen other trade creditors whose debts amounted to 1,169*l.* The evidence shewed that creditors had been induced by the company to part with goods without being aware of the company's insolvency. The business had been for some time carried on in the interests of the chairman, who held debentures covering all the assets. No reasons for their opposition were given by creditors opposing the petition. :—Held, following Melson & Co., In re (75 L. J. Ch. 509; [1906] 1 Ch. 841), that it was "just and equitable" under section 129, sub-section vi. of the Companies (Consolidation) Act, 1908, that a winding-up order should be made. Ib.

Dismissal of Petition—Creditors' Opposition —Proposed Scheme.]—A petition for the compulsory winding up of a company was dismissed by the Court on the ground that it was opposed by nearly all the creditors and that a reconstruction scheme was in course of preparation, and an order for the petition to stand over might interfere with the company's chances of obtaining the capital it required. East Kent Colliery Co., In re, 30 T. L. R. 659—Astbury, J.

4. Proceedings under Winding-up Order.

See also Vol. III. 1752, 2555.

"Execution" — Taxed Costs — Emergency Powers.]—An order for compulsory winding-up is not an execution within the meaning of section 1, sub-section (1) (a) of the Courts (Emergency Powers) Act, 1914, nor are taxed costs a sum of money within the meaning of the latter part of sub-section (b) of that section to which the Act applied. World of Golf, Lim., In re, 59 S. J. 7—Neville, J.

Director — Refusal to Answer Question at Examination before Registrar—Obligation to Answer.]—In winding-up proceedings against a company of which he had been a director, the respondent refused to answer a question at his examination before the Registrar relating to a statement in the prospectus. The respondent objected to answer on the ground that there were certain actions pending against him alleging misrepresentation in the prospectus, and that he ought not to be called upon to answer any questions relating to the issues in those actions. On report by the Registrar, under rule 72 of the Winding-up Rules, of such refusal to answer,—Held, that the respondent was bound to answer, as in the circumstances there was no reasonable risk of any information obtained being improperly used, and the mere fact that proceedings were pending against the respondent by shareholders was no reason why he should refuse to answer. Reliance Taxicab Co., In re, 28 T. L. R. 529—Swinfen Eady, J.

5. Assets.

Guarantee of Dividend — Winding-up — Security—Deposit of Part of Purchase Money —General Assets.]—Where on the sale of a business to a company a contract was entered into whereby the vendors guaranteed that the net profits of the purchasing company in respect of the business should amount to not less than 10 per cent. per annum upon the paid-up capital of the shares subscribed for by the public, and the purchasing company paid a sum equal to 10 per cent. upon the total amount of the shares subscribed as aforesaid into a bank to form a guarantee fund, such sum to be deemed as a payment on account of the purchase money,—Held, on the winding-up of the purchasing company, that the guarantee fund formed part of the general assets of the purchasing company. South Llanharran Colliery Co., In re; Jegon, ex parte (12 Ch. D. 503), distinguished. Menell, Lim., In re; Regent Street Fur Co. v. Diamant, 84 L. J. Ch. 593; [1915] 1 Ch. 759; 113 L. T. 77; [1915] H. B. R. 141; 31 T. L. R. 270—Warrington, J.

Surplus Assets — Division among Different Classes of Shareholders—Voluntary Winding-up.]—Where preference shares are given with a fixed preferential dividend at a specified rate, or with an express provision as to the right to a return of their paid-up capital, the right to take any further dividend or to a further share in surplus assets is in effect negatived. National Telephone Co., In re, 109 L. T. 389; 58 S. J. 12; 29 T. L. R. 682—Sargant, J.

The term "surplus assets" used in articles of association, in itself ambiguous, means, in the case of division in a winding-up between different classes of shares without reference to the nominal amounts or to the amounts paid on the shares, assets remaining after recouping capital as well as discharging debts and costs of liquidation, unless there be special words in the articles indicating that such is not the intention. Ramel Syndicate, In re, 80 L. J. Ch. 455; [1911] 1 Ch. 749; 104 L. T. 842; 18 Manson, 297—Neville, J.

6. Stay of Actions and Proceedings.

A pursuer, without having obtained the leave of the Court, brought an action against a company in liquidation, and also against the liquidator and certain secured creditors. Decree in absence was granted against the company and the liquidator. The secured creditors were the only defenders who appeared, and they did not plead on record any objection to the competency of the action. In an appeal at the instance of the secured creditors:—Held, that as the company and the liquidator had waived any objection to the competency, it was not pars judicis for the Court to enforce the provisions of section 142 of the Companies (Consolidation) Act, 1908, which enacts that "when a winding-up order has been made, no action or proceeding shall be proceeded with or commenced against the company except by leave of the Court, and subject to such terms as the Court may impose." Hill v. Black, [1914] S. C. 913—Ct. of Sess.

Distress Three Days before Commencement of Winding-up—Motion to Restrain Sale.]—A limited company held their business premises on lease for fourteen years, commencing June 25, 1914, which provided that the rent should be payable each year fifteen months in advance. The rent due March 25, 1915, for the period June 25, 1915, to June 25, 1916, was not paid, and on July 2, 1915, the landlord levied a distress on the premises. On July 5, 1915, the company went into voluntary liquidation. The liquidator brought an action to restrain the landlord from proceeding with the distress:—Held (affirming Neville, J.), that there were no special reasons rendering it inequitable to allow the landlord to enforce his legal right of distress. Venner's Cooking and Heating Appliances, Lim. v. Thorpe, 84 L. J. Ch. 925; [1915] 2 Ch. 404; 60 S. J. 27—C.A.

Costs.]—Where, under section 140 of the Companies (Consolidation) Act, 1908, an application is made by notice of motion to stay an action against a company on the ground that a petition has been presented for its winding-up, the plaintiff in the action is entitled to receive from the applicant his costs of appearing in the action. Pierce v. Wexford Picture House Co., [1915] 2 Ir. Company Limited by Guarantee and not having its Capital Divided into Shares — Mutual Insurance—Past Members—Liability of, to Contribute in Winding-up.]—Where a company limited by guarantee and not having its capital divided into shares is being wound up, section 123, sub-section 1 (iii.) of the Companies (Consolidation) Act, 1908 (which replaces section 38, sub-section 3 of the Companies Act, 1862), applies, and past members are not liable to contribute unless it appears to the Court that the existing members are unable to satisfy the contributions required to be made by them in pursuance of the Act. Accordingly it is proper for the liquidator to prepare separate lists of past and present members, and not to include both in one list of contributories. Premier Underwriting Association, In re; Great Britain Mutual Marine Insurance Association, ex parte, 82 L. J. Ch. 383; [1913] 2 Ch. 29; 108 L. T. 824; 20 Manson, 189; 57 S. J. 594—Neville, J.

The memorandum and articles of association of a mutual insurance company defined the members as being those who had any ships insured in the company, and fixed their liabilities in the event of winding-up. It was also provided that the directors should be ex officio members. Certain directors who held no policies of the company having been placed on the list of contributories in their capacity as directors, an order was made that their names be removed therefrom, but without prejudice to the right of the liquidator to put them on the list in any other capacity. Premier Underwriting Association, In re; Cory, ex parte, 82 L. J. Ch. 378; [1913] 2 Ch. 81; 108 L. T. 826; 20 Manson, 183; 57 S. J. 594—Neville, J.

Unregistered Company—Association Constituted by Deed.] — An unregistered allotment society, which did not contemplate making any profit, had a balance of 500*l.* in hand. By the rules, when the money borrowed by the trustee of the land had been paid off, and each member had had his piece conveyed to him, the association was to terminate. When an allotment was conveyed to a member, all his liabilities (except as to completing, maintaining, and dedicating roads and sewers, if any) were to cease, and he would cease to be a member of the association. Three of the members who had had their allotments conveyed to them presented a petition to wind up the association :—Held, on the analogy of the case of the holders of fully paid shares being treated as contributories within the meaning of that word in section 137 of the Companies (Consolidation) Act, 1908, that these three persons were contributories, and that there was jurisdiction in the Court to make the order. Without an express declaration in the rules it would be inequitable for the Court to hold that this was an arrangement by way of tontine in which those who paid their instalments last took all the profits. Anglesea Colliery Co., In re (35 L. J. Ch. 546, 809; L. R. 1 Ch. 555), applied. Osmondthorpe Hall Freehold Garden and Building Allotment Society, In re, 58 S. J. 13—Neville, J.

Preferential Claims in Winding-up—"Clerk or servant" — Director and Editor of Periodical.]—The director of a publishing company who has a separate contract of service to act as editor of a periodical published by the company is, on a winding-up, entitled to preferential payment of his salary as editor within the provisions of the Companies (Consolidation) Act, 1908, s. 209, sub-s. 1 (b). Beeton & Co., In re, 82 L. J. Ch. 464; [1913] 2 Ch. 279; 108 L. T. 918; 20 Manson, 222; 57 S. J. 626—Neville, J.

—— Contributors to Periodical—Fixed Salary.] —Persons who receive a fixed salary for contributing articles or sketches to a periodical, but have no seat in the company's office, no supervision, and no fixed hours of employment, are not "clerks or servants" within the meaning of the section and enjoy no such preference. Ib.

—— Duty and Liability of Receiver and Manager—Claim under Workmen's Compensation Acts—Statutory Duty of Receiver to Pay Preferential Debts "forthwith."] — Where debenture-holders of a company, whose security is a floating charge on the assets of the company, appoint a receiver and manager, he must satisfy the preferential claims (such as claims by workmen under the Workmen's Compensation Acts) "forthwith"—that is, he must pay them out of any assets in his hands before paying the general creditors or any principal or interest on the debentures. If the receiver and manager proceeds to carry on the business of the company before satisfying these preferential claims and incurs a loss he will be liable in damages for a breach of his statutory duty under section 107 of the Companies (Consolidation) Act, 1908. Woods v. Winskill, 82 L. J. Ch. 447; [1913] 2 Ch. 303; 109 L. T. 399; 20 Manson, 261; 57 S. J. 740—Astbury, J.

—— Analytical Chemist—"Clerk or servant."] —B. was a chemist, and in July, 1910, was engaged by M. & Co. for nine months at a weekly wage to produce a specified series of formulæ for the manufacture of soaps and perfumes. The contract was to be considered as completed the moment B. had produced all the formulæ, and if completed before the end of nine months B. was still to be paid all his wages for the remainder of the nine months. B. had to attend on only three specified days of each week, but for regular hours, the remainder of the week being at his disposal, and he had in fact another regular engagement with another firm; and there were other special terms in the contract. B.'s wages fell into arrear, and in March, 1911, a winding-up order was made against M. & Co., and at that date there was due to B. 93*l.* for arrears of wages. B. claimed 50*l.* from the liquidator as a preferential creditor under section 209, subsection 1 of the Companies (Consolidation) Act, 1908 :—Held, that under the terms of this contract B. was a clerk or servant within section 209, sub-section 1 of the Act, and was a preferential creditor for 50*l.* Morison & Co., In re, 106 L. T. 731—Neville, J.

Insurance Company—Insolvent Company—Employers' Liability Policy—Policy Current at Date of Winding-up Order — Liability which Emerges after Date of Winding-up Order — Valuation of Policy.] — Holders of an employers' liability policy of an insurance company which became insolvent and had been ordered to be wound up, in a proof making claims in respect of accidents to their workmen which had occurred after the date of the winding-up order, but while the policy was still current,—Held (Buckley, L.J., dissenting), that the mode of valuation of a policy prescribed by the Assurance Companies Act, 1909, s. 17, and Schedule 6 (D), excluded claims in respect of liabilities under a policy which emerge subsequently to the date of the winding-up order. Law Car and General Insurance Corporation, In re; King & Sons', Lim., Claim (No. 2), 82 L. The principle of valuation adopted in Northern Counties of England Fire Insurance Co., In re (50 L. J. Ch. 273; 17 Ch. D. 337), is negatived in the case of companies within the Assurance Companies Act, 1909. Ib.

Per Buckley, L.J.: The value as at the date of the winding-up order of liabilities under a current policy which emerge after the date of the winding-up order and before proof may be included in the value of the policy under the Assurance Companies Act, 1909, Schedule 6 (D). Ib.

Scheme of Arrangement—Claim for Breach of Contract not Put Forward.]—The plaintiff had a contract of employment for seven years with the respondent company, commencing in 1910. In May, 1911, the plaintiff was given a week's notice to leave, but he refused to leave, and was then told he would have to leave in three months. At the expiration of that time he was sent away. In May, 1911, a petition to wind up the company was presented, and a scheme being proposed the plaintiff attended a meeting of creditors and approved a deed of arrangement under which he and other creditors were to receive 10*s.* in the pound. At the date of the meeting there was a sum due to the plaintiff for commission, and he approved and voted for the scheme with reference to that sum only, and not with reference to his claim under the agreement of employment for seven years. The scheme of arrangement was subsequently approved by the Court under section 120 of the Companies (Consolidation) Act, 1908. In an action claiming damages for breach of the agreement of employment the jury found a verdict in favour of the plaintiff for 225*l.*:—Held, that, although the plaintiff did not put forward a claim for the breach of the agreement under the deed of arrangement, he was not barred from claiming damages in respect of the breach and that he was entitled to judgment for 112*l.* 10*s.*, being 10*s.* in the pound on the amount found by the jury. Curtis v. *B.U.R.T. 9. Liquidator.

See also Vol. III. 1945, 2578.

Powers of—Appointment of Solicitor.]—In a winding-up by the Court, a liquidator who proposes to employ a solicitor in matters connected with the winding up of the company should have regard to the wishes of the committee of inspection. If he disagrees with them his proper course is to call a meeting of contributories and creditors in accordance with the Companies (Consolidation) Act, 1908, s. 158, sub-s. 1. He should not under such circumstances make an application ex parte for the sanction of the Court to the employment of the firm in question, and an order obtained upon such an application will be discharged. Consolidated Diesel Engine Manufacturers, In re, 84 L. J. Ch. 325; [1915] 1 Ch. 192; 112 L. T. 535; [1915] H. B. R. 55; 59 S. J. 234; 31 T. L. R. 91—Neville, J.

Powers in Ireland.]—The provision in section 151 of the Companies Consolidation Act, 1908, giving a liquidator in a winding-up in Ireland power, with the sanction of the Court, to bring or defend any action or other legal proceeding in the name and on behalf of the company, does not confer on third parties any right to object to proceedings brought by a liquidator in the name of the company, on the ground that no such sanction has been obtained. Dublin City Distillery v. Doherty, 83 L. J. P.C. 265; [1914] A.C. 823; 111 L. T. 81; 58 S. J. 413—H.L. (Ir.)

Report — Public Examination of Officers — Registrar's Order—Jurisdiction—Discretion.]—It is only in exceptional circumstances, if at all, that an order should be made in the winding up of a company for a public examination of its officers to be held in open Court under section 174 of the Companies (Consolidation) Act, 1908. Property Insurance Co., In re, 83 L. J. Ch. 525; [1914] 1 Ch. 775; 110 L. T. 973; 58 S. J. 472—Astbury, J.

A company was in voluntary liquidation and a report was made by the liquidator alleging grave irregularities in the conduct of the company's business, and suggesting the examination of certain of the directors as necessary to an investigation, but making no charge of fraud against them. An order was made on the application of the liquidator directing a public examination of these directors in open Court:—Held, that the part of the order which directed the examination to be held in open Court must be discharged. Ib.

Semble, that under proper circumstances there is power to order an examination in open Court under section 174, having regard to the Companies (Winding-up) Rules, 1909, rule 5. Ib.

Call—Refusal of Committee of Inspection—Leave by Court.]—Where in the winding-up of a company the committee of inspection, of which the majority was composed of contributories, refused to sanction a call on the shares, the Court, on the ground that the creditors' claims must have first consideration, granted to the liquidator leave to make the call. North-Eastern Insurance Co., In re, 59 S. J. 510; 31 T. L. R. 428—Sargant, J.

Death of Insolvent Shareholder—Debt due to Company — Deceased's Share in Surplus Assets—Claim for Retention by Liquidator.]—A shareholder in a limited company died insolvent and indebted to the company, and in an administration action the company were found to be creditors for 2,633*l.* The company subsequently went into liquidation, and the liquidator obtained an order in the action striking out his name as a creditor in order that he might claim to deduct the ascertained debt from the amount payable to the deceased's estate in respect of his shares, which were fully paid. The articles gave the company no lien on the shares for the debt :—Held, that the liquidator was not entitled to retain the deceased's share in surplus assets against more than the proper dividend on the ascertained debt. Peruvian Railway Construction Co., In re, [1915] 2 Ch. 144; 59 S. J. 579; 31 T. L. R. 464—Sargant, J. Affirmed, [1915] 2 Ch. 442; 60 S. J. 25; 32 T. L. R. 46 —C.A.

Public Examination—County Court—Official Receiver and Liquidator — Report Charging Fraud—Director—Subsequent Exculpation—Costs of Proceeding—Official Receiver Ordered to Pay Costs Personally — Jurisdiction.] — A company having been ordered to be wound up in the County Court, the official receiver, acting as liquidator, made a preliminary report under section 8, sub-section 1 of the Companies (Winding-up) Act, 1890, and subsequently made a further report under sub-section 2, in which he stated that he was of opinion that the facts set out in the report constituted a fraud committed in the promotion or formation of the company, and that the persons named in the schedule (of whom a director of the company was one) were parties to such fraud. The County Court Judge, under sub-section 3, ordered a public examination of the persons named, and after it had been held the director in question applied for an order exculpating him from the charge of fraud made in the report. Notice of the application was served on the official receiver, and he appeared at the hearing and opposed the application. The Judge, however, made the order, and further ordered the official receiver to pay to the director the costs of his public examination and of the application for exculpation. The company having no available assets, the order in effect was that the official receiver should personally pay the costs. The Divisional Court discharged the order on the ground that the County Court Judge had no jurisdiction to make it :—Held, that in regard to the examination the official receiver was merely discharging a duty of a judicial character cast upon him by section 8 of the Act; and that the proviso in sub-section 7 of that section enabling the Court in its discretion to "allow" the exculpated person costs meant that the Court might allow such costs out of the assets of the company and did not impose any personal liability upon the official receiver, and that therefore there was no jurisdiction to order him to pay the costs of the public examination. But held, that in regard to the application for exculpation the official receiver had accepted the position of litigant, and had by his action become a party to a proceeding in the County Court, and that consequently the Judge had jurisdiction to order him to pay the costs of the application; and that as the Judge had exercised his discretion, that was not a matter for appeal. Raynes Park Golf Club, In re (68 L. Removal of Liquidator.] —On an application by a shareholder in a limited company under section 186 (ix.) of the Companies (Consolidation) Act, 1908, for the removal of the liquidator on the alleged ground that he was not in an independent position so as to be able to make the strict investigation which the affairs of the company were said to require, the Court refused the application on the ground that the directors impeached were no longer directors and that the applicant had no support from the other shareholders. Amalgamated Properties of Rhodesia, Lim., In re, 30 T. L. R. 405—Astbury, J.

On a petition presented by a shareholder alleging acts of misfeasance against the directors, a compulsory winding-up order was made by the Court on the ground that there were grave circumstances requiring investigation; and a liquidator and committee of inspection, consisting of contributories, were appointed, the assets at that date being more than sufficient to pay the creditors of the company. Subsequently, however, a creditor for a large amount was admitted, and the assets then were not more than enough to pay the creditors. The liquidator, against whom no personal allegations were made, admitted he was administering the assets on behalf of the contributories. Disputes arose as to the conduct of the liquidation, the liquidator intending to prosecute actions against the directors with a view to increase the assets, as he contended he ought to do under the order appointing him liquidator, the creditors objecting on the ground that nothing could be recovered from them as they had no means, and a summons was taken out on behalf of the creditors to remove the liquidator and have a liquidator appointed on behalf of the creditors, and also for the removal of the committee of inspection on the ground that the liquidation had become a creditors' liquidation, and that the liquidator was administering the assets on behalf of the contributories only :—Held, that the liquidation having become a creditors' liquidation since the order to compulsorily wind up the company, the creditors were the sole persons interested, and were entitled to decide whether the small remaining assets should be used in misfeasance proceedings against the directors, and "due cause" had been shewn for the removal of the liquidator within the meaning of section 149, sub-section 6 of the Companies (Consolidation) Act, 1908, and there should be a reference to chambers to appoint some one in his place. Sir John Moore Gold Mining Co., In re (12 Ch. D. 325), and Eyton & Co., In re (57 L. J. Ch. 127; 36 Ch. D. 299), applied. Rubber and Produce Investment Trust, In re, 84 L. J. Ch. 534; [1915] 1 Ch. 382; 112 L. T. 1129; [1915] H. B. R. 120; 31 T. L. R. 253—Astbury, J.

Though there was no direct power under the Act for the Court to remove the committee of inspection, the Court could act on the suggestion in Radford & Bright, Lim., In re (70 L. J. Ch. 78, 352; [1901] 1 Ch. 272, 735), and order the first meetings of creditors and contributories to be re-summoned, and if then the creditors appointed members from their own body and the contributories re-appointed their members to the committee, could decide in favour of the creditors' nominees in the best interests of the liquidation. Ib.

—— Where Liquidator the Nominee of Creditors—Neutral Liquidator.]—A motor manufacturing company, having resolved to go into voluntary liquidation and having appointed its chairman, who was also its managing director, to be liquidator, petitioned the Court for an order that the liquidation should be continued under the supervision of the Court and that the liquidator should be allowed to carry on the business of the company for a certain period. At a meeting of creditors of the company subsequently held it was decided by a majority that application should be made to the Court for the appointment of the auditor of the company to act jointly with the liquidator already appointed, and the petitioners made an application to this effect. The appointment of the auditor as joint liquidator was opposed by certain of the creditors on the ground (inter alia) that, as both liquidators proposed were connected with the company there would be no independent officer to investigate its affairs in the interests of the creditors. The Court directed the liquidation to proceed under the supervision of the Court and appointed the auditor to be liquidator, but conjoined with him a chartered accountant who had no connection with the company, and superseded the appointment of the managing director, holding that, while it was desirable that effect should be given to the wishes of the creditors and that one of the liquidators should be versed in the affairs of the company, it was not desirable that both liquidators should be men who had been closely associated with the company. Argylls Lim. v. Ritchie & Whiteman, [1914] S. C. 915—Ct. of Sess.

Action Brought against the Company before Winding-up—Judgment under Appeal.]—The mere fact of the judgment obtained against a liquidator being under appeal does not affect the application of the rule laid down in Wenborn, In re (74 L. J. Ch. 283; [1905] 1 Ch. 413), that the successful defendant is entitled to have his costs in full out of the assets of the company of an action brought or defended by the company and continued after winding-up by the liquidator. Free & Sons, Lim., In re, 56 S. J. 175—Swinfen Eady, J.

Unsuccessful Action by Company in Liquidation — Priority of Payment out of Assets.] — Where a company in liquidation is ordered to pay costs as an unsuccessful litigant, such costs rank in priority before the liquidator's costs; and this is so whether the liquidation is voluntary or compulsory, and whether the order made is that the other party recover his costs, or that the liquidator pay them out of the assets or pay them and retain them out of the assets. Pacific Coast Syndicate, In re; British Columbian Fisheries, ex parte, 82 L. J. Ch. 404; [1913] 2 Ch. 26; 108 L. T. 823; 20 Manson, 219; 57 S. J. 518—Neville, J.

Set-off—Respondent to Winding-up Petition Subsequently Added as Contributory—Application to Remove Name from List.]—Where a limited partner was joined as a respondent to a petition to wind up and did not oppose, and his costs were ordered to be paid out of the assets of the limited partnership, and he was subsequently placed on the list of contributories and incurred costs payable to the liquidator on an application to have his name removed from such list,—Held, that the liquidator could not set off such two sets of costs one against the other, because the costs of the winding-up stand on a different footing from other costs in being incurred for the benefit of everybody concerned. Principle enunciated by Lord Romilly, M.R., in General Exchange Bank, In re (L. R. 4 Eq. 138), applied. Beer, In re; Brewer v. Bowman, 59 S. J. 510; 31 T. L. R. 428—Sargant, J.

Guarantee Policy—Contract to Pay Amount of Principal and Interest Due on Mortgage on Default of Mortgagor — Mortgagee's Costs Added to His Principal.]—Where a guarantee society contracted to pay the principal and interest due on a mortgage on the mortgagor making default in payment thereof, it was held that the guarantee society did not contract to indemnify the policy-holder against any loss under her security, and, accordingly, that in the winding-up of the guarantee society the costs of valuing her security and proving her claim came under the heading of mortgagee's costs or costs of proof, and must be disallowed because under the winding-up rules creditors are not entitled to the costs of proving their claim. Law Guarantee Trust and Accident Society, In re (No. 1), 108 L. T. 830; 57 S. J. 628—Neville, J.

Taxation—Costs Incurred before Winding-up—Assets of the Company in the Hands of the Solicitors—Taxation in the Winding-up or under the Solicitors Act, 1843.] — Where solicitors to a company in compulsory liquidation submit, on a summons intituled in the matter of the winding-up, to an order for delivery of their bill of costs, the bill when delivered may be ordered to be taxed in the winding-up proceedings. This is so although the bill is in respect of costs incurred before the liquidation and the solicitors are not making a claim against the assets of the company, because they have money of the company in their hands more than enough to satisfy their costs. Palace Restaurants, Lim., In re, 83 L. J. Ch. 427; [1914] 1 Ch. 492; 110 L. T. 534; 21 Manson, 109; 58 S. J. 268; 30 T. L. R. 248—C.A.

Semble, if the summons were intituled in the matter of the Solicitors Act, 1843, and in the matter of the winding-up, the Judge making the order for the delivery of the bill, though sitting in winding-up, would have power to order the taxation under the Solicitors Act. Ib.

Order for Compulsory Winding-up.] — Circumstances in which the Court made an order for the compulsory winding up of a company where by reason of the way in which the business had been carried on and the position of the vendor (who had been appointed liquidator in the voluntary winding-up) the fullest investigation was necessary by a liquidator other than the vendor. Peruvian Amazon Co., In re, 29 T. L. R. 384—Swinfen Eady, J.

Reconstruction—Dissentient Shareholder—Notice — Validity.] — Where in a voluntary winding up of a company a shareholder gives notice to the liquidator of his dissent from the resolution for winding-up and reconstruction under section 192, sub-section 3 of the Companies (Consolidation) Act, 1908, such notice is not valid if it merely calls upon the liquidator to purchase the dissentient's holding. By the terms of the section, the notice must give the liquidator the option of either purchasing the holding of the dissentient shareholder, or of abstaining from proceeding with the winding-up. Demerara Rubber Co., In re, 82 L. J. Ch. 220; [1913] 1 Ch. 331; 108 L. T. 318; 20 Manson, 148—Swinfen Eady, J.

Summons by Liquidator for Rescission of Contract—Jurisdiction of Court.]—In accordance with a clause in its articles a company entered into a contract with two of its directors to purchase their option of the lease of a butter factory in France, and 6,000 shares were allotted to them as part of the purchase consideration. The option was declared void by the local French Court, and, its main object having failed, the company went into voluntary liquidation. The liquidators issued a summons asking that the contract might be rescinded and the allotment of 6,000 shares cancelled :—Held, that the proper remedy of the liquidators was by action for rescission and not by summons, and that, even if the Court had jurisdiction to decide the question upon a summons, this was not a matter in which its discretion should be so exercised. Centrifugal Butter Co., In re, 82 L. J. Ch. 87; [1913] 1 Ch. 188; 108 L. T. 24; 20 Manson, 34; 57 S. J. 211—Neville, J.

Judgment Creditor—Execution Postponed by Trickery—Leave to Proceed with Execution.] —Where a judgment creditor of a company has been induced by conduct of officers of the company amounting to trickery to refrain from issuing execution on his judgment until after a resolution has been passed for the voluntary winding up of the company, the Court will, in the exercise of its discretion, allow him to proceed with his execution. Vron Colliery Co., In re (51 L. J. Ch. 389; 20 Ch. D. 442), distinguished. Amorduet Manufacturing Co. v. General Incandescent Co., 80 L. J. K.B. 1005; [1911] 2 K.B. 143; 104 L. T. 805; 18 Manson, 292—C.A.

Preferential Claim for Salary — Voluntary Winding-up—Subsequent Compulsory Winding-up—"Commencement of winding-up."] — Section 208 of the Companies (Consolidation) Act, 1908, provides : "(1) In a winding-up there shall be paid in priority to all other debts . . . (b) salary of any clerk . . . in respect of services rendered to the company during four months before the said date not exceeding 50*l*. . . . (5) The date hereinbefore in this section referred to is (a), in the case of a company ordered to be wound up compulsorily, which had not previously commenced to be wound up voluntarily, the date of the winding-up order; and (b) in any other case the date of the commencement of the winding-up." In this case, in the voluntary winding-up, which commenced on June 23, 1913, a claim for preferential payment under this section was admitted by the voluntary liquidator; but on July 9 there was a petition for compulsory winding-up, on which an order for compulsory winding-up was made on July 21, and in this winding-up the official receiver, who was the liquidator under the compulsory order, disallowed the claim on his interpretation of what the words "commencement of the winding up" meant in the section :—Held, that the commencement of the winding-up meant the time of the presentation of the petition for compulsory winding-up, and not the resolution to wind up voluntarily, and that, accordingly, the preferential claim must be disallowed. Havana Exploration Co., In re, [1915] H. B. R. 187; 59 S. J. 666—Neville, J.

Order for Application of Assets "in a due course of administration"—Propriety of Payment to Statute-barred Creditors.] — Shareholders opposing the payment of statute-barred creditors in the voluntary winding-up of a company, an order was made that the liquidator should apply the assets "in a due course of administration," and subsequently statute-barred creditors were paid by the liquidator. The company was not insolvent unless statute-barred debts were admitted as liabilities :—Held, that under these circumstances such payment was an improper payment. General Rolling Stock Co., In re; Joint Stock Discount Co.'s Claim, ex parte (41 L. Liquidator—Failure to Pay Creditor—Dissolution of Company—Costs of Action against Company Thrown Away — Liability.] — The plaintiffs sued a limited company called Coxeter & Sons, Lim., for the price of goods sold and delivered. During the progress of that action Coxeter & Sons, Lim., went into voluntary liquidation, the present defendants being appointed liquidators, and later that company was dissolved. The plaintiffs were not aware of the liquidation and dissolution till a later date, and when they became aware thereof they sued the defendants to recover from them as damages the price of the goods which had been supplied to the company, the plaintiffs alleging that the defendants as liquidators had committed a breach of their statutory duty in allowing the company to be dissolved before the company's debts had been paid. The plaintiffs also claimed to recover from the defendants the amount of the costs that had been thrown away in the action against Coxeter & Sons, Lim., that action having abated on the dissolution of the company:—Held, first, that the defendants had committed a breach of their statutory duty in allowing the company to be dissolved before its debts had been paid and that they were liable in damages to the plaintiffs in respect of the claim for goods sold to the company; but secondly, that the defendants were not in the circumstances liable for the costs thrown away in the action against Coxeter & Sons, Lim., as the incurring of those costs was not the natural consequence of the defendants' breach of statutory duty. Argylls, Lim. v. Coxeter, 29 T. XV. DISSOLUTION.

Reconstruction — Agreement of New Company to Take over Assets and Liabilities of Old Company—Omission to Take over Liabilities—Dissolution Declared Void.]—A limited company was reconstructed, it being agreed between the new company and the liquidator of the old company that the former should take over all the assets and liabilities of the old company. The new company, however, ultimately agreed with the liquidator not to take over certain shares in a third company that belonged to the old company, and were liable to certain calls. The old company was then dissolved under section 195 of the Companies (Consolidation) Act, 1908. The third company (having vainly called upon the new company to take over the shares in question) moved the Court that the dissolution of the old company might under the circumstances be declared void under section 223, sub-section 1 of the Act:—Held, that this was a proper case for the Court to exercise its discretion under section 223, and to declare the dissolution of the old company to be void. Spottiswoode, Dixon & Hunting, Lim., In re, 81 L. J. Ch. 446; [1912] 1 Ch. 410; 106 L. T. 23; 19 Manson, 240; 56 S. J. 272; 28 T. L. R. 214—Neville, J.

Assets Recovered after Dissolution—Motion to Revive Company—Rights of Crown—Bona Vacantia.]—After the automatic dissolution of a company in accordance with section 195 of the Companies (Consolidation) Act, 1908, certain assets were realised by the liquidator. Upon motion by the liquidator to declare the dissolution void, the Court ordered that the Attorney-General be served with notice of the motion in order that the rights of the Crown to the money as bona vacantia might be considered. At the adjourned hearing the Crown waived its claim, and leave was given to the liquidator, after payment of the costs to all parties, to distribute the residue of the money in the usual way, submitting his accounts to the Board of Trade for approval. Henderson's Nigel Co., In re, 105 L. Bequest for Augmentation of Benefice—Not to be Held in Plurality—Union of Benefices.]—Where there is a bequest to a benefice on condition that it shall never be held in plurality, the condition is not broken by the union of the benefice with another benefice under an Order in Council. Macnamara, In re; Hewitt v. Jeans, 104 L. T. 771; 55 S. J. 499—Eve, J.

Gift by Will to Married Woman while Living Apart from Husband—Public Policy.]—A gift to a married woman, during such time as her husband should be living apart from her, with a limitation over away from her in the event of their living together again, is not necessarily invalid, as being against public policy, if she was at the date of the testator's will already deserted by her husband. Moore, In re; Trafford v. Maconochie (57 L. Annuities Forfeitable—Gift Over.]—A testatrix provided that certain annuitants should not be allowed to have the value of their annuities in lieu thereof, and if they should do or suffer any act or thing whereby the annuity should be assigned, charged, or incumbered, the annuity should thenceforth cease to be payable:—Held, that the provision for cesser was not repugnant to the previous gift of the annuities, but there was a good gift over, on such an event happening to the residuary legatees. Dempster, In re; Borthwick v. Lovell, 84 L. J. Ch. 597; [1915] 1 Ch. 795; 112 L. T. 1124—Sargant, J.

Legacy — Conditions — Discretion of Trustees.]—A testator directed his trustees to pay to two institutions for instruction in music a legacy, subject to certain conditions, for the foundation of a scholarship to enable the holder to continue his studies at a Continental conservatoire, and directed that the regulations for the scholarship should be in the discretion of the governors of the institutions. The governors intimated to the trustees of the will that they declined to accept the bequest if it was essential that it should be administered strictly in accordance with the terms of the will:—Held, that the particular method in which a student might enjoy the scholarship was left to the governors of the institutions, and that the application of the gift should be as nearly in accordance with the scheme in the will as they thought desirable. Harrison, In re; Harrison v. Att.-Gen., 85 L. J. Ch. 77; 113 L. T. 308; 31 T. L. R. 398—Eve, J.

Impossible Condition—Condition Subsequent—Effect of Disentailing Assurance on Subsequent Limitations.]—A testator devised his real estate to A. (a German subject) and the heirs of his body on the express condition that he should within two years from the date of the testator's death become a British subject, and take upon himself the testator's name, and should not afterwards divest himself of his status as a British subject, or of such name. The testator further provided that if A. refused or neglected to comply with the said condition his said real estate should go (subject and upon the same conditions) to A.'s sister (who was also a German subject) and the heirs of her body, with similar remainders over. On the testator's death A. executed a disentailing assurance of the lands:—Held, first, that, notwithstanding the provisions of the Naturalisation Act, 1870, requiring five years' residence as a condition of naturalisation, the condition as to naturalisation was not an impossible condition, as it was not impossible to obtain a private Naturalisation Act within two years of the testator's death; but secondly, that the conditions as to naturalisation and taking the testator's name were conditions subsequent, and that the effect of the disentailing assurance executed by A. was to defeat subsequent estates which would otherwise have taken effect after the determination of, or in defeasance of, the estate tail devised to A.; and thirdly, that A. was accordingly entitled to an estate in fee-simple in the lands freed from the conditions. Knox, In re; Von Schefflер v. Shuldham, [1912] 1 Ir. R. 288—Barton, J.

Validity — Public Policy.]—A clause in a mortis causa disposition of heritage provided that each of the heirs who should succeed to the lands should be obliged in all time to use the disponer's name and arms, and that "in case any of the said heirs shall succeed to a peerage, then, when the person so succeeding, or having right to succeed, to my said lands shall also succeed to a peerage, they shall be bound and obliged to denude themselves of all right" in the lands, and the same should devolve on the next heir:—Held, that this clause was not void as against public policy, and that it applied to, and excluded, an heir who, prior to the opening of the succession to the lands, had succeeded to a peerage. Egerton v. Brownlow (Earl) (4 H.L. C. 1) distinguished. Caithness (Earl) v. Sinclair, [1912] S. C. 79—Ct. of Sess.

—— Vested Interest—Condition Subsequent—Not to Live with or be under Control of Father—Public Policy—Uncertainty.]—A testatrix gave three-fourths of her residuary estate upon trust to pay the income thereof to her two grandchildren up to December 31, 1927, and immediately after that date to divide the capital thereof between them. After providing for the event of the death of the said grandchildren or either of them before that date, the testatrix declared as follows: "I declare that if at any time on or before December 31, 1927, either one or both of my grandchildren shall live with or be or continue under the custody guardianship or control of their father or be in any way directly under his control all benefits profits and income provided to be given under this my will to both or either one of them as the case may be shall thereby cease and determine and it shall be at all times and under all circumstances an absolute condition of either one or both of them receiving any income benefit or legacy under this my will that he or she or both of them shall separately and individually continue to live free from his direct influence and control." The will then provided that in case either one or both of them should forfeit any interest under this condition their shares or his or her share were to go over as if they or either of them had died before December 31, 1927:—Held, first, that the condition was in defeasance of an interest previously given; secondly, that it was bad as against public policy (a) by operating to restrain a father from doing his duty and exercising his parental authority, and (b) by tending to limit the Court's discretion with regard to the custody and maintenance of its wards; and thirdly, that, upon the principles stated in Clavering v. Ellison (29 L. J. Ch. 761; 7 H.L. C. 707), it was void also for uncertainty. Sandbrook, In re; Noel v. Sandbrook, 81 L. J. Ch. 800; [1912] 2 Ch. 471; 107 L. T. 148; 56 S. J. 721—Parker, J.

Forfeiture Clause—After-acquired Property not Settled—"Possessed of or entitled to"—Alternative, not Cumulative Clause — Reversionary Interest — Vesting in Possession — Property Subject to Clause.]—Where there was a clause of forfeiture of benefits under her father's will if the daughter did not settle after-acquired property which she should become "possessed of or entitled to" over the value of 1,000*l*., the words "possessed of or entitled to" were held to be not cumulative, but alternative, and separate meanings must accordingly be found for them, and accordingly property of over the value of 1,000*l*. in respect of which the daughter had before her father's death a vested reversionary interest was held to be subject to the clause of forfeiture. Bland's Settlement, In re; Bland v. Perkin (74 L. —— Conditional Gift of Annuity—"To cease on return to England."]—A testator bequeathed an annuity to his nephew C. subject to the condition that "should the said C. return to Ireland, England, or Scotland," the annuity was to cease. C., who resided in New Zealand, took a passage to and landed in England, alleging that he was on his way to Jersey. The facts proved were consistent with his statement, and it was in evidence that the usual way of travelling to Jersey from New Zealand was through England. Shortly after landing in England he committed murder and was convicted in England, but was found to be insane, and was detained in a criminal lunatic asylum:—Held, that C. had forfeited the legacy. Crumpe, In re; Orpen v. Moriarty, [1912] 1 Ir. R. 485—Barton, J.

—— Settlement—Bankruptcy—Life Interest until Event whereby if Income Payable Absolutely Beneficiary would be Deprived "of the right to receive the same or any part thereof"—Order of Probate Division Setting Apart Whole Income for Tenant for Life's Children.]—In 1887 F. C., on his marriage, settled the proceeds of property as to the income upon himself for life, determinable on his bankruptcy or until he suffered any act or thing or any event happened whereby, if payable to him absolutely, he would be deprived of the right to receive the income or any part thereof. By an order in 1895 after the dissolution of F. C.'s marriage, the President of the Probate Division ordered that the trustees should set apart the whole of the income of the settled funds which was then payable to him, and apply it for the children of the marriage until majority. F. C. became bankrupt in 1904, and his youngest child attained twenty-one in 1910:—Held, that the order of the Probate Division was an act or event antecedent to his bankruptcy by which F. C.'s interest in the whole income was determined for a substantial period, and that therefore a forfeiture took place at the time the order was made and nothing passed to the trustee in his bankruptcy. Carew's Trusts, In re; Gellibrand v. Carew, 103 L. —— Gift of Life Interest—Apportionment—Income Accrued Due at Date of Alienation, but not Actually Received.]—A testator gave one-fifth of his residuary estate on trust to pay the income to his son W. during his life, but with a direction that the same should only be paid to him so long as he should not attempt to assign or charge the same or do or suffer any act whereby the same might become vested in or payable to any other person. W. executed an assignment of the income by way of mortgage. At that date the trustees had in hand income already received by them, and they subsequently received further moneys, some of which represented the apportioned part of the income up to the date of the mortgage:—Held, that W. or his mortgagee was entitled to the income received before the mortgage, but that they were not entitled to the moneys representing the apportioned part of the income up to the date of the mortgage, since, although the moneys would have been ultimately payable to W. if the Apportionment Act, 1870, had applied, the provision in the will prevented income becoming payable to W. after he had attempted to assign or charge it. Sampson, In re; Sampson v. Sampson (65 L. —— Settlor's Own Property Settled on Himself.]—A settlor made a settlement of his property by which certain income was to be paid to himself for life or until he should attempt to alienate it. Subsequently he executed a mortgage upon the income payable to him under the settlement:—Held, that the settlor's life interest in the fund was forfeited by operation of the charge. Perkins' Settlement, In re; Warren v. Perkins, 56 S. J. 412—Warrington, J.

—— Receiving Order — Liquidation by Arrangement—Discharge of Receiving Order—"Become payable to some other person."]—A testator who died in September, 1883, gave the income of a fund to his son until he should have his affairs liquidated by arrangement or should do something whereby the income became payable to some other person. In 1910 a receiving order was made against the son, but shortly afterwards a scheme of arrangement was approved by the Court and the receiving order was discharged. While the receiving order was in operation income came to the hands of the trustees:—Held, that the scheme of arrangement was not a "liquidation by arrangement" within the meaning of the clause. Held, also, that the receiving order operated to make the income payable to some other person, and therefore determined the life interest. Sartoris, In re; Sartoris v. Sartoris (61 L. J. Ch. 1; [1892] 1 Ch. 11), applied. Laye, In re; Turnbull v. Laye, 82 L. J. Ch. 218; [1913] 1 Ch. 298; 108 L. T. 324; 20 Manson, 124; 57 S. J. 284—Eve, J.

—— Married Woman.]—By the terms of a will, by which an annuity was given to a married woman, it was provided that the annuitant should be restrained from anticipating any property coming to her thereunder, and, further, that "if she should assign, dispose of, or charge the annuity, whether under disability or not," the annuity should cease. The married woman (the annuitant) purported to charge the annuity:—Held, that as she could not create a valid charge there was no forfeiture of the annuity. Adamson, In re; Public Trustee v. Billing, 109 L. Comments Pending Trial — Comments not Referring to Subject-matter of Action.]—It is not a sufficient answer to a motion to commit a defendant for commenting adversely on the character of the plaintiff during the pendency of an action for the defendant to shew that the comments had no reference to the subject-matter of the action if it is clear that the trial of the action will be prejudiced by the publication of those comments. Higgins v. Richards, 28 T. —— Libel Action—Plea of Justification.]—Where the defendant in a libel action swears that he is going to justify the words of the alleged libel the Court will not issue a writ of attachment against him in respect of comments made by him after the issue of the writ unless it is satisfied that the plea of justification is not genuine, or unless the comments are made near the time of trial or made at a place near where the trial is to take place and are calculated to deter witnesses from coming forward and speaking their minds freely, or are calculated to warp the minds of jurymen. Per Lush, J.: Where the plaintiff in a libel action seeks to stop the defendant from making comments while continuing to make comments himself, the Court ought not to interfere. Rex v. Blumenfeld; Tupper, Ex parte, 28 T. It is a contempt of Court for a newspaper to refer to an action pending in the King's Court in any manner that may tend in any degree to interfere with the course of justice, and it cannot be pleaded in excuse either that the reference was only made for political purposes, or that the names of the parties in the action were not mentioned. Thornhill v. Steel-Morris, 56 S. J. 34—Swinfen Eady, J.

The publication together of two items of news, the first relating to private proceedings in a pending action in connection with a share transaction, and the second giving a report of criminal proceedings (not yet finished) relating to the same transaction, held to tend to prejudice the jury trying the criminal case. Semble, per Scrutton, J., a newspaper ought not, before a case comes on for trial, to publish in full the private proceedings, such as the statement of claim or an affidavit charging fraud or a writ containing similar charges.

Injunction against Receiving Money.]—A receipt from the Government of money which the recipient has been restrained from receiving is a contempt of Court. Eastern Trust Co. v. McKenzie, Mann & Co., 84 L. J. P.C. 152; [1915] A.C. 750; 113 L. T. 346—P.C.

Hearing in Camera—Publication of Details.]—An order for a hearing in camera extends only to the hearing, and does not prohibit the subsequent publication of what passed at such hearing, provided that such publication be made in good faith and without malice. Scott v. Scott (No. 1), 82 L. J. P. 74; [1913] A.C. 417; 109 L. T. 1; 57 S. J. 498; 29 T. L. R. 520—H.L. (E.)

Application—Motion or Order Nisi.]—Where a person against whom an attachment for contempt of Court is sought is a party to an action in connection with which the alleged contempt is committed, the case falls within Order LII. rule 2, whatever the nature of the contempt, and the motion should be upon notice to the other side and not for an order nisi. Squire v. Hammond, [1912] W. N. 200—D.

—— Application in Person.]—The Court will not hear an application by an applicant in person for a rule nisi for a writ of attachment for contempt of Court against the proprietors, editor, and manager of a newspaper. An application for a writ of attachment can only be made by counsel. Fenn, Ex parte (2 Dowl. P.C. 527) followed. Liebrand, Ex parte, [1914] W. N. 310—Lawrence, J.

Rule Nisi for Writ of Attachment—Limited Company.] — Although a limited company cannot be committed to prison, the Court has jurisdiction, on the return to a rule nisi calling upon a limited company to shew cause why a writ of attachment should not issue against it for contempt of Court, to inflict an appropriate penalty other than imprisonment. Rex v. Hammond & Co.; Robinson, Ex parte, 83 L. J. K.B. 1221; [1914] 2 K.B. 866; 111 L. T. 206; 58 S. J. 563; 30 T. L. R. 491—D.

Order of Court of First Instance Reversed by Court of Appeal—Jurisdiction of Court of First Instance to Enforce by Attachment Order of Court of Appeal.] — By an order of the Master of the Rolls the defendants were restrained from proceeding further with the erection and completion of a building which the plaintiff alleged obstructed the light coming through his ancient windows. The plaintiff appealed from this order on the ground that it did not include a mandatory injunction commanding the defendants to pull down the building complained of. The Court of Appeal discharged the order of the Master of the Rolls, and ordered the defendants to have the building pulled down forthwith. The defendants disobeyed this order, and the plaintiff thereupon applied to the Master of the Rolls for a writ of attachment for contempt of Court to issue against them. The Master of the Rolls refused the application, being of opinion that the contempt of which the defendants had been guilty was a contempt of the Court of Appeal, and that he accordingly had no jurisdiction to punish it. On appeal from this decision to the Court of Appeal,—Held, that the Master of the Rolls had jurisdiction to make the order sought for, and that, as the plaintiff was entitled to the order, the issue of a writ of attachment should be directed by the Court of Appeal, not in the exercise of an exclusive jurisdiction, but by way of reversal of the order of the Master of the Rolls. Fortescue v. McKeown, [1914] 1 Ir. R. 30—C.A.

Interference with Receiver and Manager of Business — Competing Business.] — When a receiver and manager of a partnership business has been appointed, a partner who starts a competing business in such a manner as to be likely to injure the original business (for example, by issuing circulars that the original business is no longer carried on) may be punished by committal for contempt of Court. King v. Dopson, 56 S. J. 51—Joyce, J.

—— Receiver of Business of Alien Enemy—Licence to Trade Obtained on Petition.]—The English assistant manager of alien enemies' business of manufacturing pianos, having been appointed receiver and manager of such business on his undertaking (1) not to remit goods or money forming assets of the business to any hostile country, and (2) to endeavour to obtain a licence from the Crown for the continuance of the defendants' business, moved to commit the president of the Piano Manufacturers' Association for writing a letter describing it as an unpatriotic act to do business with such firm, before such receiver had in fact obtained such licence—which he subsequently obtained—but after he had petitioned to obtain it:—Held, that the president must give an undertaking not to circulate in future any such letters during the continuance of the licence. Bechstein, In re; Berridge v. Bechstein (No. 2), 58 S. J. 864—Sankey, J.

Motion to Issue Writ of Sequestration — Company—Order Disobeyed—Personal Service.]—A motion to sequestrate, which is the only remedy against a company which disobeys a prohibitive order of the Court, will not be invalidated by reason of the order disobeyed not having been personally served upon the company, although duly served upon the solicitors of the company. In the case of an individual, committal would have been the proper remedy for breach of a prohibitive order, and such committal could be had without personal service of the order disobeyed. Tuck, In re; Murch v. Loosemore (75 L. J. Ch. 497; [1906] 1 Ch. 696), not applicable to such a case as this. The principle of D. v. A. & Co. (69 L. J. Ch. 382; [1900] 1 Ch. 484) applied. Aberdonia Cars, Lim. v. Brown, Hughes & Strachan, Lim., 59 S. J. 598—Neville, J.

Breach of Injunction—Committal—Affidavit—Service with Notice of Motion.]—Order LII. rule 4, requiring a copy of any affidavit intended to be used on the motion to be served with a notice of motion for attachment, does not apply to a motion for committal. Litchfield v. Jones (25 Ch. D. 64; 32 W. R. 288) explained. Taylor, Plinston Brothers & Co. v.

Plinston, 81 L. J. Ch. 34; [1911] 2 Ch. 605; 56 S. J. 33; 28 T. L. R. 11—C.A.

Legal Practitioner—Application for Warrant—Civil and Criminal Courts—Striking off the Rolls.]—Where a legal practitioner applied for a warrant in a civil Court for the detention of a man alleged to be on the point of leaving the colony, and the warrant was refused, and then appeared in a criminal Court in respect of the same matter and, on evidence to which the civil Court attached no credence, obtained a warrant,—Held, that no punishable contempt of the civil Court had been committed, as the client was not by law confined to a simple form of remedy, but was entitled to all the remedies available. Taylor, In re, 81 L. J. P.C. 169; [1912] A.C. 347; 105 L. T. 973; 28 T. L. R. 206—P.C.

Charge against Solicitor of Professional Misconduct — Destruction of Material Documents.]—After an application had been made to the committee of the Incorporated Law Society to hear a charge of misconduct against a solicitor, and before the report of the committee had been presented to the Lord Chancellor, the solicitor destroyed the documents on which the charge of misconduct was founded. Semble, that this amounted to contempt of Court. Solicitor, In re, [1915] 1 Ir. Verbal or Implied Agreement to Treat Acceptance out of Time as Valid or to Extend Time—Agent for Acceptance—Ratification of Acceptance by Subsequent Conduct — Parol Variation of a Written Contract.]—B. wrote to A. accepting A.'s offer, "subject to the purchase money being secured to my satisfaction." This acceptance was dated October 18, the last day of the lunar month in question, and was sent by B. to S., a house agent, and received by S. on October 19. S. sent a copy of the letter to A. the same day. S. had no previous authority from A. to receive the acceptance; but held, that the subsequent conduct of A. ratified S.'s acceptance and constituted S. A.'s agent for that purpose, so that the acceptance was in time. Morrell v. Studd, 83 L. J. Ch. 114; [1913] 2 Ch. 648; 109 L. T. 628; 58 S. J. 12—Astbury, J.

Semble, even if the acceptance had not been in time the subsequent conduct of A. in continuing to negotiate with B. for three months after B.'s acceptance with reference to the details of the contract, such as the securing of the purchase money, without having suggested that the acceptance was out of time, was sufficient to shew an implied agreement either to enlarge the time for acceptance or to treat the actual acceptance as a proper acceptance. Such an implied agreement need not be in writing to satisfy the Statute of Frauds; because it is not a verbal alteration of an agreement required to be in writing, since the agreement required to be in writing is not complete, and therefore not an agreement till a proper acceptance is given, and before an acceptance out of date can be treated as proper the implied or verbal agreement must of necessity be come to. Bruner v. Moore (73 L. J. Ch. 377; [1904] 1 Ch. 305) applied. Goss v. Nugent (Lord) (2 L. J. K.B. 127; 5 B. & Ad. 58) distinguished. Ib.

Term of Contract Left Open.]—Although a term, such as the securing of the purchase money, was left open in the contract, that did not prevent the contract from being complete and sufficient if the parties intended it should be and so treated it. Hussey v. Payne (48 L. J. Ch. 846; 4 App. Cas. 311) applied. Ib.

Waiver of Term Solely in his Favour by Vendor.]—The provision in the contract as to securing the purchase money, being a term solely for the benefit of B., the vendor, might be waived by B. at the Bar. Hawksley v. Outram (61 L. J. Ch. 429; [1892] 3 Ch. 359) applied. Ib.

Ticket — Conditions — Whether Conditions Brought to Purchaser's Notice—Negligence.—The plaintiff purchased a ticket and went to a football ground where a match was being played. On the ticket purchased by him there was a note to the effect that it was agreed between him and the defendants, who were the members of the committee of a football union, that the defendants should not be liable for any injury caused to him through the overcrowding of the stand or the conduct of the spectators: and a large number of red posters exhibiting a notice to that effect were placed in conspicuous positions inside the entrances to the ground. While the match was in progress there was a considerable amount of swaying to and fro of the people crowded on the stand, and the plaintiff was thereby carried over the place where a post forming part of the barrier had been snapped off, leaving a hole, and his foot was caught in the hole and his leg injured. In an action claiming damages in respect of that injury, the jury found—first, that the plaintiff knew that there was printed matter on the ticket purchased by him; secondly, that the plaintiff did not know that the printing contained conditions upon which he was allowed to enter the ground; thirdly, that the defendants did not do what was reasonably sufficient to give the plaintiff notice of the conditions; and fourthly, that the accident happened owing to the negligence of the defendants:—Held, that the questions whether the defendants had taken reasonable care to give the plaintiff notice of the conditions of the contract, and whether there had been negligence on the part of the defendants, were entirely for the jury, and that the Court could not interfere with the verdict. Skrine v. Gould, 29 T. L. R. 19—C.A.

Not to be Performed within Space of One Year—Required by Law to be in Writing—Variation by Parol Agreement—Rescission.]—A contract required by law to be in writing may be varied by a parol agreement, provided that the whole of the terms of the new parol agreement, including those incorporated from the original agreement, are such that it is not necessary that they should be in writing, the variation in effect amounting to a rescission of the original agreement. If, however, the new parol agreement is, by reason of its terms, required by law to be in writing, it is of no effect, and the original agreement is still binding. Williams v. Moss's Empires, Lim., 84 L. J. K.B. 1767; [1915] 3 K.B. 242; 113 L. T. 560; 31 T. L. R. 463—D.

Agreement for Service — Time for Commencement—Part Performance.]—The defendant engaged the plaintiff as medical assistant, at the rate of 200*l.* a year for the first year, and afterwards at a rate to be agreed upon, with the use, rent free, of a house. The defendant wrote a letter to the plaintiff in which these terms were embodied, but the letter did not state the date when the services to be rendered by the plaintiff were to commence, although it was clear from the letter that they were not to commence until a future date:—Held, first, that as the letter did not shew the date at which the services were to commence, it was not a sufficient memorandum in writing to satisfy the Statute of Frauds; and secondly, that as the contract was in substance for personal service, the occupation of the house by the plaintiff being merely to be enjoyed by him with a view to his rendering those services, it was a contract to which the doctrine of part performance did not apply to take the case out of the Statute of Frauds. Elliott v. Roberts, 107 L. T. 18; 28 T. L. R. 436—Lush, J.

——The plaintiff, who was in the service of the defendants in one capacity, received a letter from them offering him a new engagement in another capacity for seven years, the letter concluding with the words "acceptance of the above will oblige." The plaintiff wrote in reply accepting the offered terms in their entirety, and saying he would start "as from now" in his new employment. In an action by the plaintiff to recover damages for breach of this agreement the defendants contended that as no date was mentioned in writing at which the engagement was to begin or end there was no sufficient written contract to satisfy section 4 of the Statute of Frauds:—Held, that section 4 of the Statute of Frauds was sufficiently complied with, as there was a continuing offer of immediate employment, which offer was accepted from the date of the plaintiff's letter of acceptance. Curtis v. B.U.R.T. Co., 28 T. L. R. 585—C.A.

Interest in Land—Contract not to be Performed Within a Year.]—A verbal agreement by a wife to keep her husband indemnified in respect of the rent of a house is not an agreement or contract to which section 4 of the Statute of Frauds applies. Banks, In re; Weldon v. Banks, 56 S. J. 362—Neville, J.

—— Sufficiency of Memorandum.]—The plaintiff instructed an auctioneer to put up for sale by public auction the grazing of a portion of her lands for a period of six months. The auctioneer duly offered the grazing for sale and accepted the bid of the defendant, making at the same time the following entry in his book: "Miss Crane's meadows—Bernard Naughten, 13*l.* 10*s.*":—Held, that if the Statute of Frauds applied to such a contract, the above note or memorandum was insufficient to satisfy the statute. Crane v. Naughten, [1912] 2 Ir. R. 318—K.B. D.

—— Auction—Entry by Auctioneer of Name of Purchaser on Margin of Particulars of Sale.]—An auctioneer at a sale of land entered on the margin of his copy of the particulars and conditions of sale, against the lot, the name of the highest bidder for the lot and the amount of the bid, but there was nothing to indicate that he was the purchaser of the lot. The bidder did not sign the memorandum of agreement contained in the particulars or pay any deposit:—Held, that the entry by the auctioneer was not a sufficient note or memorandum in writing to satisfy the requirements of section 4 of the Statute of Frauds. Dewar v. Mintoft, 81 L. J. K.B. 885; [1912] 2 K.B. 373; 106 L. T. 763; 28 T. L. R. 324—Horridge, J.

—— Letter by Purchaser Repudiating Contract, but Containing Terms of Contract.]—The bidder subsequently wrote letters to the vendor and his agent in which he repudiated his liability under the contract, but in which he, at the same time, set out all the terms of the bargain and referred to the particulars of sale:—Held, that the letters contained a sufficient memorandum in writing to satisfy the statute. Ib.

—— Purchaser's Name Written by a Third Person at the Instance of the Purchaser.]—A memorandum of a transaction of purchase, written at the time when and the place where such transaction took place, and at the purchaser's dictation, by a relative of the vendor, who was present when the transaction was entered into, is a sufficient memorandum or note of the agreement in writing signed by the party to be charged therewith, or some other person thereunto by him lawfully authorised, to satisfy the 4th section of the Statute of Frauds. Brooks v. Billingham, 56 S. J. 503—Neville, J.

—— Signature by Agent—Sufficiency.]—On February 11, 1911, the defendant verbally agreed with G. for the purchase of certain property for 700*l.*, and paid 50*l.* by way of deposit. G. was then acting on behalf of the plaintiff as an undisclosed principal, but he subsequently set up that he had agreed to buy the property from the plaintiff for 600*l.*, and that in the transaction with the defendant he was acting on his own account. In this state of things much correspondence and negotiation took place between the plaintiff's solicitors and the defendant's solicitors, in the course of which it was arranged that the plaintiff should defend the action brought by G. for the specific performance of the alleged contract between them, and that the defendant should help the plaintiff by giving evidence in that action for him. G.'s action against the plaintiff was heard on November 28, 1911, and in the result it was dismissed with costs. The defendant having declined to complete the purchase, the plaintiff brought this action for specific performance. To this action the defendant pleaded that there was no sufficient memorandum or note signed by him or any one authorised by him to satisfy the Statute of Frauds. It appeared that during the correspondence over the action of G. against the plaintiff the plaintiff's solicitors had approached the defendant, through his solicitors, for a statement, with a view to his giving evidence for the plaintiff in his action against G. The defendant had accordingly prepared a statement and also some answers to questions asked by the plaintiff's solicitors, and had sent them to his solicitors, who had forwarded them on to the plaintiff's solicitors. These were now relied upon by the plaintiff as a sufficient note or memorandum to satisfy the Statute of Frauds. Further, the plaintiff was allowed at the trial to amend his claim and to allege part performance. It was contended for the defendant that, first, his solicitors were not acting as his agents, but as agents for the plaintiff in obtaining a proof from him; and secondly, that in any case the authority to his solicitors did not extend to signing a note or memorandum of the contract on his behalf:—Held, that the first contention was untenable. That as to the second contention, the authority given by the defendant to his solicitors was an authority to forward to the plaintiff's solicitors certain particular documents, and although the defendant might not have been contemplating that those documents would form a note or memorandum sufficient to satisfy the Statute of Frauds, that did not invalidate the authority to forward the documents or prevent all the legal consequences flowing from the forwarding of them which would undoubtedly have flowed from it had the defendant forwarded the statements himself and signed the letters inclosing the statements himself. Held, further, that there was sufficient evidence of part performance. Daniels v. Trefusis, 83 L. J. Ch. 579; [1914] 1 Ch. 788; 109 L. T. 922; 58 S. J. 271—Sargant, J.

Letter Inclosed in Envelope Addressed to a Party.]—Where it is proved or admitted that a letter has been sent to and received by a party inclosed in an envelope addressed to that party, the letter and envelope together constitute one document or memorandum in writing sufficient to satisfy the Statute of Frauds. Pearce v. Gardner (66 L. J. Q.B. 457; [1897] 1 Q.B. 688) applied. Last v. Hucklesby, 58 S. J. 431—C.A.

Agreement not to be Performed Within a Year.]—A contract of service for a period of more than a year terminable at any time by six months' notice on either side is within section 4 of the Statute of Frauds, and cannot be enforced unless there be a memorandum thereof in writing. Hanau v. Ehrlich, 81 L. J. K.B. 397; [1912] A.C. 39; 106 L. T. 1; 56 S. J. 186; 28 T. L. R. 113—H.L. (E.)

—— Sale of Goods—Acceptance of Part of the Goods by Purchaser.]—A contract for the sale of goods which is not in writing signed by the party to be charged therewith, and which is not to be performed within the space of one year from the making thereof, is unenforceable under section 4 of the Statute of Frauds, notwithstanding that it comes within section 4 of the Sale of Goods Act, 1893, by reason of the acceptance by the buyer of part of the goods so sold. Prested Miners Gas Indicating Electric Lamp Co. v. Garner, 80 L. Persons Entitled to Sue—Sale of Goods—Conditions as to Sale at Minimum Price.]—The plaintiffs agreed with D. as a middleman to sell Dunlop tyres. D. was to get certain discounts, and bound himself not to sell below certain prices, and not to sell to purchasers who would not give a similar undertaking maintaining prices. By an agreement, the parties to which were D. and the defendants, the latter agreed not to alter, remove, or tamper with the marks or numbers on Dunlop motor tyre covers or tubes, and not to sell such covers or tubes below list prices. This agreement also contained the following clause: "We [the defendants] agree to pay to the Dunlop Company the sum of 5*l.* as liquidated damages" for every tyre sold below list price; "without prejudice to any other remedies which you or the Dunlop Company may have." The defendants having sold two tyres below list prices, the plaintiffs claimed an injunction and damages:—Held, that there was no consideration given by the plaintiffs to the defendants, or at the defendants' request, and consequently there was no enforceable contract between the plaintiffs and the defendants, and that therefore the plaintiffs were not entitled to the relief claimed. Dunlop Pneumatic Tyre Co. v. Selfridge & Co., 84 L. Contract for Personal Service—Agreement to Devote Whole Time — Breach of Contract — Negative Stipulation—Injunction.]—A skipper contracted to devote the whole of his time, attention, ability, and energies to the performance of his duties as skipper in a trawler, the property of his employers, and not to give his time to any other business or occupation:—Held, that an injunction could not be granted to restrain him from obtaining other employment, as that would practically amount to enforcing a specific performance of the contract. Chapman v. Westerby, 58 S. J. 50—Warrington, J.

1. Consideration.

Agreement between Directors of Company to Forego Fees—Liquidator of Company Party to Agreement—Subsequent Claim by Director for Fees—Right of Company to Set up Agreement.]—By a verbal agreement between the liquidator, on behalf of the plaintiff company, and the directors of the company, including the defendant, and by the directors mutually with each and all the others, it was agreed that each of the directors, including the defendant, should forego any claim to any unpaid balance of directors' fees. Subsequently, on being sued by the plaintiff company for goods sold and delivered and for work done, the defendant counterclaimed for director's fees earned previously to the above-mentioned agreement:—Held, that the agreement was binding, and was a good answer to the counterclaim. Slater v. Jones (42 L. J. Ex. 122; L. R. 8 Ex. 186) applied. West Yorkshire Darracq Agency, Lim. v. Coleridge, 80 L. J. K.B. 1122; [1911] 2 K.B. 326; 105 L. T. 215; 18 Manson, 307—Horridge, J.

Sale of Goods — Price Maintenance Agreement—Re-sale—Similar Agreement—Re-sale by Original Purchaser—Principal or Agent for Undisclosed Principal.]—By a contract made between D. & Co. and the appellants, in consideration of the appellants allowing them certain discounts off their list prices for their goods, D. & Co. agreed to purchase goods to a certain amount from the appellants, and undertook not to re-sell such goods to private customers at less than the list prices of the appellants, and to pay a penalty for any breach of such undertaking; but they were at liberty to sell such goods to persons in the trade at less than the list prices on obtaining from them a similar undertaking as to re-sales. D. & Co. sold some of the goods to the respondents, who were in the trade, at discounts less than they had themselves obtained from the appellants, and obtained a similar undertaking from them as to re-sales. The respondents afterwards, in breach of their undertaking, sold some of the goods to a private customer at less than the appellants' list prices, and the appellants brought an action against them for penalties:—Held, that, assuming that the undertaking of the respondents as to re-sales was given to D. & Co., not as principals, but on behalf of the appellants as undisclosed principals, there was no consideration moving from the appellants to the respondents to support that undertaking, and that the action could not be maintained. Dunlop Pneumatic Tyre Co. v. Selfridge & Co., 84 L. J. K.B. 1680; [1915] A.C. 847; 113 L. T. 386; 59 S. J. 439; 31 T. L. R. 399—H.L. (E.)

Employment at Certain Salary for Fixed Period — New Agreement During Period for Less Salary.]—By an agreement in writing the plaintiff entered the defendants' employment for a period of two years at a certain salary, and it was provided that if the defendants' business was discontinued during that period the agreement should cease to be of any effect. When war broke out the defendants' business diminished, and they had to consider whether they would close it altogether. Consequently the parties made a new written agreement, by which the plaintiff agreed to accept a less salary during the war provided that after the war the old agreement should be revived. For some time the plaintiff accepted the reduced salary, and then brought an action for salary at the old rate:—Held, that there was consideration for the new agreement, and the action failed. Raggow v. Scougall & Co., 31 T. L. R. 564—D.

Sale of Estate—Shares in New Company—Issue—Sanction of Treasury—Condition as to Time of Payment.]—The defendant company contracted to sell certain estates to the plaintiff company, in return for a sum in cash and shares in a company agreed to be formed, the consideration to be paid by a fixed date or not less than a month after the sanction of the Treasury should have been obtained for the issue of the capital of the new company. The terms of the contract shewed that it was to be performed in a short time. The Treasury refused to sanction the issue:—Held, that the plaintiff company was not entitled to have the contract performed, as the contract did not contemplate an ultimate sanction by the Treasury after refusals extending over an unlimited time. East Indies Commercial Co. v. Nilambur Rubber Estates, 59 S. J. 613; 31 T. L. R. 500—Sargant, J.

2. Impossible Contracts.

Impossibility of Performance.]—In 1907 a tradesman agreed with an advertising contractor to take six advertisement slides on the cars "running at Dumbarton," for a period of five years at a weekly rent. At the date of the contract the tramways in Dumbarton belonged to the X company, and there were only six cars, and these ran at frequent intervals backwards and forwards in the town of Dumbarton. The tramways were afterwards taken over by the Y company, which, in June, 1908, extended the tramway routes into the country beyond the burgh of Dumbarton, and increased the number of the cars to thirty, and thereafter the six cars on which the tradesman's advertisement appeared were only used at infrequent intervals, and ran not only in Dumbarton, but over the whole extended routes. The tradesman having refused to pay the rent under the contract after June, 1908, the advertising contractor sued him to recover payment:—Held, that after the date on which the tramway system was taken over and extended by the Y company the contractor was not in a position to implement the contract, as the cars on which the tradesman's advertisements appeared were no longer "running at Dumbarton" within the meaning of the contract; that the contract accordingly came to an end at that date; and that the contractor could not recover rent from the tradesman after that date. Abrahams v. Campbell, [1911] S. Duty of Court.]—Where the person invoking the aid of the Court is himself implicated in the illegality, the Court will not allow itself to be made an instrument to enforce an illegal agreement, whether the defendant has pleaded the illegality or not. Robinson's Settlement, In re; Gant v. Hobbs, 81 L. J. Ch. 393; [1912] 1 Ch. 717; 106 L. T. 443; 28 T. L. R. 298—C.A.

If a contract and the surrounding circumstances are fully before the Court it must pronounce on the legality of the transaction, but if all the circumstances are not before the Court it may not do so unless the contract is unlawful upon the face of it. North-Western Salt Co. v. Electrolytic Alkali Co., 83 L. J. K.B. 530; [1914] A.C. 461; 110 L. T. 852; 58 S. J. 338; 30 T. L. R. 313—H.L. (E.)

Contract Void at Common Law—Trustee in Bankruptcy—Agreement to Share Fees with Creditor.]—The test whether a claim connected with an illegal agreement can be enforced is whether the plaintiff requires any aid from the illegal agreement to establish his case. Farmers' Mart v. Milne, 84 L. J. P.C. 33; [1915] A.C. 106; [1914] S. C. (H.L.) 84; 111 L. T. 871; [1915] H. B. R. 33—H.L. (Sc.)

The respondent was manager for the appellants, who carried on business as auctioneers, valuers, livestock salesmen, and land surveyors. By an agreement made between the appellants and the respondent it was agreed that the respondent should be entitled, with the consent of the appellants, to undertake any trusteeship or office involving the management of any estate, the fees receivable, after the deduction of out-of-pocket expenses, to be pooled with all fees and commissions derived by the appellants from any sales or valuations in connection with such estate, and to be divided as therein agreed, "provided always that before any such division shall take place there shall out of the said proceeds be paid to the" appellants "the balance of any debt remaining due to them from such estate after giving credit for all sums received or falling to be received on account of such debt." In an action brought by the appellants against the respondent under the agreement for an account of fees received, —Held, that the agreement was void as being a fraud upon the Bankruptcy Acts, and that the action could not be maintained. Ib.

Newspaper Advising Canadian Investors—Covenant not to Comment on Particular Canadian Company.]—Where a newspaper purports to give advice to persons desirous of dealing in Canadian land and other Canadian investments, and comments for this purpose upon Canadian companies, a covenant by its proprietors with a person interested in and a director of a Canadian land company not to comment upon that company, its directors, business, or land, or any company with which the proprietors have notice that that company is connected or concerned, is void as being unreasonably in restraint of trade. Such a covenant is in those circumstances also void as being contrary to public policy. So held by Pickford, L.J., and Warrington, L.J. Decision of Atkin, J. (31 T. L. R. 84), affirmed. Neville v. Dominion of Canada News Co., 84 L. J. K.B. 2105; [1915] 3 K.B. 556; 31 T. L. R. 542—C.A.

Agreement for Advertisement of Theatre—Fictitious Legal Proceeding.]—The plaintiffs, a husband and wife, entered into agreements for reward with the defendant, who was the lessee of a theatre, to carry out a scheme for the purpose of advertising the theatre. The scheme was as follows: The female plaintiff and another lady were to occupy stalls at a matinée performance at the theatre attired in ultra-fashionable hats calculated to interrupt the view of other members of the audience. A seat immediately behind them was to be occupied by a gentleman who was to request the ladies to remove their hats, and, upon their refusing to do so, the defendant was to be summoned and to invite the parties into the corridor. He was then to request the ladies either to remove their hats or to leave the theatre, and, upon their refusing to accede to either request, he was to eject them by committing the technical assault of laying his hand upon the shoulder of one of them. The ladies were then to summon the defendant for an assault, and he was to defend himself upon the ground that he was justified in acting as he had for the purpose of protecting the convenience of his audience. The scheme was duly carried out, and the summons was dismissed by the magistrate. Actions were brought by the plaintiffs to recover the amounts due from the defendant for their services in connection with the carrying out of the scheme:—Held, that the agreements were illegal and unenforceable as being against public policy. Dann v. Curzon, 104 L. T. 66; 55 S. J. 189; 27 T. L. R. 163—D.

Agreement to Refrain from Prosecution.]—In an action brought by a firm against a former employee to recover a sum which he was alleged to have embezzled, the pursuers founded on a promissory note granted by him to them for this sum, and on a letter from him admitting that he had used the firm's money and acknowledging their kindness in not prosecuting him. The defender averred that the pursuers had induced him to sign these documents by threatening that otherwise they would prosecute him; and pleaded that this was a pactum illicitum, and, accordingly, that the documents could not be founded on against him:—Held, that even if an agreement to refrain from prosecuting the defender would have been unlawful, no such agreement had been relevantly averred. Opinion reserved as to whether such an agreement would be a pactum illicitum. Lamson Paragon Supply Co. v. MacPhail, [1914] S. C. 73—Ct. of Sess.

Covenant by Co-respondent in Divorce Suit not to Come within a Radius of Ten Miles of Petitioner's Residence—Breach—Injunction.]—The plaintiff presented a petition for divorce from his wife on the ground of adultery, and the defendant was made a co-respondent. Subsequently an arrangement was come to by which the petition was to be dismissed on the defendant's covenanting not to go within ten miles of the plaintiff's residence. Accordingly a deed of May 1, 1911, was executed by which the defendant covenanted that he would not during fifteen years go within a radius of ten miles of the plaintiff's residence upon any pretext whatever without the plaintiff's consent. The sum of 3,000*l.* was paid by the defendant to the trustees of the deed to be held by them in trust for the plaintiff in case of a breach of the covenant, and the petition was dismissed. The defendant having committed a breach of the covenant by going within the area, the plaintiff claimed an injunction to restrain the breach of the covenant, and also payment of the 3,000*l.*:—Held, that the covenant was not void as being against public policy, or as infringing the liberty of the subject, and that the plaintiff was entitled to an injunction and also to an order on the trustees of the deed to pay to him the 3,000*l.* Upton v. Henderson, 106 L. T. 839; 56 S. J. 481; 28 T. L. R. 398—Eve, J.

Payment to Director to Promote Interests of Particular Shareholder.]—A company, having spent all its money, applied to the defendant to supply additional capital by taking shares. The defendant agreed to do so on terms, one of which was that he should have representatives on the board. The company having approved this agreement in general meeting, the defendant appointed the plaintiff to act as his representative to look after his (the defendant's) interests, for which services the defendant was to pay the plaintiff 200*l.* a year out of his own pocket so long as the plaintiff remained a director. In an action brought by the plaintiff to recover remuneration calculated at the rate of 200*l.* a year, the jury found that the defendant had agreed to pay the plaintiff 200*l.* a year so long as he remained a director, and they further found that the agreement did not contemplate that the plaintiff should promote the interests of the defendant, even though such interests were not identical with those of the whole body of shareholders:—Held (Vaughan Williams, L.J., dissenting), upon those findings, that the bargain was not corrupt, the company's assent to and approval of the agreement between the plaintiff and the defendant being sufficient to divest the transaction between the parties of any character of illegality, and that the plaintiff was therefore entitled to recover his remuneration. Kregor v. Hollins, 109 L. T. 225—C.A.

Undischarged Bankrupt—Agreement to Pay Debt Incurred Prior to Bankruptcy—Validity.]—The plaintiff recovered judgment against the defendant for 913*l.* 11*s.*, and subsequently a receiving order was made against the defendant and he was adjudicated bankrupt. No part of the 913*l.* 11*s.* had been paid, but the plaintiff lodged no proof in the bankruptcy. While the defendant was still undischarged, the plaintiff lent 15*l.* to the defendant in consideration of a promise by the defendant to pay what he owed prior to the receiving order just as if such receiving order had not been made. In an action by the plaintiff against the defendant to recover the 913*l.* 11*s.* it was admitted that no dividend could be paid by the defendant's estate :—Held, that the contract was valid and that therefore the plaintiff was entitled to recover. Wild v. Tucker, 83 L. J. K.B. 1410; [1914] 3 K.B. 36; 111 L. T. 250; 21 Manson, 181; 30 T. L. R. 507—Atkin, J.

c. Contrary to Statute.

The plaintiffs were confectionery manufacturers, and the defendants ordered from them confectionery to be delivered during August and September, 1914, for export. No time was specified in the contracts, and the usual course of business between the parties was that goods should be delivered within six or eight weeks. It was an implied term of the contracts that the goods should be exported, so that the plaintiffs would get the benefit of a drawback to which the goods were subject. On August 10 a proclamation prohibited the export of sugar, and on August 14 the plaintiffs cancelled the contract. On August 20 the embargo on the export of sugar was removed by a further proclamation :—Held, that the plaintiffs ought to have waited a reasonable time after August 10 to see whether they could carry out the contracts and that as they had not done so the defendants were entitled to recover against them damages for failure to perform them. Miller & Co. v. Taylor & Co., 60 S. Agreement for Letting Premises to Kept Mistress—Right of Landlord to Recover Rent.]—The plaintiff let a flat to the defendant, a spinster. At the time of letting the plaintiff's agent knew that the defendant was the mistress of a certain man who visited her at the flat; that the rent of the flat would come through the defendant being a kept woman; and that the man whose mistress she was would find the money for the rent. Certain rent not having been paid by the defendant, the plaintiff sued her to recover it :—Held, that, the flat being let for an immoral purpose, the plaintiff was not entitled to recover. Upfill v. Wright, 80 L. J. K.B. 254; [1911] 1 K.B. 506; 103 L. T. 834; 55 S. J. 189; 27 T. L. R. 160—D.

e. In Restraint of Trade.

i. General Principles.

See also Vol. IV. 189, 1978.

In construing a covenant in restraint of trade the true object of the prohibition must be discovered by looking at the whole contract, and the particular clause in question. Hadsley v. Dayer-Smith, 83 L. J. Ch. 770; [1914] A.C. 979; 111 L. T. 479; 58 S. J. 554; 30 T. L. R. 524—H.L. (E.)

Trading Corporation—Action to Enforce Contract—No Plea of Illegality—Right to Raise Question of Illegality.]—If a contract and the surrounding circumstances are fully before the Court it must pronounce on the legality of the transaction, but if all the circumstances are not before the Court it may not do so unless the contract is unlawful upon the face of it. North-Western Salt Co. v. Electrolytic Alkali Co., 83 L. J. K.B. 530; [1914] A.C. 461; 110 L. T. 852; 58 S. J. 338; 30 T. L. R. 313—H.L. (E.)

Therefore in an action on a contract, where the defendant had deliberately abstained from raising the question of the legality of the contract on the pleadings, the Court is not justified in holding the contract bad, simply as being in restraint of trade, in the absence of evidence that the restrictions imposed were unreasonable, or that it was contrary to public policy as being injurious to the interests of the community. Ib.

ii. Reasonableness.

See also Vol. IV. 191, 1982.

Advertising Agent—Manager—Covenant not to Engage in Similar Business in United Kingdom—Restraint too Wide.]—A covenant by an employee of an advertising agent that he would not carry on, or be engaged directly or indirectly in, any similar business in any part of the United Kingdom is too wide, and therefore void. Stuart v. Halstead, 55 S. J. 598—Eve, J.

Agreement not to be Engaged for Three Years after Termination of Employment in Similar Business within Twenty-five Miles of London.]—The test of the validity of a covenant in restraint of trade is whether it is reasonable in reference to the interests both of the parties concerned and of the public. Mason v. Provident Clothing and Supply Co., Lim., 82 L. J. K.B. 1153; [1913] A.C. 724; 109 L. T. 449; 57 S. J. 739; 29 T. L. R. 727—H.L. (E.)

A covenant in an agreement between a master and servant, in a case in which the servant was employed in a limited district as a canvasser and collector, and had not any special training or knowledge of trade secrets, that the servant should not within three years after the termination of his employment be engaged in any similar business within twenty-five miles of London, or within twenty-five miles of any place where he had been employed by the master, was held to be invalid as imposing restrictions greater than were reasonably necessary for the protection of the master in his business. Ib.

Consultant Physicians—Lifelong Restraint—Special Area—Prohibited Area.]—The plaintiff carried on a pathological laboratory as a consultant physician in the Harley Street area of London, the principal quarter of the consultant branch of the medical profession. In 1906 the defendant, also a physician, entered the plaintiff's employment as pathologist and microscopist under an agreement by which the defendant was "not to engage in similar work within a distance of ten miles" from the plaintiff's laboratory under a penalty. In 1912 the defendant left the plaintiff's employment and commenced practising as a pathologist on his own account within the prohibited radius :—Held, upon the construction of the agreement, that the restriction was for the life of the defendant. Held, further (Swinfen Eady, L.J., dissenting), that it was not necessary or reasonable that the defendant should be restrained for his whole life from carrying on his business in the quarter where it could most profitably be carried on, and that the restriction was therefore invalid. Eastes v. Russ, 83 L. J. Ch. 329; [1914] 1 Ch. 468; 110 L. T. 296; 58 S. J. 234; 30 T. L. R. 237—C.A.

Dealing in Indiarubber Goods.]—The defendant was employed by the plaintiffs as a traveller in their solid tyre department under an agreement which contained the following clause : "On the termination by any means of this agreement the [defendant] shall not for a period of one year from the date of such termination either alone or jointly or in partnership, or in the service of any other person or persons, firm, or company whatsoever, directly or indirectly, either by himself or as agent, or otherwise, carry on or manage, or be concerned, employed, or interested in the sale, purchase, manufacture or other dealings in indiarubber goods, whether wholesale or retail, in any part of the United Kingdom, Germany, or France." The defendant within one year after leaving the plaintiffs' employment entered the service of another company which was engaged in the sale of indiarubber goods in the United Kingdom, whereupon the plaintiffs claimed an injunction :—Held, that the covenant, considering the duration of the restriction, was not too wide or unreasonable for the protection of the plaintiffs' business, except that part of it which related to Germany and France, in which countries the plaintiffs sold no indiarubber goods, but that that part of the covenant could be severed from the other part; and therefore that the plaintiffs were entitled to an injunction on that footing. The decision in Baines v. Geary (56 L. J. Ch. 935; 35 Ch. D. 154) is not reconcilable with the decision in Baker v. Hedgecock (57 L. J. Ch. 889; 39 Ch. D. 520); the view expressed in the latter case is the correct one. Continental Tyre and Rubber Co. v. Heath, 29 T. L. R. 308—Scrutton, J.

Contract of Service — Manufacturers of Specialised Form of Machinery—Restriction in United Kingdom — Skill and Experience Acquired.]—The defendant was from 1901 to 1913 in the employment of the plaintiffs, who were engaged in the manufacture of a highly specialised form of machinery. Their business was the leading one in the United Kingdom in this class of machinery, and was spread over a large part of the kingdom. In 1911 the plaintiffs and the defendant entered into an agreement by which the defendant covenanted that he would not at any time during a period of seven years from the date of his ceasing to be employed by the plaintiffs within the United Kingdom carry on or be concerned in the sale or manufacture of the class of machinery made by the plaintiffs, or any business connected with it :—Held (Phillimore, L.J., dissenting), that to enforce this restriction against the defendant would be to deprive him and the public of much of the benefit of his skill and experience which he had gained in the plaintiffs' employ, and that the restriction was greater than was reasonably necessary for the protection of the plaintiffs in their business and could not be enforced. Morris, Lim. v. Saxelby, 84 L. J. Ch. 521; [1915] 2 Ch. 57; 112 L. T. 354; 59 S. J. 412; 31 T. L. R. 370—C.A.

Interest of Covenantor — Public Policy — Reasonableness.]—In considering whether contracts in restraint of trade are enforceable regard must be had to the interest of the covenantor and not solely to the interest of the covenantee. Different considerations will arise in regard to the enforceability of such contracts in cases between vendors and purchasers of a business and cases between employers and employees. Ib.

Trading in West Africa—Acquisition of Trade Secrets—Reasonableness of Restriction.]—The defendant entered into an agreement with the plaintiffs to serve them for five years as supervising agent at certain of their stations in West Africa. The plaintiffs were export and import merchants engaged in the West African trade, bankers, and agents. The agreement contained the following restrictive clause : "(8) The agent agrees that he will not, either in Africa or in Europe or elsewhere, at any time during the five years next following the termination for any reason of his employment under this agreement, directly or indirectly, either alone or in partnership with or as agent, manager, clerk, servant, or director, of any person or persons or company or companies or otherwise howsoever, and whether for his own benefit or for the benefit of any other person or persons, or company or companies (a) assist or engage in the business of a trade or merchant competing in any way with any business at any time during his employment carried on by the company within a radius of fifty miles from a trading station in West Africa now or during his employment established, owned, or managed by the company, or (b) trade or deal in relation to or in connection with any such competing business with any person or persons, company or companies now or at any time hereafter during his employment a customer or customers of the company or otherwise dealing with the company, or solicit or endeavour to obtain the custom or connection of any such person or persons, company or companies so far as concerns goods, merchandise, or produce supplied, bought, or dealt with in the course of the business of the company. Provided that this clause shall only be enforceable so long as the company or its assigns enforcing the same shall continue to carry on or be carrying on such business or part thereof" :—Held, that the restriction imposed by the clause was necessary for the protection of the plaintiffs' business, and was not void as being in restraint of trade. Millers, Lim. v. Steedman, 84 L. J. K.B. 2057; 113 L. T. 538; 31 T. L. R. 413—C.A.

Shop Assistant.]—The defendant was employed by the plaintiff company as shop assistant in their branch shop at Southend under an agreement by which the defendant agreed that he would not, for a period of two years subsequent to his leaving the employment, "establish, carry on, or be engaged in, or interested in . . . a business of a similar character to the business of the company within the distance of two miles of any shop for the time being belonging to the company at which he has been employed within the twelve months prior to his leaving their employ, nor solicit any of the customers of the company." The defendant's duty was to serve at the grocery counter in the plaintiffs' shop, although for a short time he canvassed for orders at the houses of the plaintiffs' regular customers. Shortly after leaving the plaintiffs' service, the defendant entered the employment in the like capacity of another company, whose business was of a similar character to that carried on by the plaintiffs, and whose shop was within two miles of the plaintiffs' shop. In an action by the plaintiffs to restrain the defendant from continuing in the service of this other firm in breach of the restrictive covenant entered into by him,—Held, that the defendant was "engaged" with the other firm within the meaning of that expression in the agreement, but that, having regard to the nature of the defendant's employment, the restrictive covenant was not reasonably necessary for the protection of the plaintiffs' business, and therefore could not be enforced. Pearks v. Cullen, 28 T. L. R. 371—Hamilton, J.

Monopoly.]—By a contract in writing the plaintiffs agreed to buy from the defendants 72,000 tons of salt to be manufactured by the defendants and delivered by them in about equal monthly quantities over a period of four years from January 1, 1908, to December 31, 1911. It was a term of the contract that defendants should not manufacture salt beyond the amount agreed to be delivered to the plaintiffs, and a certain yearly quantity which had to be delivered under an existing contract to a third party and such further quantity as the defendants might require for their own use, but not for sale. The defendants had the option of re-purchasing from the plaintiffs up to 3,000 tons per annum of their own make of table sale at the plaintiffs' then current selling price for table salt, and, if they did so re-purchase, they were to be elected distributors of such quantity on certain terms which prescribed limitations and restrictions, both as to the class of buyers and as to price, packing, and delivery charges. The defendants also bound themselves during the four years not to sell or dispose of land which they possessed for salt-making purposes:—Held, that the contract had not been shewn to be in unreasonable restraint of trade, and that it was therefore enforceable by the plaintiffs. North-Western Salt Co. v. Electrolytic Alkali Co., 83 L. J. K.B. 530; [1914] A.C. 461; 110 L. T. 852; 58 S. J. 338; 30 T. L. R. 313—H.L. (E.)

Decision of the Court of Appeal ([1913] 3 K.B. 422) reversed. Ib.

Part of Covenant Admittedly too Wide—Severing Covenant.]—In 1908 the plaintiffs and the defendant F. entered into an agreement of employment and service, under which F. was to be employed for a term of five years as manager at Liverpool of the plaintiffs, who were importers of and dealers in meat. Their importing business was concerned with Australian and New Zealand meat only, though they also did a considerable general wholesale meat business, which was not confined to Australasian meat, but included American meat. The area of the business was limited almost entirely to Liverpool, Manchester, Nottingham, and other towns in the Midlands and North of England. There was practically no business at all in the South of England, Wales, or Ireland, and very little in Scotland. By the agreement of 1908 the defendant F. covenanted that he would not, for a period of one year from the determination of the agreement, directly or indirectly carry on or be concerned in carrying on within the United Kingdom the trade or business of an importer of meat or agent for importers of meat, or any other trade or business similar to any trade or business carried on during his employment by the plaintiffs:—Held, that the fact that the latter part of the covenant was admittedly too wide did not invalidate the former part, but that the covenant was severable. Observations of Lord Moulton in Mason v. Provident Clothing and Supply Co. (82 L. J. K.B. 1153; [1913] A.C. 724) distinguished. Neranas & Co. v. Walker, 83 L. J. Ch. 380; [1914] 1 Ch. 413; 110 L. T. 416; 58 S. J. 235; 30 T. L. R. 184—Sargant, J.

But held, that the limitation of the period of restraint to one year was not sufficient to validate the covenant if the area of restraint was unreasonable. Ward v. Byrne (9 L. J. Ex. 14; 5 M. & W. 548) followed. Ib.

Held, also, that the covenant was unambiguous, and would not be construed so as to limit it to the importation of Australian or Australasian meat; that both in this respect and as to the area of restraint it was wider than was required for the reasonable protection of the plaintiffs; and that it could not therefore be enforced. Ib.

A covenant not to carry on or be interested in the business of vendor of or dealer in real or imitation jewellery for the period of two years in the County of London, England, Scotland, Ireland, Wales, or any part of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland and the Isle of Man, or in France, the United States of America, Russia, or Spain, or within twenty-five miles of Potsdamerstrasse, Berlin, or St. Stefan's Kirche, Vienna, is severable both in respect of the nature of the business and the area covered by it. Where therefore the Court was of opinion that it was reasonably necessary for the protection of the covenantee's business it granted an injunction against the covenantor's carrying on during the period mentioned the business of a vendor of or dealer in imitation jewellery in the County of London, England, Scotland, Ireland, Wales, or any part of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland and the Isle of Man. Goldsoll v. Goldman, 84 L. J. Ch. 228; [1915] 1 Ch. 292; 112 L. T. 494; 59 S. J. 188—C.A.

Order of Neville, J. (84 L. J. Ch. 63; [1914] 2 Ch. 603), varied. Ib.

Qualified Covenant — Severable Contract — Onus of Proof.]—The defendant entered the employment of the plaintiffs, who employed secret processes, under an agreement by which he was to acquire knowledge of their manufactures in accordance with their secret processes and to hold as confidential their secrets or secret processes, and not at any time to communicate any of the plaintiffs' formulæ, processes, or machinery to any person, and not "within the British Empire or the Continent of Europe for five years" after leaving their employment, directly or indirectly enter into or be engaged in the business of manufacturing or selling carbon papers and ribbons or in any business which for the time being might be carried on by the plaintiffs. After leaving the plaintiffs' employment the defendant, who had obtained particulars of a secret machine of the plaintiffs' and formulæ and of materials used by them, became manager to a company which manufactured goods similar to those of the plaintiffs: —Held, on a motion for an interlocutory injunction in an action to enforce the agreement, that the defendant had made an improper use of the plaintiffs' secret formulæ or processes of manufacture within the first branch of the agreement, which did not extend to processes in common use and to which considerations of time and space did not apply, and his breach of that part of the covenant ought to be restrained. Caribonum Co. v. Le Couch, 109 L. T. 587—C.A.

The covenant restraining the defendant from engaging for five years in any business which the plaintiffs might carry on would be too wide, but was severable from the rest of the second part of the agreement. The covenant in that part being qualified both as to time and space, the onus of proving that it was unreasonable lay upon the defendant, and, the evidence shewing that the covenant was necessary for the proper protection of trade, this part of the covenant was held not to be unreasonable, and an interlocutory injunction granted in the terms of the covenant down to the words "carbon papers and ribbons." Ib.

Covenant too Wide to be Reasonable—Repudiation of Contract Disentitling Master to Sue on Covenant Contained in Contract.] — A saleswoman covenanted with her employer "not at any time during or after the determination of the employment . . . directly or indirectly either on her own account or for any other person or firm or company" to solicit or entice away from the master "any customer of, or any person or persons in the habit of dealing with the master." There were alleged breaches of this covenant, and the master sued for an injunction. There was a weekly agreement between the saleswoman and employer, and the employer had dismissed her with a week's wages in lieu of notice, refusing to allow her to work out the week's notice, which the saleswoman alleged to be a repudiation of the contract disentitling him to sue on the covenant forming part of it:—Held, that the employer had fulfilled all his obligation under the contract by paying a week's wages, and had not therefore repudiated his contract so as to disentitle him to sue. General Bill-posting Co. v. Atkinson (78 L. J. Ch. 77; [1909] A.C. 118) discussed. Konski v. Peet, 84 L. J. Ch. 513; [1915] 1 Ch. 530; 112 L. T. 1107; 59 S. J. 383—Neville, J.

Held, also, that the covenant referred to any customer—future or past—and was too wide to be reasonable, and therefore not enforceable. Ib.

Covenant not to Interfere with Trade or Customers Served from Particular Dairy — Removal of Dairy to other Premises.] — The defendant was engaged as a servant by B., a dairyman, of Evelyn's Dairy, 160 Edward Street, New Cross, and the defendant agreed with B., his assigns and successors that after quitting the service he would not "interfere with the trade and the customers served by and from the dairy aforesaid." The plaintiffs purchased B.'s business, it being part of the agreement that B. should introduce the plaintiffs to his customers. The premises at 160 Edward Street being found unsuitable, the plaintiffs moved the business to 95 High Street, Deptford, which was about the same distance from B.'s customers' houses as was 160 Edward Street. After being in the plaintiff's service for some time, the defendant left them and thereafter served customers of the plaintiffs who had been introduced by B. The plaintiffs claimed to restrain the defendant from committing a breach of his covenant by interfering with the plaintiffs' trade or the customers served by and from the plaintiffs' dairy at 95 High Street, Deptford:—Held, that the action failed, as the covenant by the defendant only related to customers served by and from the premises at 160 Edward Street, and none of those who had been served by the defendant after leaving the plaintiffs' service could be so described. Marshall & Murray v. Jones, 29 T. Carrying on "the profession of a solicitor" within Prohibited Radius.]—On April 4, 1902, the plaintiffs, a firm of solicitors, wrote engaging the services of the defendant as solicitor's clerk for advocacy and conveyancing. By an undertaking signed April 16 the defendant agreed not at any time during his employment by the plaintiffs, or after the determination thereof, to carry on within a radius of five miles of B. the "profession of a solicitor." In 1909 the defendant left the service of the plaintiffs and took an office outside the prohibited radius. Thence he wrote on behalf of a former client of the plaintiffs living within the radius to a person also living within the radius demanding payment of a debt, and he subsequently drew an assignment of the debt:—Held, by Eve, J., that the undertaking formed part of the original contract of service or was a condition of the continuation of the service so that there was consideration for it; that to restrain the defendant from carrying on "the profession of a solicitor" was not too wide a restriction, although he had been engaged specifically for advocacy and conveyancing; that the defendant's acts were a "carrying on" of his profession within the prohibited radius in breach of the undertaking, and that the injunction must be granted:—Held, by the Court of Appeal, that the defendant had not carried on the profession of a solicitor within the prohibited radius. Edmundson v. Render (74 L. Outgoing Partner—Covenant not to Carry on Business within a Radius of One Mile from the Premises of the Partnership—Breach.]—In articles of partnership between the appellant and the respondent, who carried on the business of house agents in London, there was a clause that, on the dissolution of the partnership for any cause, the outgoing partner should not for a period of ten years carry on, directly or indirectly, a similar business "within a radius of one mile from the premises of the said partnership." The partnership was dissolved, and the appellant, the outgoing partner, opened an office at a distance of more than one mile from the office of the partnership, and acted as agent for the selling and letting of houses within the radius:—Held, that the respondent was entitled to an injunction to restrain him from so acting. Turner v. Evans (22 L. J. Q.B. 412; 2 E. & B. 512) approved and followed. Hadsley v. Dayer-Smith, 83 L. J. Ch. 770; [1914] A.C. 979; 111 L. T. 479; 58 S. J. 554; 30 T. L. R. 524—H.L. (E.)

Sweep — Servant.]—B., a chimney sweep, entered into an agreement for his employment by a company engaged in the business of chimney sweeping which contained the following undertaking: "That he will give the whole of his time and services to the company, will not undertake any work or orders of any kind except for the company and in their name and on their behalf, nor carry on or be concerned in carrying on the business of a chimney sweep, either by himself or in conjunction with any other person or persons now or at any time within a radius of three miles of the above-mentioned station." After leaving the employment of the company B. was employed as a servant by a chimney sweep, competing with the company within the district specified in the clause:—Held, that the clause did not apply to the engagement of B. as a servant. Semble, Hill & Co. v. Hill (55 L. Apprenticeship Deed—Covenant by Apprentice to take Effect after Termination of Apprenticeship—Breach—Right of Master to Injunction.]—A covenant in an apprenticeship deed, made while the apprentice is an infant, to do or abstain from doing something after the apprenticeship shall have terminated, which covenant is reasonable and for the benefit of the apprentice, is enforceable against him. Gadd v. Thompson, 80 L. An apprentice, an infant, covenanted that he would not, after the apprenticeship should have terminated, carry on the same trade as his master within a specified area during a specified time. After the termination of the apprenticeship he committed a breach of this covenant. There was evidence that he could not have been apprenticed except on the terms of the covenant:—Held, that as the covenant was a reasonable one, and for the benefit of the apprentice, an injunction restraining him from committing further breaches of it should be granted. Ib.

Letter Putting Certain Construction on Contract not Answered.] — Persons are not estopped from denying the true construction of a contract by failing to answer a letter in which the other party states that the contract bears a certain meaning. Leslie & Co. v. Works Commissioners, 78 J. "Month."]—A. wrote to B. offering to buy land of B. at a certain price, specifying the date for completion, and that the purchase money should be paid as to a part down and as to the residue within two years, "and to be secured to your satisfaction." The offer further stated that for the space of a month B. was to be at liberty to accept the offer, and if not accepted conditionally or otherwise within that time the offer was to be considered as withdrawn. The offer was dated September, but omitted the day:—Held, in an action for specific performance, that "month" meant "lunar month," and that the offer ran from the day on which the offer was in fact made. Morrell v. Studd, 83 L. "About four years."]—The appellant agreed to sell his interest in certain leasehold premises to the respondent, the premium to be paid by the latter to the former being at the rate of 15*l.* a year for "each and every year of the existing term " of a certain under-lease held by the appellant of other business premises, which term the appellant, by a mistake, but in perfect good faith, told the respondent was " about four years." The appellant, the mistake being discovered, claimed that the premium should be 105*l.*, as the lease of the other premises was not " about four years," but seven years unexpired :—Held, that the words " about four years " were dominant words, and were not inserted in the agreement merely as a statement of belief which the respondent was not entitled to rely on. Watkinson v. Wilson, 55 S. J. 617—H.L. (E.)

Agreement to Give " First option " of Purchasing Premises.]—The plaintiffs, the freeholders of certain property, entered into an agreement with the defendants to give them the " first option " of purchasing any premises that might be designated for dairy purposes on the said property :—Held, that this agreement was void through uncertainty as to the intention of the parties as to the meaning of the words " first option." Manchester Ship Canal Co. v. Manchester Racecourse Co. (70 L. Music-hall Artist—Engagement for Week—Whether Salary Due before Completion of Week.]—A music-hall artist was engaged to perform for one week at 180*l.* per week. Clause 8 of the agreement provided that " in case the artiste shall, except through illness . . . or accident . . . fail to perform at any performance the artiste shall pay to the management as and for liquidated damages a sum equal to the sum which the artiste would have received for such performance . . ." Clause 12 provided that " the artiste shall not assign, mortgage, or charge the artiste's salary nor permit the same to be taken in execution. No salary shall be paid for days upon which the theatre is closed by reason of national mourning. . . . No salary shall be payable for any performance at which the artiste may not appear through illness or his own default. . . ." Clause 16 provided (inter alia) that " if the artiste shall commit any breach of any of the terms and conditions of this contract or of the rules, the management . . . may forthwith determine this contract, and the artiste shall have no claim upon them for salary other than a proportion for performances played, expenses, costs, or otherwise " :—Held, that the agreement provided for a salary for the week, and that unless some of the events, mentioned in the foregoing clauses, happened, no portion of the salary became due to the artist until the end of the week and until he had fully completed all the performances contemplated. Mapleson v. Sears, 105 L. " I agree to give 150*l.* a year, and I hope a bit more "—Annuity or Allowance—Expression of Intention.]—On the day before his daughter's wedding the father wrote to his future son-in-law and said, " My dear Bert,—When you marry my daughter Lydia I agree to give 150*l.* a year, and I hope a bit more." The marriage took place, and the 150*l.* was paid each year till the death of the testator, whose executors now applied to have the document construed by the Court :—Held, that the document was only an expression to his prospective son-in-law of an intention on the part of the father that he would make his daughter an allowance of 150*l.* a year, to be payable during the joint lives of the father and daughter. Annandale, Ex parte; Curtis, in re (4 Deac. & C. 511), followed. Llanelly Railway v. London and North-Western Railway (45 L. Contract Subject to Conditions — Strike Clause in Small Print — Party Ignorant of Strike Clause.]—A contract for fitting up a shop was expressed to be subject to the conditions set out in the specification, which was typewritten and which contained a strike clause in very small print as part of the heading. The shop owners did not see the strike clause and their attention was never drawn to it until a dispute arose as to the contract. In an action on the contract by the contractors against the shop owners,—Held, that in the circumstances the shop-owners ought to have noticed the strike clause and therefore they were bound by it. Sage & Co. v. Spiers & Pond, Lim., 31 T. Grant of Right to Place Seats for Hire—Derogation from Grant — Free Seats Placed near Bandstand by Corporation.]—The plaintiff agreed with the defendants to supply a band to perform on the sea front. It was a term of the contract that the defendants should hire out to the plaintiff, for a certain period at a fixed rental, five hundred chairs, which the plaintiff could let out to the public and was bound to keep in repair and deliver up in good order at the end of the term. The plaintiff alleged that many of the chairs as delivered to him were unfit for use, and further that the defendants had been guilty of a breach of an implied term in the contract in providing free seats near the bandstand. He brought an action for damages and the defendants counterclaimed for damages for non-repair of the chairs. The jury found that some of the chairs supplied by the defendants were unfit for use; that the plaintiff had suffered damage from the proximity of the free seats; and that the plaintiff had failed to repair some of the chairs. And they assessed the damages under these three heads at 75*l.*, 60*l.*, and 3*l.* 4*s.* respectively :—Held, by Avory, J., that the plaintiff was entitled to judgment for the 75*l.* and for the 60*l.*, and that the defendants were entitled to judgment on the counterclaim for the 3*l.* 4*s.* But held, by the Court of Appeal, that as to that part of the judgment which awarded the plaintiff the 75*l.* the appeal must be dismissed; but that as to that part which awarded him the 60*l.* the appeal must be allowed, as it could not be laid down as a universal rule that whenever something was done by the grantor which had the effect of preventing or reducing the profits which the grantee might reasonably have expected to get out of the contract, there was a good cause of action, for in each case the contract itself must be looked at and considered. Dare v. Bognor Urban Council, 76 J. P. 425; 10 L. G. R. 797; 28 T. L. R. 489—C.A.

Termination—Notice.]—An agreement provided that it should continue until December 31, 1911, and should continue thereafter subject to determination by twelve months' previous notice. A notice was given in 1910 to determine the agreement on December 31, 1911:—Held, that the notice was invalid and of no effect. Marshall v. Brinsmead & Sons; Brinsmead & Sons, In re, 106 L. —— Death — Agreement to Re-purchase Shares "at such times as suit my convenience and at no other times."]—W. agreed to repurchase from the plaintiff certain shares for 150*l*. The agreement contained a provision that W. should re-purchase them "at such times as suit my convenience and at no other times," and a further provision that he should at the date of the agreement hand to the plaintiff a sum of 20*l*., and subsequently a further sum of an unspecified amount, the 20*l*. to be the first of the payments towards the 150*l*. W. paid the plaintiff 20*l*. and a further sum of 15*l*., but died before paying anything more. In an action on the contract by the plaintiff against W.'s administratrix,—Held, that the contract was not put an end to by the death of W., and that the plaintiff was entitled to recover out of his assets 115*l*., the balance of the 150*l*. Barnes v. Wilson, 29 T. L. R. 639—Pickford, J.

Course of Tuition—Inclusive Fee for Course—Fee Payable by Instalments—Refusal of Pupil to Receive Instruction or Pay Instalments.]—The defendant entered into a contract with the plaintiffs, who carried on a system of education by correspondence, for a course of tuition. The contract provided—first, that the fee to be paid by the defendant was to cover all instruction until he was qualified for a diploma, provided he completed the course of instruction in five years, and, secondly, that the defendant should pay 14*l*. 10*s*. for the course, 10*s*. at the time of signing the application, and 10*s*. every month thereafter until the fee was paid in full. The defendant paid the deposit of 10*s*. on signing the application, and one further instalment of 10*s*. Thereafter he informed the plaintiffs that he would not go on with the course, and in fact he did not go on with it. The plaintiffs brought an action to recover 5*l*. 10*s*., being the balance, after deducting the 1*l*. actually paid, of the instalments in arrear at the time the action was brought:—Held, that the plaintiffs were entitled to sue for the instalments as they became due, notwithstanding that the defendant refused to receive the instruction, and that they were not merely entitled to damages for breach of the contract. International Correspondence Schools v. Ayres, 106 L. T. 845; 28 T. L. R. 408—D.

Implied Term—Agency—Appointment of Sole Agent on Commission for a Fixed Period—Ceasing to Carry on Business.]—In determining whether under a contract by which a person is appointed sole agent on commission for a fixed period, there is to be implied a term that the principal will continue to carry on business for that period, the first thing to be considered is the language the parties themselves have used in the contract. A term which is not expressed will not be implied because the Court thinks it is a reasonable term, but only if the Court thinks it is necessarily implied in the nature of the contract the parties have made. Where there is a principal subject-matter in the power of one of the parties, and an accessory or subordinate benefit arising by contract out of its existence to the other party, the Court will not, in the absence of express words, imply a term that the subject-matter shall be kept in existence merely in order to provide the subordinate or accessory benefit to the other party; but where there is an express term requiring the continuance of the principal subject-matter, or giving the plaintiff a right to a continuing benefit, the Court will not imply a condition that the plaintiff's right in this respect shall cease on certain events not expressly provided for. By an agreement in writing the plaintiff was appointed sole agent for the defendants in a particular district for a period of three years:—Held, on the construction of the contract, that a term could not be implied that the defendants would carry on the business for the period of three years. Lazarus v. Cairn Line, 106 L. —— Sale of Estate—Consideration—Shares in New Company—Issue—Sanction of Treasury—Condition as to Time of Payment.] — The defendant company contracted to sell certain estates to the plaintiff company, in return for a sum in cash and shares in a company agreed to be formed, the consideration to be paid by a fixed date or not less than a month after the sanction of the Treasury should have been obtained for the issue of the capital of the new company. The terms of the contract shewed that it was to be performed in a short time. The Treasury refused to sanction the issue:—Held, that the plaintiff company was not entitled to have the contract performed, as the contract did not contemplate an ultimate sanction by the Treasury after refusals extending over an unlimited time. East Indies Commercial Co. v. Nilambur Rubber Estates, 59 S. —— Termination — Reasonable Notice — Mental Specialist — Quarterly Payments — Yearly Rate.]—By an agreement dated May 15, 1899, the defendant agreed to pay to the plaintiff, who was a mental specialist, 500*l.* a year for the care and maintenance of her daughter, payment to be made once a quarter. On April 7, 1913, the plaintiff gave the defendant three months' notice terminating the agreement. In an action by the plaintiff for damages for breach of contract, it was contended that the agreement could only be terminated on May 14 of any year by reasonable notice previously given or that it was terminable of itself at the end of any year. The jury found that the defendant had given reasonable notice :—Held, that a right to give a reasonable notice was implied in the agreement, and that therefore the plaintiff was not entitled to damages. Hamilton v. Bryant, 30 T. —— Termination—Notice—Page for Advertisements.]—The defendants' agent offered to one W. at a certain rate a full page in a weekly publication, to be used exclusively for publishers' advertisements, no publishers' advertisements to be inserted except on this page. The first order was to be for twelve weeks. After the offer had been acted on by W. for about two years, he assigned the contract to the plaintiff, and the defendants terminated it by three months' notice. The plaintiff sued the defendants for damages for terminating the contract :—Held, that there was no binding contract between the parties for an unlimited time, and the plaintiff was not entitled to recover. Pocock v. Thacker & Co., 31 T. Lump Sum—Variations—Right to Recover —Quantum Meruit.]—Where a plaintiff has contracted to do work for a lump sum, and substantially, though not completely, executes the work, he is entitled to recover the lump sum for his services, subject to a deduction of the sum necessary to make the work correspond with that contracted to be done. But he is not entitled to recover anything if—first, the work is of no benefit to the defendant; secondly, the work done is entirely different from the work contracted for; or thirdly, the plaintiff has abandoned the work and left it unfinished. Dakin & Co. v. Lee, 84 L. Mutual Obligations—Breach by One Party.]—Two persons agreed for the lease of an hotel and stipulated that the tenant should take over the furniture and stock at a valuation, and should deposit 200*l.* in a bank in their joint names to account of the valuation price. After the money had been deposited, but before the furniture and stock had been taken over, the tenant intimated that he did not intend to carry out the contract, and brought an action against the landlord for delivery of the deposit receipt. The defender counterclaimed damages for breach of agreement :—Held, that the pursuer, having declined to perform his part of the contract, could not call upon the defender to fulfil his obligations until the latter had had an opportunity of constituting his claim of damages, and accordingly that the pursuer was not entitled, hoc statu, to delivery of the deposit receipt. Dingwall v. Burnett, [1912] S. CONTRIBUTION.

Trustees under Two Different Wills—Discretionary Power to Provide Maintenance for the Same Legatee—Separate and Independent Obligation—No Right of Contribution.]—Discretionary power was given to the appellants as trustees under a will to pay to the testator's daughter 800*l.* a year, the unpaid portion thereof to fall into the residue of his estate. A like power was given to one of the appellants and a respondent as trustees under the will of her sister to pay such sums as they might think fit in and toward her maintenance, the residue of the income of the testatrix's estate to be paid to her nephew, the corpus to go in equal shares to his children on his death. The trustees under the first will paid 400*l.* a year to the daughter, but on the death of the testatrix they reduced the allowance to 100*l.* a year, while the trustees of the second will paid from 700*l.* to 800*l.* a year. In a suit by the said nephew and the trustee of his insolvent estate for an order that the said daughter's maintenance should be provided for by a proportionate contribution from the two estates,—Held, that there was no common obligation and no right to contribution. The trusts were different in their terms to be exercised at the discretion of different trustees, and the resulting obligations were separate and independent. Smith v. Cock, 80 L. J. Will—Real Estate—Power of Sale to Satisfy Mortgages — Administration Suit — Absolute Order for Sale of Real Estate—Part not Sold—Conversion from Date of Order.]—An absolute order for the sale of an estate rightfully made in an administration suit operates as an immediate conversion from the date of the order. Fauntleroy v. Beebe. 80 L. J. Ch. 654; [1911] 2 Ch. 257; 104 L. T. 704; 55 S. J. 497—C.A.

A testator who died in 1872 specifically devised certain real estate which was subject to mortgages to trustees with a power of sale thereof to satisfy such mortgages, and subject thereto upon trust for his four children in equal shares. In a suit for the administration of the testator's real and personal estate an order was made in 1883 for the sale of the specifically devised real estate with the approbation of the Judge free from the incumbrances of such of the incumbrancers as should consent to a sale, and subject to the incumbrances of such of them as should not consent. One of the testator's children, a daughter, died in 1887, when part only of the estate had been sold under the order:—Held, that the part remaining unsold, although not converted in fact, had been converted notionally by the order for sale and was to be enjoyed in its notional state as personalty, and that consequently the share of the daughter therein vested in her legal personal representative and not in her heir-at-law. Ib.

Gift of Real and Personal Estate upon Trust to Sell Real Estate—Directions—Real Estate to be Sold as and when Trustees Think Proper—Trustees Sole Beneficiaries—Real Estate in Fact Unsold.] — A testator by his will appointed his wife and daughter trustees and executrices and gave his real and personal estate to his trustees upon trust to sell the real estate as and when they thought proper, and to pay the net income of his real and personal estate to his wife for her life, and after her death he gave his real and personal estate and the proceeds of sale of such of his real estate as should have been sold to his daughter absolutely. The daughter survived the testator, but predeceased the widow,—Held, that the will did not create an imperative trust for sale, but gave to the trustees a discretionary power of sale, and, inasmuch as they had not exercised that power, the real estate was not converted and passed to the heir-at-law of the daughter. Newbould, In re; Carter v. Newbould, 110 L. Devise of Real Estate in Ireland—Contracts for Sale under Irish Land Acts—Conditional on Sanction of Land Commission—Contracts Entered into by Testator before Date of Will or Codicil — Sanction not Obtained before Testator's Death—Incidence of Estate Duty.]—By his will dated September 18, 1911, and a codicil thereto dated May 29, 1912, which in all material respects confirmed his will, a testator devised and bequeathed certain of his estates in Ireland to B. absolutely, and then went on to provide that if after the date of his will and prior to his death he should receive any capital moneys in respect of the sales of any parts of these estates, or if any money should be owing at his death in respect thereof which did not pass under the previous devise and bequest, then he bequeathed to B. a legacy equal in amount to the aggregate of the net capital moneys so received by or owing to him. Prior in some instances to the date of the will, and in any case to the date of the codicil, the testator had entered into contracts with tenants of these estates for the sale to them of their holdings under the Irish Land Acts. These contracts were all conditional upon the sanction of the Land Commission, and at the testator's death this sanction had not yet been given:—Held, that at the death of the testator the estates vested in B. as realty for an estate in fee-simple defeasible on the sanction of the Land Commission being given, and did not pass under the gift of capital moneys owing to the testator, and that, if the sanction was given, it would only operate to convert the realty into personalty as from that date. Held, therefore, that the estate duty was not payable out of the residuary personal estate, but was a charge on the land itself under section 9 of the Finance Act, 1894, and that under section 16 of the Irish Land Act, 1903, this charge would be shifted from the land on to the proceeds of sale in the event of the sales being completed. Lawes v. Bennett (1 Cox 167) explained. Marlay, In re; Rutland (Duke) v. Bury, 84 L. J. Ch. 706; [1915] 2 Ch. 264; 113 L. T. 433; 59 S. J. 494; 31 T. L. R. 422—C.A.

Deed of Family Arrangement—Real Estate Conveyed to Trustees — Trust for Sale upon Request in Writing of Parties to Deed—No Request for Sale of Properties Remaining Unsold.]—A trust for sale, with a direction that it shall not be exercised unless a particular person shall in writing consent to or request a sale, is not an absolute and imperative trust to sell, but gives to the person required to consent a right to have the property retained unsold. Goswell's Trusts, In re, 84 L. J. Ch. 719; [1915] 2 Ch. 106; 113 L. T. 319; 59 S. J. 579—Younger, J.

Where by a deed of family arrangement certain freehold messuages, lands, and hereditaments were conveyed to trustees to be held by them in fee-simple upon the trusts in the deed declared, and the deed provided that the trustees should "upon the request in writing of the said parties hereto of the first second and third parts respectively," sell the freehold hereditaments thereby conveyed, and hold the proceeds of sale upon certain trusts, and where no request had been made to the trustees to sell the properties,—Held, that the real estate comprised in the deed remaining unsold had not been converted in equity into money, but still retained its character of real estate. Thornton v. Hawley (10 Ves. 129) and Taylor's Settlement, In re (22 L. J. Ch. 142; 9 Hare, 596), considered. Ib.

Partition Action—Sale—Payment into Court of Infant's Share—Request for Sale—Sale for Benefit of Infant — Death of Infant — Heir-at-Law—Next-of-Kin.]—A fund in Court representing an infant's share of proceeds of a sale ordered in a partition action is subject to the equity to reconvert into realty, is impressed with the character of real estate, and at the infant's death under age will go to his heir-at-law. This rule holds good notwithstanding the facts that the infant, by his next friend, requested a sale, and that the sale was certified to be for the infant's benefit. Hopkinson v. Richardson, 82 L. Personalty to be Held upon same Trusts as Proceeds of Sale — Power to Jointure — Election.]—A testator, after devising his land in strict settlement, gave his trustees a power of sale, and declared that the moneys arising from any such sale should, subject to a power of interim investment, be re-invested in land. He then bequeathed all his residuary personal estate to his trustees upon the trusts and with and subject to the powers and provisions applicable to moneys to arise from a sale under the power of sale thereinbefore contained:—Held, that the residuary personal estate must be treated as realty, though not actually laid out in the purchase of land. Cleveland (Duke), In re: Barnard v. Wolmer (62 L. J. Ch. 955; [1893] 3 Ch. 244), followed. Held also, that the devisees being put to election in respect of the devised real estate, such election, on the true construction of the will, extended so as to include the residuary personal estate. Upon-Cottrell-Dormer, In re; Upton v. Upton, 84 L. Alleged Right of Fishing—Copyhold Tenants —Immemorial Usage—Custom—Reasonableness.]—The tenants on certain ancient copyhold messuages within a manor had since 1599 asserted a custom for them to fish in certain waters within the manor, but there were continual protests by the lord of the manor. As far back as living memory went the tenants had habitually fished without interruption by the lord of the manor, and some of them had let the fishing and did not regard their rights as limited to catching fish for their own consumption. In an action by the owner of two of the messuages, which had been turned into fee-simple, against the lords of the manor and their fishing tenant, for a declaration that the plaintiff had a right of fishing for consumption of the occupants of the messuages,—Held, that on the evidence the plaintiff had to prove the existence of an immemorial usage amounting to a legal custom, and that as the alleged usage had been without reference to the needs of the occupants of the messuages the plaintiff had failed to prove a reasonable usage, and therefore he was not entitled to the declaration asked for. Payne v. Ecclesiastical Commissioners, 30 T. Trustees Selling under their Power of Sale — Right to have Purchaser Admitted.] — A testator who died in 1883 by his will declared limitations of his freehold and copyhold estates, and gave an overriding power of sale to his trustees. The will vested a term of 1,000 years in the trustees, but contained no express power to revoke uses. The trustees were now selling under their power of sale, and proposed to nominate the purchaser for admittance. The lord claimed that the trustees must be admitted:—Held, that the lord was bound to admit the purchaser on payment of a single fine. Beal v. Sheppard (Cro. Jac. 109) followed. Quære, whether the lord and steward of the manor could properly appear and be heard on a vendor and purchaser summons. Heathcote and Rawson's Contract, In re, 108 L. Effect of Act of 1911 on that of 1842.]—No one is entitled to sue under the Copyright Act, 1911, except for infringements of copyright under that Act; and although the plaintiffs' remedies for the infringement of copyright under the Copyright Act, 1842, were preserved by the Interpretation Act, 1889, they were so preserved with the disadvantage that registration must be proved before action brought. Evans v. Morris, [1913] W. N. 58—D.

Auditor's Report—Preparation for and Publication in Newspaper—Right to Republish.]—The plaintiffs, a firm of accountants, acting on the instructions of the proprietor of a newspaper, examined the securities possessed by the defendant, and made a report thereon, which was to be, and was in fact, published in the next issue of the newspaper. The plaintiffs were paid for their services in the matter by the proprietor of the newspaper. The defendant having republished the report was sued by the plaintiffs, who claimed an injunction:—Held, that the sole and exclusive rights of publishing and multiplying the report had passed to the proprietor of the newspaper, and therefore that the plaintiffs' action failed. Chantrey v. Dey, 28 T. Translation made under Contract—Translation Published as Advertisement in Newspaper—Publication of Advertisement in another Newspaper—Right of Translator to Copyright—Knowledge of Infringer as to the Existence of the Copyright.]—The manager of a financial newspaper arranged with the Governor of the State of Bahia that his message to the Legislative Assembly of the State should be printed and paid for as an advertisement in that paper. The plaintiff, who was permanently employed on the staff of that paper, was employed to translate the speech from the Portuguese language. The translation was not made by him in the course of his employment as one of the staff of the paper; it was done entirely in his own time and under an independent engagement outside his ordinary duties. The plaintiff, in making the translation, cut down the speech, omitted the less material parts, divided it into suitable paragraphs, and supplied appropriate headlines. The translation made by the plaintiff appeared as an advertisement in the paper together with the following words: "Translated from the Portuguese by F. D. Byrne." The defendants, on seeing the advertisement, following the ordinary practice of managers of newspapers, obtained permission from the Bahia Government to reproduce it as an advertisement in their paper for a certain sum. The defendants accordingly published in their paper an advertisement which was in every way a copy of the advertisement in the other paper. The plaintiff brought an action in respect of the infringement of his copyright:—Held, that the translation made by the plaintiff was an "original literary . . . work" within the meaning of section 1 of the Copyright Act, 1911, and that as it was first published in England, and the plaintiff was the author of it, and it was not made in the course of his employment, he was the owner of the copyright therein; that the defendants could not rely upon section 8 of the Act of 1911, as there was reasonable ground for them to suspect that there was copyright in the translation, having regard to the intimation contained on the face of the advertisement that it was translated by the plaintiff, and section 8 afforded no protection to a person who, knowing or suspecting that copyright subsists, makes a mistake as to the owner of the copyright and obtains permission to publish from a person who is in fact not the owner of the copyright. Byrne v. Stock Incidents — Combination — Reproduction — No Similar Sentence.] — Under section 1 of the Copyright Act, 1911, the person who is the author and the owner of the copyright in a novel is entitled to an injunction to restrain the performance of a dramatic sketch containing a series of stock incidents in combination which have been taken from the plaintiff's book, even though no sentence used in the sketch is similar to any sentence used in the book. Corelli v. Gray, 30 T. Index to Railway Guide—List of Names of Stations Used for Guessing Competition—Names Taken from Index.] — A book which consists of a specification of the conditions at the present moment of a constantly changing subject-matter is a new work, even though some of the particulars may, and have not altered from what they were, and were stated to be at some prior date; and to publish and sell a portion of such work, even though for an entirely different purpose, is an infringement of the copyright in such work. It is therefore an infringement of copyright to publish an extract from the index of stations in Bradshaw's Railway Guide published in 1914, although the names of stations taken may have appeared in an edition of the guide published in 1902, such list of names having been issued and sold in connection with a railway-station guessing competition carried on by the infringing party. Blacklock & Co. v. Pearson, Lim., 84 L. Card-Index System.] — The plaintiffs invented an outfit consisting of a box in which cards of different colours and with different headings were inserted, the object being to enable an employer to get readily at the insurance card of a particular servant. The cards merely had on them the words "name" and "address" and other words that might be used by anybody :—Held, that the cards were not an original "literary work" within section 35 of the Copyright Act, 1911, and therefore were not the subject of copyright within section 1. Libraco, Lim. v. Shaw Walker, Lim., 58 S. —— Copyright Song with Pianoforte Accompaniment—Record for Mechanical Performance — Manuscript Orchestral Arrangement for Graphophone.]—The making of a single manuscript orchestral arrangement of a copyright song with pianoforte accompaniment is an infringement of copyright and cannot be justified, even though it is made for the purpose only of producing graphophone records by a person who has given the notice and paid the royalties requisite under the Copyright Act, 1911, s. 19, to entitle him to make mechanical records of the copyright song. Chappell & Co. v. Columbia Graphophone Co., 84 L. —— Payment of Royalties — Gramophone Records—Records Made and Sold before Copyright Act came into Operation.]—The plaintiff in the early part of the year 1911 composed and published an original musical work called the "Mousmé Waltz." At some date before the Copyright Act, 1911, came into operation —namely, July 1, 1912—the defendants, who were manufacturers and sellers of gramophone records, manufactured abroad and imported into England gramophone records of the waltz, and since July 1, 1912, sold such records in England without the plaintiff's consent and without paying him any royalty :—Held, that the defendants had infringed the plaintiffs' copyright in the waltz within the meaning of section 1, sub-section 2 (d) of the Copyright Act, 1911, under which "copyright" for the purposes of the Act includes for the first time the sole right "in the case of a literary, dramatic, or musical work, to make any record, perforated roll, cinematograph film, or other contrivance by means of which the work may be mechanically performed or delivered." Monckton v. Pathé Frères Pathephone, Lim., 83 L. The Board of Trade under the provisions of section 19, sub-section 6 of the Copyright Act, 1911—which empowers the Board to make regulations prescribing "the mode, time, and frequency of the payment of royalties, and any such regulations may, if the Board think fit, include regulations requiring payment in advance or otherwise securing the payment of royalties"—made a regulation that "Unless otherwise agreed, royalties shall be payable by means of adhesive labels purchased from the owner of the copyright and affixed in the manner provided by these regulations," and the regulations further provided that no contrivance should be delivered to a purchaser until such label or labels denoting the amount of royalty had been affixed thereto :—Held, that the regulation was not ultra vires, but was one for "securing the payment of royalties" within the meaning of the sub-section. Ib.

—— Popular Song—Reply Song—Publication Abroad — Simultaneous Publication in this Country—"First publication"—"Colourable publication."]—A popular song was published in America on May 5, 1913, and prior to that date twelve copies of the song were sent to a firm in this country. On May 5, 1913, this firm deposited five copies officially, filed one copy for reference, and placed the remaining copies on sale. No further attempt was made to bring the song to the notice of the public in this country until it was publicly performed in July, 1913. No copy of the song was sold until after the public performance. The subsequent popular demand was first supplied by copies of the song obtained from America, but afterwards the English firm obtained an assignment of the copyright and published their own copies :—Held, that there had been a sufficient first publication in this country on May 5, 1913, within the meaning of section 1, sub-section 3, and section 35, sub-section 3 of the Copyright Act, 1911. Held, also, on the facts, that a reply song published by the defendants was not an infringement of the plaintiffs' copyright. Francis, Day & Hunter v. Feldman & Co., 83 L. J. Ch. 906; [1914] 2 Ch. 728; 111 L. T. 521; 59 S. J. 41—C.A.

Stage Play—Title.]—The plaintiff was the owner of the copyright of a play entitled Where there's a Will there's a Way. The defendant produced a play entitled Where there's a Will ——. There was no allegation of an infringement of copyright with regard to the substance of the plays, but in each the progress of the plot gave to the word "will" in the title the peculiar meaning of testament :—Held, that the peculiar significance of the words did not render a common phrase a subject of copyright. Broad or Broemel v. Meyer, 57 S. J. 145; 29 T. L. R. 148—Warrington, J.

Similarity between Two Pieces merely a Coincidence.] — The representation of a dramatic piece in which the similarities to a piece previously produced are due to mere coincidence—both plays being derived independently from the common stock of dramatic ideas—is not an infringement of the rights given by the Dramatic Copyright Act, 1833, to the author of the play first produced. Robl v. Palace Theatre, 28 T. L. R. 69—Hamilton, J.

Cinematograph—"Place of dramatic entertainment"—Show Room.]—The defendants, who were producers of cinematograph films, had a room at their place of business fitted up with a cinematograph apparatus, and they issued advertisements inviting the public to see films shewing certain scenes of a play which the plaintiffs alleged to be an infringement of their rights:—Held, without deciding whether the exhibition of the films constituted an infringement of the plaintiffs' rights, that the room where the films were shewn on the cinematograph was not a place "of dramatic entertainment" within the meaning of section 2 of the Dramatic Copyright Act, 1833, inasmuch as the public were merely invited with the object of getting them to purchase the films. Glenville v. Selig Polyscope Co., 27 T. L. R. 554—Channell, J.

—— Exhibition of Films—Contract to Exhibit at Certain Places on Certain Days — Advertising Intention to Exhibit Film at Place not within Contract.] — The defendants entered into an agreement with the plaintiffs by which they hired a certain cinematograph film, the copyright of which belonged to the plaintiffs, for exhibition in certain specified theatres on certain days, and the defendants agreed that they would not exhibit the film in any other theatre than those specified in the agreement. The defendants in fact exhibited the film in two other theatres and advertised their intention of exhibiting the film at a place at which they were not authorised by the agreement to exhibit it:—Held, that the defendants had, besides committing a breach of contract, also infringed the Copyright Act, 1911, by advertising their intention to exhibit the film at a place at which they were not authorised to exhibit the film, and that for that tort they must pay damages. Fenning Film Service, Lim. v. Wolverhampton, Walsall, and District Cinemas, Lim., 83 L. Drawing — Infringement — Copy on Wood Block—Registration.]—The plaintiff was the owner of the copyright of a drawing, the principal features of which the defendant had copied on to a wood block, so that in the reproductions printed therefrom the said features were transposed, and faced in the opposite direction:—Held, that the block and reproductions printed therefrom were copies or colourable imitations and infringements of the copyright. The plaintiff registered himself as co-owner of a copyright with V., who, in fact, had no interest in the copyright. Subsequently he registered himself as sole owner, but entered on the register an assignment to himself of all V.'s interest in the said copyright, whereas V. had in fact no interest:—Held, that the first registration was bad, but that the second was valid, and could sustain an action for infringement. Whitehead v. Wellington, 55 S. J. 272—Warrington, J.

—— Sale by Author—Alteration and Publication by Purchaser without Author's Consent as and for Unaltered Work of Author—"Alteration"—Action to Recover Penalties—Injunction.]—The object of section 7, clause 4 of the Fine Arts Copyright Act, 1862, is to protect the character and reputation of the author or maker of a painting, drawing, photograph, or negative of a photograph who has parted with the possession of it, by forbidding the making, sale, or publication by another person, without the consent of the author or maker, of an altered copy thereof as and for the latter's unaltered work. An alteration, therefore, to be within clause 4, must be such an alteration as might affect such character or reputation. Such making, sale, or publication need not be fraudulent; it is sufficient if it is done knowingly. Carlton Illustrators v. Coleman, 80 L. J. K.B. 510; [1911] 1 K.B. 771; 104 L. T. 413—Channell, J.

The maker or author is entitled under section 8 of the Act to bring an action for the recovery of the penalty imposed by section 7 for a breach of clause 4 of section 7. He is also entitled to an injunction to restrain future breaches of the clause. Ib.

—— Assignment before 1911—No Registration—Substituted Copyright.]—A person entitled to copyright at the date of the passing of the Copyright Act, 1911, is entitled to the substituted copyright mentioned in the First Schedule to that Act and can sue for an injunction, damages, and consequential relief, although the copyright was not registered as acquired by the Copyright Act, 1862. *Savory, Lim. v. —— Sufficiency of Memorandum.]—The plaintiffs claimed to be assignees of the copyright in a picture of a golfer entitled "Thirteen Down—Great Scott." The assignment was in the form of a receipt bearing date March 28, 1910, and in the following terms: "Received of Messrs. Savory, Lim., Bristol, the sum of 2*l.* 6*s.* 6*d.* for five original card designs inclusive of all copyrights: subjects—four golfing subjects; one Teddy Bear painting. (Signed) W. Fletcher Thomas." The copyright was not registered. The defendants on December 4, 1913, reproduced this picture in their magazine The World of Golf. Upon this infringement being brought to their notice by the plaintiffs they offered all that the plaintiffs could have obtained by action. This offer was refused and the action proceeded. At the trial the plaintiffs proved the sale of one copy subsequently to the offer in question:—Held, that there was a sufficient written memorandum "signed at or before sale" to pass the copyright in the drawing, and that parol evidence was admissible to identify the drawing in question as one of those referred to in the memorandum. Shardlow v. Cotterill (50 L. J. Ch. 613; 20 Ch. D. 90) and Plant v. Bourne (66 L. J. Ch. 643; [1897] 2 Ch. 281) followed. Ib.

Picture—Infringement—Copies made before Registration—Subsequent Registration—Sale after Registration.]—A certain photograph was taken by the agent of the plaintiffs of an incident at the Delhi durbar, and the plaintiff subsequently saw a similar photograph appear in an illustrated paper. He thereupon registered his photograph under the Copyright Act, and proceeded to the office of the paper which contained the photograph, and sued the publishers and proprietors of the paper, and purchased two copies of the paper, claiming an injunction and damages for infringement of his copyright :—Held, that he was entitled to an injunction and an enquiry as to damages. Baker Motion Photographic Co. v. Hulton, 56 S. Photographs—Supplying for Reproduction in Newspapers—Termination of Arrangement—Subsequent Publication of Photographs, Copyright in which Registered — Right to Publish others, Copyright in which not Registered — Common Law Rights of Proprietor.] — The plaintiffs supplied photographs for reproduction in newspapers belonging to the defendants, at agreed charges for each occasion on which a photograph was used. After the plaintiffs had terminated the arrangement the defendants published in the newspapers photographs in which the plaintiffs had registered their copyright, and claimed the right to publish others the copyright in which had not been registered :—Held, that the termination of the arrangement by the plaintiffs amounted to a withdrawal of all open offers, and that thereafter the defendants could not, without the plaintiffs' licence, use or re-use any of the photographs theretofore supplied by the plaintiffs; and that the plaintiffs, notwithstanding the non-registration of their statutory copyright in the unpublished photographs, were entitled to an injunction to protect their common law rights, as well as to relief in respect of the infringement of their statutory copyright. Mansell v. Valley Printing Co. (77 L. Concurrent Inquests—Fees to Jurors.] — An explosion occurred in a colliery pit which caused the death of 166 persons, and several days elapsed before all the bodies were brought to the surface. The coroner of the district instructed the local inspector of county constabulary to act as coroner's officer and summon a jury of twenty inhabitants of the district. This jury was sworn 166 times, and the coroner paid them fees as for a corresponding number of inquests. He also paid the constable acting as his officer fees as for 166 inquests :—Held, that the inquests were concurrent and not separate or consecutive, and that by the schedule of the fees, allowances, and disbursements to be paid by coroners on the holding of inquests, made by the county council of the county in which the colliery was situate, under section 25 of the Coroners Act, 1887, the jurors were only entitled to fees as for one inquest. Rex v. Durham County Council; Graham, Ex parte, 106 L. Fees to Police Constable Acting as Coroner's Officer.]—Further, that by the operation of section 23 of the Police Act, 1890, the county schedule is applicable only to a person acting as coroner's officer who is not a police constable, and that police constables acting as coroners' officers are not entitled to fees under that schedule, but only to such fees as may have been approved under the last-mentioned section. Ib.

Mayor—Interest in Employment of Officer of Corporation—Receipt of Sums Paid out of Salary of Officer — Right of Corporation to Recover.]—S. L. owned a private business as accountant, and also held certain appointments under the corporation of a borough. As he was disqualified while he held these appointments from being elected mayor of the borough, he made an arrangement wth those who had control of the appointments, in pursuance of which he resigned them in favour of his son and another as joint holders thereof, and he became a candidate for the office of mayor. He was shortly afterwards elected mayor and held that office for a year, continuing thereafter to be a councillor for upwards of five years. He had taken no part in the appointment of his successors to, or their continuance in, the aforesaid appointments. Subsequently by deed S. L., whilst mayor, sold to the joint holders of these appointments his private business as accountant in consideration of their paying him (inter alia) an annual sum for five years out of their official salaries. They accordingly paid him that annual sum for the stipulated period. The corporation of the borough brought an action against the executors of S. L. to recover the sums so paid to him as money had and received by him to the use of the corporation :—Held, that there was no foundation for the claim. Pontefract Corporation v. Lowden, 84 L. Member of Committee—Power to Resign.]—A member of a borough council appointed member of a committee of the council under the powers of section 22, sub-section 2 of the Municipal Corporations Act, 1882, does not hold a public office within the operation of the common law rule that a person qualified and duly elected to serve in a public office cannot refuse to serve, and consequently such member of a committee may resign. Rex v. Sunderland Corporation, 80 L. By-laws—Prohibition of Touting for Hackney Carriages in Public Thoroughfare—Ground Open to Street.]—In the borough of B. a small triangular piece of garden ground at a street corner had been thrown into the footpath for the purpose of rounding off the corner, and had been made up by the corporation, who afterwards declared the street a highway. The soil belonged to the owners of a hotel, and the Justices were of opinion that it was private property, although open to the street. Upon this piece of ground a livery-stable keeper, whose premises were close by, took up his stand, either by himself or his employees, and touted for passengers to hire his vehicles : —Held, that in so doing he had committed a breach of a by-law of the B. Corporation "that a person shall not in any public thoroughfare in the district tout for hackney carriages"; and that the Justices were wrong in dismissing a summons against him for such breach. Derham v. Strickland, 104 L. Conduct of Defendant—Extraneous Matter—Discretion.]—The plaintiffs, hotel keepers in France, obtained from the defendant, a young Englishman, of twenty-two years of age, who had been staying at the plaintiffs' hotel, an English cheque payable in England, by a threat of criminal proceedings in France if it was not given, and a suggestion that no such proceedings would be taken if the cheque were given. The Judge held that payment of the cheque could not in these circumstances be enforced in an English Court and gave judgment for the defendant, but deprived him of costs on the ground that he had been very foolish throughout and that he had applied for two substantial amendments at the trial :—Held, on an appeal as to costs, that though the foolishness of the defendant was an extraneous matter which the Judge was not entitled to take into account in exercising his discretion as to costs, yet there were, apart from this, ample materials on which he was entitled to exercise his discretion by depriving the defendant of costs. Société des Hôtels Réunis v. Hawker, 58 S. Depriving Successful Defendant of Costs—Plea of Gaming Act.]—In an action for a sum due on a bet the defendant pleaded the Gaming Act. On the case coming on for trial, the plaintiff admitted that, in view of the plea of the Gaming Act, he could not succeed, and he therefore consented to judgment for the defendant. The defendant applied for judgment with costs :—Held, that the Court had a discretion as to awarding costs, and in the circumstances would refuse to award them in favour of the defendant. Levy v. Johnson, 29 T. L. R. 507—A. T. Lawrence, J.

Joinder of Additional Defendant under Misapprehension of Law.] — The plaintiff obstructed the user of a right of way, and the defendants having removed the obstruction the plaintiff brought an action of trespass against them, and joined R. as a party, claiming as against him damages for breach of covenant for title or for quiet enjoyment if it should be held that the other defendants were entitled to the right of way. The County Court Judge held that the plaintiff was entitled to damages against the first defendants for trespass on the ground that they had no right of way, but that the plaintiff was not entitled to damages against R. for breach of covenant. He ordered the plaintiff to pay R.'s costs, and on the authority of Bullock v. London General Omnibus Co. (76 L. J. K.B. 127; [1907] 1 K.B. 264) further ordered that the plaintiff should be at liberty to add R.'s costs to his own and recover both sets of costs from the unsuccessful defendants :—Held, that the order made by the learned Judge as to costs was wrong, the principle of Bullock v. London General Omnibus Co. (supra) not applying to a case in which a second defendant is joined by the plaintiff under a misapprehension of his legal rights. Poulton v. Moore, 83 L. J. K.B. 875; 109 L. T. 976—D.

Copyright — Design — Infringement — Consent to Order in Chambers—Motion in Court.] —Cases of infringement of patent or copyright should be in open Court, and therefore, even where the defendant's solicitor has consented to an injunction being granted in chambers, the plaintiff, if he moves in Court, is entitled to the costs of the motion and is not limited to the costs of a summons. Smith & Jones, Lim. v. Service, Reeve & Co., 83 L. J. Ch. 876; [1914] 2 Ch. 576; 111 L. T. 669; 31 R. P. C. 319; 58 S. J. 687; 30 T. L. R. 599—Sargant, J.

—— Innocent Infringement — Offer before Action — Right to Sue—Costs.] — An offer made by a defendant before action in an action for infringement of copyright is not sufficient to deprive a plaintiff of his legal remedy by action; but, semble, if the offer includes all that the plaintiff is entitled to, and it is repeated after action brought, then the plaintiff, if he persists with his action, must pay all costs incurred in the action subsequently to the offer. Savory, Lim. v. World of Golf, Lim., 83 L. J. Ch. 824; [1914] 2 Ch. 566; 111 L. T. 269; 58 S. J. 707—Neville, J.

Offer in Defence Delivered—Plaintiff's Right to Subsequent Costs.]—The plaintiff, a member of the defendant trade union, having brought the action against the union and its trustees for relief in the form of the judgment in Osborne v. Amalgamated Society of Railway Servants (79 L. J. Ch. 87; [1910] A.C. 87), the defendants, by their defence, offered a perpetual undertaking not to spend the funds of the union on the collection of voluntary subscriptions for purposes outside the union's powers, to make it clear that all such subscriptions were voluntary, and to charge as arrears against any member any sum in respect of them, and to pay the plaintiff's costs up to the defence :—Held, that, notwithstanding this offer, the plaintiff was entitled to his other costs of the action. Wilson v. Amalgamated Society of Engineers, 80 L. J. Ch. 469; 104 L. T. 715; 55 S. J. 498; 27 T. L. R. 418—Parker, J.

Payment into Court with Denial of Liability —Mandatory Injunction—Costs.]—The defendant had erected on his land a pilaster which, at a height of some twelve feet above the private road, projected about twenty inches over. The plaintiff asked for a mandatory injunction for the removal of the pilaster, but the defendant, while denying liability, paid 5l. into Court, and pleaded that that was enough to satisfy the plaintiff's claim in respect of the projection :—Held, that damages should be awarded in lieu of a mandatory injunction, and that, as damages to the amount of more than 5l. had not been shewn, and the Judge was not satisfied that there were reasonable grounds for not accepting the sum paid in, the plaintiff must, under Rules of the Supreme Court, 1883, Order XXII. rule 6, pay the costs of the issue as to liability in respect of the pilaster. Pettey v. Parsons, 84 L. J. Ch. 81; [1914] 1 Ch. 704; 30 T. L. R. 328—Sargant, J.

Third Party and Fourth Party Notices—Third Party's Right to Indemnity against Fourth Party Admitted — Action Dismissed with Costs—Whether Third Party's Costs to Include Costs Paid to Fourth Party.]—In an action against defendants who claim indemnity against a third party who obtains an order in the presence of the plaintiffs against a fourth party, directing delivery of pleadings and that the fourth party be at liberty to appear at the trial and be bound by the result, the Court has jurisdiction under the third-party procedure in part 6 of Order XVI. to decide all questions of costs as between the parties to the action and the third and fourth parties, the rules applying not only to third parties, but further parties :—Held, therefore, that the plaintiffs in the circumstance of having endeavoured to perpetrate a fraud on the fourth party must pay his costs. No order against the plaintiffs as to third party's costs, the claim against them being one of indemnity. Also, that in the circumstances there ought to be no order as to costs as between the third and fourth parties in the fourth-party proceedings. Klawanski v. Premier Petroleum Co., 104 L. Notice of Act of Bankruptcy—Refusal to Pay Debt on Ground of Notice — Action to Recover Debt—Application by Defendant for Direction to Pay into Court—Right of Defendant to Costs.]—The plaintiff, having a sum standing to his credit on his banking account with the defendants, demanded payment thereof after he had given them notice that he had committed an act of bankruptcy. The defendants refused to pay, and, the plaintiff having commenced an action to recover the sum, the defendants immediately obtained an order directing them to pay the money into Court. A summons by the plaintiff for judgment under Order XIV. was adjourned until the expiration of three months from the date of the acts of bankruptcy, and then, no bankruptcy proceedings having been instituted, an order was made that the plaintiff should be at liberty to sign final judgment, and that the amount paid into Court should be paid out to the plaintiff:—Held, that the defendants were entitled to be allowed their costs of the action. McCarthy v. Capital and Counties Bank, 81 L. Several Issues—Finding for Plaintiff on One Issue, but for Defendant on Overriding Issue—Judgment for Defendant with Costs—Judgment Silent as to Costs of Issue on which Plaintiff Succeeded — Right of Plaintiff to Costs of that Issue—"Issue"—"Event"—"Unless the Judge . . . shall, for good cause, otherwise order."]—The plaintiff, a builder, brought an action against the defendant on a building contract claiming 427*l.* 9*s.* 3*d.* as the balance due to him thereunder. The defendant pleaded that the work done by the plaintiff under the contract was unsatisfactory and of inferior quality, so that no balance was due thereunder, and that the claim was barred by the Statute of Limitations. The action having been referred, the official referee found that 247*l.* 7*s.* was due from the defendant to the plaintiff, but that the plaintiff's right to recover the amount was barred by the Statute of Limitations; and, pursuant to his direction, judgment was entered for the defendant, with his costs of the action except so far as these had been increased by the defence other than the Statute of Limitations:—Held, that the question as to the existence and amount of the debt due under the contract was an "issue," and that the finding of the official referee was an "event," within the meaning of Order LXV. rule 1; that the mere fact that the judgment did not state that the plaintiff was entitled to the costs of that issue on which he succeeded did not imply that it did "for good cause, otherwise order," within the meaning of that rule; and consequently that the plaintiff was entitled to his costs of that issue. Slatford v. Erlebach, 81 L. Separate Issues—Absence of Direction by Judge as to Costs — Jurisdiction of Taxing Master.]—In every case, whether tried by a jury or not, the judgment should contain a direction as to the costs to which each party is entitled. Petition—Funds in Court in an Action—Payment Out—Plaintiff in the Action made Respondent to the Petition—Such Respondent Entitled to Separate Set of Costs out of the Fund.]—Where five of the plaintiffs in an old action commenced by bill of complaint in equity petitioned the Court for payment out of funds to the credit of that action, and made the sixth plaintiff and certain defendants to the bill and certain incumbrancers of the sixth plaintiff respondents to the petition,—Held, that the plaintiff respondent was entitled to have a separate set of costs of the petition. Edwards v. Perry, 112 L. Verdict for One Farthing Damages — Opinion of Jury.]—A Judge in determining whether he should deprive a plaintiff, who has obtained a verdict of one farthing damages, of his costs, ought to consider what was the view of the jury in arriving at their verdict. Wootton v. Sievier (No. 2), 29 T. —— Slander.]—In an action for slander the jury found the main issue in favour of the plaintiff, but returned a verdict for one farthing damages only:—Held, that the plaintiff was entitled to the costs of the action. Macalister v. Steedman, 27 T. L. R. 217—Bucknill, J.

"Issue" — "Event."] — The plaintiff brought an action against the defendants claiming damages for loss sustained by him in consequence of his having subscribed for shares in a company in reliance on the faith of a prospectus, of which, as he alleged, the defendants had authorised the issue and which to their knowledge contained material misstatements and omissions of fact. The defendants denied these allegations. The jury found that the defendants did not authorise the issue of the prospectus, and that they believed that it was true; but they also found, in answer to two other questions, that the prospectus contained untrue statements and omissions of fact, and that the plaintiff relied on its truth. The Judge directed judgment to be entered for the defendants with costs. The judgment as drawn up purported to adjudge that the plaintiff should recover nothing against the defendants, and that, except as therein otherwise adjudged, the defendants should recover their costs against the plaintiff; but further, that, the jury having found that the prospectus contained untrue statements or omissions of fact, and that the plaintiff relied on its truth, and the Judge having made no order as to the costs of these issues, the plaintiff should have his costs of these issues against the defendants:—Held, that neither of the two abovementioned questions was a separate "issue," and that the finding of the jury on neither of them was an "event" within the meaning of Order LXV. rules 1 and 2, and therefore that the plaintiff was not entitled to his costs of either of these questions against the defendants, and that so much of the judgment, as drawn up, as purported to adjudge that the plaintiff should have the costs of these issues should be set aside. Howell v. Dering, 84 L. J. K.B. 198; [1915] 1 K.B. 54; 111 L. T. 790; 58 S. J. 669—C.A. See also Quirk v. Thomas, [1915] W. N. 147—Lush, J.

Separate Issues — Absence of Direction by Judge as to Costs — Jurisdiction of Taxing Master.]—In every case, whether tried by a jury or not, the judgment should contain a direction as to the costs to which each party is entitled. It is for the Judge who tries a case to say whether there is any separate issue upon which the unsuccessful party is entitled to costs. Two Defendants — Plaintiff Successful against One Defendant — Costs Payable to Successful Defendant Recoverable from Unsuccessful Defendant.]—The plaintiff sued the two defendant companies to recover damages for personal injuries sustained by him owing to the negligence of the defendants' servants or the servants of one of them. At the trial the jury found that the accident was solely due to the negligence of the servants of the first defendants, and they exonerated the servants of the second defendant company from all blame:—Held, that the plaintiff with his limited knowledge of the facts was entitled to bring his action against both defendants, that the first defendants when they were applied to by the plaintiff ought to have said whether they alleged negligence against the second defendants, or not, and that, as they had not done so, the plaintiff, although he was liable to the second defendants for costs, was entitled to recover those costs from the first defendants. Vine v. National Motor Cab Co., 29 T. L. R. 311—Bucknill, J.

The plaintiff sued a cab company and an omnibus company for damages in respect of a collision, alleging negligence on the part of the defendant companies or of one or other of them. The cab company did not before the issue of the writ suggest to the plaintiff that the omnibus company were to blame for the collision, nor did they so allege in their defence. But as between themselves each of the companies threw the blame on the other, and at the trial each of them contended that the collision was due to negligence on the part of the other. The jury found that the collision was due to the negligence of the cab company alone:—Held, that, as it was reasonable in the circumstances of the case for the plaintiff to join both companies as defendants, the plaintiff was entitled to an order allowing him to add to the costs payable to him from the cab company the costs payable by him to the omnibus company. Bestermann v. British Motor Cab Co., 83 L. J. K.B. 1014; [1914] 3 K.B. 181; 110 L. T. 754; 58 S. J. 319; 30 T. L. R. 319—C.A.

The plaintiff sued a motor-cab company and an omnibus company for damages for personal injuries. Before action the plaintiff first applied to the omnibus company for compensation, but they denied liability and said that the accident was caused solely by the negligence of the motor-cab company's servant. On the refusal of the omnibus company to admit liability, the plaintiff applied to the motor-cab company, and they, while denying any liability on their part, did not throw the responsibility on to the omnibus company. At the trial the jury found that the accident causing the plaintiff's injuries was entirely due to the negligence of the motor-cab company's servant, and judgment was accordingly entered against that company and in favour of the omnibus company:—Held, that the plaintiff was entitled to add to the costs which he could recover from the motor-cab company the costs which he had to pay to the omnibus company. Mulhern v. National Motor Cab Co., 29 T. L. R. 677—Bankes, J.

Libel—Newspaper—Wholesale Newspaper Agents—No Joint Publication—Acting Innocently.]—A firm of wholesale newspaper agents which has distributed copies of a journal containing defamatory matter is not liable to pay damages in respect thereof if they did not know that the copies distributed by them contained the defamatory matter, and if their ignorance was not due to negligence, and if they neither knew nor were likely to know that the journal was likely to contain defamatory matter. In a libel action against the editor and the printers of a journal, and against a firm of wholesale newspaper agents which had distributed the journal, the Judge directed the jury to the above effect, and ruled that there was no joint publication by the agents with the other defendants, and the jury found that the newspaper agents had not acted innocently, and awarded 1*s.* damages as against them. The Court thereupon deprived the plaintiff of costs as against the newspaper agents on the ground that the amount of damages shewed that the jury considered that there was no moral obliquity on their part. Haynes v. De Beck, 31 T. L. R. 115—Darling, J.

Slander—Payment into Court—Verdict for Smaller Sum.]—The plaintiff sued the defendant for slander in respect of a statement that the plaintiff had at a Parliamentary election voted twice in one division. The defendant admitted publication, and paid 10*l.* 10*s.* into Court in respect of the words complained of without the meanings alleged in the innuendo, which he denied, and pleaded in mitigation of damages certain letters of apology which he had written. At the trial the jury found a verdict for the plaintiff with one farthing damages, and Darling, J., held that the plaintiff was entitled to the costs of the action. On appeal, held that there was no reason shewn for interfering with the exercise of the Judge's discretion in making the order that he did. Kinnell v. Walker, 27 T. L. R. 257—C.A.

Claim for Damages for Fraudulent Misrepresentation on Sale of Business — Credit Given for Price of Stock-in-Trade — Counterclaim by Defendant for Stock-in-trade.]—The plaintiff claimed damages for fraudulent misrepresentation whereby she was induced to purchase a business. The stock-in-trade taken over was valued at 90*l.* 15*s.* 9*d.*, for which sum the plaintiff in her statement of claim stated that she was willing to give credit in account against the damages she claimed. The defendant denied the alleged fraud and counterclaimed for the 90*l.* 15*s.* 9*d.* The jury awarded the plaintiff 50*l.* on her claim, and found for the defendant on the counterclaim: —Held, that, notwithstanding the form of the pleadings, the claim and counterclaim must be treated as separate actions, and that the plaintiff was entitled to the costs of her claim and the defendant to the costs of his counterclaim. Sharpe v. Haggith, 106 L. C. TAXATION OF COSTS.

See also Vol. IV. 739, 2067.

Double or Treble Costs—"Full and reasonable indemnity" instead thereof—Costs "in and about" Action—Duty of Taxing Officer.]—By section 2 of the Limitation of Actions and Costs Act, 1842, a successful plaintiff who, previously to that Act, would have been entitled to double or treble costs or costs other than the ordinary costs between party and party, is, in lieu thereof, to be entitled to a "full and reasonable indemnity" as to all costs incurred "in and about" the action:—Held, that in taxing the costs the taxing officer must apply the appropriate scale of the Court in which they were incurred to the costs "in" the action, and, in addition, may allow such costs as he thinks were reasonably incurred otherwise than "in" the action—that is, "about" the action. House Property Co. of London v. Whiteman, 82 L. J. K.B. 887; [1913] 2 K.B. 382; 109 L. T. 43; 77 J. P. 319—D.

Costs Payable out of a "fund or estate" or the Assets of a Company in Liquidation—One-Sixth of Bill Taxed off—Trustee Declared Entitled to Indemnity for Costs out of Property.]—Order LXV. rule 27, sub-rule 38B, which provides that if, on the taxation of a bills of costs payable out of a fund or estate (real or personal) or out of the assets of a company in liquidation, the amount of the bill is reduced by one-sixth, no costs shall be allowed to the solicitor leaving the bill for taxation for drawing and copying it, nor for attending the taxation, refers to something in the nature of administration for the benefit of a class of persons. The reference to the assets of a company in liquidation does not apply to orders made in hostile litigation, but has come down from the period when companies were wound up in the Chancery Courts; and the reference to a fund or estate does not apply to a case where, as the result of an individual contract, a party has become entitled to be paid, if necessary, by means of the realisation of or enforcement of a charge against particular property. Where, therefore, a trustee of certain leases obtained a declaration that he was entitled to be indemnified out of the property in respect of his personal liability and his costs, charges, and expenses, with liberty to apply for the purpose of giving effect to the indemnity:—Held, that the sub-rule had no application to the case, the costs not being payable out of a "fund or estate" within its meaning. Buchan v. Ayre, 85 L. J. Ch. 72; [1915] 2 Ch. 474; 60 S. J. 45—Sargant, J.

Action of Tort against Two Defendants—Several Defences—Severance of Costs.]—In an action of libel against two defendants one pleaded justification and the other did not. The jury found a verdict against both defendants for 750*l.*, and judgment was entered for the plaintiff against the defendants for 750*l.* and costs to be taxed:—Held, that the plaintiff was entitled to be allowed his costs of the issue of justification only against the defendant who had pleaded that issue and not against the defendant who had not. Hobson v. Leng & Co., 83 L. J. K.B. 1624; [1914] 3 K.B. 1245; 111 L. T. 954; 59 S. J. 28; 30 T. L. R. 682—C.A.

Separate Issues—Issue of Fact and Question of Law Decided in Favour of Plaintiffs—Appeal on Question of Law—No Appeal on Issue of Fact—Judgment for Defendants with Costs—Taxation—Costs of Proving Issue of Fact.]—When one of the parties to an action has obtained a judgment of the Court in his favour with general costs of the action, it is not open to the Taxing Master upon taxation to consider the fact that the unsuccessful party has succeeded upon one or more particular issues, and to allow him the costs of proving those issues. Slatford v. Erlebach (81 L. J. K.B. 372; [1912] 3 K.B. 155) distinguished. Ingram & Royle, Lim. v. Services Maritimes du Tréport (No. 2), 83 L. J. K.B. 1128; [1914] 3 K.B. 28; 110 L. T. 967; 12 Asp. M.C. 493—C.A.

—— Absence of Direction by Judge as to Costs—Jurisdiction of Taxing Master.]—In every case, whether tried by a jury or not, the judgment should contain a direction as to the costs to which each party is entitled. It is for the Judge who tries a case to say whether there is any separate issue upon which the unsuccessful party is entitled to costs. In the absence of any direction a Taxing Master has no jurisdiction to allow such costs. Bush v. Rogers, 84 L. J. K.B. 686; [1915] 1 K.B. 707; 112 L. T. 945—Bankes, J.

Separate Defences and Appearances—Allowance or Disallowance by Taxing Master of Costs—Jurisdiction of Court to Review Decision—Final Order as to Costs.]—The allowing or disallowing, under sub-rule 8 of rule 27 of Order LXV., of the costs of separate defences and appearances is not a matter purely in the discretion of the Taxing Master. The Court has jurisdiction, under sub-rule 41 of rule 27, to review his decision upon the question. Ager v. Blacklock & Co. (56 L. T. 890) followed. Beattie v. Ebury (Lord) (43 L. J. Ch. 80; [1873] W. N. 194) not followed. Boswell v. Coaks (36 Ch. D. 444) distinguished. Spalding v. Gamage, Lim. (No. 1), 83 L. J. Ch. 855; [1914] 2 Ch. 405;

111 L. T. 829; 31 R. P. C. 421; 58 S. J. 722—Sargant, J.

Sub-rule 8 is not confined to interlocutory proceedings, but applies to final orders as to costs also. Ib.

Costs as between Solicitor and Client—Payable by Third Party—Basis of Taxation.]—The second part of Order LXV. rule 27, sub-rule 29, provides that: "save as against the party who incurred the same no costs shall be allowed which appear to the taxing master to have been incurred or increased through over-caution, negligence or mistake, or by payment of special fees to counsel or special charges or expenses to witnesses or other persons, or by other unusual expenses":—Held, that this provision applies not only to costs as between party and party, but also to each of the several cases of costs as between solicitor and client, which are distinguished in practice, except only the case where the costs are payable to the solicitor by the client himself, that case being excluded from the provision by the saving words at its commencement: and, consequently, that where a judgment directed that the plaintiff should recover against the defendant a sum as damages and also costs as between solicitor and client, the case came within the above provision, and the Taxing Master on taxation had rightly disallowed special fees to counsel and other special expenses. Cavendish v. Strutt (73 L. J. Ch. 247; [1904] 1 Ch. 524) judgment corrected. Giles v. Randall, 84 L. J. K.B. 786; [1915] 1 K.B. 290; 112 L. T. 271; 59 S. J. 131—C.A.

Counsel's Fees—Two Counsel—Short Cause List.]—The fact that an action is ordered to be put in the short cause list has no effect upon the taxation of costs, and is not a ground for saying that the costs of two counsel ought not to be allowed. Although the Court has jurisdiction to interfere with the discretion of the Taxing Master, it is the rarest thing for the Court to interfere except where the Taxing Master has gone wrong on a matter of principle. The question whether the fees of two counsel should be allowed is not purely a question of quantum, but is a question which the Taxing Master must decide, and prima facie the Court will not interfere in such a case. Ginn v. Robey, [1911] W. N. 28—C.A.

Three Counsel — Special Circumstances — Country Solicitor — Attendance at Trial in London.]—In a passing-off action the plaintiffs alleged fraud against the defendants. There was a large amount of evidence, including a great number of exhibits, and the action lasted ten days. On taxation the Taxing Master disallowed the costs of three counsel and of the attendance of the country solicitor at the trial in London. On a summons to review the taxation,—Held, that the Court ought not to overrule the discretion of the Taxing Master, and that the summons must be dismissed on both points. Perry & Co. v. Hessin & Co., 108 L. T. 332; 30 R. P. C. 193; 57 S. J. 302—Eve, J.

Shorthand Notes Agreed to be Used as Record of Evidence—Transcript—Costs in the Action.]—Where at the trial of an action it is agreed by both sides that a joint shorthand note shall be taken of the evidence, to be used if need be on appeal, but there is no arrangement made as to making the costs costs in the action or as to taking transcripts, the successful party is not to be entitled to include the expenses of the shorthand notes in his bill of costs. Osmond v. Mutual Cycle and Manufacturing Co., Lim. (68 L. J. Q.B. 1027; [1899] 2 Q.B. 88), distinguished. Jones v. Llanrwst Urban Council (No. 2), 80 L. J. Ch. 338; [1911] 1 Ch. 393; 104 L. T. 53; 75 J. P. 98—Parker, J.

In an action in which allegations of fraud were made, and which lasted over seven days, judgment was given for the defendant with costs. On taxation of the defendant's costs the Master allowed the costs of taking and of transcribing a shorthand note of the proceedings, and of copies for the Judge and for the defendant's counsel. At the trial the parties had agreed that a shorthand note of the proceedings should be taken and transcribed, and a copy thereof supplied to the Judge. There was no further agreement between the parties, and nothing was said about the costs of the shorthand note being costs in the cause. The Judge gave no direction that they should be costs in the cause:—Held, that these costs were not costs in the cause, and could not be allowed as such on taxation; but that upon the agreement arrived at each party must pay one-half of the cost of taking and transcribing the note and of the Judge's copy. Herbert v. Royal Society of Medicine (56 S. J. 107) explained and distinguished. Seal v. Turner, 84 L. J. K.B. 1658; [1915] 3 K.B. 194; 113 L. T. 769; 59 S. J. 649—C.A.

Charge for Preparing Brief.]—A charge for instructions for brief is in the discretion of the Taxing Master and cannot be reviewed by the Court unless the Taxing Master has proceeded on a wrong principle. Carter v. Apfel, 57 S. J. 97—Eve, J.

Copies of Documents for Use of Court.]—The costs of copies of all relevant parts of wills and other original documents for the use of the Judge are to be allowed on taxation. The Court ought not to be expected to use the original documents. Parratt, In re; Parratt v. Parratt, 58 S. J. 580—Astbury, J.

Witnesses — Conduct Money.] — Witnesses served with subpœnas to attend the trial of an action are entitled to be paid conduct money unless served prematurely, and it is the practice to allow these payments on taxation. Carter v. Apfel, 57 S. J. 97—Eve, J.

Disallowance of Costs of Third Expert Witness Called by Successful Party.]—Where a successful party to an action has called three expert witnesses without protest from the other side, and the Court has listened to their evidence, the costs of the third expert witness ought not to be disallowed by the Taxing Master unless there is some very special reason. Maxim v. Godson, 85 L. J. Ch. 66; 60 S. J. 77—Neville, J.

Successful Plaintiff Attending Trial as Witness—Plaintiff's Expenses as Witness.]—Where the successful party to an action has attended the trial as a witness in support of his own case, thereby sacrificing time and incurring hotel and travelling expenses, the Taxing Master, on taxation, as between party and party, of that party's bill of costs, is entitled to require as a condition of the inclusion in his allocatur of an allowance to that party of an amount in respect of these items, production by the solicitor of that party either of a voucher signed by the party acknowledging that the amount has been paid to him by the solicitor (though such a voucher could only be required where the amount had in fact been paid to him by the solicitor), or of a letter from the party intimating that he has knowledge that the amount is being allowed to him:—So held by Buckley, L.J., and Kennedy, L.J.; Vaughan Williams, L.J., dissenting. Harben v. Gordon, 83 L. J. K.B. 322; [1914] 2 K.B. 577; 109 L. T. 794; 58 S. J. 140—C.A.

Until the Taxing Master has issued his allocatur there is no concluded taxation which can properly be made the subject of an application to review taxation, and the Court ought not to entertain such an application. Ib.

Remitted Action—Payment by Defendant to Plaintiff after Action Brought — Defendant Ignorant of Writ when Payment Made—Sum "recovered in the action."]—The day after a writ had been issued in an action of contract for 77*l.* 5*s.* 2*d.*, the defendant, who was ignorant of the issue of the writ, paid the plaintiffs 72*l.* 10*s.*, the amount for which he considered he was liable. Subsequently the writ was served and the action was remitted to the City of London Court, where the plaintiffs obtained judgment for 4*l.* 15*s.* 2*d.*, the balance of their claim. The costs were taxed on scale C:—Held, following Pearce v. Bolton (71 L. J. K.B. 558; [1902] 2 K.B. 111), that the taxation was right, as the sum recovered in the action within the meaning of section 116 of the County Court Act, 1888, was 77*l.* 5*s.* 2*d.* Lamb v. Keeping, 111 L. Discretionary Power of Court.] — The Court, when exercising common law jurisdiction, has, apart from any Rules of the Supreme Court, a discretionary power, which was formerly possessed by the superior Courts of common law, to set off against one another judgments for costs in separate independent actions. Reid v. Cupper, 84 L. At the trial of an action for assault the plaintiff obtained a verdict against the defendant. In a previous action brought by the same plaintiff against the same defendant and his wife for slander, judgment had been entered for the defendants with costs. Judgment was directed to be entered in the assault action in accordance with the verdict, with costs, and on the application of the defendants the Judge ordered that the defendants' costs in the slander action should be set off against the plaintiff's costs in the assault action:—Held, that the Judge had a discretion to order the set-off of costs, notwithstanding the plaintiff's solicitor's lien, and that he had rightly exercised his discretion. David v. Rees (73 L. To Cancel Lease—"Value of the property."]—In an action brought on the Equity side of a County Court for rescission of a lease of certain premises, objection was raised that the Court had no jurisdiction, on the ground that the value of the premises exceeded 500*l.* :—Held, that the words "value of the property" in section 67, sub-section 4 of the County Courts Act, 1888, mean the value of the freehold of the land the lease of which has been granted, and not the value of the leasehold interest which is the subject-matter of the transaction to be dealt with by the County Court, and therefore that the Court had no jurisdiction to rescind the lease. Angel v. Jay, 80 L. J. K.B. 458; [1911] 1 K.B. 666; 103 L. T. 809; 55 S. J. 140—D.

Suit for Specific Performance of Agreement to Grant Right of Way.]—The jurisdiction conferred on the County Court by section 33 (d) of the County Officers and Courts (Ireland) Act, 1877 [cf. section 67, sub-section 4 of the County Courts Act, 1888], in suits for specific performance includes a suit for the specific performance of an agreement in writing for good consideration to grant a right of way as appurtenant to a holding. Reg. v. Westmoreland County Court Judge (36 W. Equity Jurisdiction—Administration Action—Value of Subject-matter—Evidence—Transfer of Action to Chancery Division.]—Where an administration action is brought in the County Court, and there is nothing on the face of the proceedings to shew that the value of the estate is above 500*l.*, and its value can only be ascertained by determining the question in dispute between the parties, it is the duty of the Judge to try that question, and, if in so doing it transpires that the value of the estate is above 500*l.*, to transfer the action to the Chancery Division of the High Court, under section 68 of the County Courts Act, 1888. Sunderland v. Glover, 84 L. Licence Duty—Proportion Recoverable by Lessee from Lessor—County Court—Extent of Jurisdiction.]—The jurisdiction of a County Court to determine, under section 2 of the Finance Act, 1912, how much of the increase of the duty payable in respect of a licence by virtue of the Finance (1909-10) Act, 1910, is recoverable by the lessee from the grantor of the lease, only arises where the conditions imposed by the section are fulfilled—namely, that the lease was granted before the Act of 1910 and that it does not contain a covenant that the lessee shall obtain his intoxicating liquor from the grantor only. If the grantor of the lease disputes that those conditions have been fulfilled, the County Court has no jurisdiction. Tratt v. Good, 84 L. J. K.B. 1550;

Siding and Shunting Charges — Private Waggons.]—The respondent, who was a coal merchant, owned railway waggons which ran over the appellants' railway, and when they fell out of repair they were shunted on to a siding of the appellants and the respondent sent a man to repair them. The appellants brought a County Court action against the respondent for siding and shunting charges in respect of the waggons shunted on to their sidings for repair. The respondent had had notice of the company's charges for these services. The Judge held that he had no jurisdiction and that the matter should go before an arbitrator:—Held, on appeal, that the Judge had jurisdiction. London and North-Western Railway v. Duerden, 85 L. Refusal of Judge to Try Remitted Action—Question of Jurisdiction — Duty of Judge — Costs.]—Section 65 of the County Courts Act, 1888, provides: "Where in any action of contract brought in the High Court the claim indorsed on the writ does not exceed 100*l*. . . . it shall be lawful for either party to the action . . . to apply to a Judge of the High Court at chambers to order such action to be tried in any Court in which the action might have been commenced, or in any Court convenient thereto; and on the hearing of the application the Judge shall, unless there is good cause to the contrary, order such action to be tried accordingly":—Held, that the words "in any Court convenient thereto" meant any County Court which the Judge at chambers might deem to be convenient to the parties, and that the Judge had a discretion to exercise upon the question of convenience which must vary according to the circumstances of each case. Rex v. Mellor, 83 L. J. K.B. 996; [1914] 2 K.B. 588; 110 L. T. 802; 58 S. J. 361; 30 T. L. R. 355—C.A.

An order having been made under the above section by a Master at chambers remitting an action to a County Court, and the Judge having refused to try the action, the Divisional Court made absolute a rule nisi to the Judge to hear the action and ordered him to pay the costs (including the costs thrown away in the County Court):—Held, that the County Court Judge had no jurisdiction to enquire into what circumstances were taken into account when the order was made or into the question whether his Court was a convenient Court or was convenient to the parties, or whether any other Court would be more convenient, or the like. His duty was to obey the order and try the action in due course in its proper turn, as if it had been an action originally commenced in his Court. Having regard to the above interpretation of section 65, it could only occur in some exceptional case that an order might possibly be made without jurisdiction: and if the County Court Judge was of opinion that the order was invalid for want of jurisdiction it was his duty to give a judgment on the points with reasons stating fully the grounds upon which he had come to the conclusion that the order was made without jurisdiction. He should then adjourn the hearing to enable either party to raise the question of jurisdiction in the High Court if he should desire to do so. Held, further, that the Divisional Court had no jurisdiction to order the Judge to pay the costs thrown away in the County Court. Churchward v. Coleman (36 L. J. Q.B. 57; L. R. 2 Q.B. 18) followed. Ib.

Order of Master Remitting Action—Expiration of Time for Appealing against Order of Master—Action Set Down in County Court—Jurisdiction of High Court to Entertain Application for Leave to Appeal against Order of Master.]—An action of contract having been brought in the High Court, the Master made an order under section 65 of the County Courts Act, 1888, remitting the action for trial to the County Court. After the time for appealing against that order had expired the plaintiffs under that section lodged the writ and the order with the Registrar of the County Court. The defendants subsequently appealed against that order, and the High Court Judge made an order extending the time for appealing and setting aside the order of the Master remitting the action:—Held, that, as the order of the Master remitting the action to the County Court had not been appealed against within the proper time, and the documents in the action had been lodged in the County Court, the action had been effectually transferred to the County Court and had become a County Court action; that the High Court Judge had no longer jurisdiction to make any order in respect of it; and that the order of the High Court Judge should be set aside and the order of the Master restored. Buckley v. National Electric Theatres, Lim., 82 L. Contract—Amendment of Particulars—Claim in Respect of Tort—Power of County Court Judge to Try Action.]—In an action of contract commenced in the High Court and remitted to the County Court under section 65 of the County Courts Act, 1888, the plaintiff filed amended particulars of claim containing a claim in respect of a tort:—Held, that the County Court Judge had jurisdiction to try the action upon the particulars as amended, but that it was open to him, in the exercise of his discretion under Order XIV. rule 12 of the County Court Rules, 1903, for any sufficient cause to disallow the amendment. Spring v. Fernandez, 81 L. J. K.B. 201; [1912] 1 K.B. 294; 105 L. T. 792; 56 S. J. 110—D.

Security for Costs.]—Where an action for tort has been remitted to the County Court under section 66 of the County Court Act, 1888, on the plaintiffs, a limited liability company, failing to give full security for the defendants' costs or to satisfy a Judge of the High Court that their cause of action is fit to be prosecuted in the High Court, the County Court Judge is not deprived of his jurisdiction to make an order for the security of the defendants' costs under section 278 of the Companies (Consolidation) Act, 1908, as by section 66 the remitted action and all the proceedings therein are to be tried and taken in the County Court as if the action had originally been commenced therein. Plasycoed Collieries Co. v. Partridge, 104 L. Remittal from Chancery Division to County Court—Power to Order Re-transfer to High Court—Action for Infringement of Franchise.]—The Court has power under section 126 of the County Courts Act, 1888, to order the re-transfer from the County Court to the High Court of an action which has been originally commenced in the Chancery Division and has been remitted to the County Court under section 69 of the County Courts Act, 1888. General Estates Co. v. Beaver, 81 L. Discretion of Judge — "Shall deem it desirable."]—Section 126 of the County Courts Act, 1888, provides that an action commenced in the County Court may be removed into the High Court "if the High Court or a Judge thereof shall deem it desirable that the action or matter shall be tried in the High Court": —Held, that the question whether an action should be removed into the High Court depends upon whether the action is one which in the opinion of the Judge is more fit to be tried in the High Court than in the County Court. The rule in Banks v. Hollingsworth (62 L. J. Q.B. 239; [1893] 1 Q.B. 442) followed. Donkin v. Pearson, 80 L. J. K.B. 1069; [1911] 2 K.B. 412; 104 L. T. 643—D.

Under section 126 of the County Courts Act, 1888, which authorises the High Court, if it "shall deem it desirable" that the action or matter shall be tried in the High Court, to order the removal into the High Court of an action commenced in the County Court, the jurisdiction of the Court to make the order is not confined to cases in which it considers that the case is in itself more fit to be tried in the High Court than in the County Court, but extends to cases where it thinks that for any reason it is better that it should be tried in the High Court. Challis v. Watson, 82 L. J. K.B. 529; [1913] 1 K.B. 547; 108 L. T. 505; 57 S. J. 285; 29 T. L. R. 271—D.

Action Removed to High Court by Certiorari — Obligation on Plaintiff to Proceed.] — An action in a County Court was by agreement between the parties removed into the High Court by certiorari on the application of the defendants under section 126 of the County Courts Act, 1888. As the plaintiff did not proceed with the action, the defendants applied that he might be ordered to proceed or that the action should be dismissed for want of prosecution:—Held, that the application must be refused, as the plaintiff was not, in view of the procedure that had been followed, bound to proceed with the action. Garton v. Great Western Railway (28 L. J. Q.B. 103; 1 E. & E. 258) followed. Harrison v. Bull, 81 L. J. K.B. 656; [1912] 1 K.B. 612; 106 L. T. 396; 56 S. J. 292; 28 T. L. R. 233—C.A.

The defendants paid a sum into Court with a notice that they admitted the accident had occurred through the negligence of their driver, but that they denied the alleged damage. At the trial the Judge found that the sum paid in was sufficient to satisfy the plaintiffs' claim :—Held, that as the plaintiffs were not entitled to recover without proof of actual damage the defendants' notice complied with Order IX. rule 12 of the County Court Rules, and the defendants were entitled to judgment with costs as from the date of payment in. Munday, Lim. v. London County Council, 32 T. Order of County Court Judge — Action on such Order.]—An action is maintainable upon an order of a County Court Judge made in the exercise of his bankruptcy jurisdiction (Bray, J., dissentiente). Savill v. Dalton, 84 L. J. K.B. 1583; [1915] 3 K.B. 174; 113 L. T. 477; [1915] H. B. R. 154; 59 S. J. 562—C.A.

Attachment of Debts—Judgment Debt Payable on a Certain Date—Issue of Garnishee Proceedings before that Date — Judgment "Unsatisfied."]—A judgment in the ordinary County Court form adjudging that the plaintiff recover from the defendant a certain sum, and ordering that the defendant pay that sum to the Registrar of the Court on a specified future date, cannot, before that date has arrived, be properly prescribed as "still unsatisfied" within the meaning of Order XXVI. rule 1 of the County Court Rules, 1903-1909, and therefore the plaintiff is not, before that date, entitled under that rule to take garnishee proceedings for the purpose of obtaining payment to him of a debt due from another person to the defendant. White v. Stenning, 80 L. J. K.B. 1124; [1911] 2 K.B. 418; 104 L. T. 876; 55 S. J. 441; 27 T. L. R. 395—C.A.

6. Interpleader.

Claim to Proceeds of Goods Taken in Execution and Sold—Claim by Assignee of Execution Creditor—Assignment of Debts Owing or to Become Owing — Absence of Title to Goods themselves.]—A claimant in an interpleader summons issued under section 157 of the County Courts Act, 1888, to the proceeds of goods taken in execution and sold under the provisions of section 156 of the Act, must, in order to succeed, shew that he had a good title to the goods themselves. Therefore, where the claimant is the assignee of all the book and other debts of the execution creditor, and his real object is to enforce under the assignment his right to the particular judgment debt, a summons under section 157 is not his appropriate remedy. Plant v. Collins, 82 L. J. K.B. 467; [1913] 1 K.B. 242; 108 L. T. 177; 29 T. L. R. 129—C.A.

Remitted Interpleader Issue — Jurisdiction to Try therewith Claim for Damages.] — Order XXXIII. rule 11 of the County Court Rules, 1914, which prohibits a claim for damages in a remitted interpleader issue, is not ultra vires, having regard to the County Courts Act, 1888, ss. 157 and 164. Salbstein v. Isaacs & Sons, Lim., 85 L. J. K.B. 109; 60 S. J. 106—D.

Quære, per Lush, J.—Whether Order XXVII. rule 8, under which a claim for damages by the claimant against the execution creditor or the high bailiff in interpleader proceedings in the County Court must be made in those proceedings, applies to a claim against a stranger to the proceedings: for example, the solicitor of the execution creditor who gives instructions for the seizure of the goods, and whether a claim for damages against the latter can therefore be brought by the claimant independently of the interpleader proceedings. Ib.

Scale of Costs.]—By Order LIII. rule 15 of the County Court Rules, 1903 and 1914, "The 'subject matter' in an interpleader proceeding shall mean (1) in the case of a claimant the amount of the value of the goods his claim to which is allowed, plus the amount of the damage (if any) adjudged, . . ." :—Held, that the above rule applies to all interpleader proceedings in the County Court, and that therefore the value of the goods seized, and not the amount paid into Court, determines the scale on which the costs of a successful claimant must be taxed. Brown v. Lilley (7 T. L. R. 427) discussed and held not to be good law now. Tarry v. Witt, 84 L. J. K.B. 950; 112 L. T. 1034; 31 T. L. R. 207—D.

7. New Trial.

See also Vol. IV. 962, 2104.

Action under 2*l.* Heard by Registrar — Jurisdiction.] — A County Court Judge has jurisdiction under section 93 of the County Courts Act, 1888, to entertain an application for a new trial in a matter heard before the Registrar of the County Court sitting by virtue of the powers conferred by section 92 of the Act. Rosin v. Rank, 81 L. J. K.B. 854; [1912] 2 K.B. 228; 106 L. T. 986; 56 S. J. 597; 28 T. L. R. 449—D.

Verdict for Plaintiff—Power of County Court Judge to Grant New Trial on Ground of No Evidence.]—A County Court Judge who has entered judgment for the plaintiff on a verdict of the jury in his favour, has no power to grant a new trial on the ground that there was no evidence to go to the jury. Clarke v. West Ham Corporation, 83 L. J. K.B. 1306; [1914] 2 K.B. 448; 110 L. T. 1007; 78 J. P. 309; 12 L. G. R. 744; 58 S. J. 496; 30 T. L. R. 389—D.

Trial by Jury—Intimation by Jury During Defendant's Case that they had Heard Enough Evidence—Verdict for Plaintiff—Misconduct of Jury.]—An action was brought by the plaintiff, who was the tenant to the defendants of certain premises, for interfering with his water supply. The defence was that the shortage of water was not due to any defect in the supply, but to the waste of the water by the plaintiff. The plaintiff's case having been closed, three witnesses were called for the defendants to prove the defence alleged. The jury then interposed and said that they had heard enough evidence of that class, and asked that the defendants' expert might be called. Thereupon the defendants' counsel, thinking that the jury were in his favour, although he had six other witnesses to the facts in dispute in Court, called his expert and closed his case. The jury returned a verdict for the plaintiff. The learned Judge, upon the application of the defendants, granted a new trial upon the ground of misconduct on the part of the jury :—Held, that the intimation of the jury having misled the defendants' counsel and also the learned Judge as to the view which they took of the case, there were materials upon which he was entitled to order a new trial upon the ground that the jury had misconducted themselves and had procured a miscarriage of justice; and that, as the exercise of his discretion in ordering a new trial was based upon proper materials, no appeal lay from his decision. Biggs v. Evans, 106 L. T. 796—D.

8. Costs.

See also Vol. IV. 964, 2104.

Discretion.]—A County Court Judge has a discretion to deprive a successful defendant of costs where he has been party to a transaction that is held to be contrary to public policy. Dann v. Curzon, 104 L. T. 66; 27 T. L. R. 163—D.

Scale.]—The plaintiffs commenced an action in the High Court claiming to recover 130*l.* 10*s.* 10*d.* After the writ was issued the defendant paid into Court the sum of 98*l.* 7*s.* 6*d.*, and the action was then remitted to the County Court. In that Court the plaintiffs claimed 32*l.* 3*s.* 4*d.*, but the defendant denied all liability. The County Court Judge gave judgment for the plaintiffs for 16*l.*, which amount, added to the amount recovered in the High Court, would have entitled the plaintiffs to costs upon scale in the County Court; but the Judge only allowed the plaintiffs costs on Scale A, on the ground that the evidence given by the plaintiffs' managing director was not satisfactory :—Held, that the County Court Judge was not entitled upon this ground to deprive the plaintiffs of their costs on the proper scale. Hudsons. Lim. v. De Halfort, 108 L. T. 416; 29 T. L. R. 257—D.

Judgment for Part of Claim under Order XIV. — Judgment for Defendant in County Court — Costs of Proceedings under Order XIV. — Discretion of County Court Judge.]—In an action founded on contract, brought in the High Court, the plaintiffs took out a summons for judgment under Order XIV. An order was made on the summons that if the defendant did not pay to the plaintiffs within two days the sum of 3*l.* they should be at liberty to sign final judgment for that amount; that the defendant should have liberty to defend the action as to the residue of the claim; and that the action should be tried in the County Court. The defendant paid the sum of 3*l.* in conformity with the order, and at the trial the County Court Judge gave judgment for him with costs on Scale B. Upon taxation of the defendant's costs, the Registrar allowed him certain items relating to the proceedings in the High Court under Order XIV., and the Judge upheld the taxation :—Held, that the costs in question were in the discretion of the County Court Judge, and that he had jurisdiction to allow them to the defendant. Mentors, Lim. v. Evans, 81 L. J. K.B. 1111; [1912] 3 K.B. 174; 107 L. T. 82; 56 S. J. 502—C.A.

Taxation—Limitations of Actions and Costs Act, 1842—Indemnity as to Costs Incurred "in and about any action."]—Where an action is brought in the County Court for a matter in respect of which the plaintiff, if successful, is entitled under the Limitations of Actions and Costs, Act, 1842, to receive a "full and reasonable indemnity as to all costs, charges, and expenses incurred in and about any action," the plaintiff's costs, so far as they are incurred "in the action," ought to be taxed according to the County Court scale; but the plaintiff is further entitled, under the indemnity against costs incurred "about the action," to recover all costs reasonably incurred by him as preliminary to the action, including the costs of taking counsel's opinion as to whether the action would lie. House Property Co. of London v. Whiteman, 82 L. J. K.B. 887; [1913] 2 K.B. 382; 109 L. T. 43; 77 J. P. 319—D.

Claim and Counterclaim—Both Parties Successful — Taxation.] — In an action in the County Court, where the plaintiff succeeds on the claim and the defendant on the counter-claim, each claim, for the purpose of taxation of costs, must be treated as a separate action, and each item of costs allowed in each action, according to the scale applicable to the amount therein recovered, must be divided into the part referable to the prosecution of the claim and counterclaim respectively and the part referable to the resisting of the counterclaim and claim respectively, each party paying to the other that part as to which he is unsuccessful. Fox v. Central Silkstone Collieries, 81 L. J. K.B. 989; [1912] 2 K.B. 597; 107 L. T. 85; 56 S. J. 634—D.

Payment into Court Admitting Liability but Denying Damage.]—See Munday, Lim. v. London County Council, supra, 3. PAYMENT INTO COURT.

Taxation Between Party and Party—Fees to Two Counsel.]—On a taxation between party and party in the County Court fees to two counsel cannot be allowed except in proceedings under the Rivers Pollution Prevention Acts, which are specially dealt with by Order LIII. rule 45 (2) (b). Bates v. Gordon Hotels, Lim., 82 L. J. K.B. 441; [1913] 1 K.B. 631; 108 L. T. 510; 57 S. J. 303; 29 T. L. R. 298—D.

On a party and party taxation in the County Court in a case not under the Rivers Pollution Prevention Acts, the Registrar allowed fees to two counsel, and the County Court Judge refused to review his taxation in this respect. The plaintiffs, who were unsuccessful in the County Court, appealed and specifically objected to two items only—namely, the brief fee allowed to senior counsel for the defendants and the fee to him for a conference. The Divisional Court having held that there was no jurisdiction to allow fees to two counsel, the defendants applied to have the case remitted to the County Court to allow the Registrar to exercise his discretion as to the proper fee to allow to one counsel only :—Held, that as the plaintiffs had only objected to the specific items, and the defendants had not carried in cross-objections, the Court could not send the case back to the County Court, but could only allow the appeal simpliciter. Ib.

Costs of Taxation — Registrar of County Court—Practising Solicitor—Successful Defendant in Action in his own Court—Appearance in Person—Taxation by Himself of his Bill of Costs—Right to Costs as Solicitor.]—A Registrar of a County Court, a practising solicitor, was sued by a company in his own Court for negligence in his capacity as Registrar and high bailiff. He defended in person, but was represented by counsel at the hearing, and judgment was given in his favour with costs. He brought in his bill of costs for taxation, and gave notice of a taxation before himself. On the taxation, which was attended by the plaintiffs' solicitor under protest, the defendant disallowed certain items. The County Court Judge, on the plaintiffs' application, reviewed the taxation and struck off certain other items. The Divisional Court, in dismissing an appeal by the plaintiffs, decided (80 L. J. K.B. 232; [1911] 1 K.B. 87) that section 41 of the County Courts Act, 1888, which provides that no Registrar of any Court shall be engaged as solicitor for any party in any proceeding in his Court, did not debar the defendant from appearing in person to defend himself; that he was entitled to the same costs as if he had employed a solicitor, except in respect to items which the fact of his acting directly rendered unnecessary; that as the plaintiffs, although by section 43 of the Act they had a choice of Courts, had elected to sue the defendant in his own Court, and as section 118 requires all costs to be taxed by the Registrar of the Court in which they were incurred, the defendant was of necessity the officer to tax his own bill of costs; and that the County Court Judge had not taxed on a wrong principle :—Held, by the Court of Appeal, approving of the judgment of the Divisional Court, that the only person who could tax the defendant's costs was of necessity the defendant himself; that his costs as solicitor defendant had been rightly taxed in accordance with the County Court Rules, 1903-1908, Order LIII. rule 25; and, further, that after what had taken place in the County Court and in the Divisional Court it was not open to the plaintiffs to object to the jurisdiction of the Registrar to tax the costs. Tolputt v. Mole, 80 L. J. K.B. 686; [1911] 1 K.B. 836; 104 L. T. 148; 55 S. J. 293—C.A.

Order for Costs—"Judgment."]—An order for costs is a "judgment" within the meaning of Order XXXII. rule 2 of the County Court Rules. Cowern v. Nield [1914] W. N. 349—D.

F. APPEAL.

See also Vol. IV. 968, 2109.

No Request to Judge to take Note—No Note taken — Point of Law taken by Judge.] — A County Court Judge raised a point of law himself at a trial, heard some discussion and some authorities cited on the matter, and came to a conclusion contrary to the opinion he had first expressed :—Held, that, for the purposes of an appeal, the point of law had been raised at the trial. Abrahams v. Dimmock, 84 L. J. K.B. 802; [1915] 1 K.B. 662; 112 L. T. 386; 59 S. J. 188; 31 T. L. R. 87—C.A.

It is not a condition precedent to an appeal under section 120 of the County Courts Act, 1888, that the Judge should have taken a note of the point of law raised, or that he should have been requested to take the note, or, if he has not taken a note, that he should certify to that effect. The Court, where the Judge has not taken a note, has, under Order LIX. rule 8, power to determine the appeal on the materials that it deems sufficient. Cook v. Gordon (61 L. J. Q.B. 445) considered. Ib.

Special Defence to Jurisdiction — Point of Law not taken at Hearing.]—Every question of law upon which it is desired to appeal from a County Court must be raised at the trial, and this rule applies when the ground of appeal is that the jurisdiction of the County Court has been ousted by statute. Taylor v. National Amalgamated Approved Society, 83 L. J. K.B. 1020; [1914] 2 K.B. 352; 110 L. T. 696; 78 J. P. 254; 12 L. G. R. 525—D.

Section 67, sub-section 1 of the National Insurance Act, 1911, provides that every dispute between an approved society and an insured person who is a member of such society relating to anything done or omitted to be done by such person or society shall be decided in accordance with the rules of the society subject to appeal to the Insurance Commissioners. Section 27 of the National Insurance Act, 1913, provides that any dispute between an approved society and any person as to whether that person is or was at any date a member of that society shall be decided in like manner as a dispute between an approved society and an insured person who is a member thereof, and section 67 of the Act of 1911 is to apply accordingly. By rule 43 of the defendant society disputes between insured members and the society were to be decided by arbitration. The plaintiff claimed to be a member of the defendant society and entitled as such member to a sum of money under a contract of insurance with them, but they denied that he was a member. He accordingly brought an action in the County Court. The defendants gave notice of a special defence under section 67, sub-section 1 of the National Insurance Act, 1911, to the effect that the Court had no jurisdiction to try the case, and asking that the claim should be referred to arbitration in accordance with the rules of their society. The objection to jurisdiction under section 27 of the Act of 1913 was not, however, taken at the hearing. The County Court Judge decided in favour of the plaintiff, holding that section 67 of the Act of 1911 applied only to disputes between the society and persons who were admittedly members, and did not apply to a case where the real dispute was whether the claimant was a member of the society or not. The defendants appealed on the ground (inter alia) that the jurisdiction of the County Court was ousted by section 27 of the Act of 1913 :—Held, that, although the matter was one touching the jurisdiction of the County Court, as the objection was not taken at the hearing it could not be raised by way of appeal. Smith v. Baker (60 L. J. Q.B. 683; [1891] A.C. 325) followed. Ib.

Claim Exceeding Two Pounds Heard by Registrar by Consent of Parties.]—The Registrar of a County Court purported to sit as deputy for the County Court Judge, at the request of the Judge and with the consent of the parties, in order to hear and determine a claim for the sum of three guineas :—Held, that no appeal lay from his decision. McInally v. Blackledge, 80 L. J. K.B 882; [1911] 2 K.B. 432; 104 L. T. 642—D.

Compensation for Injuries by Accident — Order for Detention of Ship.]—No appeal lies directly to the Court of Appeal from an order for the detention of a ship made by a County Court Judge under section 11 of the Workmen's Compensation Act, 1906 :—So held by Cozens-Hardy, M.R., and Fletcher Moulton, L.J.; Farwell, L.J., dissenting. Panagotis v. "Pontiac" (Owners), 56 S. J. 71; 28 T. L. R. 63—C.A.

Right to Appeal Without Leave—Action for Damages for Trespass not Exceeding 20*l.* and an Injunction — Claim for Injunction Withdrawn.] — The plaintiff claimed 20*l.* damages for trespass to a party wall, and a mandatory injunction to remove the building erected by the defendant upon the party wall. At the hearing before the County Court Judge the plaintiff withdrew the claim for an injunction after the Judge had intimated that he never granted mandatory injunctions, and judgment was entered for the plaintiff for 15*l.* damages. The defendant appealed without having obtained the leave of the County Court Judge :—Held, that the proviso to section 120 of the County Courts Act, 1888, prohibiting an appeal without the leave of the County Court Judge in an action where the debt or damage claimed does not exceed 20*l.*, except where the title to a corporeal or incorporeal hereditament has come into question, only applies where the claim is solely one for debt or damage which does not exceed 20*l.*, and that it does not apply where an injunction is claimed in the particulars of claim, even though such claim is subsequently withdrawn. Dixon v. Brown, 84 L. J. K.B. 1248; [1915] 2 K.B. 294; 112 L. T. 1033—D.

Refusal to Nonsuit—Evidence Subsequently Given for Defendant—Appeal by Defendant—Right of Court to Consider Appeal on all the Evidence.]—A County Court Judge refused, at the close of the plaintiff's case, the defendant's application for a nonsuit on the ground of no evidence. The defendants then called evidence, judgment being eventually given for the plaintiff. The defendants appealed, and contended that the Court could not consider the appeal on the whole of the evidence, but only the question whether the nonsuit had been rightly refused :—Held, that the Court could decide the case on the whole of the evidence, and that on the evidence given by both parties in the present case the appeal should be allowed. Great Western Railway v. Rimell (27 L. J. C.P. 201; sub nom. Great Northern Railway v. Rimell, 18 C.B. 575), considered. Groves v. Cheltenham and East Gloucestershire Building Society, 82 L. J. K.B. 664; [1913] 2 K.B. 100; 108 L. Judges Differing in Opinion.]—Where on an appeal to the Divisional Court from a County Court the Judges differ in opinion, it is in the discretion of the junior Judge to withdraw his judgment. Poulton v. Moore, 83 L. Hearing in Absence of Respondent—Judgment — Jurisdiction to Re-hear Appeal.] — Where a Divisional Court has heard an appeal from a County Court in the absence of the respondent and has given judgment for the appellant, the Court has no jurisdiction, after the judgment has been drawn up and perfected, to reinstate and re-hear the appeal. Hession v. Jones, 83 L. J. K.B. 810; [1914] 2 K.B. 421; 110 L. T. 773; 30 T. L. R. 320—D.

Appeal by Next Friend of Infant—Security for Costs.]—An infant plaintiff by her next friend brought an action in the County Court under the Employers' Liability Act, 1880, when judgment was given for the defendants. The plaintiff by her next friend gave notice of appeal, and the defendants applied to the Divisional Court for an order for security for costs, giving evidence on affidavit that the next friend would be unable, if unsuccessful, to pay the defendants' costs. Counsel for the plaintiff contended that the Court should look into the merits, and, if they thought there were reasonable grounds for the appeal, should not order security. The Court, following Swain v. Follows & Bate, Lim. (56 L. J. Q.B. 310; 18 Q.B. D. 585), without examining into the merits, made an order for security for costs. Wilcox v. Wallis Crown Cork and Syphon Co., 58 S. J. 381—D.

Repugnancy — Words Negativing Personal Liability of Covenantors—Rejection of Repugnant Words — Limitation of Personal Liability.]—A., holding as executor of P. an undivided share of certain houses which had been mortgaged to secure 2,000*l.* and interest, conveyed and released the share to B., C., D., and E. (who held the other undivided share as trustees of H.), subject to the mortgage. By the deed of conveyance B., C., D., and E., "as such trustees, but not so as to create any personal liability on the part of them or either of them," covenanted with A. to pay the 2,000*l.* and interest and to keep him indemnified from all claims on account thereof. The mortgagees subsequently sold the houses for less than the sums due to them, and they demanded the deficiency from A., who paid it to them after notice to B., C., D., and E., and then claimed repayment of it from B., C., D., and E. :—Held, that as the words in the covenant with reference to the personal liability of the covenantors would, if given effect to, destroy and not merely qualify any personal liability under the covenant, they were repugnant to the covenant, and must be rejected, and that therefore B., C., D., and E. were personally liable under the covenant to repay to A. the moneys he had paid to the mortgagees. Watling v. Lewis, 80 L. Joint and Several Covenants—Lessee Covenanting with Himself and Others—Invalidity of Covenants—Covenants Running with Land—Assignees not Bound.]—A covenant by one with himself and others jointly is void. Therefore, if a lessee purports to covenant with himself and other lessors jointly, although the covenant if valid is of such a kind as to run with the land, yet an assignee of the term is not bound in law or in equity. Ellis v. Kerr (79 L. Performance Rendered Impossible by Acts of Covenantees — Lapse of Time.] — By an agreement, made in 1788, the defendants covenanted to maintain and keep in good repair a drain or culvert, used for draining a meadow belonging to the plaintiffs. In 1843 the plaintiffs had a new culvert made for draining the meadow, since when, until the commencement of this action, they had not called on the defendants to perform the covenant. As the result of work done in 1901 by the local authority, at the request and expense of the plaintiffs, the original culvert was entirely blocked up, and could not be reinstated:—Held, that the plaintiffs were not entitled to a declaration that the defendants were liable under the agreement. Worcester College, Oxford, v. Oxford Canal Navigation, 81 L. CRIMINAL INFORMATION.

Assault.]—The Court declined to grant a rule for a criminal information against a superintendent of police, being of opinion—first, that the affidavits did not establish any personal connection of the superintendent with assaults alleged to have been committed by police officers under his control; and secondly, that, as there was nothing to shew that ordinary proceedings for assault would be an insufficient remedy, there was no prima facie case made out for the granting of a criminal information. Bowen, Ex parte, 27 T. Insanity — Uncontrollable Homicidal Impulse.]—Where the prisoner knew the nature and quality of his act, and knew that it was wrong, but through disease of the mind was unable to control a homicidal impulse, he was found to be insane, so as not to be responsible, according to law, for his actions at the time when the act was done. Rex v. Hay, 75 J. P. 480; 22 Cox C.C. 268—Darling, J.

—— Murder—Defence of Insanity—Direction to Jury.]—On a trial for murder, where the defence is insanity, the prisoner must be presumed to be sane and possessed of sufficient reason to be conscious of his crime unless he establishes the contrary and proves that he was suffering from such a disease of the mind as to be unconscious of the nature and quality of his act, or if so conscious, not to be conscious of the difference between right and wrong. Rex v. Coelho, 30 T. L. R. 535—C.C.A.

It is not sufficient in all cases where the defence is "insanity" to direct the jury that they should consider merely whether the prisoner at the time of the commission of the act charged knew the nature and quality of his act, and whether or not he was doing wrong. Rex v. Fryer, 24 Cox C.C. 403—Bray, J.

They may be directed to consider further whether he was in such a state of mental disease or natural mental infirmity as to deprive him of the capacity to control his actions. Ib.

—— Medical Evidence as to Sanity of Prisoner —Time when such Evidence may be Given.]—On the trial of the appellant it was indicated by his counsel in cross-examination that the defence of insanity was to be set up, but while the case for the Crown was still proceeding it was ascertained that no evidence would be called for the defence. At the end of the case for the Crown a medical witness was called to say that the prisoner was sane:—Held, that such evidence was properly given at the time it was. Rex v. Abramovitch, 76 J. P. 287; 23 Cox C.C. 179—C.C.A.

—— Mental Deficiency—Recommendation to Mercy.] — Evidence of mental deficiency accepted by a jury does not necessarily entitle them to return a special verdict on the ground of insanity. Rex v. Alexander, 109 L. T. 745; 23 Cox C.C. 604—C.C.A.

II. DEGREES OF CRIMINALITY.

Common Purpose—Shooting with Intent to Murder—Two Night Poachers—Shot Fired by One of the Poachers.] — The appellant and another man were engaged in night poaching, one of them having a gun and the other a stick. Finding that they were followed by three keepers, the two men turned round, one of them saying "Stand back, stand back," and the other, putting the stick that he was carrying on his shoulder, continued to retire facing the keepers. One of the keepers then ran forward to the poacher who carried the gun; the other two ran towards the poacher with the stick. The poacher with the gun fired at one of the keepers, injuring him seriously. On the trial of the two poachers for shooting with intent to murder, the jury found both prisoners guilty; they said they were unable to say which of the two fired the shot, but that they were agreed that the intention was to prevent arrest at all costs, even to the extent of murder, and that the prisoners were acting with a common purpose. No evidence was offered by the prosecution of any actual arrangement made between the prisoners to act with a common purpose other than their actions and conduct when they became aware of the keepers approaching them: —Held, that the jury could infer the common purpose from the actions and gestures of the prisoners. Rex v. Pridmore, 77 J. P. 339; 29 T. L. R. 330—C.C.A.

Accessory before the Fact — Burglarious Entering—Special Verdict.]—The appellant and one King were convicted of burglariously entering a dwelling house, the jury having found in the case of the appellant that he had handed a jemmy to King with the knowledge that it was wanted for a burglary, though he did not know that it was wanted for this particular burglary:—Held, that on this finding the appellant was not an accessory before the fact to the burglary, and therefore his conviction must be quashed. Rex v. Lomas, 110 L. T. 239; 78 J. P. 152; 23 Cox C.C. 765; 58 S. J. 220; 30 T. L. R. 125—C.C.A.

Accessory after the Fact — "Receive, harbour, and maintain" Principal Felon — Evidence.]—The appellant was charged, as an accessory after the fact, in an indictment which alleged that she did feloniously "receive, harbour, and maintain" one G., who was charged with the felonious possession of a mould for coining counterfeit money. There was evidence that the appellant, a day or two after G.'s arrest, for the purpose of preventing his conviction, removed from G.'s workshop a number of fragments of other coining moulds, which were adducible, and were in fact produced, in evidence against G. The jury were directed that if they were satisfied that the appellant removed the things from G.'s workshop knowing that he was guilty of committing the felony charged against him, and did so for the purpose of assisting him to escape conviction, they should find her guilty. The jury having convicted the appellant.—Held, that the indictment properly charged the appellant as an accessory after the fact, and that the conviction was right. Rex v. Lery, 81 L. J. K.B. 264; [1912] 1 K.B. 158; 106 L. T. 192; 76 J. P. 123; 22 Cox C.C. 702; 28 T. L. R. 93—C.C.A.

Felony—Cause of Action—Stay of Proceedings until Defendant Prosecuted.]—An action for damages based upon a felonious act on the part of the defendant committed against the plaintiff is not maintainable so long as the defendant has not been prosecuted or a reasonable excuse shewn for his not having been prosecuted, and the proper course for the Court to adopt in such a case is to stay further proceedings in the action until the defendant has been prosecuted. Smith v. Selwyn, 83 L. C. PARTICULAR OFFENCES.

I. AGAINST PROPERTY OF INDIVIDUALS.

A. BURGLARY AND HOUSEBREAKING.

See also Vol. IV. 1158, 2128.

Entering Premises by Opening Door with False Key — Knowledge of Occupier — "Breaking."]—The appellant induced a pawnbroker's assistant to let him have the key of his employer's shop. Having obtained the key, the appellant took an impression of it, and from it had a false key made with which he opened the outer door of and entered the shop, intending to steal therein. The pawnbroker's assistant, in allowing the appellant to have the key, was acting with the knowledge of the police and of the pawnbroker in order to secure the arrest of the appellant. The appellant having been convicted of breaking and entering the shop with intent to steal therein,—Held, that the conviction was right, inasmuch as there was a breaking into the shop against the will of the pawnbroker, notwithstanding that the latter, though his assistant, had, with the object of securing the appellant's arrest, furnished the means whereby the appellant had obtained admittance to the premises. Reg. v. Johnson (Car. & M. 218) distinguished. Rex v. Chandler, 82 L. J. K.B. 106; [1913] 1 K.B. 125; 108 L. T. 352; 77 J. P. 80; 23 Cox C.C. 330; 57 S. J. 160; 29 T. L. R. 83—C.C.A.

Breaking into Dwelling House—Intent.]—The appellant was indicted under section 57 of the Larceny Act, 1851, for having broken into a house with intent to commit a felony therein. There was ample evidence that the appellant broke and entered the house. In summing up to the jury the Recorder said, "When a man is found in another man's house the duty is cast upon him of giving an account of how he came there; and it is for you to say whether his statement sounds like an honest statement, or whether it is a dishonest statement made up on the spur of the moment when he is caught." The appellant was convicted:—Held, that the statement by the Recorder in his summing-up was to be taken, not as a direction of law and a statement as to the onus of proof, but as merely a statement of common sense as to what would be expected of a man found in such circumstances; and therefore that there had been no misdirection. Rex v. Wood, 76 J. P. 103—C.C.A.

Possession of Housebreaking Implements by Night—Tools of Prisoner's Trade—Lawful Excuse — Onus of Proof.]—It is a lawful excuse within the meaning of section 58 of the Larceny Act, 1861, on a charge of being in possession of housebreaking implements by night, that the implements in question were the tools of the trade followed by the prisoner, and his own property. If, however, other circumstances are proved in evidence from which it is open to the jury to infer that he intended to use the tools for a felonious purpose, they may properly convict him. Rex v. Ward, [1915] 3 K.B. 696; 60 S. J. 27—C.C.A.

B. False Pretences.

See also Vol. IV. 1211, 2130.

Attempt to Obtain Money by False Pretences—Insurance against Burglary—Intention to Defraud—Pretended Burglary—No Application for Insurance Moneys — Preparation to Commit Offence not an Attempt.]—A jeweller, with the intention of defrauding underwriters with whom he was insured against burglary, represented to a police sergeant that a burglary had taken place upon his premises, and that he had been robbed of 1,500*l.* worth of jewellery. For the purpose of carrying out his scheme he had secreted the jewellery on his premises, and was found by the police sergeant tied up in his shop as if by burglars. He had made no application for the insurance moneys, but was convicted of the offence of attempting to obtain them by false pretences :—Held, that there was no attempt to commit the offence, but only a preparation for the commission thereof, and that the conviction must be quashed. Dictum of Parke, B., in Reg. v. Eagleton (24 L. J. M.C. 158, 166; Dear C.C. 515, 538) approved and followed. Rex v. Robinson, 84 L. J. K.B. 1149; [1915] 2 K.B. 342; 113 L. T. 379; 79 J. P. 303; 59 S. J. 366; 31 T. L. R. 313—C.C.A.

Effect of False Pretences on Mind of Prosecutor.]—It is not an essential element in the offence of attempting to obtain goods by false pretences that the mind of the prosecutor shall have been affected by the false pretences. Rex v. Light, 84 L. J. K.B. 865; 112 L. T. 1144; 59 S. J. 351; 31 T. L. R. 257—C.C.A.

Persons Acting Together—Money Obtained.]—If money is obtained as the result of a false pretence made by two persons acting together, both are liable to be convicted of obtaining money by false pretences. Rex v. Grosvenor, 111 L. T. 1116; 24 Cox C.C. 468—C.C.A.

By Conduct — False Representation — Assent.]—If a person tacitly assents to a false representation made by another, in consequence of which money is obtained, he may be guilty of false pretences by conduct. Rex v. Grosvenor, 111 L. T. 1116; 24 Cox C.C. 468—C.C.A.

Credit—Fraud other than False Pretences—Intent to Defraud.]—If a man makes statements of fact which he knows to be untrue, and makes them for the purpose of inducing persons to deposit with him money which he knows they would not deposit but for their belief in the truth of his statements, and if he intends to use the money so obtained for purposes different from those for which he knows the depositors understand from his statements that he intends to use it—then, although he may intend to repay the money if he can, and although he may honestly believe, and may even have good reason to believe, that he will be able to repay it, he has an intent to defraud. Rex v. Carpenter, 76 J. P. 158; 22 Cox C.C. 618—Channell, J.

Continuing False Pretence—Question as to False Pretences or Obtaining Credit.]—Though goods are obtained under a contract, if the contract is induced by a false pretence, and the false pretence is a continuing one and operates on the mind of the prosecutor, the goods so obtained are obtained by false pretences. The question of how long the false pretences continue to operate is for the jury. Reg. v. Martin (36 L. J. M.C. 20; L. R. 1 C.C.R. 56) followed. Reg. v. Moreton, 109 L. T. 417; 23 Cox C.C. 560—C.C.A.

Representations as to Price of Property Sold —Materiality of Evidence as to Value.]—On a charge of obtaining money by false pretences, the question whether evidence as to the value of the property, in respect of which false pretences are made, is or is not material to the charge must be decided according to the circumstances of each case; the general test to be applied is whether the prosecutor was induced by deceit to act to his injury. Dictum of Buckley, J., in London and Globe Finance Corporation, In re (72 L. J. Ch. 368; [1903] 1 Ch. 728), cited with approval. Rex v. Newton, 109 L. T. 747; 23 Cox C.C. 609—C.C.A.

Evidence—Proof of other Fraudulent Transactions—Admissibility.]—Upon the trial of an indictment charging the prisoner with having obtained goods and credit by false pretences, and also with having obtained credit by fraud other than false pretences, evidence was admitted that, on two previous occasions, the prisoner had obtained goods from other persons on credit by false pretences. The jury having convicted the prisoner,—Held, that evidence of the previous frauds by the prisoner was inadmissible as it did not tend to shew that he was guilty of the offences charged in the indictment, and that the conviction must therefore be quashed. Rex v. Fisher, 79 L. J. K.B. 187; [1910] 1 K.B. 149; 102 L. T. 111; 74 J. P. 101; 22 Cox C.C. 270; 26 T. L. R. 122—C.C.A.

False Pretence that Defendant was Carrying on a Genuine Business—Evidence—Receipts for Payments made by Defendant—Banker's Pass Books—Admissibility.]—Upon an indictment charging the defendant with obtaining goods by false pretences, the issue at the trial was whether he was, at the time of the alleged offence, carrying on a genuine and bona fide business :—Held, that receipts given to him by firms who had sold him goods were relevant to the issue and admissible in evidence on his behalf. Held, further, that entries in the defendant's banker's pass books shewing payments made by him were also relevant, and were properly receivable in evidence. Rex v. Sagar, 84 L. J. K.B. 303; [1914] 3 K.B. 1112; 112 L. T. 135; 79 J. P. 32—C.C.A.

Advertisement for Sale of Pigs—Leave Given to Call Further Evidence.]—An indictment for false pretences in connection with the sale of pigs alleged (in effect) that the appellant falsely pretended that he was carrying on a bona fide business as a pig dealer; that he had a certain class of pigs for sale; and that he was then able to supply the prosecutor with pigs of a specified age and description. On the hearing of the appeal, leave was given to call additional evidence (which was accepted by the Court) that, in accordance with custom, pigs sold by the appellant were delivered direct by the farmers to his customers :—Held, that the fact of the appellant not having then in his possession the pigs advertised by him for sale was not in itself sufficient to establish the false pretences alleged in the indictment. Rex v. Jakeman, 110 L. T. 832; 24 Cox C.C. 153—C.C.A.

C. Falsification of Accounts.

Falsifying Motor-Cab Taximeter—Taximeter not in Operation during Journey.] — The prisoner was the driver of a motor cab belonging to a motor cab company. According to the ordinary practice of the company, upon a driver's applying at the office a cab was allotted to him, and he received a taximeter sheet. When he returned to the yard the taximeter clerk took the readings of the taximeter which were entered upon the driver's sheet, and after the clerk had made up the account the driver signed the sheet. The driver was required to hand over 75 per cent. of his takings to the company and was allowed to retain 25 per cent. On four different days the prisoner drove two persons in the motor cab and was paid a fare. During these journeys he kept the flag up and the taximeter was not therefore in operation. Upon an indictment under section 1 of the Falsification of Accounts Act, 1875, charging that the prisoner, being a servant to the company, unlawfully made a false entry in a certain account, to wit, a taximeter attached to a motor cab, the prisoner was convicted :—Held, that the section applied to the falsification of a mechanical contrivance for recording the amount of money received, such as a taximeter, and that the prisoner was therefore properly convicted. Rex v. Solomons, 79 L. J. K.B. 8; [1909] 2 K.B. 980; 101 L. T. 496; 73 J. P. 467; 22 Cox C.C. 178; 25 T. L. R. 747—C.C.A.

D. Forgery.

Bill of Exchange—Acceptance by Member of Firm—Acceptance in Name of Firm—Absence of Authority — Acceptance by Procuration — "Person."]—Upon an indictment under section 24 of the Forgery Act, 1861, charging the prisoner with having, with intent to defraud, written an acceptance to a bill of exchange in the name of a firm of which he was a member, the jury found that he had no authority to accept the bill in the firm's name, that he had no honest belief that he had such authority, and that he had an intent to defraud :—Held, that there had been an acceptance of the bill by the prisoner in the name of another person in a manner similar to an acceptance by procuration, and that he was properly convicted of the offence charged in the indictment. Rex v. Holden, 81 L. J. K.B. 327; [1912] 1 K.B. 483; 106 L. T. 305; 76 J. P. 143; 22 Cox C.C. 727; 56 S. J. 188; 28 T. L. R. 173—C.C.A.

Obtaining Money by "Forged instrument" —Letter by Servant Asking for Advance of Money for Benefit of Master — Business Letter.]—The prisoner pleaded guilty to an indictment under section 7 of the Forgery Act, 1913, charging him with obtaining certain money by means of "a certain forged instrument, to wit, a forged request for the payment of one pound." The document containing the request was a letter purporting to come from, and to be signed by, a man in the employment of the prosecutor, to whom the letter was addressed. This letter requested the prosecutor to hand to the bearer the sum of 1*l.*, stating that it was required for the purpose of hiring a drain machine to clear out a drain on premises belonging to the prosecutor. On a Case being stated,—Held, that the letter was an "instrument" within the meaning of section 7. Reg. v. Riley (65 L. J. M.C. 74; [1896] 1 Q.B. 309) followed. Rex v. Cade, 83 L. J. —— Letter with False Postmark.] — An envelope bearing a false postmark and containing a betting slip which purports to have been made out before the race to which it relates has been run, whereas in fact it has been made out after the race,—Held to be a "forged instrument" within section 38 of the Forgery Act, 1861. Rex v. Howse, 107 L. T. 239; 76 J. P. 151; 23 Cox C.C. 135; 56 S. J. 225; 28 T. L. R. 186—C.C.A.

Alteration of Names in Subpœna.]—Where a practitioner obtained subpœnas for the attendance of witnesses, and, finding that the witnesses could give no evidence, substituted other names in the subpœnas,—Held, that, though he had committed an irregularity, he had not been guilty of forgery. Taylor, In re, 81 L. J. P.C. 169; [1912] A.C. 347; 105 L. T. 973; 28 T. L. R. 206—P.C.

Selling Forged Stamps — Obliterated Stamps. —By section 13 of the Stamp Duties Management Act, 1891, "Every person who does, or causes or procures to be done . . . any of the acts following; that is to say . . (8) Knowingly sells or exposes for sale or utters or uses any forged stamp, or any stamp which has been fraudulently printed or impressed from a genuine die . . . shall be guilty of felony . . .": —Held, that the word "stamp" in the above section is used in its ordinary meaning, and includes a stamp which, at the time of the sale, has been obliterated. Rex v. Lowden, 83 L. J. K.B. 114; [1914] 1 K.B. 144; 109 L. T. 832; 78 J. P. 111; 23 Cox C.C. 643; 58 S. J. 157; 30 T. L. R. 70—C.C.A.

Larceny from the Person—Simple Larceny—Asportation.]—The prosecutor was on the platform of a railway station, when the prisoner came behind him, put his hand into his trousers pocket, took hold of his purse and pulled it up to the edge of the pocket, when the purse caught in a belt worn by the prosecutor, who then grasped the purse and put it back in his pocket. Upon an indictment charging the prisoner with larceny from the person and also with simple larceny,—Held, that there had been no sufficient asportation of the purse to constitute larceny from the person, but that the prisoner could be properly convicted of simple larceny. Rex v. Taylor, 80 L. J. K.B. 311; [1911] 1 K.B. 674; 75 J. P. 126; 27 T. L. R. 108—C.C.A.

Passing of Property.]—The appellant took two bicycles to an auctioneer and put them in for sale by auction at a reserve price of 2*l.* 3*s.* By a fraudulent arrangement between the appellant and one S., the latter was to bid the reserve price at the auction. S. did so bid, and the bicycles were knocked down to him, but he did not pay the price to the auctioneer. The appellant, taking advantage of the auctioneer's practice to pay over the money for which an article was sold at the auction before he received the money from the bidder, went to the auctioneer and obtained payment of the 2*l.* 3*s.* The appellant having been indicted for and convicted of larceny of the 2*l.* 3*s.*,—Held, that the conviction must be quashed, inasmuch as the auctioneer having intended to part not only with the possession of, but with the property in, the 2*l.* 3*s.*, the offence was not larceny. Semble, the offence committed was obtaining the money by false pretences. Rex v. Fisher, 103 L. Threat to Publish Attacks upon Commercial Company—Demand of Money to Avoid Publication.]—Section 45 of the Larceny Act, 1861, enacts that whosoever shall with menaces demand any money of any person, with intent to steal the same, shall be guilty of felony. The appellants, by their agent, threatened the chairman of a company that attacks upon the company would be published in a paper which would have the effect of reducing the market price of the shares of the company, and the agent demanded 600*l.* in gold as the price of refraining from publishing those attacks:—Held, that the appellants could properly be convicted of the offence of demanding money with menaces, with intent to steal the same. Rex v. Boyle, 83 L. J. K.B. 1801; [1914] 3 K.B. 339; 111 L. T. 638; 78 J. P. 390; 58 S. J. 673; 24 Cox C.C. 406; 30 T. L. R. 521—C.C.A.

Cheques—Evidence of Misappropriation of Proceeds—Direction to Jury.]—The appellant was indicted for the larceny as a servant of three cheques, drawn by his employers and made payable to him or order for the purpose of their being used in the discharge of their debts. For reasons of convenience the appellant had opened a private account, out of which he paid his employers' liabilities, recouping himself by paying into this private account moneys received on their behalf. He alleged that this practice was known to his employers, and that it was in pursuance thereof that he paid in the above-mentioned cheques. The employers proved facts shewing that the proceeds of these cheques had been misappropriated to the appellant's own use. In summing-up, the Recorder directed the jury that they must be satisfied that the appellant intended to and did deprive his employers of "these three sums":—Held, a misdirection, as the jury ought to have been told that they must be satisfied that the appellant had misappropriated the cheques themselves, and not the proceeds. Rex v. Hampton, 84 L. J. K.B. 1137; 113 L. T. 378—C.C.A.

Fixtures—Tenancy Agreement Entered into with Intention to Steal Fixtures.]—Where a person enters into an agreement for the lease of a house with the fraudulent intention of stealing the fixtures on getting into possession, and where in fact he steals the fixtures on entering into possession, he is guilty of larceny under section 31 of the Larceny Act, 1861. Rex v. Munday (2 Leach C.C. 991) followed. Rex v. Richards, 80 L. J. K.B. 174; [1911] 1 K.B. 260; 104 L. T. 48; 75 J. P. 144; 22 Cox C.C. 372—C.C.A.

—— Lead Fixed in or to a Building.]—Conviction of the appellant for the simple larceny of lead piping quashed on the ground that the facts given in evidence did not prove that offence, though they might prove an offence under section 31 of the Larceny Act, 1861, of stealing lead fixed in or to a building. Rex v. Molloy, 111 L. T. 166; 78 J. P. 216; 24 Cox C.C. 226—C.C.A.

Winkles—"Fish."]—Section 24 of the Larceny Act, 1861, enacts that "Whosoever shall unlawfully and wilfully take . . . any fish in any water . . . in which there shall be any private right of fishery " shall, on summary conviction, be liable to certain penalties : " Provided, that nothing hereinbefore contained shall extend to any person angling between the beginning of the last hour before sunrise and the expiration of the first hour after sunset; . . ." A corporation had a right of several fishery in a part of a tidal river. The appellant, at a time of low water, collected winkles from small pools of water left by the ebbing tide on mud banks of the river within the limits of the fishery :—Held, first, that the proviso in the section did not restrict the general words thereof to the offence of taking fish by angling, and that winkles were " fish " within the meaning of the section; and secondly, that there was evidence upon which the Justices could find that the pools from which the winkles were taken were " water " within the meaning of the section. Caygill v. Thwaite (49 J. Larceny of Wife's Property by Husband—" About to leave or desert his wife."]—If a man steals his wife's property, intending to leave or desert her when the theft is discovered, or at some other time convenient to himself, he steals the property when " about to leave or desert " his wife, although a considerable time may have elapsed between the act of larceny and actual desertion. Rex v. King (No. 1), 110 L. Person " Entrusted " — Person Having " Received " Property for or on Account of Another—Company.]—The appellant was convicted upon an indictment under section 1 of the Larceny Act, 1901, charging him with having fraudulently converted to his own use or benefit property entrusted to him for certain specified purposes, and property received by him for or on account of another person. The appellant alleged that the property had been " entrusted " to or " received " by a company of which he was a director :—Held, affirming the conviction, that a person may be " entrusted " with property, or may " receive " it " for or on account of " another person within the meaning of the section, notwithstanding that the property is not delivered to him directly by the owner, and that the owner does not know of his existence and has no intention of entrusting the property to him. If the accused has obtained or assumed the control of the property of another person under circumstances whereby he becomes entrusted, or whereby his receipt becomes a receipt for or on account of another person, and fraudulently converts it or the proceeds, he commits an offence within the section. Rex v. Grubb, 84 L. J. K.B. 1744; [1915] 2 K.B. 683; 113 L. T. 510; 79 J. P. 430; 59 S. J. 547; 31 T. L. R. 429—C.C.A.

Taxi-cab Driver — Agreement with Owner Respecting Hire of Cab — Failure to Pay to Owner Proportion of Cab Fares.]—The appellant, who was the driver of a taxi-cab, hired a taxi-cab upon the terms that he should pay 75 per cent. of the receipts to the owner of the cab and retain 25 per cent. on his own account. There was, however, no written contract between him and the owner of the cab, although the sheet which the appellant signed when he took the cab out shewed that the driver's proportion of the receipts was 25 per cent. and that the balance of the receipts was due from the driver to the owner. The appellant kept the taxi-cab out for seven days, and when it was returned to the owner's yard the meter registered the total receipts during that period as 8*l.* 4*s.* 8*d.*, of which sum the proportion due from him to the owner amounted to 6*l.* 3*s.* 6*d.* The appellant, having failed to pay that amount to the owner of the cab after a demand had been made upon him for payment, was arrested and charged under section 1 of the Larceny Act, 1901, with fraudulently misappropriating that sum :—Held, that there was evidence upon which the jury could find that the appellant had received the 6*l.* 3*s.* 6*d.* for and on behalf of the owner of the cab, and that he had unlawfully and fraudulently converted the same to his own use. Rex v. Messer, 82 L. Larceny by a Trick — Goods on Sale or Return — Power Given to Pass Property in Goods.]—Semble that, where the owner of an article is induced, by a false representation made by another with fraudulent intent that he has a customer who desires to purchase such an article, to deliver the article to that other on sale or return for the purpose of his endeavouring to get the supposed customer to buy it from him, the case is one not of larceny by a trick, but of obtaining goods by fraud. Whitehorn v. Davison, 80 L. J. K.B. 425; [1911] 1 K.B. 463; 104 L. T. 234—C.A.

—— Card Playing—Drugging of Prosecutor—Payment of Losses under Influence of Drug—Omission to Direct Jury—Misdirection.]—At the trial of an offence of larceny by a trick the jury should be fully directed as to the legal requisites of the offence. Rex v. Hilliard, 83 L. J. K.B. 439; 109 L. T. 750; 23 Cox C.C. 617—C.C.A.

The prosecutor and the appellant were fellow passengers in a compartment of a corridor carriage on a journey from Paddington Station. After getting into conversation with the appellant, the prosecutor, at the invitation of the appellant, drank some whisky (which he alleged was drugged) out of a bottle. Shortly afterwards a third man appeared and produced a pack of cards, and the prosecutor testified that at the suggestion of the appellant, and under the influence of the drug, he played cards with the third man and lost 10*l.* :—Held, that on the facts the jury could draw the inference that the appellant was guilty of the offence of larceny by a trick, but that as the summing-up did not contain a sufficient direction as to the legal requisites of the offence, there must be an acquittal. Reg. v. Buckmaster (57 L. J. M.C. 25, 27; 20 Q.B. D. 182, 187) approved and followed. Ib.

Taxi-cab Driver not Paying over Percentage of Takings.]—Conviction of the appellant, a taxi-cab driver, for misappropriating 6*l.* 3*s.* 6*d.* "had and received for and on account of" the taxi-cab owner, by failing to pay over 75 per cent. of his takings, according to the arrangement under which he took out the cab, affirmed. Rex v. Messer, 82 L. Treasurer of Friendly Society—Fraudulent Conversion of Funds—Prosecution—Sanction of Attorney-General.]—Before commencing a prosecution against a person for fraudulent conversion of property entrusted to him for a specific purpose, it is not necessary to obtain the sanction of the Attorney-General unless he is a trustee, technically so-called, appointed under a deed or will. Rex v. Davies (No. 1), 82 L. J. K.B. 471; [1913] 1 K.B. 573; 108 L. T. 576; 77 J. P. 279; 23 Cox C.C. 351; 57 S. J. 376; 29 T. L. R. 300—C.C.A.

Quære, whether the sanction is necessary in the case of a trustee, technically so-called, appointed by an instrument in writing other than a deed or will. Ib.

Two Distinct Acts of Larceny—Joinder of Two Accused Persons in Second Count.] — Section 5 of the Larceny Act, 1861, which provides that "It shall be lawful to insert several counts in the same indictment against the same person for any number of distinct acts of stealing, not exceeding three, which may have been committed by him against the same person within the space of six months from the first to the last of such acts," does not authorise the joinder of a count against one person with a second count against him and another person. If such a joinder has been made, and objection has been duly taken thereto at the trial, the Court cannot treat the case as coming within the proviso to section 4 of the Criminal Appeal Act, 1907, and therefore will quash the conviction on such an indictment. Rex v. Edwards (or Gilbert), 82 L. J. K.B. 347; [1913] 1 K.B. 287; 108 L. T. 815; 77 J. P. 135; 23 Cox C.C. 380; 57 S. J. 187; 29 T. L. R. 181—C.C.A.

Fraudulent Misappropriation of Property—Act First Disclosed by Voluntary Witness in Court of Law—"Compulsory process"—Protection from Prosecution.]—Section 85 of the Larceny Act, 1861, provides that no person shall be entitled to refuse to answer any question in any civil proceeding in any Court concerning certain misdemeanours, and that he shall not be liable to be convicted of any of those offences by any evidence whatever in respect of any act done by him, if he shall at any time previously to his being charged with such offence have first disclosed such act on oath, in consequence of any compulsory process of any Court of law or equity, in any action, suit, or proceeding which shall have been bona fide instituted by any party aggrieved :—Held, that the disclosure of such act by a voluntary witness in a civil action on cross-examination and without objection to answer the questions being taken is not a disclosure "in consequence of any compulsory process" of any Court of law or equity within the meaning of the section, and that he is liable to be convicted of an offence under the Larceny Act, 1901, in respect of the act so disclosed. Rex v. Noel, 84 L. J. K.B. 142; [1914] 3 K.B. 848; 112 L. T. 47—C.C.A.

ii. Sentence.

Child—Power of Court to Order Whipping.]—The power of the Court under section 4 of the Larceny Act, 1861, to order a male person under sixteen years of age convicted under that section to be whipped as well as imprisoned is not taken away in the case where such person is a child within the meaning of the Children Act, 1908, and has been committed to custody in a place of detention under section 106 of the Act in lieu of being sentenced to imprisonment. Rex v. Lydford, 83 L. J. K.B. 589; [1914] 2 K.B. 378; 110 L. T. 781; 78 J. P. 213; 24 Cox C.C. 142; 58 S. J. 363; 30 T. L. R. 349—C.C.A.

—— Person to Execute Sentence.] — The proper person to execute the sentence is the sheriff or the deputy he appoints for that purpose. Ib.

B. Receivers of Stolen Property.

See also Vol. IV. 1417, 2146.

No Guilty Knowledge at Time of Receipt—Subsequent Knowledge.]—The appellant was charged with having on April 24, 1911, received a horse knowing it to have been stolen. It appeared that at the time he received it he did not know that it had been stolen, but that subsequently on being told the fact he refused to give it up unless he was repaid the amount he had paid to the person from whom he got it. The appellant was convicted :—Held, that the conviction must be quashed. Rex v. Johnson, 75 J. P. 464; 27 T. L. R. 489—C.C.A.

Goods Picked up on Prosecutor's Land.]—The appellant was convicted of receiving pig iron which had been picked up from the bed or bank of a canal. The property was laid in the canal proprietors, but there was no evidence as to how the pig iron came to be where it was or to whom it in fact had belonged :—Held, that the conviction must be quashed on the ground that there was no direction to the jury to consider the case on the basis that the picking up of the iron was not necessarily larceny. Rex v. White, 107 L. T. 528; 76 J. P. 384; 23 Cox C.C. 190—C.C.A.

Recent Possession of Stolen Property—Onus of Proof.]—In the absence of any reasonable explanation by the appellant as to his recent possession of the stolen goods, the conviction upheld on appeal. Reg. v. Langmead (10 L. T. 350) followed. Rex v. Curnock, 111 L. T. 816; 24 Cox C.C. 440—C.A.

Indictment of Husband and Wife—Receipt of Goods by Wife while Husband Absent—Misdirection.]—Stolen goods were received by a wife in her husband's absence. There was evidence shewing knowledge on the part of the husband when he returned home that the goods were stolen, but no evidence of any dealing by him with the goods. In the summing-up at the trial no distinction was drawn between the respective positions of the husband and wife with regard to the stolen property:—Held, that, in the absence of evidence shewing a preconcerted arrangement between husband and wife, the receipt by the wife did not constitute her husband a receiver: and that, as in the summing-up to the jury at the trial no distinction was drawn between the case of the husband and that of the wife, the jury were insufficiently directed, and the appeal of the husband against his conviction must be allowed. Rex v. Pritchard, 109 L. T. 911; 23 Cox C.C. 682—C.C.A.

Direction to Jury.]—Upon the trial of an indictment for receiving stolen goods well knowing the same to have been stolen, the onus always remains upon the prosecution. The Judge, in directing the jury, should tell them that, upon the prosecution establishing that the person charged was in possession of goods recently stolen, they might, in the absence of any explanation by the accused of the way in which the goods came into his possession, which might reasonably be true, convict the prisoner; but that, if an explanation were given which the jury thought might reasonably be true, although they were not convinced of its truth, the prisoner was entitled to be acquitted, inasmuch as the Crown would have failed to discharge the duty cast upon it of satisfying the jury beyond reasonable doubt of the guilt of the accused. Rex v. Schama; Rex v. Abramovitch, 84 L. J. K.B. 396; 112 L. T. 480; 79 J. P. 184; 59 S. J. 288; 31 T. L. R. 88—C.C.A.

Where a prisoner is charged with receiving stolen goods, the jury should be directed that, to justify a verdict of "Guilty," they must be satisfied that the goods have been in the possession and under the control of the prisoner. Dictum of Patteson, J., in Reg v. Wiley (20 L. J. M.C. 4, 9; 4 Cox C.C. 414, 421) approved. Rex v. Berger, 84 L. J. K.B. 541; 31 T. L. R. 159—C.C.A.

Indictment — Facts Shewing Felonious Receiving — Omission of "feloniously" in Indictment — Common Law Misdemeanour — Validity of Conviction.] — An indictment charged a receiving of goods "unlawfully" (omitting the words "and feloniously") well knowing them to have been feloniously stolen. The facts shewed that the stealing was felonious at common law:—Held, that, although the facts shewed a felonious receiving under section 91 of the Larceny Act, 1861, the indictment was good as for the common law misdemeanour of receiving goods well knowing them to have been feloniously stolen, which still subsisted, and that by reason of section 12 of the Criminal Procedure Act, 1851, the appellant was not entitled to be acquitted on the ground that the evidence shewed that he was guilty of the felonious receiving under section 91. Rex v. Garland, 79 L. J. K.B. 239; [1910] 1 K.B. 154; 102 L. T. 254; 74 J. P. 135; 22 Cox C.C. 292; 26 T. L. R. 130—C.C.A.

F. Malicious Injury and Damage to Property.

Two Persons Acting under Direction of Others.] — The appellant and another were jointly indicted for committing wilful damage to plate-glass windows to an amount exceeding 5l. The appellant broke a small window of a less value than 5l., but a few yards away the other defendant broke other windows, the value of which, added to the value of that broken by the appellant, exceeded 5l. Both defendants belonged to the same organisation. The appellant in cross-examination refused to say whether she was acting under the direction of the organisation. She denied that she and the other defendant were acting in concert:—Held, that it was a question for the jury whether on the whole evidence the defendants were acting in concert, and that it was unnecessary that each should know of the existence of the other if they were both acting under the direction of the organisation. Rex v. Joachim, 28 T. L. R. 380—C.C.A.

Damage over 5*l.*—Salvage.]—The appellant was convicted under section 51 of the Malicious Damage Act, 1861, of having committed wilful damage to plate-glass windows to an amount exceeding 5l. On appeal it was contended that if the undamaged portions of the glass were taken into account the loss would be reduced to less than 5l.:—Held, that if to put the damage right it was proper to replace the windows at a cost of more than 5l., it was no answer to say that the owner would still have on his hands a quantity of broken glass which he might be able to utilise for other purposes. Rex v. Hewitt, 76 J. P. 360; 28 T. L. R. 378—C.C.A.

Breaking of Windows on Successive Days—Continuous Act—Damage over 5*l.*.]—C., on being refused drink in O.'s public house on a certain evening, went outside, and, after maliciously throwing a weight through one plate-glass window of the house, was about to break a second window with a hatchet when he was stopped by O.'s assistant, whereupon he ran away. C. returned at twelve o'clock on the following day and maliciously broke the second window. The value of each window was under, but the aggregate value of the two windows exceeded, 5*l*. :—Held (Holmes, L.J., dissenting), that the wrongful acts of C. constituted one continuous transaction, for which he could be indicted under section 51 of the Malicious Damage Act, 1861. O'Neill v. Belfast County Council, [1912] 2 Ir. R. 310—C.A.

Value of Property Damaged — Evidence — Hearsay.]—The appellant was charged with maliciously committing damage to a plate-glass window in a post office to an amount exceeding 5*l*. At the trial a witness was called who stated that the damage was 8*l*. In cross-examination the witness said he was not a glass expert, and that he had been told by the clerk of works who examined the window that 8*l*. was the amount of the damage. On appeal it was contended for the appellant that there was nothing but hearsay evidence as to the amount of the damage done :—Held, dismissing the appeal, that there was evidence of a witness who gave it as his own opinion that the value was considerably more than 5*l*. Rex v. Beckett, 29 T. L. R. 332—C.C.A.

II. AGAINST THE PERSONS OF INDIVIDUALS.

A. Assault, Battery, Wounding, &c.

See also Vol. IV. 1450, 2153.

Process Server Putting Document Inside Coat of Person Served.]—The respondent, who was the defendant in a County Court action, was met in the street by the appellant, who, acting on behalf of the solicitor to the plaintiff in the action, tendered to the respondent an order for discovery which had been made in the action. The respondent declined to accept the document, whereupon the appellant thrust it into the inner fold of the respondent's coat, which was unbuttoned at the time, and as the respondent opened his coat the document fell on to the street, where he left it. On an information preferred by the respondent against the appellant for assault in so touching him, the Justices were of opinion that the order of the County Court would have been effectually served by the appellant drawing the respondent's attention to the document and by dropping it on to the street in his presence upon his declining to accept it, and that the appellant was not justified in laying hands upon him. They accordingly convicted the appellant :—Held, that the appellant was entitled to serve the document on the respondent personally, and that as there was no evidence that the appellant touched the respondent further than was necessary to bring the document home to him, the Justices were wrong in convicting the appellant. Rose v. Kempthorne, 103 L. T. 730; 75 J. P. 71; 22 Cox C.C. 356; 55 S. J. 126; 27 T. L. R. 132—D.

Grievous Bodily Harm — Injuries Caused in Attempting to Escape from Accused.] — The appellant was indicted for causing grievous bodily harm to the prosecutrix. He went to her house late at night when she was in bed, and not getting in in the ordinary way broke and entered by a window and went to the door of her room, which he threatened to burst in. He nearly burst the door open, whereupon the prosecutrix jumped from her window and was injured. In his direction to the jury the Judge said : "Will you say whether the conduct of the prisoner amounted to a threat of causing injury to this young woman; was the act of jumping the natural consequence of the conduct of the prisoner and was the grievous bodily harm the result of the conduct of the prisoner? If you answer these three questions in the affirmative, your verdict will be one of Guilty. If you answer them or any one of them in the negative, your verdict will be one of Not Guilty" :—Held, a proper direction. Rex v. Beech, 107 L. T. 461; 76 J. P. 287; 23 Cox C.C. 181—C.C.A.

Shooting with Intent to Resist Lawful Apprehension — Defence of Accident.] — The prisoner was indicted for shooting with intent to resist his lawful apprehension. The defence was that the prisoner's gun went off accidentally. In his summing-up the Judge directed the jury that a man must be taken to intend the natural consequences of his acts, and that it was for the prisoner and not for the prosecution, to satisfy them that the gun went off accidentally. The prisoner was convicted :—Held, that the conviction must be quashed, as the Judge's direction might have been understood by the jury as laying down a proposition of law which was not correct—namely, that a person must be taken to intend the consequences, not only of his intentional, but also of his accidental, acts. Rex v. Davies (No. 2), 29 T. L. R. 350—C.C.A.

B. Murder and Manslaughter.

Murder or Manslaughter—Intending to Kill One Person but Accidentally Killing Another.]—If a person feloniously fires at another in such circumstances as would make the killing of that other person manslaughter, but by accident he hits and kills a third person whom he never intended to hit at all, he is guilty of manslaughter. Rex v. Gross, 77 J. P. 352; 23 Cox C.C. 455—Darling, J.

—— Provocation by Words — Wife's Confession of Adultery.] — Words alone, unless in very exceptional circumstances, are not sufficient provocation to reduce homicide from murder to manslaughter, the only exceptional circumstances to have that effect being cases relating to adultery. Thus, where a man, on suddenly discovering, by his wife's confession, that she has been guilty of adultery, kills her, the crime may be reduced from murder to manslaughter. Rex v. Palmer, 82 L. J. K.B. 531; [1913] 2 K. B. 29; 108 L. T. 814; 77 J. P. 340; 23 Cox C.C. 377; 29 T. L. R. 349—C.C.A.

The prisoner, while walking with the young woman to whom he was engaged to be married, told her that as he could not obtain work in this country he intended going abroad to make a home for her. The woman thereupon said that if he did she would go on the town as she had done before. The prisoner then asked if she meant that, and when she said she did he killed her :—Held, that the words used by the woman were not sufficient provocation to reduce the crime from murder to manslaughter. Ib.

—— Unmarried Persons Living Together — Woman Found Visiting House of Ill Fame— Provocation.] —The prisoner who was living with a woman as his wife found her visiting a house of ill fame, and thereupon fired at her with a revolver and killed her :—Held, that the mere fact of a man discovering a woman with whom he is living as his wife visiting a disorderly house is not such a provocation as will reduce the crime of killing her from murder to manslaughter, and that the prisoner was properly convicted of murder. Rex v. Palmer (82 L. J. K.B. 531; [1913] 2 K.B. 29) discussed. Rex v. Greening, 83 L. J. K.B. 195; [1913] 3 K.B. 846; 109 L. T. 720; 23 Cox C.C. 601; 29 T. L. R. 732—C.C.A.

—— Suspicion by Prisoner of his Wife's Adultery with Deceased.] —The prisoner, while under the influence of drink, and under an unfounded impression that his wife had committed adultery with his brother, accused his brother of the adultery suspected, and receiving an answer which he considered evasive, he stabbed the brother and killed him. The prisoner was convicted of murder :—Held, that the circumstances under which the prisoner committed the crime did not reduce it from murder to manslaughter. Reg. v. Rothwell (12 Cox C.C. 145) was an extreme case, and should not be extended. Rex v. Birchall, 109 L. T. 478; 23 Cox C.C. 579; 29 T. L. R. 711—C.C.A.

—— Provocation Necessary to Reduce to Manslaughter—Degree of Mental Ability Short of Insanity.] —In considering the amount of provocation which is necessary to reduce the crime of murder to that of manslaughter, no regard should be paid, in the absence of insanity on the part of the accused, to the fact that by reason of deficient mental balance and self-control he might be affected by a slight degree of provocation, the test being whether the provocation alleged would be such as to deprive a reasonable man of his self-control. Reg. v. Welsh (11 Cox C.C. 336) and Rex v. Alexander (109 L. T. 745) followed. Rex v. Leshini, 84 L. J. K.B. 1102; [1914] 3 K.B. 1116; 112 L. T. 175—C.C.A.

—— Provocation by Wife's Neglect of Sick Child—Killing of Child—Direction of Judge.] —The prisoner, a soldier home on a few days' leave, in great distress of mind owing to the neglect by his wife of one of his children who was at the point of death, and having been informed of his wife's infidelity, cut the child's throat "because he could not see it suffer and have to leave it." At the trial the Judge directed the jury that if they found the prisoner intended to kill the child the offence was murder, and that they were not at liberty to find a verdict of manslaughter. They found the prisoner guilty of murder :—Held, that the direction of the Judge was right, that provocation of this indirect kind did not reduce the crime to manslaughter, and that he had properly refused to leave this as a question for the jury. Rex v. Simpson, 84 L. J. K.B. 1893; 31 T. L. R. 560—C.C.A.

—— Abortion — Death of Woman — Direction to Jury.] —Where a person feloniously uses an instrument, or other means, with intent to procure the miscarriage of a woman, and the woman dies in consequence of his felonious act—then, if, when he did the act, he must as a responsible man have contemplated that death or grievous bodily harm was likely to result, he is guilty of murder; but if, when he did the act, he had not at the time in contemplation, and could not as a reasonable man have contemplated either of those consequences, he is guilty only of manslaughter. Rex v. Lumley, 76 J. P. 208; 22 Cox C.C. 635—Avory, J.

Conviction for Attempted Murder—Common Law Attempt—Statutory Attempt—Sentence of Penal Servitude.] — The completion or attempted completion of one of a series of acts intended to result in killing is an attempt to murder, even although the completed act would not, unless followed by the other acts, result in killing. Rex v. White, 79 L. J. K.B. 854; [1910] 2 K.B. 124; 102 L. T. 784; 74 J. P. 318; 22 Cox C.C. 325; 54 S. J. 523; 26 T. L. R. 466—C.C.A.

A conviction of attempted murder, under the provisions of section 9 of the Criminal Procedure Act, 1851, on an indictment for murder, is punishable as an attempt under sections 11 to 15 inclusive of the Offences Against the Person Act, 1861. Ib.

Reg. v. Connell (6 Cox C.C. 178) distinguished. Observations of Kennedy, J., in Rex v. Linneker (75 L. J. K.B. 385; [1906] 2 K.B. 99) questioned. Ib.

Theories by Trial Judge as to Cause of Death.]—At the trial of a prisoner for wilful murder the question for decision by the jury is whether or not, upon the whole of the evidence before them, the death of the deceased person was caused by the designed act of the prisoner. Where, therefore, only circumstantial evidence has been adduced by the prosecution, and the prosecution and the defence have both advanced theories as to the way in which the deceased person met his death, it is not improper, although it is inadvisable, for the Judge in his summing-up to make further suggestions and advance further theories of the way in which the prisoner could have committed the offence alleged against him, with which suggestions and theories counsel for the defence has no opportunity of dealing. Rex v. Smith, 84 L. J. K.B. 2153; 59 S. J. 704; 31 T. L. R. 617—C.C.A.

Conviction for Murder — Substitution of Verdict of Manslaughter.]—The appellant had been convicted of murder, the defence having been that the affair was an accident or at most manslaughter, and the Judge at the trial having ruled that the defence of manslaughter was not open to the appellant :—Held, on the facts, that the verdict of murder should be quashed and a verdict of manslaughter substituted. Rex v. Hopper, 84 L. J. K.B. 1371; [1915] 2 K.B. 431; 113 L. T. 381; 79 J. P. 335; 59 S. J. 478; 31 T. L. R. 360—C.C.A.

—— Murder—Question of Insanity—Sentence of Death—Substituted Verdict.]—The Court of Criminal Appeal, if satisfied that the appellant was guilty of the offence charged, but insane when the offence was committed, will quash the sentence and order the appellant to be kept in custody as a criminal lunatic. Rex v. Jefferson (24 T. L. R. 877) followed. Rex v. Gilbert, 84 L. J. K.B. 1424; 112 L. T. 479—C.C.A.

C. Rape and Indecent Assaults on Women and Children.

See also Vol. IV. 1547, 2164.

Attempted Rape — Conviction of Statutory Offence.]—The power conferred by section 9 of the Criminal Law Amendment Act, 1885, to convict of an offence under sections 3, 4, or 5 of that Act, or of an indecent assault, applies only where the accused is charged on an indictment for rape or an offence made felony by section 4, and does not apply where he is merely charged with an attempt to commit any of those offences. Townsend v. Lord Advocate, [1914] S. C. (J.) 85—Ct. of Just.

Indecent Assault — Consent — Defence of Consent not Raised by Defendant in His Evidence — Misdirection — No Direction to Jury.]—In cases of indecent assault and cases of the same kind where consent is a defence, if the facts of the case are such that the jury may reasonably infer that the prosecutrix consented to the acts alleged, there ought to be a direction to the jury by the Judge both as to the onus which is on the prosecution to prove non-consent, and also as to the evidence given on the question of consent. But if the facts are not such as that the jury may reasonably infer consent, and particularly if the case has been conducted by counsel so as to make the question of consent an entirely secondary issue, there is no necessity for such a direction. Rex v. May, 82 L. J. K.B. 1; [1912] 3 K.B. 572; 108 L. T. 351; 77 J. P. 31; 23 Cox C.C. 327; 29 T. L. R. 24—C.C.A.

The appellant was charged with indecent assault. In his evidence he did not say that the prosecutrix consented, but that her story was untrue. His counsel set up the defence of consent before the jury, but his main defence was that the story of the prosecutrix was untrue. The chairman, in his summing-up, gave no direction on the question of consent or non-consent :—Held, that as, in the opinion of the Court on the evidence, the jury, even if they had received a direction on the question, would not have found that the prosecutrix consented, no such direction was necessary. Ib.

Girl Assaulted under Thirteen—Necessity of Averment of Age in Indictment.]—The appellant was indicted for indecently assaulting a girl. The girl was in fact under the age of thirteen years. The age of the girl was not averred in the indictment :—Held, that the indictment was not bad on the ground that the age of the girl was not averred. Rex v. Stephenson, 82 L. J. K.B. 287; [1912] 3 K.B. 341; 107 L. T. 656; 76 J. P. 408; 23 Cox C.C. 214; 56 S. J. 765—C.C.A.

The Court pointed out that, having regard to the provisions of section 123, sub-section 2, and Schedule I. of the Children Act, 1908, the prosecution would gain an advantage by averring the age of the girl in the indictment, and that as a matter of good drafting this might be done. Ib.

Carnal Knowledge of Girl under Thirteen—Certificate of Birth—No Evidence of Identity.]—On a charge of having unlawful carnal knowledge of a girl under the age of thirteen years the age of the girl must be strictly proved, and if her certificate of birth is produced evidence must be given positively identifying her with the child whose birth is registered in such certificate. Rex v. Rogers, 111 L. T. 1115; 79 J. P. 16; 24 Cox C.C. 465—C.C.A.

—— Accused under Sixteen when Offence Committed, but over Sixteen when Convicted —"Offender whose age does not exceed sixteen years" — Whether Liable to Punishment of Whipping.]—A person who at the time of committing the offence of carnally knowing a girl under the age of thirteen is under the age of sixteen, but who at the time he appears in Court to answer the indictment charging him with the offence is over the age of sixteen, is not a person "whose age does not exceed sixteen years" within the meaning of the proviso to section 4 of the Criminal Law Amendment Act, 1885. In such a case, therefore, the Court has no power under that proviso to order the offender to be whipped. Rex v. Cawthron, 82 L. J. K.B. 981; [1913] 3 K.B. 168; 109 L. T. 412; 77 J. P. 460; 23 Cox C.C. 548; 29 T. L. R. 600—C.C.A.

D. Suicides.

See also Vol. IV. 1564, 2167.

Attempted Suicide — Sentence — Power to Inflict Hard Labour — "Attempt to commit felony."]—Felo de se is a felony, and an attempt to commit suicide is therefore an attempt to commit felony, and under the provisions of the Hard Labour Act, 1822, punishable by imprisonment with hard labour. Rex v. Mann, 83 L. J. K.B. 648; [1914] 2 K.B. 107; 110 L. T. 781; 78 J. P. 200; 24 Cox C.C. 140; 58 S. J. 303; 30 T. L. R. 310—C.C.A.

III. CONSPIRACY.

See also Vol. IV. 1565, 2167.

Nature of Acts Necessary to Support.]—To establish a charge of conspiracy it is sufficient to prove that the act to be done by the conspirators was in some way fraudulent or corrupt. Rex v. Whitaker, 84 L. J. K.B. 225;

[1914] 3 K.B. 1283; 112 L. T. 41; 79 J. P. 28; 24 Cox C.C. 472; 58 S. J. 707; 30 T. L. R. 627—C.C.A.

To Defraud.]—If two persons conspire a criminal offence is committed, although in fact no false pretence is made and no money is obtained. Rex v. Grosvenor, 111 L. T. 1116; 24 Cox C.C. 468—C.C.A.

Act Tending to Public Mischief—Agreement to Indemnify Bail.]—An agreement between a person against whom a criminal charge is pending and another, that if the latter will go bail for him he will indemnify him against the consequences of his recognisance being estreated in consequence of such person not surrendering in accordance with the conditions thereof, is an indictable offence as tending to produce a public mischief. Reg. v. Broome (18 L. T. (o.s.) 19) disapproved. Rex v. Porter, 79 L. J. K.B. 241; [1910] 1 K.B. 369; 102 L. T. 255; 74 J. P. 159; 22 Cox C.C. 295; 26 T. L. R. 200—C.C.A.

IV. AGAINST KING AND GOVERNMENT.

Treason—Outbreak of War—Alien Enemies of Military Age—Assistance to Return Home—Intent.]—The appellant, who was born in Germany but had become naturalised in this country and was German Consul at Sunderland, took steps on August 5, the day after the outbreak of war between England and Germany, to assist German subjects to return to Germany, in order that they might perform military duties when they arrived in their own country. On the same day, in pursuance of an Order in Council made under the Aliens Restriction Act, 1914, a notice was issued by order of the Home Secretary limiting the time of departure of alien enemies from this country to the period between that date and August 11. The appellant was indicted for high treason, and there was evidence at the trial that at some time on August 5 he knew that war had begun. The appellant knew nothing of the Aliens Restriction Act, 1914, or of the Order in Council, but he stated in evidence that he believed that there was a rule of international law which gave a margin of time for alien enemies to leave, even if they were going to perform military service. The appellant was convicted:—Held, that the conviction must be quashed, as the jury had not been directed that in order to convict they must be satisfied that the appellant was guided by an evil intention of aiding and comforting the King's enemies, and that his object was not merely to carry out his duty by assisting German subjects to return to their own country without injuring this country's interests. Rex v. Ahlers, 84 L. J. K.B. 901; [1915] 1 K.B. 616; 112 L. T. 558; 79 J. P. 255; 31 T. L. R. 141—C.C.A.

Obtaining Information Useful to Enemy—Attempt.]—The appellant, who had been convicted under section 1, sub-section 1, and section 4 of the Official Secrets Act, 1911, of attempting, for a purpose prejudicial to the safety or interests of the State, to obtain information calculated to be useful to an enemy, appealed against his conviction on the grounds, first, that evidence of a conversation which he had had after the date of the offence had been wrongly admitted; secondly, that the trial was prejudiced by a suggestion as to the contents of a document which was not put in evidence; and thirdly, that the Judge had unfairly questioned the prisoner and misunderstood his answers. The Court dismissed the appeal on all three grounds. Rex v. Olsson, 31 T. L. R. 559—C.C.A.

V. AGAINST PUBLIC JUSTICE.

See also Vol. IV. 1610, 2174.

Perjury — Judicial Proceeding — Action against Non-existent Person.]—The defendant P. was charged with perjury for swearing in an affidavit that he had personally served a certain defendant in a civil action with the writ in that action. The defendant C. was charged with aiding and abetting and suborning P. to commit perjury. The affidavit in question was sworn in an action commenced by C. against a non-existent person. It was contended that by reason of the fact that the defendant in the civil action was not a real person the affidavit had been sworn in a matter which was not a judicial proceeding. The defendants P. and C. having been convicted, appealed:—Held, first, that an offence had been committed within the terms of section 7 of the Commissioners for Oaths Act, 1889; and secondly, that the affidavit had been sworn in a judicial proceeding; and therefore that the conviction was right. Rex v. Castiglione, 106 L. T. 1023; 76 J. P. 351; 23 Cox C.C. 46; 28 T. L. R. 403—C.C.A.

—— False Death Certificate—Intention with which Given.]—By section 4, sub-section 1 (b) of the Perjury Act, 1911, if any person "wilfully makes any false certificate or declaration under or for the purposes of any Act relating to the registration of births or deaths, or, knowing any such certificate or declaration to be false, uses the same as true or gives or sends the same as true to any person," he commits a misdemeanour:—Held, that it is an offence under the above provision for a person to give a certificate which purports to be a certificate under an Act relating to the registration of births and deaths and which can be used under such an Act, and it is not necessary for the prosecution to prove that the defendant gave the certificate with the intention that it should be used under such an Act. Rex v. Ryan (No. 1), 110 L. T. 779; 78 J. P. 192; 24 Cox C.C. 135; 58 S. J. 251; 30 T. L. R. 242—C.C.A.

—— Competency of Justices to Administer Oath.]—The defendant was indicted for the common law misdemeanour of taking a false oath in connection with the proposed transfer of a licence, before Justices, on April 12, 1910, on which date there was an informal meeting of the Justices for the purpose of expediting licensing business when the special sessions, which had been fixed for May 18, 1910, came on. The defendant was convicted :—Held, that the conviction must be quashed, inasmuch as at the meeting on April 12 the Justices had no authority to administer an oath. Rex v. Shaw, 104 L. T. 112; 75 J. P. 191; 22 Cox C.C. 376; 27 T. L. R. 181—C.C.A.

—— Subornation—Question as to Corroboration Necessary.]—On a charge of subornation of perjury the corroboration necessary to sustain a conviction may be afforded by the facts and circumstances of the case. Under section 13 of the Perjury Act, 1911, one witness is sufficient to prove that the accused made certain statements on oath, but additional evidence is required to establish the falsity of the oath. Rex v. Threlfall, 111 L. T. 168; 24 Cox C.C. 230—C.C.A.

VI. AGAINST PUBLIC PEACE.

A. Libel.

Sentence — Imprisonment and Direction to Find Surety and in Default Further Term of Imprisonment.] — A person convicted under section 5 of the Libel Act, 1843, may, in addition to being sentenced to the maximum term of imprisonment mentioned in the section —namely, one year—be ordered, at the expiration of that imprisonment, to find sureties to keep the peace for a specified period, and, in default of so doing, be further imprisoned for the period during which he is so ordered to find sureties. Rex v. Trueman, 82 L. J. K.B. 916; [1913] 3 K.B. 164; 109 L. T. 413; 77 J. P. 428; 23 Cox C.C. 550; 29 T. L. R. 599—C.C.A.

Plea of Justification — Replication Filed during Trial — Effect upon Verdict.] — The prisoner, who was charged with publishing a defamatory libel, pleaded (inter alia) justification. A replication to the plea was filed during the course of the trial :—Held, that the prisoner was not entitled to be acquitted on the ground that the plea of justification had not been traversed, and must therefore be taken to be a good plea. Rex v. Seham Yousry, 84 L. J. K.B. 1272; 112 L. T. 311; 31 T. L. R. 27—C.C.A.

B. Riding or Going Armed.

Indictment.]—An indictment for riding or going armed against the form of the Statute of Northampton (3 Edw. 3. c. 3), which omits to negative lawful occasion, is bad, as omitting an essential ingredient of the offence, and will not be cured by verdict. Rex v. Smith, [1914] 2 Ir. R. 190—C.C.R.

Counts in an indictment charging that the accused went about on a public road without lawful occasion, in such a manner as to be a nuisance to, and to alarm the public lawfully using the road, and charging that the accused on the public road unlawfully discharged a revolver to the great danger of the public, even assuming that the omission of the words "lawfully using the highway" does not make the latter count bad, cannot be sustained where it appears that none of the public were present or capable of being alarmed or endangered. Ib.

Where the omission of the averment that the acts were done in terrorem populi would be aided or cured by verdict, quære. Ib.

VII. AGAINST PUBLIC MORALS AND POLICE.

A. Bigamy.

See also Vol. IV. 1681, 2176.

Evidence—Identification.]—On the trial of the appellant for bigamy the evidence by the prosecution to prove the first marriage consisted of the marriage certificate, the fact that he cohabited as her husband with the woman he was alleged to have married, and the fact that he spoke of her as his wife :—Held, that there was sufficient identification of the appellant with the man who was married to the woman named in the certificate. Rex v. Birtles, 75 J. P. 288; 27 T. L. R. 402—C.C.A.

B. Bribery.

Public Officer.]—A person who discharges any duty in which the public are interested, and who receives payment from public moneys, is a "public officer." The colonel of a regiment in the army is both a public and a ministerial officer. Rex v. Whitaker, 84 L. J. K.B. 225; [1914] 3 K.B. 1283; 112 L. T. 41; 79 J. P. 28; 24 Cox C.C. 472; 58 S. J. 707; 30 T. L. R. 627—C.C.A.

Bribe to Induce Defendant to Shew Favour in Regard to Catering Contracts.] — It is a common law misdemeanour for the colonel of a regiment in the army to conspire with other persons for the payment to him of bribes to induce him to shew favour to such persons in respect of catering contract for his regiment. Ib.

C. Habitual Criminals.

See also Vol. IV. 2177.

Indictment—No Averment that Prisoner is Habitual Criminal.]—It is not necessary that an indictment under which a prisoner is charged with being a habitual criminal should contain an averment that he is a habitual criminal, but as a matter of pleading it is better that it should do so. Rex v. Smith; Rex v. Weston, 79 L. J. K.B. 1; [1910] 1 K.B. 17; 101 L. T. 816; 74 J. P. 13; 22 Cox C.C. 219; 54 S. J. 137; 26 T. L. R. 23—C.C.A.

—— Proof of Consent of Director of Public Prosecutions.] — On the trial of a person charged with being a habitual criminal, the consent of the Director of Public Prosecutions to the insertion in the indictment of such a charge must be proved. It is not, however, necessary that some one should be called to prove the handwriting of the Director; it is sufficient if a witness is called who can depose to having been in correspondence with the Director on the subject and having received in the ordinary course the document purporting to be his consent. Rex v. Turner, 79 L. J. K.B. 176; [1910] 1 K.B. 346; 102 L. T. 367; 74 J. P. 81; 22 Cox C.C. 310; 54 S. J. 164; 26 T. L. R. 162—C.C.A.

Where a charge under the Prevention of Crime Act, 1908, of being a habitual criminal is inserted in the indictment against an accused person the prosecution need not prove as part of their case that the consent of the Director of Public Prosecutions has been given to the insertion of such charge, unless the fact is challenged by the accused, in which case the fact may be proved as determined by the Court in Rex v. Turner (79 L. J. K.B. 176). The clerk of assize or the clerk of the peace—or, if any question arises, the Judge—should satisfy himself that such consent has been given before the indictment goes before the grand jury. Rex v. Waller, 79 L. J. K.B. 184; [1910] 1 K.B. 364; 102 L. T. 400; 74 J. P. 81; 22 Cox C.C. 319; 54 S. J. 164; 26 T. L. R. 142—C.C.A.

Proof of Receipt of Notice—"Not less than seven days' notice"—Clear Days.]—It is not necessary that the proper officer of the Court—for example, the clerk of the peace—should himself be called to testify to the receipt of the notice mentioned in section 10, sub-section 4 (b) of the Prevention of Crime Act, 1908, but there must be proof of the receipt of such notice, and that may be given by the officer or clerk of the clerk of the Court, or by the person who gave the notice. Such notice, and also the notice served on the accused, must be a seven clear days' notice. Rex v. Turner, 79 L. J. K.B. 176; [1910] 1 K.B. 346; 102 L. T. 367; 74 J. P. 81; 22 Cox C.C. 310; 54 S. J. 164; 26 T. L. R. 162—C.C.A.

Contents of Notice—Grounds—Evidence.]—The notice served on the accused, although it need not state the evidence upon which the prosecution intend to rely as establishing that he is a habitual criminal, must state the grounds upon which it is intended to found the charge: it is not enough to state in the notice that the accused is leading persistently a dishonest or criminal life. Evidence of the three previous convictions of the accused relied upon by the prosecution is inadmissible unless it is proved that those convictions were specified in the notice served upon the accused. If such notice is not produced by the accused secondary evidence may be given of its contents. Ib.

The notice served upon an accused person under section 10, sub-section 4 of the Prevention of Crime Act, 1908, need not, in addition to specifying the previous convictions of the accused, also state other grounds for founding the charge that he is leading persistently a dishonest or criminal life, unless the prosecution intend to rely upon other grounds than the previous convictions. Rex v. Turner (79 L. J. K.B. 176) explained. Rex v. Waller, 79 L. J. K.B. 184; [1910] 1 K.B. 364; 102 L. T. 400; 74 J. P. 81; 22 Cox C.C. 319; 54 S. J. 164; 26 T. L. R. 142.

Grounds upon which Charge is Founded—Sufficiency of Notice.]—A notice given to a prisoner in pursuance of section 10, sub-section 4 of the Prevention of Crime Act, 1908, stated that it was intended to insert in the bill of indictment to be preferred against him a charge under that Act, "that you are a habitual criminal and are leading persistently a dishonest and criminal life." One of the grounds upon which the charge was founded was "that when you were asked to give some account of yourself, in order that you might have an opportunity of shewing that you had since the date of your last release from prison been following some honest employment, you declined to give any information which could be verified on the subject":—Held, that, although the ground was not one on which a person could be convicted of being a habitual criminal, its insertion in the notice did not make the notice bad, inasmuch as it was merely notice of the evidence that would be used against the prisoner on his trial, and there was no obligation on the prosecution under the statute to state the evidence that would be produced. Rex v. Webber, 82 L. J. K.B. 108; [1913] 1 K.B. 33; 108 L. T. 349; 76 J. P. 471; 23 Cox C.C. 323—C.C.A.

—— Specific Notice.]—By section 10, sub-section 4 of the Prevention of Crime Act, 1908, a charge of being a habitual criminal shall not be inserted in an indictment unless seven days' notice has been given to the offender, "and the notice to the offender shall specify the previous convictions and the other grounds upon which it is intended to found the charge." On an indictment for being a habitual criminal, evidence was given that the prisoner since his last release had associated with a well-known thief. No specific notice of this ground for the charge had been given to the prisoner:—Held, that in the absence of specific notice the conviction must be quashed. Rex v. Neilson, 109 L. T. 912; 78 J. P. 158; 23 Cox C.C. 685; 30 T. L. R. 125—C.C.A.

Proof of Prisoner's Age.]—There must be evidence before the Court that the accused had attained the age of sixteen at the date of the first conviction alleged against him. If the jury cannot act upon their view as to the accused's age, the fact may be proved by a prison official deposing that the age of the accused as stated in the calendar was so stated from information given by the accused himself. Rex v. Turner, 79 L. J. K.B. 176; [1910] 1 K.B. 346; 102 L. T. 367; 74 J. P. 81; 22 Cox C.C. 310; 54 S. J. 164; 26 T. L. R. 162—C.C.A.

Trial—Sentence.]—It is not necessary that sentence on the main charge in an indictment should have been pronounced before the accused is placed upon his trial as a habitual criminal. Ib.

Trial—Swearing Jury.]—Where an indictment charges a person with having committed an offence, and also, under section 10 of the Prevention of Crime Act, 1908, with being a habitual criminal, and the accused pleads guilty to the main charge, but pleads not guilty to the charge of being a habitual criminal, it is sufficient that the jury should be sworn to try the latter question as if on a trial for a misdemeanour, although the main charge to which the prisoner has pleaded guilty is a felony. It is no objection, however, to the trial that the jury has been sworn as on a trial for felony. Rex v. Turner, 79 L. J. K.B. 176; [1910] 1 K.B. 346; 102 L. T. 367; 74 J. P. 81; 22 Cox C.C. 310; 54 S. J. 164; 26 T. L. R. 162—C.C.A.

Evidence — Leading Dishonest or Criminal Life.]—In order to establish that the prisoner is leading persistently a dishonest or criminal life, the evidence is not necessarily to be confined to the period since the accused's last conviction. It must depend upon the circumstances of each case whether evidence as to the period prior to such conviction is admissible or not; but in all cases the evidence must be brought down to the date when the accused is charged. Rex v. Turner, 79 L. J. K.B. 176; [1910] 1 K.B. 346; 102 L. T. 367; 74 J. P. 81; 22 Cox C.C. 310; 54 S. J. 164; 26 T. L. R. 162—C.C.A.

Observations on the evidence required to prove that an accused "is leading persistently a dishonest or criminal life." Stirling v. Lord Advocate, [1911] S. C. (J.) 84—Ct. of Just. See also Heron v. Lord Advocate, [1914] S. C. (J.) 7—Ct. of Just.

Sentence of preventive detention quashed on the ground that evidence that the prisoner had been leading persistently a dishonest life was given by shewing that since his last conviction he had associated with a man who had been convicted of coining offences, without notice of intention to give such evidence having been served on the prisoner. Rex v. Maxfield, 28 T. L. R. 404—C.C.A.

Two prisoners were jointly indicted for housebreaking and pleaded guilty; they were then separately tried on charges of being habitual criminals:—Held, that though in some cases so long an interval as six months between a prisoner's last release from prison and the commission of the offence with which he is charged, coupled with the fact of his doing some honest work in that interval, may be sufficient to negative his persistently leading a dishonest or criminal life, yet the nature of the particular offence with which he is charged must be taken into consideration. If it is one which does not involve any premeditation, but is such as may be the result of sudden temptation, it is not necessarily inconsistent with a desire to amend his mode of life. But where it is obvious that he intends to return to his criminal courses, the existence of a six months' interval between the release from prison and the commission of the crime cannot affect the question. Rex v. Keane; Rex v. Watson, [1912] W. N. 205—C.C.A.

No hard-and-fast rule can be laid down as to what length the interval of time must be between the last release of an accused from prison and his next subsequent arrest in order to require evidence that he has been leading persistently a dishonest or criminal life within the meaning of section 10 of the Prevention of Crime Act, 1908. Where the interval is considerable it is desirable, and probably necessary, that the attention of the jury should not only be drawn to it, but some evidence should be given that the accused was relapsing into crime because it was his natural disposition to do so. Conviction of the appellant for being a habitual criminal affirmed, although the interval between his last release and subsequent arrest was nine months. Rex v. Heard, 106 L. T. 304; 76 J. P. 232; 22 Cox C.C. 725; 28 T. L. R. 154—C.C.A.

—— Foreign Conviction—Admissibility.]—A conviction in a foreign country for an offence which is a crime in all civilised countries is admissible on the question as to whether an accused has been leading persistently a dishonest or criminal life. Ib.

—— Failure by Convict on Licence to Report Himself to Police.]—The mere fact that a convict on licence has not reported himself to the police is not sufficient to establish that he is leading persistently a dishonest or criminal life. Conviction of the appellant for being a habitual criminal quashed where the sole evidence against him on the question of leading persistently a dishonest or criminal life consisted in the fact that during the period intervening between his last release from prison on licence and the commission of a new offence—a period of five and a half months—he had failed to report himself to the police. Rex v. Mitchell, 108 L. T. 224; 76 J. P. 423; 23 Cox C.C. 284; 28 T. L. R. 484—C.C.A.

—— Onus of Proof.]—The onus of proving that the prisoner "is leading persistently a dishonest or criminal life" rests upon the prosecution, and the jury ought to be directed that it is for the Crown to establish that the prisoner is still leading a dishonest or criminal life. Rex v. Young, 109 L. T. 753; 78 J. P. 80; 23 Cox C.C. 624; 58 S. J. 100; 30 T. L. R. 69—C.C.A.

—— Evidence Given of Facts not Stated in Notice to Accused.]—Conviction of the accused as a habitual criminal quashed on the ground that evidence was given at the trial that the accused had lived by thieving and had done no honest work for ten years, whereas the notice served upon him under section 10 of the Prevention of Crime Act, 1908, merely specified the three statutory and certain other convictions, and did not mention any other ground upon which it was intended to base the charge of being a habitual criminal. Rex v. Moran, 75 J. P. 110—C.C.A.

Conviction of the appellant as a habitual criminal quashed where evidence was given against him of facts not included in the notice served upon him. It is not the case that evidence as to the mode of life of a prisoner, on the question whether he is leading persistently a dishonest and criminal life, must be confined to the period between his last release from prison and the commission of the new offence. Rex v. Wilson, 28 T. L. R. 561—C.C.A.

Conviction of the appellant as a habitual criminal quashed where evidence was given against him of certain offences alleged to have been committed by him, which were not included in the notice served upon him. Rex v. Fowler, 77 J. P. 379; 29 T. L. R. 422—C.C.A.

Conviction of the appellant as a habitual criminal affirmed where, although evidence was given against him of matters not included in the notice served upon him under the Prevention of Crime Act, 1908, no substantial miscarriage of justice had occurred. Rex v. Westwood, 77 J. P. 379; 29 T. L. R. 492—C.C.A.

Fugitive from Justice—Employment while in Hiding.]—Where a criminal succeeded in evading arrest for some considerable period, and meanwhile obtained honest employment, the jury were told that they could convict the prisoner of being a habitual criminal because he was a fugitive from justice:—Held, that this amounted to a misdirection. Rex v. Brown, 109 L. T. 749; 78 J. P. 79; 23 Cox C.C. 615; 58 S. J. 69; 30 T. L. R. 40—C.C.A.

Only Three Statutory Convictions Proved.]—It is no objection in law to the conviction of a person for being a habitual criminal that only the three statutory convictions stated in the notice served on the accused under section 10 of the Prevention of Crime Act, 1908, are alleged against him. A great deal depends upon the nature of the offences for which the accused has been convicted. If the three convictions alleged were not in respect of offences shewing deliberation or system, it may not be right to take them as being of themselves sufficient to establish the charge of being a habitual criminal; if, on the other hand, the three convictions are in respect of offences requiring system, planning, and deliberation, and if they have been repeated almost at the first opportunity after the accused's release from a previous sentence, they may well be sufficient for the jury arriving at the conclusion that the accused intended to live by crime. Rex v. Everitt, 27 T. L. R. 570—C.C.A.

Mention in Summing-up of Convictions which had not been Proved.]—Conviction as a habitual criminal quashed on the ground that in his summing-up the Judge mentioned other convictions than those proved against the appellant. Rex v. Culliford, 75 J. P. 232—C.C.A.

Preventive Detention—"Not exceeding ten nor less than five years"—Discretion of Judge.]—Section 10, sub-section 1 of the Prevention of Crime Act, 1908, provides that "the Court, if of opinion that by reason of his criminal habits and mode of life it is expedient for the protection of the public that the offender should be kept in detention for a lengthened period of years, may pass a further sentence ordering that on the determination of the sentence of penal servitude he be detained for such period not exceeding ten nor less than five years, as the Court may determine":—Held, that the period of preventive detention, within the statutory limits, is a matter for the discretion of the Judge in passing sentence, having regard to the evidence adduced before him in the case. Rex v. Hamilton (9 Cr. App. Rep. 89) considered. Rex v. Crowley, or Sullivan, 83 L. J. K.B. 298; 110 L. T. 127; 24 Cox C.C. 13; 30 T. L. R. 94—C.C.A.

Sentence of Preventive Detention—Increase of Sentence to Enable Court to Pass.]—By section 10, sub-section 1 of the Prevention of Crime Act, 1908, where a person is convicted on indictment and is found by the jury to be a habitual criminal and the Court passes a sentence of penal servitude, the Court may pass a further sentence of preventive detention:—Held, that the Court ought not, in order to obtain power to pass a further sentence of preventive detention, to pass a sentence of penal servitude, if they consider that a sentence of imprisonment only, quite apart from any question of preventive detention, is adequate to the offence of which the prisoner has been convicted. Rex v. Bell, 30 T. L. R. 645—C.C.A.

D. Incest.

Offence by Woman—What must be Proved.]—Per Hamilton, J.: To constitute the offence of incest on the part of a woman under section 2 of the Incest Act, 1908, there must be something in the nature of permission by her, and not merely submission to the act of the man. Rex v. Dimes, 76 J. P. 47—C.C.A.

Evidence of the Existence of a Guilty Passion and of Previous Acts.]—On an indictment for incest under the Punishment of Incest Act, 1908, evidence is admissible to prove the existence of a guilty passion between the accused persons and of carnal intercourse before the Act was passed. Director of Public Prosecutions v. Ball (No. 2), 80 L. J. K.B. 691; [1911] A.C. 47; 103 L. T. 738; 75 J. P. 180; 22 Cox C.C. 366; 55 S. J. 139; 27 T. L. R. 162—H.L. (E.)

E. Keeping Brothel.

One Woman Using Premises for Purposes of Prostitution.]—The respondent was charged under section 13, sub-section 1 of the Criminal Law Amendment Act, 1885, with managing a brothel. The respondent was the wife of the occupier of the premises and she allowed her sister, a prostitute, to use the premises on various dates for the purpose of prostitution with different men. No other woman used the premises for the purpose of prostitution. The stipendiary magistrate dismissed the charge, being of opinion that premises could not be held in law to be a brothel unless at least two women used the premises for the purpose of prostitution :—Held (Ridley, J., dissenting), that the magistrate was right in so holding. Singleton v. Ellison (64 L. J. M.C. 123; [1895] 1 Q.B. 607) followed. Caldwell v. Leech, 109 L. T. 188; 77 J. P. 254; 23 Cox C.C. 510; 29 T. L. R. 457—D.

F. Offences under Prevention of Crimes, Act, 1871.

Being Found in Public Place about to Commit Felony.] — Per Lord Coleridge, J.: The provisions of section 7 of the Prevention of Crimes Act, 1871, being very stringent, must not be invoked on mere suspicion. There must be positive testimony to enable the police to bring a prosecution. Rex v. Pavitt, 75 J. P. 432—C.C.A.

H. Procuration.

Girl Brought from Scotland — Continuing Offence—Trial in England.]—The offence of procuration under section 2 of the Criminal Law Amendment Act, 1885, is a continuing offence, and if any part of it takes place within the jurisdiction of the English Courts, those Courts have jurisdiction to try it. Rex v. Mackenzie, 75 J. P. 159; 27 T. L. R. 152—C.C.A.

"Girl or woman under twenty-one years of age"—Indictment.]—By section 2, sub-section 1 of the Criminal Law Amendment Act, 1885, "Any person who procures or attempts to procure any girl or woman under twenty-one years of age, not being a common prostitute or of known immoral character, to have unlawful carnal connexion either within or without the Queen's Dominions with any other person or persons" shall be guilty of a misdemeanour. An indictment under this sub-section charged the defendant with the procuration of a "girl" without stating her age or stating that she was "under twenty-one years of age":—Held, that the indictment was good, and that the words in the sub-section, "under twenty-one years of age," qualify the word "woman" only and not the word "girl." Rex v. Jones, 106 L. T. 1024; 76 J. P. 8; 23 Cox C.C. 48; 55 S. J. 754—C.C.A.

Attempt to Procure — Insufficient Direction as to what would Constitute Attempt.]—Conviction of the appellant for attempting to procure his wife to leave her usual place of abode with intent that she should become an inmate of a brothel outside the King's Dominions quashed on the ground that the jury were not properly directed as to the difference between an attempt and an intention or a mere idle threat. Rex v. Landow, 109 L. T. 48; 77 J. P. 364; 23 Cox C.C. 457; 29 T. L. R. 375—C.C.A.

Girl under Age of Sixteen—"Causing or encouraging seduction" — "Allowing girl to consort with persons of known immoral character"—Evidence—Verdict of Negligence.]—The appellant was charged under section 17, sub-sections 1 and 2 of the Children Act, 1908, as amended by section 1 of the Children Act (1908) Amendment Act, 1910, with causing and encouraging the seduction of his daughter by knowingly allowing her to consort with persons of known immoral character. His wife was also charged with the offence. The jury found that the appellant was guilty of negligence and that his wife was guilty of criminal negligence. The wife did not appeal from her conviction :—Held, on the facts, that there was not sufficient evidence on which the jury ought to have been asked to say whether the appellant was guilty of the offence with which he was charged; and further that the jury, by their verdict, never intended to find him guilty of such offence. Rex v. Chainey, 83 L. J. K.B. 306; [1914] 1 K.B. 137; 109 L. T. 752; 78 J. P. 127; 23 Cox C.C. 620; 30 T. L. R. 51—C.C.A.

Procuring Woman to Become a Common Prostitute — Punishment of Whipping — Applicability of Statute Authorising Whipping—Not Applicable to "proceedings pending at the commencement of this Act"—Arrest Previous to Commencement.] — By section 8 of the Criminal Law Amendment Act, 1912, the Act is not to apply to "proceedings pending at the commencement of this Act." The appellant was arrested on December 7, 1912, and the Act came into force on December 13 following :—Held, that the proceedings against the appellant were "proceedings pending" at such commencement, and that the Act did not apply, so that on the trial and conviction of the appellant on indictment after the commencement of the Act the Court had no power to pass the sentence of whipping authorised by section 3. Rex v. O'Connor, 82 L. J. K.B. 335; [1913] 1 K.B. 557; 108 L. T. 384; 77 J. P. 272; 23 Cox C.C. 334; 57 S. J. 287; 29 T. L. R. 245—C.C.A.

D. PROCEDURE AND PRACTICE.

I. JURISDICTION.

Procuration—Girl Brought from Scotland—Continuing Offence—Trial in England.]—The offence of procuration under section 2 of the Criminal Law Amendment Act, 1885, is a continuing offence, and if any part of it takes place within the jurisdiction of the English Courts, those Courts have jurisdiction to try it. Rex v. Mackenzie, 75 J. Vexatious Actions—Prohibition of Institution of Legal Proceedings—Criminal Proceedings.]—The Vexatious Actions Act, 1896, which empowers the Court to make an order prohibiting a person from instituting "legal proceedings" without the leave of the Court or a Judge, is confined to civil proceedings, and has no application to the institution of criminal proceedings :—So held by Kennedy, L.J., and Scrutton, J. Decision of Divisional Court (83 L. J. K.B. 139: [1914] 1 K.B. 122) affirmed. Ib.

Absence of Consent of Attorney-General to Proceedings.]—The appellant was convicted under section 2 of the Explosive Substances Act, 1883, for causing an explosion of a nature likely to endanger life or to cause serious injury to property. The consent of the Attorney-General, which is required by section 7 to proceedings under the Act, had not been obtained:—Held, first, that the conviction must be quashed, as the absence of such consent invalidated the proceedings: and secondly, that the proviso to section 4, subsection 1 of the Criminal Appeal Act, 1907, has no application where the Court by which a prisoner is tried has no jurisdiction to entertain the proceedings. Rex v. Bates, 80 L. J. K.B. 507: [1911] 1 K.B. 964: 104 L. T. 688: 75 J. P. 271: 22 Cox C.C. 459: 55 S. J. 410: 27 T. L. R. 314—C.C.A.

Removal of Indictment into High Court—Charge against Limited Company.]—The Court, without deciding that a limited company could not plead to an indictment at the Central Criminal Court, made absolute a rule for the removal from that Court to the High Court of the indictment against the company. Rex v. Puck & Co. (No. 1), 28 T. L. R. 197—D.

Jurisdiction of Quarter Sessions—Indictment for Living on Earnings of Prostitution.]—An indictment under sub-section 5 of section 7 of the Criminal Law Amendment Act, 1912, for the offence of knowingly living on the earnings of prostitution, can be tried by a Court of quarter sessions. Rex v. Hill: Rex v. Churchman, 83 L. J. K.B. 820: [1914] 2 K.B. 386: 110 L. T. 831: 78 J. P. 303: 24 Cox C.C. 150—C.C.A.

—— Validity of Indictment.]—In an indictment for this offence a person can properly be charged with having committed the offence on one specified day only. Ib.

II. INDICTMENT.

See also Vol. IV. 1731, 2186.

"Riding or going armed"—Indictment.]—An indictment for riding or going armed against the form of the Statute of Northampton (3 Edw. 3, c. 3), which omits to negative lawful occasion, is bad, as omitting an essential ingredient of the offence, and will not be cured by verdict. Rex v. Smith, [1914] 2 Ir. R. 190—C.C.R.

Counts in an indictment charging that the accused went about on a public road, without lawful occasion, in such a manner as to be a nuisance to and to alarm the public lawfully using the road, and charging that the accused on the public road unlawfully discharged a revolver to the great danger of the public, even assuming that the omission of the words "lawfully using the highway" does not make the latter count bad, cannot be sustained where it appears that none of the public were present or capable of being alarmed or endangered. Ib.

Whether the omission of the averment that the acts were done in terrorem populi would be aided or cured by verdict, quære. Ib.

Several Counts—Obtaining Chattels—Obtaining Credit.]—Where a prisoner is charged on an indictment containing several counts, some charging him with obtaining chattels, and some charging him with obtaining credit, on false pretences, the prosecution should be called on to proceed on one count at a time, and the prisoner should not be tried upon all the counts at the same time. Rex v. Norman, 84 L. J. K.B. 440: [1915] 1 K.B. 341: 112 L. T. 784: 79 J. P. 221: 31 T. L. R. 173—C.C.A.

Joinder of Offences in One Count—Time for Taking Objection—No Miscarriage of Justice.]—The appellant was indicted in two counts for incest. Each count charged the offence as having been committed "on divers days" between certain dates. Objection to the indictment on the ground of duplicity was taken after the appellant had pleaded:—Held, that the indictment was bad: but that in the circumstances no miscarriage of justice had taken place, and that under the proviso in section 4, sub-section 1 of the Criminal Appeal Act, 1907, the appeal should be dismissed. Rex v. Thompson, 83 L. J. K.B. 643: [1914] 2 K.B. 99: 110 L. T. 272: 78 J. P. 212: 24 Cox C.C. 43: 30 T. L. R. 223—C.C.A.

Quære as to whether the objection should have been taken before plea. Ib.

Joinder of Counts for Separate Felonies—Quashing Indictment—Putting Prosecution to Election—Discretion of Judge.]—There is no rule of law that various distinct felonies cannot be charged in separate counts in one indictment. But if the Judge thinks that the prisoner will be embarrassed by being put upon his trial on an indictment in which there are several counts for distinct felonies, he may either quash the indictment, if he thinks fit, if the application is made before plea, or he may make the prosecution elect upon which of the counts they will proceed. It is, however, solely in the discretion of the Court whether or not either one or other of those courses should be pursued. In determining whether or not he should exercise his discretion, the Judge ought to consider whether the overt acts relied upon in support of the offences charged in the various counts of the indictment are in substance the same for each offence. Rex v. Lockett, Grizzard, Gutwirth, and Silverman, 83 L. J. K.B. 1193: [1914] 2 K.B. 720: 110 L. T. 398: 78 J. P. 196: 24 Cox C.C. 114: 30 T. L. R. 233—C.C.A.

Two Counts—Libel—Discretion of Judge.]—Where an indictment contains two counts, one charging libel and the other charging publication of the libel for the purpose of extorting money, it is for the Judge at the trial in his discretion to decide whether the prosecution must proceed on one count of the indictment. Rex v. Seham Yousry, 84 L. J.

III. TRIAL.

See also Vol. IV. 1763, 2188.

1. Arraignment.

Prisoner Standing Mute — Incapacity to Understand Proceedings—Insanity—Order for Prisoner's Detention — Jurisdiction.] — A prisoner who was totally deaf and unable to read or write, on being arraigned upon a charge of felony, stood mute, and a jury impanelled in that behalf found that he was mute by the visitation of God, and, further, that he was incapable of pleading to and taking his trial upon the indictment, and of understanding and following the proceedings, by reason of his inability to communicate with and be communicated with by others. The Judge thereupon made an order under section 2 of the Criminal Lunatics Act, 1800, that the prisoner should be treated as non-sane and kept in custody during his Majesty's pleasure :—Held, that the finding of the jury, although not an express finding that the prisoner was insane, amounted in substance to such a finding, and was sufficient to entitle the Judge to make the order. Rex v. Stafford Prison (Governor), 78 L. J. K.B. 629; [1909] 2 K.B. 81; 100 L. T. 993; 73 J. P. 284; 22 Cox C.C. 143; 25 T. L. R. 440—D.

2. Pleas.

Plea of "Guilty" Wrongly Entered—New Trial—Discretion of the Court.]—A prisoner is not to be taken to admit an offence with which he is charged unless he pleads guilty to the charge in unmistakable and unambiguous terms. Rex v. Golathan, 84 L. J. K.B. 758; 112 L. T. 1048; 79 J. P. 270; 31 T. L. R. 177—C.C.A.

Where the Court holds that the proceedings which have culminated in the conviction appealed against are abortive and void the Court may at its discretion direct that the appellant shall be tried for the offence with which he was charged, and may order that he shall be kept in custody until such trial. Ib.

Plea of "Guilty" to Feloniously Receiving—Written Statement Disclaiming Felonious Intention—Entry of Plea of "Guilty"—Duty of Court to Enter Plea of "Not guilty."]—Where a prisoner formally pleads guilty to a felony, but accompanies the plea by a statement disclaiming any felonious intention, it is the duty of the Court to enter a plea of "Not guilty." The appellant pleaded guilty to a charge of receiving certain horses knowing them to have been feloniously stolen, and handed to the Court a written statement which concluded with these words : "I am guilty of taking the horses not knowing them to have been stolen." A plea of "Guilty" was thereupon entered on the record, and sentence was passed :—Held, that the appellant had not pleaded guilty, and that no legal sentence had been passed; that the case must go back, and the appellant be called upon to plead afresh to the indictment. Rex v. Ingleson, 84 L. J. K.B. 280; [1915] 1 K.B. 512; 112 L. T. 313—C.C.A.

Coinage Offence—Possession of Mould without Lawful Excuse—Plea by Prisoner that he had Possession of Mould—Effect of Plea.]—The appellant was charged with being unlawfully in possession of a coining mould without lawful excuse. When called upon to plead, he said that he was guilty of having the mould in his possession. This was entered as a plea of "Guilty." Later, when sentence was about to be passed, the appellant set up what he regarded as a lawful excuse for the possession of the mould. No effect was, however, given to this statement of the appellant, who was then sentenced :—Held, that the appellant had not pleaded "Guilty"; that no legal sentence had been passed; and that the case must go back and the appellant called upon to plead to the indictment. Rex v. Baker, 28 T. L. R. 363—C.C.A.

Autrefois Acquit.]—The plea of autrefois acquit is not proved unless it is shewn that the verdict of acquittal on the previous charge necessarily involved an acquittal of the charge to which the plea of autrefois acquit is pleaded, or that the accused could have been convicted of the latter charge on the trial of the previous charge. Rex v. Barron (No. 2), 83 L. J. K.B. 786; [1914] 2 K.B. 570; 78 J. P. 311; 58 S. J. 557; 30 T. L. R. 422—C.C.A.

The appellant was acquitted on a charge of sodomy. He was then indicted for committing an act of gross indecency with the same male person, to which he pleaded autrefois acquit :—Held, that as the verdict of acquittal on the charge of sodomy did not involve an acquittal on the charge of gross indecency, because neither the act of penetration, which is an essential element of the charge of sodomy, nor the intention to penetrate, which is an essential element of an attempt to commit that offence, is an essential element of the offence of gross indecency, and that as it was conceded that the appellant could not in law have been convicted of gross indecency on the more serious charge, the plea of autrefois acquit was not proved. Ib.

—— Admissibility after Plea of "Not guilty."]—The appellant was charged with murder on a coroner's inquisition, and on indictment with the manslaughter of the same person, to both of which charges he pleaded "Not guilty." No evidence was offered by the prosecution on the inquisition, and the jury found a verdict of "Not guilty" upon it. Before the trial of the indictment the appellant's counsel handed in a written plea of autrefois acquit, additional to the above plea of "Not guilty," which was accepted by the Judge. The Judge then directed the jury that there was no evidence in support of the plea, and the jury consequently found that the appellant had not been autrefois acquit. He was then tried on this plea of "Not guilty" and convicted :—Held, that, whether the Judge was right or not in directing the jury that there was no evidence in support of the plea of autrefois acquit, the appellant, having pleaded "Not guilty," was not entitled to plead autrefois acquit in addition as long as the plea of "Not guilty" stood on the record, and that therefore he could not rely on that plea as a ground for quashing the conviction. Rex v. Banks, 81 L. J. K.B. 120; [1911] 2 K.B. 1095; 106 L. T. 48; 75 J. P. 567; 22 Cox C.C. 653; 55 S. J. 727; 27 T. L. R. 575—C.C.A.

Plea of Autrefois Convict—Manslaughter of Child — Previous Conviction for Wilful Neglect.]—By section 12, sub-section 4 of the Children Act, 1908, "Upon the trial of any person over the age of sixteen indicted for the manslaughter of a child or young person of whom he had the custody, charge or care, it shall be lawful for the jury, if they are satisfied that the accused is guilty of an offence under this section in respect of such child or young person, to find the accused guilty of such offence." The appellant was convicted before Justices, under section 12 of the above Act, of neglecting her children. After this conviction one of the children died, and the appellant was then indicted for manslaughter and was convicted:—Held, that on the indictment for manslaughter the plea of autrefois convict was not available to the appellant, as the child did not die until after the first conviction and as the above enactment did not enable the jury to find a verdict of wilful neglect in a case where on the facts they came to the conclusion that the accused was guilty of manslaughter. Rex v. Tonks, 60 S. J. 122; 32 T. L. R. 137—C.C.A.

Conviction Quashed on Certiorari—Accused again Charged with Same Offence — Res Judicata.]—Where a conviction by Justices is quashed on certiorari on the ground that it is bad on its face by reason of the sentence pronounced being one which the Justices had no justification to award, the case is to be treated as if the conviction had not been made. The accused may be put on trial again on the same charge, and he cannot successfully avail himself of the objection of autrefois convict or autrefois acquit, either of which must have for its basis an adjudication in fact within jurisdiction. Conlin v. Patterson, [1915] 2 Ir. R. 169—K.B. D.

3. Summing-up.

Whatever line of defence is taken by counsel at a trial, it is for the Judge to leave to the jury all the questions which appear to him to arise upon the evidence, whether they have been raised by counsel or not. Rex v. Hopper, 84 L. J. K.B. 1371; [1915] 2 K.B. 431; 113 L. T. 381; 79 J. P. 335; 59 S. J. 478; 31 T. L. R. 360—C.C.A.

The Court must not exclude from consideration any view of the facts of a case other than that presented by the prisoner in giving evidence. Ib.

4. Recognisances.

Defendant not Bound Over for Definite Period.]—The defendant was convicted of publishing a libel, and was bound over to be of good behaviour, but the recognisance contained no time limit:—Held, without deciding whether there was power to order a person to enter into a recognisance to be of good behaviour for an indefinite time, that the old-established practice should be followed and a definite time should be fixed. The Court accordingly fixed a period of five years. Rex v. Edgar, 109 L. T. 416; 77 J. P. 356; 23 Cox C.C. 558; 57 S. J. 519; 29 T. L. R. 512—C.C.A.

IV. JURIES.

See also Vol. IV. 1791, 2190.

Application to Quash Jury Panel.]—Where the record of a criminal trial has been moved into the King's Bench, the Divisional Court will not entertain an application made to its inherent jurisdiction to quash the panel on the ground that the jurors' book is irregular. Rex v. Ryan (No. 2), [1914] 2 Ir. R. 283—K.B. D.

Illness of Juryman—Separation from Rest of Jury—Sworn Jury Bailiff.]—Upon a trial for murder one of the jurymen was taken ill. He left the jury box and was taken out of Court, accompanied by two medical men and a jury bailiff, who, however, was not sworn for that purpose. After an absence of three-quarters of an hour, during which time no one but the doctors spoke to him, the juryman rejoined the rest of the jury and the trial proceeded. The prisoner having been convicted,—Held, that as the evidence shewed that there had been no opportunity of tampering with the juryman, the fact that he had left the Court in charge of an unsworn bailiff did not establish that there had been a mistrial. Rex v. Crippen, 80 L. J. K.B. 290; [1911] 1 K.B. 149; 103 L. T. 705; 75 J. P. 141; 22 Cox C.C. 289; 27 T. L. R. 69—C.C.A.

Separation of Juror from Colleagues after Summing-up — Abortive Trial — Admissibility of Juror's Explanation.]—If a juror, after the Judge has summed up in any criminal trial, separates himself from his colleagues, and, not being under the control of the Court, converses or is in a position to converse with other persons, it is an irregularity which renders the whole proceedings abortive. Hence, where a juror, when the jury retired to consider their verdict, separated himself from them and left the precincts of the Court for a short time, and then rejoined them, the conviction was quashed. But the prosecution were at liberty to recommence the proceedings. An explanatory letter of the juror was not admissible in evidence in the Court of Criminal Appeal. Rex v. Ketteridge, 84 L. J. K.B. 352; [1915] 1 K.B. 467; 112 L. T. 783; 79 J. P. 216; 59 S. J. 163; 31 T. L. R. 115—C.C.A.

Evidence as to Bias — Appeal.]—On an appeal where suggestions were made as to the probability of bias on the part of two of the jurymen who tried the case, the Court allowed evidence to be called in reference to those suggestions, but intimated that the granting of such leave must not be taken as a precedent. Rex v. Hancox, 29 T. L. R. 331—C.C.A.

Juryman — Alleged Misconduct.] — On an appeal against a conviction the appellant applied for leave to call evidence that one of the jury had stated on the evening of the first day of the trial that all the jury were friendly with the police, and it made no difference what the appellant said. In the grounds of appeal there was nothing as to the misconduct of a juryman :—Held, that the Court ought not to accede to the application. Rex v. Syme, 112 L. T. 136; 79 J. P. 40; 30 T. L. R. 691—C.C.A.

Discharge of Jury—Effect of Subsequent Trial before Another Jury.]—Where a prisoner has been put upon his trial, given in charge to the jury, and, after the case has been opened, some of the witnesses are found not to be present owing to some unforeseen accident, it may be proper to adjourn the trial generally, but where the witnesses are absent owing to some mistake—for example, as to the date of trial—the proper practice is to adjourn the case for a reasonable time for the prisoner to be tried by the same jury, and, if that cannot be done, a verdict should be taken on the evidence as it stands. The jury should not be discharged and the case adjourned merely to enable the prosecution to establish a stronger case against the prisoner. Rex v. Lewis, 78 L. J. K.B. 722; 100 L. T. 976; 73 J. P. 346; 22 Cox C.C. 141; 25 T. L. R. 582—C.C.A.

Prisoners Tried in one Court—Discharge of Jury when Unable to Agree by Chairman of other Court—Discretion of "presiding Judge" —Presence of Prisoners when Jury Discharged.]—At quarter sessions, where two Courts had been formed, the appellants were tried in the second Court. The jury retired to consider their verdict, and the second Court then adjourned. During the adjournment, and in the absence of the chairman of the second Court, the chairman of the first Court, ascertaining that the jury, who were considering their verdict in the appellants' case, were unable to agree, sent for them and discharged them, and then tried the appellants with another jury. It did not appear whether the appellants were present in Court when the first jury were discharged :—Held, that as the whole body of Justices constituted the Court of quarter sessions, and that as it must be assumed that the first Court was properly constituted of two or more Justices, the chairman of the first Court could competently discharge the jury; and query, whether it was necessary, in order to constitute a valid discharge of the jury, that the appellants should then have been present in Court. Rex v. Richardson, 82 L. J. K.B. 333; [1913] 1 K.B. 395; 108 L. T. 384; 77 J. P. 248; 23 Cox C.C. 332; 57 S. J. 247; 29 T. L. R. 228—C.C.A.

Discussion of Clerk of Assize with Jury.]—On the trial of a prisoner at assizes, some time after the jury had retired to consider their verdict, the clerk of assize went to their room and asked if they had agreed or were likely to agree. The jury then put some questions to him, and he answered them and a discussion took place. Later he visited the jury again, and a further discussion took place. Eventually the jury found the prisoner guilty : —Held, that evidence from the jurymen to prove the above facts was inadmissible, but that the Court could act upon a report made by the clerk of assize, and that as it was impossible to say that but for the discussions and the advice given by him the jury would have come to a unanimous conclusion, the conviction must be quashed. Rex v. Willmont, 78 J. P. 352; 30 T. L. R. 499—C.C.A.

V. EVIDENCE.

1. Confessions and Admissions.

See also Vol. IV. 1811, 2192.

Confession—Admissibility.]—A private in an Indian regiment murdered one of the officers. Shortly afterwards, while he was in custody, the commanding officer asked him, "Why have you done such a senseless act?" and he replied, "Some three or four days he has been abusing me, and without doubt I killed him." At the trial the Judge admitted this statement, which was objected to by counsel for the defence. The prisoner was convicted :—Held, that even if the evidence was inadmissible—which semble that it was not—there being ample undisputed evidence aliunde of the guilt of the prisoner, and it being very improbable that the statement influenced the verdict of the jury, there was no such miscarriage of justice as would justify the Judicial Committee in advising an interference in the matter. Ibrahim v. Regem, 83 L. J. P.C. 185; [1914] A.C. 599; 111 L. T. 20; 30 T. L. R. 383—P.C.

Statement by Prisoner in Nature of Confession.]—A statement in the nature of a confession was made by a prisoner to a police officer. The police officer had not introduced the subject or held out any hope of pardon to the prisoner :—Held, that such statement was properly admitted in evidence against the prisoner. Rex v. Godinho, 76 J. P. 16; 55 S. J. 807; 28 T. L. R. 3—C.C.A.

Prisoners in Adjoining Cells—Conversation — Prisoners Charged Jointly — Statement by One—Implication of Other—Admissibility.]— Where two persons are charged with being concerned in the same offence and are put in adjoining cells and the police overhear a conversation between them, evidence of the conversation is admissible at the trial. Rex v. Gardner, 85 L. J. K.B. 206; 32 T. L. R. 97 —C.C.A.

Where two persons have been separately arrested and separately charged with an offence and have subsequently been put in the dock together and charged jointly, a statement made previously by one of them behind the back of the other and implicating him ought not to be read in the presence of that other. Nevertheless, any material statement or confession by the other in answer to such statement is admissible in evidence, but the Judge ought to reject it if he is satisfied that it was read over to the prisoner for the mere purpose of getting an admission from him. Rex v. Hancox, 85 L. J. K.B. 206; 60 S. J. 76; 32 T. L. R. 97—C.C.A.

Accused Questioned by Police Officer.]—No police officer has a right to put any question to an accused person when he is once in custody. To say to him "It is alleged so and so" is only a subtle form of cross-examination. Rex v. Winkel, 76 J. P. 191—Avory, J.

The fact that a prisoner is in custody does not necessarily make a statement made by him in reply to a question by a police constable inadmissible in evidence. Reg v. Gavin (15 Cox C.C. 656) disapproved. Rex v. Best, 78 L. J. K.B. 658; [1909] 1 K.B. 692; 100 L. T. 622; 22 Cox C.C. 97; 25 T. L. R. 280—C.C.A.

Statements made by an accused person to a constable in reply to an enquiry are not inadmissible on the ground that the constable did not previously caution him, provided that the constable did not, before making the enquiry, make up his mind to take the person into custody or to take proceedings against him. Lewis v. Harris, 110 L. T. 337; 78 J. P. 68; 24 Cox C.C. 66; 58 S. J. 156; 30 T. L. R. 109—D.

Two Persons Jointly Charged—Written Statement by One Prisoner—Admissibility against the Other.]—A written statement made by one of two persons jointly charged with a criminal offence may be admissible in evidence against the other, notwithstanding that the latter, when the statement was read over to him, said that it was false. Reg v. Smith (18 Cox C.C. 470; 61 J. P. 120) dissented from. Rex v. Thompson, 79 L. J. K.B. 321; [1910] 1 K.B. 640; 102 L. T. 257; 74 J. P. 176; 22 Cox C.C. 299; 26 T. L. R. 252—C.C.A.

Statement by One Prisoner Implicating Another—Denial of Truth of Statement—Direction to Jury.]—The jury should be directed that a statement made by one prisoner implicating another and immediately denied, although strictly admissible as evidence, must not be accepted as evidence of the facts contained in such statement. Notwithstanding the lack of such a direction to the jury by the presiding Judge at the trial, the Court will act under the proviso to section 4 of the Criminal Appeal Act, 1907, if they are satisfied that no substantial miscarriage of justice has taken place. Rex v. Curnock, 111 L. T. 816; 24 Cox C.C. 440—C.C.A.

Evidence of Previous Convictions—Statements in Calendar.]—The appellant was convicted of larceny. He had been previously convicted, but the convictions were not formally proved. The Recorder, addressing him, said, "You have a long list against you," and the appellant replied, "Yes, sir":—Held, that the way in which the appellant was treated with regard to his previous convictions was irregular, and that the sentence imposed upon him should be reduced. Per Avory, J.: The admission that there was a long list against the appellant was not an admission by him that the list was true. The habit of acting on statements appearing in the calendar is irregular. Rex v. Metcalfe, 29 T. L. R. 512—C.C.A.

2. Depositions.

See also Vol. IV. 1835, 2195.

Person Charged with Indictable Offence—Material Witness Dangerously Ill—Duty of Magistrate to take Depositions at Residence of Witness.]—A magistrate before whom a person charged with an indictable offence is brought is bound under section 17 of the Indictable Offences Act, 1848, to go to the residence of a witness who is so dangerously ill that he is unable to appear in Court, in order to take the deposition of the witness in the presence of the accused person, provided that it is practicable for him to do so. The question whether or not it is practicable for the magistrate to take the deposition must be decided by the magistrate in his discretion, which he must exercise in a judicial manner. This obligation exists whenever a person is charged with any indictable offence, and not merely in cases of murder or manslaughter, and does not depend on whether the magistrate is asked by a superior officer of the police to take the deposition. If it is not practicable for that magistrate to take the deposition application may be made under section 6 of the Criminal Law Amendment Act, 1867, to another Justice to take the deposition. Rex v. Bros; Hardy, Ex parte, 80 L. J. K.B. 147; [1911] 1 K.B. 159; 103 L. T. 728; 74 J. P. 483; 22 Cox C.C. 352; 55 S. J. 47; 27 T. L. R. 41—D.

Deposition of Accused before Justices on Charge of Misdemeanour—Admissibility of Deposition at Trial for Felony.]—The prisoner was indicted under section 4 of the Criminal Law Amendment Act, 1885, for the felony of carnally knowing, in March, 1911, a girl under the age of thirteen years. He was also indicted under section 5 of the same Act for the misdemeanour of carnally knowing the same girl in April, 1912, she then being above the age of thirteen years and under the age of sixteen years. When before the Justices the prisoner, who was then only charged with the misdemeanour under section 5, gave evidence, in the course of which he admitted having had intercourse with the girl in March, 1911, and at Christmas, 1911, but not at any later date. At the trial the prosecution proceeded with the indictment for the felony under section 4 of the Act and tendered in evidence the prisoner's deposition before the Justices when before them on the misdemeanour charge under section 5:—Held, that the deposition was admissible in evidence. Rex v. Chapman, 29 T. L. R. 117—Channell, J.

Deposition of Accused before Coroner—Admissibility of Deposition at Trial of Accused.]—At the trial of M. for manslaughter the prosecution proposed to put in as evidence against him his deposition at the inquest before the coroner :—Held, that the deposition was admissible under the Coroners Act, 1887, and that it could be proved by any person present at the inquest who could prove the coroner's handwriting and that the deposition was read over to and was signed by M. Rex v. Marriott, 75 J. P. 288; 22 Cox C.C. 211—Avory, J.

Contradiction by Witness at Trial of Deposition at Police Court—Hostile Witness.] —See Rex v. Williams, post, col. 451.

3. Statements by Deceased Persons.

Statements by Deceased Woman as to her Intention to Perform Operation on Herself.] —The appellant was indicted for having used an instrument on a woman with intent to procure her miscarriage. The woman upon whom the operation was alleged to have been performed had died although not as the result of the operation. At the trial counsel for the appellant proposed to ask in cross-examination a witness (a) whether the deceased had said to her some time previously to the date of the alleged illegal operation by the appellant that she intended to perform an illegal operation upon herself; and (b) whether the deceased had said about a week after the date of the alleged illegal operation by the appellant that she had in fact performed, or had attempted to perform, upon herself an illegal operation. The Judge refused to allow this evidence to be given. The appellant was convicted :—Held, that the evidence was rightly rejected. Reg. v. Gloster (16 Cox. C.C. 471) approved. Rex v. Thomson, 81 L. J. K.B. 892; [1912] 3 K.B. 19; 107 L. T. 464; 76 J. P. 431; 23 Cox C.C. 187; 28 T. L. R. 478—C.C.A.

Admissibility as Dying Declaration.]—In order that a statement of a deceased person should be admissible as a dying declaration it must be proved that at the time the statement was made death was imminent and that the person making the statement was under a settled hopeless expectation of death. The real test is not that the person making the statement should believe that he was at the immediate point of death, but that he should have given up every hope of life. Rex v. Perry, 78 L. J. K.B. 1034; [1909] 2 K.B. 697; 101 L. T. 127; 73 J. P. 456; 53 S. J. 810; 22 Cox C.C. 154; 25 T. L. R. 676—C.C.A.

4. Accomplices.

See also Vol. IV. 1852, 2197.

Corroboration.]—The kind of corroboration necessary to corroborate the evidence of an accomplice must depend upon the nature of the particular charge which is being enquired into. Rex v. Winkel, 76 J. P. 191—Avory, J.

It is the practice of the Court of Criminal Appeal to require corroboration of the evidence of an accomplice in cases where it is not necessary by statute. Rex v. Everest (2 Cr. App. Rep. 130) and Rex v. Wilson (6 Cr. App. Rep. 125) followed. Rex v. Cohen, 111 L. T. 77; 24 Cox C.C. 216—C.C.A.

Whether Corroboration Necessary—Living on Earnings of Prostitution — Evidence of Woman.]—There is no rule of law that on a charge against a man of living on the earnings of prostitution the evidence of the woman must be corroborated, but in such a case the Judge is justified in warning the jury not to accept the woman's evidence without most careful scrutiny. Rex v. King (No. 2), 111 L. T. 80; 24 Cox C.C. 223; 30 T. L. R. 476—C.C.A.

Child — Statement Made in Presence of Accused.]—The respondent was charged with an indecent assault on a child of tender years. At the trial the child was called as a witness and gave evidence not on oath, under the provisions of the Children Act, 1908, s. 30. Evidence of witnesses as to statements made by the child shortly after the commission of the offence, identifying the accused, and giving particulars of the offence charged, was admitted, and the prisoner was convicted :—Held, that such statements were not admissible as part of the res gestæ, and if they were admissible either as part of the act of identification or as statements made in the presence of the accused, which semble that they were, they did not amount to corroboration of the testimony of the child given in Court, as required by the statute, and that the conviction must be quashed. Rex v. Norton (79 L. J. K.B. 756; [1910] 2 K.B. 496) discussed and explained. Director of Public Prosecutions v. Christie, 83 L. J. K.B. 1097; [1914] A.C. 545; 111 L. T. 220; 78 J. P. 321; 24 Cox C.C. 249; 58 S. J. 515; 30 T. L. R. 471—H.L. (E.)

Wife of Accomplice.] — Whether the testimony of the wife of an accomplice can be corroboration of his statements, quære. Rex v. Payne, 29 T. L. R. 250—C.C.A.

Misdirection as to Corroboration.] — Conviction for murder quashed on the ground of misdirection by the Judge as to the extent of corroboration of a witness whose character and whose part in the transaction were such that his evidence required corroboration. Rex v. Ellson, 76 J. P. 88; 28 T. L. R. 1 — C.C.A.

5. Competency of Witnesses.

See also Vol. IV. 1855, 2198.

a. Prisoners.

Prisoner Giving Evidence on Behalf of Co-prisoner—Cross-examination as to his own Guilt.]—A prisoner who refuses to give evidence on his own behalf, but who gives evidence on behalf of a fellow-prisoner, is liable under section 1, sub-section (e) of the Criminal Evidence Act, 1898, to be cross-examined in order to shew that he himself is guilty of the offence charged. Rex v. Rowland, 79 L. J. K.B. 327; [1910] 1 K.B. 458; 102 L. T. 112; 74 J. P. 144; 22 Cox C.C. 273; 26 T. L. R. 202—C.C.A.

Questions Tending to Shew Commission of Another Offence—Admissibility—"Proof."]—The appellant was charged with having had carnal knowledge of a girl under sixteen years of age. The prosecutrix stated that at the time of the commission of the offence charged he had told her of his immoral relations with another girl, also alleged to be under sixteen years of age, and had said that he hoped that the prosecutrix would be as loving to him as this other girl had been. The appellant gave evidence on his own behalf, and in cross-examination was asked whether he had had such immoral relations, and letters alleged to have been written by him to the other girl were put to him:—Held, that, although they tended to shew that he had committed an offence other than that with which he was then charged, the questions were admissible on the ground that they were relevant to the charge then being tried as tending to establish a fact consistent only with his guilt, and that they came within the exception contained in section 1 (f) (i) of the Criminal Evidence Act, 1898. Rex v. Chitson, 79 L. J. K.B. 10; [1909] 2 K.B. 945; 102 L. T. 224; 73 J. P. 491; 22 Cox C.C. 286; 53 S. J. 746; 25 T. L. R. 818—C.C.A.

Semble, "proof" in the above sub-section is equivalent to "evidence." Ib.

In considering whether, within section 1 (f) of the Criminal Evidence Act, 1898, a question put to a prisoner in cross-examination tends to shew that he has committed an offence other than that charged in the particular indictment, it must be judged by the light of the other questions put to him. Any question or series of questions which would reasonably lead the jury to believe that it is being imputed to the prisoner that he has committed another offence tends to shew that he has committed that other offence. The object of the enactment is that, except in the specified cases, it should not be suggested to the minds of the jury by means of any questions put to the prisoner that he has committed another offence. Where a question of this nature is improperly put, it is the duty of the Judge not to wait for any objection from the prisoner's counsel, but to stop such question himself; and if, by mischance, the question is put, it is the duty of the Judge to direct the jury to disregard it, and not to let it influence their minds. Rex v. Ellis, 79 L. J. K.B. 841; [1910] 2 K.B. 746; 102 L. T. 922; 74 J. P. 388; 22 Cox C.C. 330; 26 T. L. R. 535—C.C.A.

Clause 2 of section 1 (f) of the Criminal Evidence Act, 1898, is intended to apply to cases where witnesses to character are called, or where evidence of the good character of the prisoner is sought to be elicited from the witnesses for the prosecution. It does not apply to mere assertions of innocence, or repudiation of guilt, on the part of the prisoner, nor to reasons given by him for such assertions or repudiation. Ib.

The appellant was convicted of obtaining money from D. by false pretences. It was alleged by the prosecution that various articles of china referred to in the indictment were sold by the appellant to D. under an agreement that he was to charge D. the cost price plus 10 per cent. profit or commission; that the appellant represented to D. that the cost was much in excess of the real cost; and that by this means he had obtained from D. much larger sums than he was entitled to. The appellant gave evidence on his own behalf, and in cross-examination questions were put to him suggesting that in other transactions he had obtained money from D. by alleging that certain china figures were genuine pieces of old Dresden china, whereas he must have known that they were not:—Held, that, as evidence that the appellant had committed frauds in connection with those other transactions was not admissible to shew that he was guilty of the frauds charged, the questions put in cross-examination were improperly allowed, inasmuch as they tended to shew that the appellant had committed an offence other than that with which he was charged, and that the conviction must be quashed, as the jury must have been influenced by such evidence. Ib.

Question Tending to Shew Bad Character—Relevant Matter.]—A question put in cross-examination to a person charged with an offence is admissible if it is relevant to the issue which is being tried, notwithstanding that it tends to shew that such person is of bad character, and notwithstanding the provisions of section 1 (f) of the Criminal Evidence Act, 1898. Rex v. Kurasch, 84 L. J. K.B. 1497; [1915] 2 K.B. 749; 113 L. T. 431; 79 J. P. 399—C.C.A.

The appellant and four other men were tried and convicted for conspiring by means of false pretences to defraud the prosecutor, the false pretences alleged being the holding of a mock auction. The defendants denied the false pretences, and also alleged that they were all merely the servants of a woman who was the proprietress of the auction business. Evidence was given for the prosecution that the appellant had said at the time of his arrest that one of the other defendants was employed by him. The appellant gave evidence, and was asked in cross-examination whether it was not the fact that he and the proprietress of the business were at the date of the offence living together as man and wife. The appellant answered the question in the affirmative. The appellant appealed against his conviction on the ground that this question was a contravention of the Criminal Evidence Act, 1898, s. 1 (f), in that it tended to shew that he was a person of bad character:—Held, that, the defence having raised the issue that the defendants were only the servants of the proprietress of the business, it was material to shew what were the real relations existing between her and the appellant, and that the question was therefore admissible. Principle of law laid down in Rex v. Fisher (79 L. J. K.B. 187; [1910] 1 K.B. 149) and Rex v. Rodney (82 L. J. K.B. 1070; [1913] 3 K.B. 468) approved and applied. Ib.

Conduct of Defence — Imputations on Character of Witness for Prosecution—Cross-examination of Prisoner.]—Circumstances in which the Court held that the cross-examination of the appellant as to character was justified in view of the questions put by him in cross-examination to one of the witnesses for the prosecution. Rex v. Watson, 109 L. T. 335; 23 Cox C.C. 543; 29 T. L. R. 450—C.C.A.

A prisoner on his trial for robbery with violence, in giving evidence on his own behalf, stated that a detective had coached the prosecutor as to the amount he was to say he was robbed of, and that a police inspector had struck him in the face when he protested against the coaching of the prosecutor. Neither of these police officers was a witness in the case. The prisoner also said in his evidence that the prosecutor was a habitual drunkard, and further that the police constable who arrested him had used improper violence in doing so:—Held, that those statements did not involve imputations upon the character of the prosecutor or the witnesses for the prosecution within section 1 (f) of the Criminal Evidence Act, 1898, so as to justify the cross-examination of the prisoner as to his previous convictions. Rex v. Westfall, 107 L. T. 463; 76 J. P. 335; 23 Cox C.C. 185; 28 T. L. R. 297—C.C.A.

The excepting words of section 1 (f) (ii) of the Criminal Evidence Act, 1898, which section enacts that a person charged and called as a witness in pursuance of the Act shall not be required to answer any question tending to shew that he has committed or been convicted of or been charged with any offence other than the one then charged against him, "unless . . . (ii) . . . the nature or conduct of the defence is such as to involve imputations on the character of the prosecutor or the witnesses for the prosecution," must receive their ordinary and natural interpretation, and must not be qualified by adding or inserting the words "unnecessarily" or "unjustifiably" or "for purposes other than that of developing the defence," or other similar words. Hence, where the prisoner's counsel cross-examined witnesses for the prosecution to shew that it was they who had committed the offence with which the prisoner was charged, it was held that the conduct or nature of the defence involved imputations on their character within the meaning of the above section, and that he could be cross-examined as to a previous conviction. Rex v. Bridgwater (74 L. J. K.B. 35; [1905] 1 K.B. 131) and Rex v. Preston (78 L. J. K.B. 335; [1909] 1 K.B. 568) distinguished. Rex v. Hudson, 81 L. J. K.B. 861; [1912] 2 K.B. 464; 107 L. T. 31; 76 J. P. 421; 23 Cox C.C. 61; 56 S. J. 574; 28 T. L. R. 459—C.C.A.

On the hearing of a charge of subornation of perjury a witness for the prosecution was put forward as an accomplice and a man of bad character. He was cross-examined on behalf of the accused as to a suggested charge of fraud to which no reference had been made:—Held, that this amounted to an imputation on the character of the witness which entitled the prosecution to cross-examine the accused as to a previous conviction. Rex v. Cohen, 111 L. T. 77; 24 Cox C.C. 216—C.C.A.

Comment by Judge on Fact of Person not Giving Evidence.]—If a prisoner elects not to take advantage of the provisions of section 1 of the Criminal Evidence Act, 1898 (61 & 62 Vict. c. 36), and does not offer himself as a witness on his own behalf, it is entirely in the discretion of the Judge to comment on that fact in whatever way and to whatever extent he thinks fit. Rex v. Smith, 84 L. J. K.B. 2153; 59 S. J. 704; 31 T. L. R. 617—C.C.A.

b. Other Witnesses.

Identification.]—Observations as to methods of identification of accused persons. Rex v. Chapman, 28 T. L. R. 81—C.C.A.

Opinion of Medical Witnesses — Admissibility.]—The opinion of medical witnesses on any matter is admissible in evidence, if the giving of such opinion entails the exercise of their professional skill and knowledge. Rex v. Smith, 84 L. J. K.B. 2153; 59 S. J. 704; 31 T. L. R. 617—C.C.A.

Murder—Expert Giving Evidence as to whether Wound Self-inflicted or not—Expert not having seen Body of Deceased—Admissibility.]—In a trial for murder an expert who has not seen and examined the body of the deceased, but who has heard a description given by a doctor or other witness who has seen the body and the wounds thereon, may be called as a witness and may competently be asked whether in his opinion, assuming the facts described by the witness who has seen the body to be true, the wounds could have been self-inflicted or not. Rex v. Mason, 76 J. P. 184; 28 T. L. R. 120—C.C.A.

Confidential Communication between Prisoner and Solicitor.] — Evidence of a confidential communication between a prisoner and his solicitor is admissible if the consultation with the solicitor, in the course of which such communication was made, was sought by the prisoner for the purpose of ascertaining how to commit the offence charged against him, or whether it was necessary or expedient to commit it in order to obtain a desired end. Reg. v. Cox (54 L. J. M.C. 41; 14 Q.B. D. 153) followed. Rex v. Smith, 84 L. J. K.B. 2153; 59 S. J. 704; 31 T. L. R. 617—C.C.A.

Husband or Wife—Competent or Compellable Witness.]—By section 4, sub-section 1 of the Criminal Evidence Act, 1898, the wife or husband of a person charged with an offence under any enactment mentioned in the schedule to that Act is a competent but not compellable witness against the person charged. Leach v. Director of Public Prosecutions, 81 L. J. K.B. 616; [1912] A.C. 305; 106 L. T. 281; 22 Cox C.C. 721; 76 J. P. 201; 56 S. J. 342; 28 T. L. R. 289—H.L. (E.)

——Living on Earnings of Wife's Prostitution—Admissibility of Wife's Evidence.]—Upon an information against the prisoner

under section 1 of the Vagrancy Act, 1898, for knowingly living on the earnings of the prostitution of his wife, the prosecution tendered the prisoner's wife as a witness against him, but the magistrate refused to receive her evidence :—Held (Lush, J., dissenting), that that evidence was inadmissible, and that the magistrate was right in excluding it. Director of Public Prosecutions v. Blady, 81 L. J. K.B. 613; [1912] 2 K.B. 89; 106 L. T. 302; 76 J. P. 141; 22 Cox C.C. 715; 28 T. L. R. 193—D.

—— Whether Objection to Give Evidence Taken by Wife.]—On a prosecution of the appellant for an offence under the Criminal Law Amendment Act, 1885, his wife was called as a witness by the prosecution before the Justices, and she gave evidence. She had not been warned that she was not bound to give evidence unless she wished, but in the course of giving her evidence she said, "I wish to shield my husband." The appellant was committed for trial, and at the assizes, his wife being then ill, her deposition was read to the jury. The appellant was convicted :—Held, that, although the appellant's wife was not a compellable witness, her statement in the course of her evidence, "I wish to shield my husband," could not be regarded as equivalent to a statement that she did not wish to give evidence; and therefore that her deposition was properly admitted at the trial. Rex v. Acaster, 106 L. T. 384; 76 J. P. 263; 22 Cox C.C. 743; 28 T. L. R. 321—C.C.A.

Semble, in a case where a wife, although a competent, is not a compellable, witness against her husband, it may be proper, in view of observations by the House of Lords in Leach v. Director of Public Prosecutions (supra), that she should be warned by the Judge that she is not bound to give evidence. Ib.

Children—Unsworn Evidence—Requirement of Corroboration—Direction to Jury. —Where on a criminal prosecution the prosecutrix is a child of tender years and evidence is given by her under section 30 of the Children Act, 1908, without being sworn, the Judge ought to point out to the jury that they must not act on the evidence of the child unless it is corroborated. Rex v. Murray, 30 T. L. R. 196—C.C.A.

Deposition at Police Court—Contradiction by Witness at Trial—Hostile Witness.]—On appeal from a conviction for murder,—Held, on the facts, that there had been no misdirection by the Judge at the trial in reference to the evidence of a witness for the prosecution who withdrew on one material point the evidence she gave at the police Court and was allowed to be treated by the counsel for the prosecution as a hostile witness. Rex v. Williams, 77 J. P. 240; 29 T. L. R. 188—C.C.A.

6. Evidence to Credit.

Evidence of Good Character of Prosecutrix—Evidence in Contradiction—Admissibility.]—The appellant was charged with an offence against the Criminal Law Amendment Act, 1885. In opening the case counsel for the Crown told the jury that the prosecutrix had been seduced by the appellant, and she swore the same thing in evidence. Evidence tendered by the defence to shew that previous to the alleged offence she had been a girl of bad character was rejected :—Held, that it was rightly rejected. Rex v. Cargill, 82 L. J. K.B. 655; [1913] 2 K.B. 271; 108 L. T. 816; 77 J. P. 347; 23 Cox C.C. 382; 29 T. L. R. 382—C.C.A.

Submission at Close of Case for Prosecution that no Case to go to Jury.]—Semble, the Court of Criminal Appeal will not follow the decision in Rex v. Joiner (74 J. P. 200) in view of the decisions in Rex v. Pearson (72 J. P. 449) and Rex v. George (73 J. P. 11), as to evidence called for the defence after an unsuccessful submission being made at the close of the case for the prosecution that no evidence to go to the jury. Rex v. Fraser, 76 J. P. 168—C.C.A.

Prisoner Unable to Understand English—Evidence at Trial not Interpreted—Prisoner Defended by Counsel—No Application to Have Evidence Interpreted.] — Where a prisoner who understands little or no English is tried for a criminal offence, and is undefended by counsel, all the evidence at the trial should be interpreted to him. If he is defended by counsel, the safe course is that the evidence should be interpreted unless the prisoner or his counsel are willing to dispense with the interpretation and the Judge assents to such a course. He should not assent unless he is satisfied that the prisoner knows the nature of the case which is made against him, and in any case any substantial departure from, or addition to, the evidence appearing on the depositions should be interpreted to the prisoner, even if his counsel does not apply for it to be done. Rex v. Lee Kun, 60 S. J. 158—C.C.A.

The appellant, a Chinaman, who understood hardly any English, was convicted of murder. He was defended by counsel at the trial, who did not apply that the evidence should be interpreted, nor was this done :—Held, that, as the evidence at the trial did not differ from that given at the police court, which had been interpreted, no substantial miscarriage of justice had occurred. The appeal was therefore dismissed under section 4, sub-section 1 of the Criminal Appeal Act, 1907. Ib.

Calling Fresh Evidence during Final Speech.]—The Court granted leave to the accused to call fresh evidence after counsel for the Crown had commenced his final speech to the jury. Rex v. Morrison, 75 J. P. 272; 22 Cox C.C. 214—Darling, J.

Rebutting Evidence—Admissibility.]—The question whether upon a criminal trial the prosecution shall be allowed to call rebutting evidence, after the close of the case for the defence, is a question for the discretion of the Judge presiding at the trial. Rex v. Crippen, 80 L. J. K.B. 290; [1911] 1 K.B. 149; 103 L. T. 705; 75 J. P. 141; 22 Cox C.C. 289; 27 T. L. R. 69—C.C.A.

Statements by Police Officer after Conviction of Prisoner.]—Where, after a prisoner has been convicted, a police officer makes a statement to the Judge as to the prisoner's antecedents, and the prisoner does not challenge the accuracy of that statement, the Judge is entitled to take it into consideration on the question of sentence, notwithstanding that some parts of the statement may be hearsay. If, however, the prisoner challenges any part of the statement, the Judge should then enquire into it, and if he thinks it of sufficient importance that it ought to be proved by legal evidence he can, if necessary, adjourn the case for such proof to be forthcoming; or, instead of doing this, he can disregard the disputed part of the statement altogether. Rex v. Campbell, 75 J. P. 216; 55 S. J. 273; 27 T. L. R. 256—C.C.A.

8. Evidence of other Acts and Offences.

See also Vol. IV. 1874, 2204.

Previous Charge — Admissibility.]—On a criminal prosecution evidence as to a previous charge on which the prisoner has not yet been tried is inadmissible. Rex v. Barron (No. 1), 110 L. T. 350; 78 J. P. 184; 24 Cox C.C. 83; 30 T. L. R. 187—C.C.A.

Previous Similar Offence—Admissibility.]—On a charge against the appellants of demanding money with menaces at the trial evidence was admitted to prove that a few months previously a similar transaction had been carried out by the same agent on behalf of the appellants and a sum of money paid to him in gold :—Held, that the evidence was properly admitted. Rex v. Boyle, 83 L. J. K.B. 1801; [1914] 3 K.B. 339; 111 L. T. 638; 78 J. P. 390; 58 S. J. 673; 30 T. L. R. 521—C.C.A.

J. was charged with having exposed his person in a place of public resort with intent to insult the complainant, a female, on July 16, 1914. He gave evidence on his own behalf, and in cross-examination was asked if he had not exposed himself to the complainant at the same place in May, 1914. He denied that he had done so. The Justices ruled that this question should not have been put as being not relevant to the issue before them and contrary to the provisions of the Criminal Evidence Act, 1898. Subsequently the solicitor for the prosecution asked leave to recall the complainant in order to rebut this denial by the respondent, and also to call other witnesses to shew that the respondent had been guilty of a systematic course of conduct by indecently exposing himself with intent to insult females on other occasions at the same place and about the same hour. This application was refused :—Held, that the question put to the respondent in cross-examination and the evidence of the complainant in rebuttal of his denial were admissible for the purpose of shewing that the complainant was not mistaken in her identification of the respondent, and that the act of the respondent was done not accidentally, but wilfully, and with intent to insult the complainant. Held, further, that the evidence of other witnesses to prove a systematic course of conduct on the part of the respondent was not admissible unless it appeared clearly and definitely that the defence of accident, mistake, or absence of intention to insult was going to be relied upon, and that the other occasions which would be referred to therein were sufficiently proximate to the alleged offence to shew a systematic course of conduct. Perkins v. Jeffery, 84 L. J. K.B. 1554; [1915] 2 K.B. 702; 113 L. T. 456; 79 J. P. 425; 31 T. L. R. 444—D.

Observations in Rex v. Bond (75 L. J. K.B. 693; [1906] 2 K.B. 389) considered. Ib.

—— Obtaining Credit by Fraud — Admissibility.]—The appellant was charged with obtaining credit by fraud. Evidence was given of two previous occasions upon which he had obtained credit and had not paid :—Held, that, as the Court thought that those transactions could not properly have been the subject of a criminal charge, they were not transactions of a similar nature with the transaction in question, and therefore could not be given in evidence to shew fraud on the latter occasion. Rex v. Baird, 84 L. J. K.B. 1785; 113 L. T. 608—C.C.A.

See also Rex v. Fisher, ante, col. 406.

Subsequent Act—Breaking into House with Intent to Commit Rape—Evidence of Accused having Connection with Another Woman shortly Afterwards — Admissibility.]—The appellant was charged with having burglariously broken and entered a dwelling house with intent to commit rape on a certain woman therein. At the trial the defences really in issue were—first, that the appellant did not break into the house at all; secondly, that he did not break into the house with any intention to commit rape; and thirdly, that the prosecutrix's story as to what occurred in the house was untrue. Evidence was tendered by the prosecution, and, although objected to by counsel for the appellant, was admitted, to shew that after leaving the prosecutrix's house the appellant went to another house about three miles distant, gained access to a woman's bedroom by getting down the chimney, and had connection with that woman with her consent. The appellant was convicted :—Held, that the evidence which had been objected to was improperly admitted, and as the Court was unable to say that the jury might not have been influenced by that evidence, the conviction must be quashed. Rex v. Rodley, 82 L. J. K.B. 1070; [1913] 3 K.B. 468; 109 L. T. 476; 77 J. P. 465; 23 Cox C.C. 574; 58 S. J. 51; 29 T. L. R. 700—C.C.A.

—— Other Criminal Acts.]—At the trial on indictment of a prisoner the prosecution may, in order to prove the quality of the act charged in the indictment, give evidence of subsequent criminal acts by the prisoner, and the facts and circumstances surrounding the same, other than that covered by the indictment, when a prima facie case in law has been established against the prisoner of the act charged in the indictment. Rex v. Smith, 84 L. J. K.B. 2153; 59 S. J. 704; 31 T. L. R. 617—C.C.A.

Forging and Uttering Deed—Evidence of other Forged Deeds at a Later Date.]—On the trial of a charge for forging and uttering a forged deed, evidence was admitted as to other deeds forged by the appellant which were dealt with by him at a date subsequent to the charge preferred :—Held, that evidence as to the other forged deeds was connected with the principal charge: and that the evidence was admissible to prove guilty knowledge on the part of the appellant, whether relating to previous or subsequent transactions. Rex v. Mason, 111 L. T. 336; 78 J. P. 389; 24 Cox C.C. 305—C.C.A.

Evidence of Offence other than that Charged —Corroborative Evidence.]—In a prosecution commenced on May 7, 1913, the appellant was indicted, under the Criminal Law Amendment Act, 1885, for having unlawful carnal knowledge of a girl, over the age of thirteen and under the age of sixteen years, in the months of November and December, 1912. By the conjoint effect of section 5, sub-section 1 of the Act and section 27 of the Prevention of Cruelty to Children Act, 1904, no prosecution for the offence can be commenced more than six months after the commission thereof. Evidence was given by the girl that the appellant had sexual intercourse with her in December, 1912, and that in the previous November she was two months gone with child. Further evidence, consisting of her testimony that in April, 1913, when the appellant discovered that she was pregnant, he and his wife persuaded her to throw all the blame on a farm labourer who had been in the appellant's employment prior to November 5, 1912, was admitted, and also the testimony of other persons to the effect that the appellant about the same time bribed this man to leave the country. This further evidence was objected to, first, on the ground that it was irrelevant to the issue and tended to shew that the appellant was guilty of offences other than that charged in the indictment; and secondly, because by the statutes a prosecution could not be commenced more than six months after the commission of the offence, and such evidence would shew that other offences under the Act of 1885 had been committed prior to the period of limitation. Very slight evidence, other than the above, corroborating the girl's story, was given at the trial :—Held, on appeal, that the further evidence was properly admitted. First, it was relevant to the issue as being corroborative of the girl's account of what took place in December, 1912, according to the general principle that the relationship between the appellant and the girl prior to the period of limitation would be likely to continue. Such evidence was admissible not because it tended to shew that other offences had been committed, but notwithstanding that in the particular case it might happen to do so. Secondly, the provision in the statutes as to time did not affect the admissibility of evidence; it merely limited the time for launching a prosecution. Rex v. Shellaker, 83 L. J. K.B. 413; [1914] 1 K.B. 414; 110 L. T. 351; 78 J. P. 159; 24 Cox C.C. 86; 30 T. L. R. 194—C.C.A.

Reg. v. Ollis (69 L. J. Q.B. 918; [1900] 2 Q.B. 758) and Director of Public Prosecutions or Rex v. Ball (No. 2) (80 L. J. K.B. 691; [1911] A.C. 47) followed. Reg. v. Beighton (18 Cox C.C. 535) overruled. Ib.

9. Previous Convictions.

Evidence of Previous Conviction Involving Fraud—Receiving Stolen Goods—Guilty Knowledge—"Stolen property has been found in his possession."]—Upon the trial of a prisoner for receiving stolen property, evidence having been given that the stolen property was found in the possession of pawnbrokers with whom the prisoner had pawned them, evidence was admitted, with a view of shewing guilty knowledge, that the prisoner had been convicted within the preceding five years of an offence involving fraud or dishonesty :—Held, that the evidence of such previous conviction was admissible under section 19 of the Prevention of Crimes Act, 1871. Rex v. Rowland, 79 L. J. K.B. 327; [1910] 1 K.B. 458; 102 L. T. 112; 74 J. P. 144; 22 Cox C.C. 273; 26 T. L. R. 202—C.C.A.

—— Police Court Proceedings — Reports in Newspapers.]—Where evidence of previous convictions is given at a police Court in a case which is committed for trial, such evidence ought not to be referred to by a newspaper in its report of the proceedings. Rex v. Sanderson, 31 T. L. R. 447—C.C.A.

10. Proof and Effect of Convictions.

No Certified Copy of Conviction.] — A superintendent of police deposed that he was present at assizes and that the appellant had been convicted on a certain charge. No certified copy of the conviction under section 13 of the Evidence Act, 1851, was produced :—Held, that the conviction was sufficiently proved. Mash v. Darley, 83 L. J. K.B. 78; [1914] 1 K.B. 1; 109 L. T. 873; 78 J. P. 4; 23 Cox C.C. 661—D. Affirmed on other grounds ante, Bastardy.

Effect of Conviction as Evidence—Res inter Alios Acta.]—A certified copy of the conviction is admissible evidence not merely as proving the conviction itself, but also as presumptive proof of the commission of the crime in question. Leyman v. Latimer (47 L. J. Q.B. 470; 3 Ex. D. 352), as followed in Yates v. Kyffin-Taylor ([1899] W. N. 141), doubted. Crippen, In the goods of, 80 L. J. P. 47; [1911] P. 108; 104 L. T. 224; 55 S. J. 273; 27 T. L. R. 258—Evans, P.

11. Documents.

See also Vol. IV. 1881, 2206.

Inadmissible Document—Suggestion as to Contents.]—Counsel for the prosecution has no right, directly or indirectly, to suggest in the hearing of the jury what the contents of an inadmissible document are, but the Court will not, on the ground of such a suggestion, interfere with a verdict of "Guilty," unless the jury have been thereby influenced to give a verdict which otherwise they would not have given. Rex v. Seham Yousry, 84 L. J. K.B. 1272; 112 L. T. 311; 31 T. L. R. 27—C.C.A.

VI. VERDICT.

See also Vol. IV. 1891, 2206.

Conviction as Accessory before Fact to a Burglary and of Receiving—Inconsistency.]—The appellant was convicted of being accessory before the fact to a burglary and of receiving the stolen goods:—Held, following Reg. v. Hughes (Bell C.C. 242), that there was no inconsistency in the verdict. Rex v. Goodspeed, 75 J. P. 232; 55 S. J. 273; 27 T. L. R. 255—C.C.A.

Riot—Conviction for Assault.]—The appellant and ten others were indicted for that they "unlawfully, riotously, and routously did assemble and gather together to disturb the peace of . . . the King, and being so assembled . . . in and upon (A. B.) . . . then and there being, unlawfully, riotously, and routously did make and assault," &c.:—Held, that on this indictment the jury could convict the appellant of an assault. Statement of the law in Archbold's Criminal Pleading (24th ed.), at p. 228, that "at common law a defendant may be convicted of a less aggravated felony or misdemeanour on an indictment charging a felony or misdemeanour of greater aggravation, provided that the indictment contains words apt to include both offences," approved. Rex v. O'Brien, 104 L. T. 113; 75 J. P. 192; 22 Cox C.C. 374; 55 S. J. 219; 27 T. L. R. 204—C.C.A.

Special Verdict—Effect of—Sending Letter Threatening to Murder.]—The appellant was indicted under section 16 of the Offences Against the Person Act, 1861, for sending a letter to Mr. Ramsay MacDonald, M.P., threatening to murder one Alfred Reed. At the trial the Judge left the following questions to the jury: "(1) Is defendant guilty or not guilty of maliciously sending the letter threatening to murder Alfred Reed? (2) Did he intend to murder Reed, or was the threat 'bluff' and made in order to call attention to his grievances? (3) Did the defendant send the letter of June 15 with the intention of so alarming Mr. Ramsay MacDonald as to the safety of Reed's life that Mr. MacDonald and his friends would support defendant's claims against the Home Secretary and the police authorities?" The jury did not reply directly to the questions, but returned the following verdict: "We are of opinion that defendant wrote the letter of June 15 with the object of pressing Mr. Ramsay MacDonald and his friends to support his claims against the Home Secretary and the police authorities. We are further of opinion that he did not intend to murder Reed, and that the threat was 'bluff' and made in order to call attention to his grievances." The Judge considered this finding equivalent to a verdict of guilty, and ordered a verdict of guilty to be entered:—Held, that the Judge was right in treating the verdict as one of guilty. Rex v. Syme, 75 J. P. 535; 55 S. J. 704; 27 T. L. R. 562—C.C.A.

Reconsideration.]—The appellant was indicted for attempting to commit suicide. At the trial the jury returned the following verdict: "Guilty, but of unconscious mind." The Judge thereupon asked them to reconsider their verdict, and then brought to their attention certain evidence which had been given and which shewed that the appellant knew what he was doing. The jury having reconsidered the matter, found the appellant guilty:—Held, that the jury not having insisted upon their first verdict being received, the Judge was entitled to ask them to reconsider it, and that the verdict of Guilty was rightly recorded. Rex v. Crisp, 76 J. P. 304; 28 T. L. R. 296—C.C.A.

VII. JUDGMENT AND PUNISHMENT.

See also Vol. IV. 1901, 2206.

1. Sentence of Hard Labour.

Common Law Misdemeanour.]—Where a prisoner is convicted of a comman law misdemeanour, he cannot be sentenced to a term of imprisonment with hard labour. Rex v. Davidson, 100 L. T. 623; 22 Cox C.C. 99; 25 T. L. R. 352—C.C.A.

2. Sentence of Whipping.

Child—Power of Court to Order Whipping.]—The power of the Court under section 4 of the Larceny Act, 1861, to order a male person under sixteen years of age convicted under that section to be whipped as well as imprisoned is not taken away in the case where such person is a child within the meaning of the Children Act, 1908, and has been committed to custody in a place of detention under section 106 of the Act in lieu of being sentenced to imprisonment. Rex v. Lydford, 83 L. J. K.B. 589; [1914] 2 K.B. 378; 110 L. T. 781; 78 J. P. 213; 24 Cox C.C. 142; 58 S. J. 363; 30 T. L. R. 349—C.C.A.

Person to Execute Sentence.]—The proper person to execute the sentence is the sheriff or the deputy he appoints for that purpose. Ib.

Carnal Knowledge of Girl under Thirteen—"Offender whose age does not exceed sixteen years."]—A person who at the time of committing the offence of carnally knowing a girl under the age of thirteen is under the age of sixteen, but who at the time he appears in Court to answer the indictment charging him with the offence is over the age of sixteen, is not a person "whose age does not exceed sixteen years" within the meaning of the proviso to section 4 of the Criminal Law Amendment Act, 1885. In such a case, therefore, the Court has no power under that proviso to order the offender to be whipped.

Rex v. Cawthron, 82 L. J. K.B. 981; [1913] 3 K.B. 168; 109 L. T. 412; 77 J. P. 460; 23 Cox C.C. 548; 29 T. L. R. 600—C.A.

3. Recommendation for Expulsion.

Alien—Discretion of Judge.]—In 1893 the appellant, who was an alien, was convicted of administering a drug with intent to rob, and in 1905 he was convicted of conspiracy. In 1913, on a charge of indecent assault, the appellant pleaded guilty to a common assault, and the Judge accept this plea and passed a sentence of imprisonment and recommended the appellant for expulsion under the Aliens Act, 1905:—Held, that the question of recommendation for expulsion was a matter for the Judge's discretion, and that on the facts his decision to make such recommendation ought not to be reversed. Rex v. Josephson, 110 L. T. 512; 24 Cox C.C. 128; 30 T. L. R. 243—C.C.A.

Circumstances in which the Court quashed so much of the sentence on the appellant as recommended her expulsion from this country. Rex v. Fine, 77 J. P. 79; 29 T. L. R. 61—C.C.A.

4. Length of Sentence.

Conviction for one offence—Admission by Prisoner of Different Offence for which he is not being Tried—Sentence for Offence on which Convicted—Consideration in Passing Sentence of Admission of other Offence.]—Where a prisoner on being found guilty for one offence admits that he has committed another offence for which he has not yet been tried, and asks the Court to consider that other offence in fixing his sentence, the Court may properly take that other offence into consideration, if it is of the same nature as that for which the prisoner has been found guilty, whether there has been a committal in respect of that other offence or not. If there has been a committal the Court should ascertain whether the authorities prosecuting for the other offence are willing that it should be taken into consideration. If they are unwilling, the Court should not take the other offence into consideration as a matter of course. If the other offence is of a different nature, and has been committed in another county, the Court should not take the other offence into consideration without the consent of the authorities prosecuting the prisoner in respect of it, and without considering whether the public interest does not require a separate investigation. Rex v. McLean, 80 L. J. K.B. 309; [1911] 1 K.B. 332; 103 L. T. 911; 75 J. P. 127; 22 Cox C.C. 362; 27 T. L. R. 138—C.C.A.

Remanet of Previous Penal Servitude—Licence Forfeited by Conviction for Fresh Offence—Sentence to Commence after Remanet of Previous Sentence—Sentence to Run Concurrently with Unexpired Term of Previous Sentence—Jurisdiction.]—Where a person has been convicted and sentenced to a term of penal servitude, but has been liberated during the currency of such sentence on licence under the Penal Servitude Acts, and the licence is forfeited or revoked through the licence holder being subsequently convicted for a new offence, the Court before which the licence holder is tried for the new offence has no power to order that the sentence for the new offence shall commence after or run concurrently with the unexpired term of the previous sentence; it has no power to interfere at all with the remanet of the previous sentence, and can only impose a sentence in respect of such new offence, inasmuch as under section 9 of the Penal Servitude Act, 1864, the person whose licence is forfeited or revoked must, after undergoing the punishment to which he may be sentenced for the new offence, further undergo a term of penal servitude equal to the unexpired term of penal servitude at the time the licence was granted. Rex v. Smith; Rex v. Wilson, 79 L. J. K.B. 4; [1909] 2 K.B. 756; 101 L. T. 126; 73 J. P. 407; 22 Cox C.C. 151—C.C.A.

—— Prisoner Bound over in Respect of New Offence—"Conviction"—Effect on Unexpired Term of Previous Sentence—Validity of Circular Issued by Prison Commissioners.]—A convict on licence who, in respect of a new offence committed by him, is found guilty by a jury or pleads guilty and is bound over to come up for judgment if called upon, has been "convicted" of that offence within sections 4 and 9 of the Penal Servitude Act, 1864, and his licence is thereby forfeited and he is bound to serve the unexpired term of his previous sentence. Rex v. Rabjohns, 82 L. J. K.B. 994; [1913] 3 K.B. 171; 109 L. T. 414; 77 J. P. 435; 23 Cox C.C. 553; 57 S. J. 665; 29 T. L. R. 614—C.C.A.

The circular L. P. 15, 1712, dated November 8, 1912, issued by the Prison Commissioners to governors of prisons, to the contrary effect, is not justified by the provisions of the statutes regulating licences to convicts. Ib.

Considerations as to.]—While the offence of larceny for which a prisoner is indicted may be a very bad one notwithstanding that the sum stolen is small—as, for instance, where the prisoner has obtained small amounts from a number of different persons—nevertheless, in dealing with one particular case of larceny, the small amount stolen may properly be taken into consideration on the question of sentence. Where there is evidence that a prisoner has shewn willingness to work and persons have been willing to employ him, it may not be advisable to inflict a severe sentence upon him merely because he has had many previous convictions. Rex v. Myland, 27 T. L. R. 256—C.C.A.

The prevalence of a particular crime in a particular neighbourhood, and the necessity for severe measures for its repression, are matters which may properly be taken into consideration in passing sentence. Rex v. Green, 76 J. P. 351; 28 T. L. R. 380—C.C.A.

Commencement of Sentence.]—Whether a sentence can be made to antedate the first day of sessions or assizes, quære. Rex v. Davies, 28 T. L. R. 431—C.C.A.

The Court of Criminal Appeal, on dismissing an application for leave to appeal, may, notwithstanding that the prosecution is not represented, order that the sentence imposed on the applicant shall run from the date of conviction. Rex v. Brownhill, 29 T. L. R. 156—C.C.A.

Date from which Sentence should Run.]—Where an application for leave to appeal is deferred to suit the convenience of counsel and is afterwards heard and dismissed, the Court will not order the sentence to date from the conviction. Rex v. Park; Rex v. Hill, 32 T. L. R. 157—C.C.A.

Preventive Detention.]—A sentence of the maximum term of preventive detention is not desirable except in very bad cases. Rex v. Moran, 75 J. P. 110—C.C.A.

—— Jurisdiction—Crime Committed between Passing and Coming into Operation of Act—"Committed after the passing of this Act."]—The Prevention of Crime Act, 1908, applies to crimes committed after the date of its passing but before the date fixed for its coming into operation, so far as regards the power of the Court of trial to pass a sentence of preventive detention. Rex v. Smith; Rex v. Weston, 79 L. J. K.B. 1; [1910] 1 K.B. 17; 101 L. T. 816; 74 J. P. 13; 22 Cox C.C. 219; 54 S. J. 137; 26 T. L. R. 23—C.C.A.

Power of Court to Impose more Severe Sentence in Order to Give Sentence of Preventive Detention.]—The length of sentence imposed upon a prisoner should depend upon the nature of the offence of which he has been convicted or to which he has pleaded guilty, and the Court cannot impose a more severe sentence than the offence merits in order to give itself the power to pass a sentence of preventive detention. Rex v. Jones, 75 J. P. 125; 27 T. L. R. 108—C.C.A.

Excessive Sentence—Accused under Sixteen Years of Age—Sentence of Four Months' Imprisonment.]—Sentence of four months' imprisonment imposed upon the appellant, a lad under sixteen years of age, quashed on the ground that under the Children Act, 1908, detention could not exceed one month. Rex v. Bradford, 105 L. T. 752; 76 J. P. 46; 28 T. L. R. 26; 22 Cox C.C. 627—C.C.A.

Incorrigible Rogue.]—Where a person is convicted as an incorrigible rogue for begging and there are no aggravating circumstances, the maximum sentence of twelve months' imprisonment should not be imposed. Rex v. Cooper, 75 J. P. 125—C.C.A.

5. Alteration of Sentence.

Reduction—Application for Leave to Appeal against Sentence—Absence of Prosecution.]—If on an application for leave to appeal against a sentence the Court of Criminal Appeal is of opinion that the sentence ought to be varied to a slight extent, and the alteration is one against which nothing could be urged by the prosecution if present, the Court will deal with the question of such alteration on the application for leave to appeal, notwithstanding that the prosecution are not represented at such application. Rex v. Jowsey, 84 L. J. K.B. 2118; 31 T. L. R. 632—C.C.A.

Reduction.]—Sentence of three years' penal servitude passed upon the appellant for manslaughter caused by the negligent driving of a motor car reduced to one of twelve months' imprisonment with hard labour. Rex v. Stubbs, 29 T. L. R. 421—C.C.A.

Sentence of five years' penal servitude passed upon the appellant for warehouse breaking reduced to one of eighteen months' imprisonment with hard labour, on the ground that the case was an isolated one and was the first conviction of the appellant. Rex v. Trewholm, 77 J. P. 344; 29 T. L. R. 530—C.C.A.

Sentence of two years' imprisonment under the modified Borstal system reduced to one of four months' imprisonment, on the ground that the chairman of quarter sessions, in imposing the sentence of two years, was under the erroneous impression that if the authorities saw fit the prisoner could be released on licence in the same way as under the Borstal system. Rex v. Lee, 30 T. L. R. 1—C.C.A.

Where a person sentenced as an incorrigible rogue had not been guilty of any dishonesty or violence, but had been guilty only of constantly begging, the Court reduced his sentence from one of eight to one of three months' imprisonment. Rex v. Harrison, 30 T. L. R. 1—C.C.A.

Sentence of ten years' penal servitude reduced to six years' penal servitude on the ground that a statement by the police as to the prisoner's antecedents was taken into consideration, and there was nothing to shew that the prisoner admitted the accuracy of such statement. Rex v. Brooks, 29 T. L. R. 152—C.C.A.

Sentence of five years' penal servitude imposed upon the appellant for receiving reduced to one of three years' penal servitude, on the ground that it did not appear that the appellant was habitually a receiver or that he kept any place for the deposit of stolen property. Rex v. Knight, 28 T. L. R. 481 C.C.A.

Held, that on the form of the verdict the conviction of the appellant on the counts of the indictment charging him with shooting with intent to murder should be quashed, but that his conviction on the count charging wounding with intent to do grievous bodily harm should stand. Held, further, that the sentence on the appellant should be reduced to one of three years' penal servitude. Rex v. Connor, 77 J. P. 247; 29 T. L. R. 212—C.C.A.

The appellant was sentenced to three years' penal servitude for an offence committed by him. When charged with that offence he desired that certain other offences which he had committed should all be taken into consideration. This was done except as to one charge, which, at the request of the police, was not then dealt with. In respect of this latter charge the appellant was at the subsequent sessions sentenced to four years' penal servitude to run concurrently with and to date from the commencement of the sentence of three years' penal servitude imposed at the previous sessions. The Court reduced the sentence of four years' penal servitude to one of one day's imprisonment, and expressed disapproval of the practice adopted by the police in holding over the one charge against the appellant. Whether a sentence can be made to antedate the first day of sessions or assizes, quære. Rex v. Davies, 28 T. L. R. 431—C.C.A.

—— Concurrent Sentences.]—The appellant was convicted of forgery and false pretences, and was sentenced to seven years' penal servitude and twelve months' hard labour, the two sentences to run concurrently:—Held, that the sentence of twelve months' hard labour should be reduced to a nominal sentence of one day, as it was doubtful whether it was present to the mind of the Judge that the effect of the sentences imposed would be that the appellant would have to spend a longer period in hard labour at the commencement of his sentence than would otherwise be the case, and would not be able to earn as many remission marks. Rex v. Bruce, 75 J. P. 111; 27 T. L. R. 51—C.C.A.

Preventive Detention Commuted by Home Secretary to Imprisonment with Hard Labour.]—Under section 4, sub-section 3 of the Criminal Appeal Act, 1907, the Court of Appeal can only deal with the sentence passed upon a prisoner at his trial; it has no power to deal with the commutation by the Home Secretary, under section 7 of the Prevention of Crime Act, 1908, of the unexpired residue of a term of preventive detention into a term of imprisonment. Rex v. Keating, 103 L. T. 322; 74 J. P. 452; 22 Cox C.C. 343; 26 T. L. R. 686—C.C.A.

Power of Court to Pass Sentence in Substitution—"Warranted in law by the verdict."]—On an appeal against a sentence passed as the result of a plea of guilty, the Court of Criminal Appeal have power, under section 4, sub-section 3 of the Criminal Appeal Act, 1907, if they quash such sentence, to pass such other sentence, appropriate to the offence charged, and in substitution therefor, as they think ought to have been passed. Rex v. Davidson (infra) not followed. Rex v. Ettridge, 78 L. J. K.B. 479; [1909] 2 K.B. 24; 100 L. T. 624; 73 J. P. 253; 53 S. J. 401; 22 Cox C.C. 101; 25 T. L. R. 391—C.C.A.

Where a prisoner appeals against a sentence passed upon him at the trial in respect of an offence to which he has pleaded guilty, the Court of Criminal Appeal has no power, if it is necessary to set that sentence aside, to substitute another in its place under section 4, sub-section 3 of the Criminal Appeal Act, 1907. Rex v. Davidson, 100 L. T. 623; 22 Cox C.C. 99; 25 T. L. R. 352—C.C.A.

Sentence of three years' penal servitude reduced to twenty-one months' imprisonment with hard labour on the ground that it was undesirable that the sentence of penal servitude should run concurrently with a sentence of imprisonment which was being served by the appellant at the time the sentence of penal servitude was imposed. Rex v. Hemming, 28 T. L. R. 402—C.C.A.

Murder — Conviction — Appeal — Insanity —Order for Detention of Appellant as a Criminal Lunatic.]—The appellant was convicted of murder and sentenced to death. He appealed against the conviction. The Court of Criminal Appeal, being of opinion that the evidence shewed that at the time of committing the act charged against him he was insane,—Held, that the proper course for the Court to pursue was that provided by section 5, sub-section 4 of the Criminal Appeal Act, 1907—namely, to quash the sentence passed at the trial, and to order the appellant to be kept in custody as a criminal lunatic under the Trial of Lunatics Act, 1883. Rex v. Gilbert, 84 L. J. K.B. 1424; 112 L. T. 479—C.C.A.

—— Alternative Defences—Direction to Jury —Evidence of the Prisoner—Substitution by the Court of Verdict of Manslaughter.]—The appellant was tried and convicted on a charge of wilful murder. At the trial the defence mainly relied upon was that of accident, but the appellant's counsel did not relinquish the defence of manslaughter in the event of his not being able, by his main defence, to secure an acquittal. The Judge directed the jury that they must either acquit the appellant on the ground of accident or convict him of murder:—Held, on appeal, that, there being evidence on which the jury might have found the appellant guilty of manslaughter, and the defence of manslaughter not having been left to them, the conviction must be quashed. In these circumstances the Court, in exercise of the powers conferred on it under section 5, sub-section 2 of the Criminal Appeal Act, 1907, ordered a verdict of manslaughter to be entered, and sentenced the appellant to four years' penal servitude. Rex v. Hopper, 84 L. J. K.B. 1371; [1915] 2 K.B. 431; 113 L. T. 381; 79 J. P. 335; 59 S. J. 478; 31 T. L. R. 360—C.C.A.

Whatever line of defence is taken by counsel at a trial, it is for the Judge to leave to the jury all the questions which appear to him to arise upon the evidence, whether they have been raised by counsel or not. Ib.

The Court must not exclude from consideration any view of the facts of a case other than that presented by the prisoner in giving evidence. Ib.

Increase.]—The Court increased the sentence of twelve years' penal servitude passed upon the appellant at the trial for attempted murder, to fifteen years' penal servitude. Rex v. Simpson, 75 J. P. 56—C.C.A.

VIII. APPEAL.

1. When Appeal Lies.

See also Vol. IV. 2212.

Special Verdict of Jury—"Guilty, but insane"—"Conviction."]—Where a jury have returned a special verdict under section 2 of the Trial of Lunatics Act, 1883, that the accused was guilty of the act or omission charged against him in the indictment, but was insane at the time when he did the act or made the omission, and the Court has ordered the accused to be kept in custody as a criminal lunatic, such person has been "convicted" within the meaning of section 3 of the Criminal Appeal Act, 1907, and may therefore appeal against his conviction upon the grounds set out in that section. Rex v. Ireland, 79 L. J. K.B. 338; [1910] 1 K.B. 654; 102 L. T. 608; 74 J. P. 206; 22 Cox C.C. 322; 54 S. J. 543; 26 T. L. R. 267—C.C.A.

Where the jury, under section 2, subsection 1 of the Trial of Lunatics Act, 1883, have returned a verdict that the prisoner is guilty of the act charged, but was insane at the time he committed it, an appeal lies to the Court of Criminal Appeal under section 3 of the Criminal Appeal Act, 1907. Rex v. Ireland (79 L. J. K.B. 338; [1910] 1 K.B. 654) approved. Rex v. Machardy, 80 L. J. K.B. 1215; [1911] 2 K.B. 1144; 105 L. T. 556; 76 J. P. 6; 55 S. J. 754; 28 T. L. R. 2; 22 Cox C.C. 614—C.C.A.

But the appeal lies only against that part of the verdict which finds the prisoner guilty of the act charged, and not against that part which finds that he was insane. The order for the prisoner's detention as a criminal lunatic until His Majesty's pleasure shall be known is no part of the conviction. Ib.

A person charged with a criminal offence against whom a special verdict of "Guilty, but insane," has been found under the Trial of Lunatics Act, 1883, has no right of appeal to the Court of Criminal Appeal against that part of the verdict which finds him to have been insane at the time of doing the act. Felstead v. Director of Public Prosecutions, 83 L. J. K.B. 1132; [1914] A.C. 534; 111 L. T. 218; 78 J. P. 313; 24 Cox C.C. 243; 58 S. J. 534; 30 T. L. R. 469—H.L. (E.)

—— Case Stated.]—A person charged with a criminal offence against whom a special verdict of "Guilty, but insane," has been found under the Trial of Lunatics Act, 1883, has no right of appeal to the Court of Criminal Appeal against that part of the verdict which finds him to have been insane at the time of doing the act, whether he proceeds on a Case stated under the Crown Cases Act, 1848, or under the procedure set up by the Criminal Appeal Act, 1907. Felstead v. Director of Public Prosecutions or Regem (83 L. J. K.B. 1132; [1914] A.C. 534) applied. Rex v. Taylor, 84 L. J. K.B. 1671; [1915] 2 K.B. 709; 113 L. T. 513; 79 J. P. 439; 59 S. J. 530; 31 T. L. R. 449—C.C.A.

Person Found Insane and Unfit to Plead—"Convicted on indictment."]—A person who is indicted, but who is found by the jury to be insane and unfit to plead, has not been "convicted on indictment" within section 3 of the Criminal Appeal Act, 1907. Therefore no appeal to the Court of Criminal Appeal lies in such a case. Rex v. Larkins, 105 L. T. 384; 75 J. P. 320; 22 Cox C.C. 598; 55 S. J. 501; 27 T. L. R. 438—C.C.A.

Judge's Ruling.]—Semble, no appeal lies to the Court of Criminal Appeal from the ruling of the Judge at the trial allowing a witness to be treated as a hostile witness. Rex v. Williams, 77 J. P. 240; 29 T. L. R. 188—C.C.A.

Discharge of Jury by Judge.]—The Court of Criminal Appeal has no power to review the decision of the Judge at the trial of a prisoner that a necessity has arisen for discharging the jury without giving a verdict and adjourning the case to be heard before another jury. Such a decision is entirely within the discretion of the Judge, and even if the discretion has been wrongly exercised, no objection can be taken in respect thereof at the second trial. Reg. v. Charlesworth (31 L. J. M.C. 25; 1 B. & S. 460) and Winsor v. Reg. (35 L. J. M.C. 121, 161; L. R. 1 Q.B. 289, 390) followed. Rex v. Lewis, 78 L. J. K.B. 722; 100 L. T. 976; 73 J. P. 346; 22 Cox C.C. 141; 25 T. L. R. 582—C.C.A.

Reference by Home Secretary to Court—Extent of Appeal.]—Prisoners who have petitioned the Home Secretary against their sentence, and whose petitions are referred to the Court of Criminal Appeal under section 19 of the Criminal Appeal Act, 1907, must be deemed to be appellants in respect of their sentence only. Rex v. Smith; Rex v. Wilson, 79 L. J. K.B. 4; [1909] 2 K.B. 756; 101 L. T. 126; 73 J. P. 407; 22 Cox C.C. 151—C.C.A.

Sentence of Penal Servitude and Preventive Detention—Appeal against Both Sentences—Leave to Appeal against Sentence of Penal Servitude—"Sentence"—Sentence of Preventive Detention.]—Where a prisoner appeals against a sentence of preventive detention and also appeals against the preceding sentence of penal servitude, the latter appeal will be treated as if the leave to appeal required by section 3 (c) of the Criminal Appeal Act, 1907, had been granted. Rex v. Smith; Rex v. Weston, 79 L. J. K.B. 1; [1910] 1 K.B. 17; 101 L. T. 816; 74 J. P. 13; 22 Cox C.C. 219; 54 S. J. 137; 26 T. L. R. 23—C.C.A.

2. Legal Aid.

See also Vol. IV. 2213.

On Appeal to House of Lords.]—The Court of Criminal Appeal, sitting as a single Judge, has power to grant an appellant legal aid under section 10 of the Criminal Appeal Act, 1907, on an appeal from a decision of the Court of Criminal Appeal to the House of Lords, where the Attorney-General has granted his certificate under section 1, subsection 6 of that Act. Rex v. Leach, 76 J. P. 246; 56 S. J. 311—C.C.A.

3. Hearing.

See also Vol. IV. 2213.

Shorthand Notes — Transcript — Application for, by Appellant whose Appeal has been Dismissed.]—Having regard to rule 39*c* of the Criminal Appeal Rules, 1908, the Court of Criminal Appeal has no power subsequently to grant to a person who had appealed to the Court, and whose appeal was dismissed, a copy of the transcript of the shorthand notes of the proceedings at the trial to enable such person to petition the Home Secretary. Weir, Ex parte, 108 L. T. 350; 77 J. P. 56; 23 Cox C.C. 326—C.C.A.

Comparison of Admitted Handwriting with the Notice of Appeal.]—On a question of disputed handwriting the Court will compare a document alleged to be written by the appellant with the notice of appeal written and signed by him. Rex v. Totty, 111 L. T. 167; 24 Cox C.C. 227—C.C.A.

Habitual Criminal—Review.]—In an appeal to the Court of Criminal Appeal against a conviction for being an habitual criminal, it is the duty of the Court to consider the case on its merits, and not merely to consider whether there was evidence upon which the jury could reasonably return the verdict appealed against. Heron v. Lord Advocate, [1914] S. C. (J.) 7—Ct. of Just.

Observations as to the evidence which may legitimately be taken into consideration by a jury in dealing with such a charge, and by the Court of Criminal Appeal in disposing of such an appeal. Ib.

Per Lord Mackenzie : The Judge who presided at the trial should not sit as a member of the Court of Criminal Appeal. Ib.

4. Fresh Evidence.

See also Vol. IV. 2213.

Juryman—Alleged Misconduct—Application to Call Evidence.]—On an appeal against a conviction the appellant applied for leave to call evidence that one of the jury had stated on the evening of the first day of the trial that all the jury were friendly with the police, and it made no difference what the appellant said. In the grounds of appeal there was nothing as to the misconduct of a juryman :—Held, that the Court ought not to accede to the application. Rex v. Syme, 30 T. L. R. 691—C.C.A.

5. Grounds of Appeal.

See also Vol. IV. 2214.

Improper Admission of Evidence.]—Where evidence has been improperly admitted, an appeal will not be dismissed under section 4, sub-section 1 of the Criminal Appeal Act, 1907, on the ground "that no substantial miscarriage of justice has actually occurred," unless the Court feels certain that the jury would have come to the same conclusion if the evidence had been rejected. Rex v. Christie, 109 L. T. 746; 78 J. P. 141; 30 T. L. R. 41—C.C.A.

Hearsay Evidence Wrongfully Admitted.]—Conviction for burglary quashed on the ground that the chairman of quarter sessions had admitted hearsay evidence which refuted an alibi set up by the prisoner. Rex v. Campbell, 77 J. P. 95—C.C.A.

The Court quashed the conviction of the appellant for larceny on the ground of the improper admission of hearsay evidence, and also on the ground that the Judge in dealing with the defence of an alibi set up, said, "I do not wish to bias you in any way whatever, but here is a man who has set up an alibi, which is no shadow of an alibi from any possible point of view." Rex v. Ruffino, 76 J. P. 49—C.C.A.

Irregularity — Reference to Inadmissible Documents.]—The fact that, in the course of the trial, counsel for the prosecution referred to the contents of certain documents which were not admissible in evidence afforded no ground for quashing the conviction, as the irregularity could not, in the circumstances of the case, have influenced the verdict of the jury. Rex v. Seham Yousry, 84 L. J. K.B. 1272; 112 L. T. 311; 31 T. L. R. 27—C.C.A.

Jury Inadvertently Informed of Previous Conviction.]—Conviction of the appellant for burglary quashed where the Judge had inadvertently caused him to admit that he had been previously convicted. Rex v. Hemingway, 77 J. P. 15; 29 T. L. R. 13—C.C.A.

Previous Conviction Wrongly Admitted—Misdirection.]—Conviction of the appellant quashed where evidence of a previous conviction was wrongly admitted. Rex v. Curtis, 29 T. L. R. 512—C.C.A.

Insufficient Evidence.]—The appellant was an engine driver and was obliged to be much away from home, and his wife was addicted to drink. Their daughter took to going about with women of bad character and the appellant reproved her, but eventually she was seduced. The appellant and his wife were both charged under section 17 of the Children Act, 1908, as amended by section 1 of the Children Act (1908) Amendment Act, 1910. The jury found that the appellant was guilty of negligence and that his wife was guilty of criminal negligence :—Held, that the conviction of the appellant must be quashed, as there was not enough evidence to support it and as the jury did not by their verdict intend to find him guilty of the offence charged. Rex v. Chainey, 30 T. L. R. 51—C.C.A.

Conviction of the appellant for receiving quashed where the only evidence suggested to connect him with the crime was that the stolen property had been found in a house which had been in his occupation up to a week previous to the property being taken there, and that he had some months before taken the tenancy of this house in his wife's name. Rex v. Batty, 76 J. P. 388; 28 T. L. R. 485—C.C.A.

Conviction quashed, on the grounds—first, of the insufficient nature of the evidence of identification, and, secondly, because the case had not been properly left to the jury. Rex v. Bundy, 75 J. P. 111—C.C.A.

Statement Incriminating Prisoner made by Fellow-prisoner.]—Conviction of the appellant quashed where substantially the whole of the evidence against him was a statement by the police that a fellow-prisoner on his arrest made a statement incriminating the appellant, and where the appellant denied the truth of such statement and that he was present at the time it was made—Rex v. Hickey, 27 T. L. R. 441—C.C.A.

Verdict Arrived at upon Consideration of Matters not in Evidence.]—The Court quashed a conviction where it appeared that the jury had arrived at their verdict, not upon a strict consideration of the evidence, but upon a consideration of other matters. Rex v. Newton, 28 T. L. R. 362—C.C.A.

Misstatement of Law.]—Conviction of the appellant for the abduction of a girl under the age of sixteen quashed on the ground that the appellant had pleaded guilty upon the faith of an erroneous statement of the law from the presiding Judge. Rex v. Alexander, 107 L. T. 240; 76 J. P. 215; 23 Cox C.C. 138; 28 T. L. R. 200—C.C.A.

A mere omission or misstatement in a summing-up is not in itself a misdirection where the case has been fully heard by the jury; but there is a miscarriage of justice within section 4 of the Criminal Appeal Act, 1907, where the omission or misstatement is such that the jury may probably have been misled by it. Rex v. Wann, 107 L. T. 462; 76 J. P. 269; 23 Cox C.C. 183; 28 T. L. R. 240—C.C.A.

No Proper Direction to Jury—Perjury—Several Assignments—Evidence Consisting of Oath against Oath—Certificate by Judge.]—The appellant was indicted for perjury. The indictment contained several assignments of perjury, one of them being that in a certain conversation between the appellant and the prosecutrix the latter had said she had had a miscarriage and that she was afraid it was by her lodger. The jury were not directed that before they could convict they must be satisfied that there was something more than oath against oath upon each assignment. The jury returned a general verdict of "Guilty":—Held, that, having regard to the fact that the several assignments were before the jury and within their general verdict, and that it was impossible to say whether they would have found the verdict they did if they had had a proper appreciation of the necessity of proof being given other than the mere oath of the prosecutrix as against that of the appellant, the conviction must be quashed. Where a case is one proper for the consideration of the jury and the jury are properly directed, the mere opinion of the Judge who tries the case that he would have found the other way or that the verdict is unsatisfactory will not of itself justify the Court of Criminal Appeal interfering with the verdict of "Guilty." Rex v. Gaskell, 77 J. P. 112; 29 T. L. R. 108—C.C.A.

—— Receiving—No Direction to Jury as to Possession.]—A sack of meal was stolen by one S. from his employer, and taken by him to a table in the appellant's yard, where the appellant was standing. Before a few seconds had passed a police officer followed and took the sack away. The appellant was convicted of receiving the sack:—Held, that the conviction must be quashed, as there was no direction to the jury as to what constituted receipt by the appellant of the sack. Rex v. Crane, 76 J. P. 261—C.C.A.

—— Indecent Assault—Misdirection on Question of Consent.]—Conviction of the appellant for indecent assault quashed on the ground that the summing-up might have misled the jury into believing that because the appellant had not raised the question of consent on the part of the woman alleged to have been assaulted they must convict although there was consent. Rex v. Horn, 76 J. P. 270; 28 T. L. R. 336—C.C.A.

Defence not Put to Jury—Wounding—Self-Defence.]—The appellant was convicted of felonious wounding. At the trial he did not deny the wounding, but said that he acted in self-defence. This defence was not put to the jury, the only question left to them being whether or not the appellant was insane:—Held, that as the appellant's defence had not been left to the jury, the conviction must be quashed. Rex v. Hill, 105 L. T. 751; 76 J. P. 49; 28 T. L. R. 15; 22 Cox C.C. 625—C.C.A.

Misdirection—Conspiracy—Defrauding Creditors.]—The appellants—husband and wife and two sons—were convicted of a conspiracy to cheat and defraud the creditors of the wife. Substantially the case for the prosecution was that the mother sold to the sons a number of bicycles under value. The evidence shewed that the bicycles were sold to the sons for less than similar bicycles were sold to other agents:—Held, that the conviction must be quashed, inasmuch as there might, from the language of the summing-up, be the misapprehension in the minds of the jury that they were entitled to convict the appellants if the bicycles were sold to the sons at less than was paid by other agentts, although the sales were at sums over cost price. Rex v. Crane, 75 J. P. 415—C.C.A.

—— Statements not in Evidence Put before Jury—Shorthand Notes of Evidence—Judge's Notes.]—Where in his summing-up to the jury the deputy-chairman of quarter sessions laid stress on certain evidence which had been given at the police Court against the appellant, but as to which it was doubtful whether it was given before the jury, as it did not appear either on the shorthand notes of the proceedings at the trial or on the deputy-chairman's own note, the Court quashed the conviction. Where it is uncertain whether certain evidence has been given before the jury, the Court will be guided by the shorthand notes, especially when combined with the Judge's own notes, unless there are grave reasons for departing from this practice. Rex v. Rimes, 28 T. L. R. 409—C.C.A.

—— Mistake as to Witnesses who had Given Evidence.]—Conviction of the appellant for manslaughter quashed on the ground that the Judge at the trial had erroneously told the jury that none of the witnesses for the defence at the trial except the appellant himself had given evidence before the coroner or the police magistrate, and therefore that there had been no opportunity of testing their evidence, the fact being that some of the witnesses had been called before the coroner, the Court not being satisfied that the jury would have returned the verdict they did if this erroneous statement had not been made. Rex v. Savidge, 76 J. P. 32—C.C.A.

—— Conviction for Murder—Substitution of Verdict of Manslaughter.]—The appellant had been convicted of murder, the defence having been that the affair was an accident or at most manslaughter, and the Judge at the trial having ruled that the defence of manslaughter was not open to the appellant :—Held, on the facts, that the verdict of murder should be quashed and a verdict of manslaughter substituted. Rex v. Hopper, 84 L. J. K.B. 1371; [1915] 2 K.B. 431; 113 L. T. 381; 79 J. P. 335; 59 S. J. 478; 31 T. L. R. 360—C.C.A.

Sentence—Principles on which Court Acts.]—Principles upon which the Court of Criminal Appeal acts, when asked to review sentences, stated. Rex v. Shershewsky, 28 T. L. R. 364—C.C.A.

6. Effect of Quashing of Conviction.

The quashing of a conviction by the Court of Criminal Appeal puts the accused in the same position for all purposes as if he had been acquitted by the jury. Rex v. Barron, (No. 2), 83 L. J. K.B. 786; [1914] 2 K.B. 570; 78 J. P. 311; 58 S. J. 557; 30 T. L. R. 422—C.C.A.

Conviction Quashed—Appeal to House of Lords—Detention or Bail of Appellant.]—Where the Court of Criminal Appeal quashes a conviction it has no power to order that the appellant be detained in custody or admitted to bail pending the decision of the Attorney-General whether he will give a certificate under section 1, sub-section 6 of the Criminal Appeal Act, 1907, that it is desirable that a further appeal should be brought to the House of Lords, or, after such certificate has been granted, pending the hearing of the appeal; the appellant, on the conviction being quashed, is entitled to be released at once. Director of Public Prosecutions v. Ball (No. 1), 80 L. J. K.B. 689; [1911] A.C. 47; 104 L. T. 47; 22 Cox C.C. 364; 55 S. J. 190—C.C.A.

Order Reversed in House of Lords—Procedure.]—Where an order of the Court of Criminal Appeal quashing a conviction had been reversed in the House of Lords, on an application subsequently made to the Court of Criminal Appeal,—Held, that the proper procedure in applying the decision of the House of Lords was by application to the Court of Criminal Appeal to amend its record by expunging the order setting aside the verdict, and to make an order for the arrest of the accused persons. Director of Public Prosecutions v. Ball (No. 2), 80 L. J. K.B. 691; [1911] A.C. 47; 104 L. T. 48; 75 J. P. 180; 22 Cox C.C. 370; 27 T. L. R. 162—C.C.A.

IX. BAIL.

See also Vol. IV. 1933, 2222.

Notice of Application to Prosecution.]—While the Court of Criminal Appeal cannot on its own initiative lay down a general rule that notice must be given to the prosecution when an application for bail is intended to be made, it is very desirable that a Judge or the Court in the exercise of his or its discretion should direct such notice to be given. In cases where the Director of Public Prosecutions is concerned the application for bail should be refused where no notice has been given of the intended application. Rex v. Ridley, 100 L. T. 944; 22 Cox C.C. 127; 25 T. L. R. 508—C.C.A.

Agreement to Indemnify Bail.]—An agreement between a person against whom a criminal charge is pending and another, that if the latter will go bail for him he will indemnify him against the consequences of his recognisance being estreated in consequence of such person not surrendering in accordance with the conditions thereof, is an indictable offence as tending to produce a public mischief. Reg. v. Broome (18 L. T. (o.s.) 19) disapproved. Rex v. Porter, 79 L. J. K.B. 241; [1910] 1 K.B. 369; 102 L. T. 255; 74 J. P. 159; 22 Cox C.C. 295; 26 T. L. R. 200—C.C.A.

X. COSTS.

See also Vol. IV. 1938, 2223.

Offence of Bigamy—Committed in one County, Tried in another County—Costs of Prosecution Payable by County where Offence Committed.]—Where a person is apprehended and tried in one county for the offence of bigamy which has been committed in another county, the costs of the prosecution are payable under the Costs in Criminal Cases Act, 1908, out of the county fund of the administrative county in which the offence is committed, or is supposed to have been committed, and not out of the county fund of the county where the offender is tried. Rex v. London County Council; Keys, Ex parte, 83 L. J. K.B. 1381; [1914] 3 K.B. 310; 111 L. T. 254; 78 J. P. 302; 12 L. G. R. 1210; 24 Cox C.C. 263; 30 T. L. R. 504—D.

CROWN.

Commissioners of Works and Public Buildings—Liability to Action for Breach of Contract.]—An action will lie against His Majesty's Commissioners of Public Works and Buildings for damages for breach of contract. Graham v. Works and Public Buildings Commissioners (70 L. J. K.B. 860; [1901] 2 K.B. 781) applied. Roper v. Works and Public Buildings Commissioners, 84 L. J. K.B. 219; [1915] 1 K.B. 45; 111 L. T. 630—Shearman, J.

—— Liability to be Sued in Tort.]—The Commissioners being servants of the Crown, an action is not maintainable against them, in their official capacity, for damages in respect of wrongful acts committed by their agents or servants. The fact that the Commissioners are incorporated by statute makes no difference in this respect. Raleigh v. Goschen (67 L. J. Ch. 59; [1898] 1 Ch. 73) and Bainbridge v. Postmaster-General (75 L. J. K.B. 366; [1906] 1 K.B. 178) applied. Ib.

Construction of Contract—Duty of Executive to Ascertain Law.]—Where the Crown cannot be sued, either by petition of right or through an appointed officer, it is the duty of the Executive, in cases of doubt, to ascertain the law by application to the Court in order to act in accordance with it. Eastern Trust Co. v. McKenzie, Mann & Co., 84 L. J. P.C. 152; [1915] A.C. 750; 113 L. T. 346—P.C.

The respondents agreed to pay 195,000 dollars as part of the purchase price for all the stock and bonds of a company owning a partly constructed railway in Nova Scotia. The contract provided that the Government of Nova Scotia had the right to be satisfied that all claims for labour and supplies furnished in connection with the construction of the railway had been paid, and that the amount of those claims might be paid out of the subsidies payable by the Government, and that all sums paid in liquidation of such claims should be considered as payments on account of the 195,000 dollars:—Held, that the contract did not oust the jurisdiction of the Court to determine whether a payment by the Government out of the subsidies was in respect of "labour and supplies" within the meaning of the contract. Ib.

Injunction against Receiving Money—Payment by Executive—Contempt of Court.]—Held, further, that a receipt from the Government of money which the recipient has been restrained from receiving is a contempt of Court. Ib.

Petition of Right.]—The view expressed by the Lord Chief Baron in Kildare County Council v. Regem ([1909] 2 Ir. R. 199) as to the cases in which a petition of right is the proper remedy approved and followed. Dublin Corporation v. Regem, [1911] 1 Ir. R. 83—C.A.

Civil Servant—Pension—Basis of Calculation.]—A petition of right by a retired Civil servant with respect to a claim for a pension or to the basis on which his pension should be calculated cannot be entertained by the Courts, but is a matter for decision by the Treasury. Yorke v. Regem, 84 L. J. K.B. 947; [1915] 1 K.B. 852; 112 L. T. 1135; 31 T. L. R. 220—Lush, J.

Grant by Crown—Inconsistency with Previous Grant — Validity — Knowledge of Grantee.]—A grant by the Crown which is wholly or in part inconsistent with a previous grant is void, unless the previous grant is recited in it; but if the grantee had no notice, actual or constructive, of the previous grant, the second grant will be good to the extent to which it may be consistent with the first grant, though void as to the rest. Alcock v. Cooke (7 L. J. (o.s.) C.P. 126; 5 Bing. 340) explained. Vancouver City v. Vancouver Lumber Co., 81 L. J. P.C. 69; [1911] A.C. 711; 105 L. T. 464—P.C.

Restrictions in Local Acts.]—Observations per the Lord President and Lord Kinnear on the extent to which the Crown is bound by restrictions contained in local Acts. Edinburgh Magistrates v. Lord Advocate, [1912] S. C. 1085—Ct. of Sess.

Writ of Extent—Seizure under Writ—Writ Set Aside—Liability of Treasury Solicitor in Trespass.]—The plaintiff's goods were seized under a writ of extent, which was subsequently set aside on the ground that the affidavit upon which the fiat of the Judge was obtained for the issue of the writ was defective in not alleging that the plaintiff was insolvent. In an action against the defendants—the Treasury Solicitor and his assistants—for the trespass to the plaintiff's goods by their seizure under the writ,—Held, that as there was a judicial determination interposed between the filing of the affidavit upon which the writ was obtained and the issue of the writ, and as such issue was in consequence of that interposition, the defendants were protected from liability. Pridgeon v. Mellor, 28 T. L. R. 261—Pickford, J.

Attorney-General — Liability to Penal Action.]—The Court has jurisdiction to entertain an action by a subject against the Attorney-General as representing the Crown, although the immediate and sole object of the action is to affect the rights of the Crown in favour of the plaintiff. Hodges v. Att.-Gen. (8 L. J. Ex. Eq. 28; 3 Y. & C. 342) followed. Dyson v. Att.-Gen., 80 L. J. K.B. 531; [1911] 1 K.B. 410; 103 L. T. 707; 55 S. J. 168; 27 T. L. R. 143—C.A.

—— Declaratory Judgment.]—A declaratory judgment may, under Order XXV. rule 5, be sought against the Attorney-General as representing the Crown. Ib.

The plaintiff claimed a declaration against the Attorney-General that he was not bound to comply with certain notices served upon him as an owner and occupier of land under section 26, sub-section 2 of the Finance (1909-10) Act, 1910:—Held, that the action was one which was maintainable by the plaintiff, and should be allowed to go to trial. Ib.

—— Costs—Proceedings to Determine Construction of Charitable Legacies—Right of Attorney-General to Costs.]—The rule that inasmuch as the Attorney-General cannot be ordered to pay costs he ought not to receive them does not apply, at all events in a Court of first instance, to proceedings instituted by the Attorney-General, pursuant to a certificate of the Charity Commissioners under section 20 of the Charitable Trusts Act, 1853, to determine the construction of charitable gifts in a will. In such a case the Attorney-General represents all the objects of the charity, who are plaintiffs through him; and he is entitled to be put in the same position as to costs as any other plaintiff. Cardwell, In re; Att.-Gen. v. Day, 81 L. J. Ch. 443; [1912] 1 Ch. 779; 106 L. T. 753; 56 S. J. 361; 28 T. L. R. 307—Warrington, J.

Semble, that if the executors have distributed the estate and paid the charitable legacies in question they ought not to be made parties to the proceedings. Ib.

—— Charitable Bequest—Crown Representing Charities—No Party Below—Right to Appeal.] In a case relating to a charitable bequest the Court gave leave to the Attorney-General, as representing the Crown, to appeal to the Court of Appeal although he was not a party to the proceedings in the Court below. Faraker, In re; Faraker v. Durell, 81 L. a. Where no Market.

Refusal to Accept Goods — Prospective Profits.]—A company entered into a contract with a firm of engineers for the supply of certain machines for the company's use. Before the machines were delivered the company went into voluntary liquidation and the liquidator refused to accept delivery. The firm claimed to prove as creditors in the winding-up for their full loss of profit. At the commencement of the winding-up the articles which the company was still under contract to buy consisted of (a) machines which the creditors had manufactured but not delivered; (b) machines which the creditors had not commenced to manufacture. The former were altered and then sold elsewhere for a price less than that which the company had contracted to pay. It was not proved that the creditors' works were not sufficiently ample to have enabled them to perform their contract with the company in addition to other contracts which they actually performed for other customers:—Held, as to items (a), that, there being no available market for the goods as originally made, the measure of damage was the whole loss of profit which the creditors had suffered, and not merely the loss on re-sale plus the costs of alterations; as to items (b), that the measure of damages was the full amount of prospective profits which the creditors had lost by non-fulfilment of their contract. Vic Mill Co., Lim., In re, 82 L. J. Ch. 251; [1913] 1 Ch. 465; 108 L. T. 444; 57 S. J. 404—C.A.

b. Market Value.

Breach of Contract.]—In a contract, where the seller reserves to himself so much of the produce of the land as he may need for his own purposes, and the purchaser breaks his contract, the measure of damages for the breach is the cost to the seller of procuring the substituted article and not the price at which such article could be sold by the person who has procured it. Erie County Natural Gas and Fuel Co. v. Carroll, 80 L. J. P.C. 59; [1911] A.C. 105; 103 L. T. 678—P.C.

In cases of breach of contract, in the assessment of damages the party complaining should, so far as it can be done by money, be placed in the same position as he would have been in if the contract had been performed. Wertheim v. Chicoutimi Pulp Co., 80 L. J. P.C. 91; [1911] A.C. 301; 104 L. T. 226; 16 Com. Cas. 297—P.C.

Where the delivery of goods has been delayed, the proper damages are the difference between the full market price at the time and place at which they ought to have reached the purchaser and the rate at which they were sold when they actually reached him—that is, the loss actually sustained. Ib.

Where a contract provided for the delivery of goods at a place where there was no market for them, damages for non-delivery should be calculated with reference to the market at which the purchaser, as the vendor knew, intended to sell them, with allowance for the cost of carriage. Ib.

In a contract for the sale of negotiable securities the measure of damages for a breach is the difference between the contract price and the market price at the date of the breach, with an obligation on the part of the seller to mitigate the damages by getting the best price he can at the date of the breach, and the seller is not bound to reduce the damages, if he can, by subsequent sales at better prices. Jamal v. Moolla Dawood Sons & Co., 85 L. J. K.B. 29; 60 S. J. 139; 32 T. L. R. 79—P.C.

Sale of Goods — Non-delivery — Re-sale by Purchaser.]—The rule that the damages to which a purchaser is entitled for non-delivery of goods is the difference between the contract price and the market price at the time when they ought to have been delivered is not affected by the fact that before the date of delivery the purchaser had re-sold the goods for less than the market value. Rodocanachi, Sons & Co. v. Milburn (56 L. J. Q.B. 202; 18 Q.B. D. 67) approved and followed. Williams v. Agius, Lim., 83 L. J. K.B. 715; [1914] A.C. 510; 110 L. T. 865; 19 Com. Cas. 200; 58 S. J. 377; 30 T. L. R. 351—H.L. (E.)

The law as laid down in Rodocanachi, Sons & Co. v. Milburn (supra) is not affected by section 51, sub-section 2 of the Sale of Goods Act, 1893. Ib.

c. Nature of Right.

Ship Steward Supplied with Articles to be Smuggled—Fine Imposed on Ship—Liability of Person Supplying Goods to Steward to Repay Fine.]—A British ship, trading between Grangemouth and South America, was fined on arriving at Buenos Ayres by the Customs authorities in respect that certain dutiable articles on board had not, as required by Argentine law, been declared in the ship's manifest and had been found concealed in the steward's cabin. These articles had, unknown to the shipowners but with the connivance of the captain, been supplied to the steward by a firm of merchants at Grangemouth in the knowledge that they were to be carried on board the ship and traded with by him, and that for the purpose of successful trading they would have to be smuggled into the port of destination. They were supplied on credit, and were to be paid for by the steward out of the proceeds of the trading. The shipowners having brought an action against the merchants to recover in name of damages the amount of the fine levied on the ship,—Held, that the merchants, having been accessory to the wrongful and illegal use of the vessel for carrying goods on a smuggling adventure, were liable for the loss and damage thereby occasioned to the owners. Cairns v. Walker, Lim., [1914] S. C. 51—Ct. of Sess.

Inducing Breach of Contract—Damages.]—Where a stranger to a contract has induced a party thereto to break a covenant in the contract in such a way that the breach must in the ordinary course inflict damage upon the covenantee, no proof of special damage is necessary to enable the covenantee to succeed in an action against the stranger. Exchange Telegraph Co. v. Gregory & Co. (65 L. J. Q.B. 262; [1896] 1 Q.B. 147) followed on this point. Goldsoll v. Goldman, 84 L. J. Ch. 63; [1914] 2 Ch. 603; 112 L. T. 21; 59 S. J. 43—Neville, J. See s.c. in C.A., ante, CONTRACT: *e. Negligence of Advertising Agency in Addressing Circular to Minor—Sending by Money-lender of Addressed Circular to Minor—Conviction of Criminal Offence—Claim for Indemnity against Advertising Agency.]—Where a person, relying on the performance of a contract not illegal in itself, but ignorant of the breach thereof by the other contracting party, commits a criminal offence, he cannot claim from that contracting party, by way of indemnity for damage caused by the breach, the penalty or costs of prosecution or defence incurred by him by reason of the criminal prosecution and conviction. Leslie, Lim. v. Reliable Advertising and Addressing Agency, 84 L. J. K.B. 719; [1915] 1 K.B. 652; 112 L. T. 947; 31 T. L. R. 182—Rowlatt, J.

A firm of money-lenders contracted with a firm of advertising agents that the latter should address a number of circulars inviting applications for loans with the names and addresses of a large section of the public given in a certain handbook, but omitting therefrom all the names of minors appearing in the handbook. By an oversight the advertising agency addressed one of the circulars to a minor, with the result that the money-lenders sent the same to the addressee. They and their manager were prosecuted under the Betting and Loans (Infants) Act, 1892, and the Money-lenders Act, 1900, for having "knowingly" circularised an infant. They were convicted and fined, and claimed in a civil action against the advertising agency, as damages for breach of the contract or the negligence in wrongly addressing the circular, the penalties and costs of prosecution and defence incurred by them and their manager:—Held, first, that the whole of the claim must fail, as the money-lenders could not rely on their contract with the advertising agency for the purpose of shewing that they had reasonable grounds to believe the addressee to be of full age; and secondly, that, if the claim could be maintained, the damages were not too remote. Colburn v.

Patmore (3 L. J. Ex. 317; 1 Cr. M. & R. 73) and Burrows v. Rhodes (68 L. J. Q.B. 545; [1899] 1 Q.B. 816) considered. Ib.

Volenti non fit Injuria.] — A merchant, whose store was burnt as the result of the negligence of a firm of carriers, received injuries through falling from a roof on which he had climbed with a hose for the purpose of extinguishing the fire. In an action at his instance against the carriers,—Held, that these injuries were too remote to found a claim for damages. Macdonald v. Macbrayne, Lim., [1915] S. C. 716—Ct. of Sess.

Sale of Article of Food for Purpose of Re-sale —Implied Warranty that Article Fit for Human Food—Breach of Warranty—Conviction of Buyer—Loss of Business.]—The plaintiff, a butcher, purchased the carcass of a pig from the defendants, who were meat salesmen; and, in ignorance of the fact that it was tuberculous and unfit for food, he exposed it for sale, but on the same day it was seized by a sanitary inspector, was adjudged by a Metropolitan police magistrate to be unfit for human food, and was ordered to be, and it was, destroyed. Thereupon the plaintiff was charged under section 47, sub-section 2 of the Public Health (London) Act, 1891, with having the carcass exposed for sale on his premises, and was fined 20*l.* In an action for breach of an implied warranty that the carcass was merchantable and reasonably fit for food, the plaintiff claimed as damages from the defendants the amount of the fine which had been imposed upon him and the costs of the proceedings before the magistrate, and also for loss of custom in his business. The jury found that the carcass was unfit for human food, that the plaintiff had impliedly made known to the defendants the purpose for which the carcass was required, and that he did so in such a way as to shew that he relied on their skill and judgment. The jury assessed the damages in respect of the fine and costs at 36*l.* 16*s.* 2*d.*, and the damages in respect of loss of custom at 200*l.* :—Held, that these damages were not too remote, and that the plaintiff was entitled to recover them from the defendants. Fitzgerald v. Leonard (32 L. Possibility of Assessment—Selection for Theatrical Engagement—Contingency.]—The defendant, an actor and theatrical manager, published in a newspaper an offer which was substantially as follows: That any lady in the United Kingdom who wished to become an actress might send in to the newspaper an application, together with her photograph and the sum of one shilling; that the United Kingdom had been divided into ten districts; that the photographs of the applicants living in each district would be given on request to readers of the newspaper, who were invited to vote for those whom they considered to be the most beautiful in each district; that from the five ladies in each district (fifty in all) for whom were received the greatest number of votes the defendant would himself personally select twelve, and that to four of these twelve he would give a three years' engagement each at five pounds a week, to other four a three years' engagement each at four pounds a week, and to the remaining four a three years' engagement each at three pounds a week. The plaintiff accepted the offer by sending in an application, together with her photograph and the sum of a shilling, and by the votes of the readers of the newspaper she was given the first place in the district in which she resided. The defendant failed to give the plaintiff a reasonable opportunity of appearing before him as one of the fifty candidates from whom he was to select the twelve to whom the engagements were to be given. The plaintiff brought an action against the defendant for damages for breach of contract in depriving her of the chance of being selected by him for one of the engagements, and the jury awarded her substantial damages :—Held, that, though the plaintiff's chance of obtaining one of the appointments depended upon the contingency of the defendant selecting her, the damage sustained by her through being deprived of that chance was neither too remote nor incapable of assessment, and that the verdict should stand. Chaplin v. Hicks, 80 L. Course of Tuition—Payment by Instalments —Breach.]—A student entered into a contract with a correspondence school, by which it was agreed that he should receive a certain course of instruction by correspondence and should pay therefor a fixed sum, payment to be made by monthly instalments until the whole sum was paid up. After pursuing the course for some time and paying the instalments as they fell due during that period, the student declined to continue the course, and refused to make any further payments. In an action brought against him by the school for payment of the balance of the fixed sum the student maintained that the school could only recover such damages as they could prove that they had suffered through his breach, if any, of the contract :—Held, on the construction of the contract that the agreement was for a definite course of instruction on one side and for a lump sum payment on the other, and accordingly that the pursuers, who were willing to complete the instruction they had contracted to supply, were entitled to recover the unpaid balance of that sum. International Correspondence School v. Irving, [1915] S. C. 28—Ct. of Sess.

Remoteness—Towage Contract—Collision—Sinking of Tow by Collision—Loss of Towage Remuneration by Tug Owner—Right of Tug Owner to Recover Loss from Colliding Vessel.]—The plaintiffs' tug was engaged in towing a ship from Antwerp to Port Talbot, under a contract which contained the clause "Sea towage interrupted by accident to be paid pro rata of distance towed." During the towage the defendant's vessel, by the negligence of those on board, collided with and sank the tow. The tug was uninjured. The plaintiffs sued the defendant to recover the amount of towage remuneration so lost:—Held, that the damage sustained by the plaintiffs by reason of the towage contract being no longer performable, in consequence of the sinking of the tow, gave the plaintiffs no cause of action against the defendant. Cattle v. Stockton Waterworks Co. (44 L. —— Ploughing up Pasture Land—Injunction—Damage to Tenant Caused thereby.]—The tenants of a pasture farm upon which they maintained a flock of sheep proposed to plough up part of the pasture land and plant corn. The landlord obtained an interim injunction restraining them from doing so, with the result that the tenants were compelled to maintain the farm as a pasture farm. They kept their sheep on the land, and in consequence of a drought the sheep became depreciated in value. The interim injunction obtained by the landlord was dissolved at the hearing of the action, and in arbitration proceedings the tenants claimed as damages the net profit they would have made if they had ploughed the land and planted corn, and also the amount by which the sheep had deteriorated in value. It was contended for the landlord that the damages arising under the second head were too remote and could not be allowed:—Held, that the tenants were entitled to damages under both heads of their claim. Pemberton and Cooper, In re, 107 L. d. Mitigation and Reduction.

Profit Accruing by Acts Done in Mitigation of Damages — Relevancy.] — In assessing damages for breach of contract the fundamental basis is compensation for pecuniary loss naturally flowing from the breach; but this is qualified by the plaintiff's duty to take all reasonable steps to mitigate the loss consequent on the breach, and he cannot claim any part of the damage which is due to his neglect to take such steps; and if the action which he has taken has actually diminished his loss, such diminution may be taken into account, even though there was no duty on him to act. A jury or arbitrator may properly look at the whole of the facts, and, by balancing loss and gain, estimate the quantum of damage. British Westinghouse Electric and Manufacturing Co. v. Underground Electric Railways, 81 L. J. K.B. 1132; [1912] A.C. 673; 107 L. T. 325; 56 S. J. 734—H.L. (E.).

The appellants contracted to provide the respondents with a number of machines. The machines failed to satisfy the provisions of the contract, and the respondents claimed damages for breach of contract. They also replaced the defective machines by improved machines. The question was submitted to an arbitrator, who in the Special Case stated that the appellants' claim was in substance for the balance of the price of the machines supplied by them, and that the respondents counterclaimed for the loss and damage arising out of the defects of the appellants' machines. The arbitrator found as a fact that the purchase by the respondents of the substituted machines was to their pecuniary advantage, and would have been so even if the original machines had complied with the contract:—Held, that the appellants were entitled to have the pecuniary advantages to the respondents arising from the use of the improved machines brought into account in ascertaining the damages sustained by the respondents by reason of the appellants' breach of their contract. Ib.

Alteration of Contract—Subsequent Arrangement—Music-hall Contract.]—Before the war the defendant agreed to perform twice every evening as a comedian at the plaintiffs' music hall for one week beginning on October 12, 1914, at a salary of 150*l*. The contract provided that "in case the artist shall, except through illness . . . or accident . . . fail to perform at any performance, he should pay to the management as and for liquidated damages a sum equal to the sum which the artist would have received for such performance, in addition to costs and expenses incurred by the management through the default of the artist." After the outbreak of war an arrangement was come to between the managements of the various music halls and the artistes, including the defendant, that the gross receipts of the halls during the war should be divided into two equal parts, of which the management should take one part and the performers at the hall the other part, sharing that part in the proportion of their respective salaries. The defendant having failed to perform at the plaintiff's hall, they brought an action for damages against him:—Held, that in order to ascertain the measure of damages the sum fixed in the contract had to be altered in view of the subsequent arrangement, and that the plaintiffs were entitled to recover such proportion of the artistes' share in the receipts which would probably have been received if the defendant had performed his agreement, as the defendant would have been entitled to. Golder's Green Amusement and Development Co. v. Relph, 31 T. Enquiry as to—Interest—Referee—Report—Date from which Interest Payable.]—An action for damages for trespass to mines was compromised on July 18, 1910, by an order referring it to a special referee to ascertain damages on an agreed basis, the defendants to pay the sum so found. On June 1, 1911, the referee reported that 1,515*l.* was payable. On motion that the report be adopted, the plaintiff company claimed interest from July 18, 1910:—Held, that the order of July 18, 1910, was not an order within the Judgments Act, 1838, s. 18, since a further order was necessary to enforce it, and that interest was not payable from that date. Borthwick v. Elderslie Steamship Co. (No. 2) (74 L. J. K.B. 772; [1905] 2 K.B. 516) distinguished. But held, that the order constituted an agreement to pay the damages when found, and that 4 per cent. interest was payable from June 1, 1911, the date of the referee's report. Ashover Fluorspar Mines, Lim. v. Jackson, 80 L. "Order"—Judgments Act, 1838.]—Where an order directs an enquiry as to damages in an action of trespass and gives liberty to apply after the result is certified, it is not an order within the provisions of section 18 of the Judgments Act, 1838. Where an order, after directing such an enquiry, orders payment of the amount so to be certified it is an order within that section. Ib.

Action for Recovery of Land—Interest.]—The appellant, who alleged that he was entitled to certain land in fee-simple under the trusts of a settlement, brought an action against the respondent for wrongfully issuing a certificate of title to the land to another person. In this action he established his title to the land, and it was held that the measure of damages was the value of the land with the buildings thereon at the date when his title fell into possession on the death of the previous tenant for life:—Held, that the appellant was not entitled to interest on the value of the land and buildings from the date when his title fell into possession. Spencer v. Registrar of Titles, 103 L. Attachment—Fiduciary Capacity of Executor to Creditors Terminated when a Personal Judgment Recovered.]—Sole creditors of a testator on evidence that the executor had received assets, took an order on him to pay personally, and afterwards on an admission that he had had a sum in his hands representing part of the testator's estate, obtained a four-day order to pay the sum into Court, followed by attachment for non-compliance:—Held, that by taking a personal order the plaintiffs had terminated the fiduciary relationship which had until then existed between them and the executor, and therefore could not rely on such relationship to bring the defendant within the third exception in section 4 of the Debtors Act, 1869, and entitle them to an order attaching him for non-payment. Thomas, In re; Sutton, Carden & Co. v. Thomas, 81 L. Judgment Summons—Order for Payment of Money—Default—Summons for Order of Commitment—Necessity for Service of Order for Payment.] — The defendant having made default in payment of a sum of money in compliance with an order made against him on a judgment summons, the plaintiff took out a further judgment summons calling upon the defendant to shew cause why he should not be committed to prison for such default. This summons was personally and duly served upon the defendant, but the order made on the first summons was not personally served upon him, though he was present when that order was made:—Held, that it was not necessary, in order to found jurisdiction to make an order of commitment, that the defendant should have been personally served with the order made on the first judgment summons. Haydon v. Haydon, 80 L. Assignment—Delivery Necessary to Constitute Delivery as Deed or Escrow—Delivery to Grantor's Solicitor—Deed to be Completed on Further Instructions from Grantor—Document to take Effect on Death of Grantor—Non-execution of Document as Will.] — In September, 1905, H., the assignee of the lease of certain premises, having signed and sealed an assignment of the residue of the term to one Mrs. B., handed the assignment to his solicitor. The assignment was not attested in the way provided by the Wills Act. On the same day as that on which the assignment, which was not dated, was handed by H. to his solicitor, the latter's firm wrote the following letter to H.: "We acknowledge that you have to-day executed the assignment of your lease to Mrs. B. as an escrow, and that we are to retain it on your behalf until you send us instructions to complete the deed. In the event of your dying before the deed is completed, we understand that we are to consider the deed as having been completed before your death and to take what steps are necessary to vest the lease in Mrs. B. should she wish it. In the event of Mrs. B. dying before the assignment is completed you will, of course, send us further instructions as to what is to be done with the premises. . . ." The assignment in question—which was also, but at some date unknown, executed by Mrs. B.—remained in the possession of H.'s solicitor up to H.'s death on September 22, 1909, and subsequently the blank was filled in by dating the assignment September 20, 1909; but the title deeds were retained by H., who continued to pay the rent, rates, and taxes. Mrs. B. survived H. In an action by the lessors against H.'s executors to recover possession of the premises and other relief, on the ground that the residue of the term was vested in H. at his death, in which action the defendants set up as a defence the above-mentioned assignment,—Held, that the plaintiffs were entitled to succeed, inasmuch as in the event which happened there was no such delivery by H. as made the assignment capable of taking effect either as an escrow or as a deed; and held further, that even if the deed had been delivered on condition that it should take effect on the death of H., it would operate as a will, and not having been attested in accordance with the Wills Act was a nullity. Foundling Hospital (Governors) v. Crane, 80 L. Execution by Attorney—Invalid Power of Attorney — Deed Void — Acknowledgment by Donor—Redelivery.]—On February 26, 1896, a lady by her attorney executed a voluntary deed of gift of chattels in favour of her daughter. The attorney's power did not authorise him to execute such a deed. On June 9, 1898, the lady's solicitor at her request produced and read to her the deed of gift, when she desired him to retain it on her daughter's behalf. A month later the lady sent to her solicitor an inventory of the chattels with a note on it in her handwriting stating that they were "now the property" of her daughter:—Held, that there had been such an acknowledgment of the deed by the lady in 1898 as amounted then to a delivery or re-delivery of the deed. Seymour, In re: Fielding v. Seymour, 82 L. J. Ch. 233; [1913] 1 Ch. 475; 108 L. T. 392; 57 S. J. 321—C.A.

To establish re-delivery of a deed by acknowledgment it is not necessary to shew that the party making the acknowledgment is aware that without the acknowledgment the deed would be invalid. Ib.

Construction—Joinder of Party for Limited Purpose—No Inference of Joinder for other Purposes—Erroneous Recital—Erroneous Inclusion of Parcels in Schedule.]—A party who joins in a deed for a specific purpose cannot be treated as having joined for a totally different purpose, or as having thereby dealt with any property, unless a clear intention to do so appears. Horsfall, In re; Hudleston v. Crofton, 80 L. J. Ch. 480; [1911] 2 Ch. 63; 104 L. T. 590—Parker, J.

E., under the will of her father, T., who died in 1861, was tenant for life, with a power of appointment among her issue, of lands specifically devised, and of part of his residuary estate. She had married in his lifetime, and he had then settled on her and her children part of the lands specifically devised by his will. Some of those lands, not included in the settlement, were in 1871 sold by the trustees of the will, and the proceeds invested. In 1891 E. became a trustee of the will. In 1896, on the marriage of her daughter, S., E. appointed to her a share in T.'s residuary estate, the deed of appointment reciting erroneously that all the specifically devised lands had been comprised in E.'s marriage settlement. S., by her own marriage settlement, settled her share of T.'s residuary estate and of the investments representing the same, those investments being stated to be specified in the schedule. The schedule, however, included investments representing the proceeds of the specifically devised lands which had been sold. E. was a party to S.'s marriage settlement, whereby she covenanted to pay an annuity:—Held, that, notwithstanding the erroneous recital in the appointment to S., E. exercised her power thereby only over T.'s residuary estate, and not over the proceeds of sale; and that E.'s joinder in S.'s marriage settlement did not amount to an appointment or settlement by her of any of those proceeds. Minchin v. Minchin (5 Ir. R. Eq. 178, 258) and Griffith-Boscawen v. Scott (53 L. J. Ch. 571; 26 Ch. D. 358) followed. Ib.

—— Charge on Real Estate—"Die seised"—Seisin — Copyhold — Unadmitted Owner.]—A. covenanted to pay certain annuities, with power of distress, or entry for the recovery of the same, upon the real estate of which he might die seised. At the time of his death A. was in receipt of the rents and profits of certain copyholds of which he had never been admitted tenant, but as to which the admitted tenant had declared that he stood possessed of the same in trust for A. and his heirs and assigns:—Held, that A. had not died "seised" of the copyhold premises. Norman, In re; Thackray v. Norman, 111 L. T. 903; 58 S. J. 706—Joyce, J.

—— Licence—Reservation to Licensors, "their assigns and nominees"—Reading-in Words—Derogation from Grant.]—In certain cases the word "assigns," when not expressed, may be read into a document, but whether it is proper to do so depends on the context in each case. In a case of a licence where the extension of a reservation by the licensors to their "assigns and nominees" would destroy the only effective limitation on the scope of the reservation, and make it possible for the licensors to derogate very seriously from their grant, the Court will not supply such words where they are not expressed in the licence in question. Anglo-Newfoundland Development Co. v. Newfoundland Pine and Pulp Co., 83 L. J. P.C. 50; 110 L. T. 82—P.C.

—— Covenant—"As trustees but not so as to create any personal liability"—Effect — Repugnancy.]—A covenant (by the trustees of a deceased mortgagor) "as such trustees but not so as to create any personal liability" (to pay the mortgage debt and indemnify the estate of a deceased co-mortgagor) involves the personal liability of the covenantors. Furnivall v. Coombes (12 L. J. C.P. 265; 5 Man. & G. 736) followed. Williams v. Hathaway (6 Ch. D. 544) distinguished. Watling v. Lewis, 80 L. J. Ch. 242; [1911] 1 Ch. 414; 104 L. T. 132—Warrington, J.

The words "but not so as to create any personal liability" are, in effect, a proviso destroying, and not qualifying, the covenant entered into by the covenantors "as trustees"; that covenant is an absolute one and imports personal liability; the subsequent words are repugnant to it and must be rejected; and the personal liability therefore remains. Ib.

—— Grant of Fee-simple — Reservation of "mines, quarries of metals and minerals and springs of oil" by Grantor—Natural Gas not within Reservation.]—In an exception in a conveyance of land of "all mines and quarries of metals and minerals and all springs of oil in or under the said land, whether already discovered or not,"—Held, that natural gas, which at the date of the conveyance possessed no commercial value, was not included, but passed to the grantee. Barnard-Argue-Roth-Stearns Oil and Gas Co. v. Farquharson, 82 L. J. P.C. 30; [1912] A.C. 864; 107 L. T. 332; 57 S. J. 10; 28 T. L. R. 590—P.C.

Mining Lease—Parcels—Area Stated within Specified Boundaries — Alleged Deficiency — Abatement of Rent.]—The appellant was lessor and the respondents lessees under a mining lease, the terms of which were contained in a kabuliyat, granting the rights of cutting, raising, and selling coal beneath "400 bighas of land, described in the schedule below, in mauza Dobari"; the schedule specified boundaries and added "right in the coal underneath the 400 bighas of land within these boundaries." In a suit to recover arrears of rent the respondents alleged that they were in possession of less than 400 bighas and claimed to be entitled to an abatement of rent:—Held, first, that the construction of the kabuliyat as to the land included in the lease could not be varied by evidence of the negotiations which led to the contract or by evidence that there were not 400 bighas within the specified boundaries; and secondly, further, that the respondents had failed to prove what was the area in fact contained within the boundaries or that of which they had been given possession. Durga Prasad Singh v. Rajendra Narayan Bagchi, L. R. 40 Ind. App. 223—P.C.

Alteration of Date—Parcels—Plan—Implied Right of Way.]—A lessor granted a lease of certain plots of land on which had been erected certain then nearly finished houses. The grant was defined by reference to a plan in the margin, which shewed a narrow strip of ground, coloured brown, at the rear of the plots, and running along other land that belonged to the lessor, but was not included in the lease. The lease contained no express grant of any right of way along this strip, nor indeed further reference to it; but the evidence shewed that the use of the strip was essential to the tenants of the new houses for the convenient ingress of coal and manure, and for the egress of garden rubbish. At the time of the original granting of the lease the dates of the day and month were left in blank, but subsequently there was an alteration of the year (with the consent of all parties), and the blanks were also filled in. At the date of the original granting of the lease the plots were not yet fenced on the side towards the strip; but at the time of the alteration they were so fenced, and the position was indicated for gates communicating between the plots and the strip :—Held, that the alteration of the lease did not avoid it, and that the lessor was estopped from shewing that the date inserted by himself was not the date from which the demise operated, so as to prevent any one claiming under the lease from relying upon the circumstances existing at the date that the lease finally bore. Held, further, that, under those circumstances, an implied right of way over the strip in question had passed under the lease from the lessor to the lessee. Rudd v. Bowles, 81 L. J. Ch. 277; [1912] 2 Ch. 60; 105 L. T. 864—Neville, J.

Release—Effect of—Proceedings not Contemplated by the Release.]—It is not competent for a respondent on a summons against him for misfeasance to set up as a bar to the proceedings that a release had been given him by the company which included a general clause of release, unless such relief is shewn to have contemplated the matters actually in question on the summons. Joint-Stock Trust and Finance Corporation, In re, 56 S. Lease—Innocent Misrepresentation by Lessor Inducing Contract—Right of Tenant to Cancellation of Lease.]—A lease by deed which has been executed by the lessee on the faith of an innocent misrepresentation on the part of the lessor, and under which the lessee has gone into possession, will not be rescinded by the Court upon the ground that the execution of the deed was induced by such misrepresentation. Angel v. Jay, 80 L. Publication—Letter in Unsealed Halfpenny Envelope — Unlawful Opening by Third Person.]—The respondent sent a letter to his wife containing words alleged to be a libel on their children, the plaintiffs. This was inclosed in an open envelope, bearing a halfpenny stamp, addressed to her in her maiden name, and sent through the post. It was opened by the wife's butler out of curiosity, and he read the letter :—Held, that there was no evidence of publication to him by the respondent, as his act was unauthorised and could not reasonably be anticipated by the respondent. Huth v. Huth, 84 L. —— Right of Postal Authorities to Open such Letters—Presumption of Opening by Them.]—Although the postal authorities had the right to examine the contents of envelopes under a halfpenny stamp, a presumption that they had in fact done so did not arise, and evidence to shew that they had done so in fact would be necessary to shew publication to them. Ib.

Publication — Liability of Circulating Library.]—The defendants, who were book distributors, sold two books which were published in the French language in Paris, and which the plaintiff alleged contained libellous statements regarding her. In an action by the plaintiff claiming damages from the defendants in respect of the publication of these statements, the jury found that the defendants did not know of anything libellous contained in the books, that it was not through their negligence that they did not know, and that the books were not of such a character as to put them on enquiry :—Held, that the defendants were not liable. Per Cozens-Hardy, M.R. : While as to some books there may be a duty on distributing agents to examine them carefully, because of their titles or because of the recognised propensity of their authors to scatter libels abroad, there is no general obligation on distributing agents to read every book they sell in order to ascertain whether or not it contains any libellous statements. Weldon v. Times Book Co., 28 T. Publication of Story in Magazine under Plaintiff's Name—Plaintiff not the Writer of the Story—Passing off.]—The plaintiff, a writer of reputation, sued the defendants for damages for publishing in their magazine a story under the plaintiff's name of which he was not the writer. The plaintiff alleged that the story was of inferior quality, and, being published as by him, was damaging to his reputation. In summing up the Judge directed the jury that if they came to the conclusion that any one reading the story would think the plaintiff a mere commonplace scribbler they could give him damages for libel, and, further, that on the claim for passing off, if they thought the facts proved and that damage must certainly ensue, though it was not capable of present proof, they could find for the plaintiff with damages. Ridge v. English Illustrated Magazine, 29 T. L. R. 592—Darling, J.

Innuendo—Necessary Inference from Language Used.]—In order to support an action for libel the innuendo must represent the reasonable, natural, or necessary inference from the words complained of, regard being had to the occasion and circumstances of their publication. It is not enough that the words may be made to bear a defamatory meaning by putting upon them a strained and improbable construction. Crabbe & Robertson v. Stubbs (22 Rettie, 860) discussed and explained. Stubbs, Lim. v. Russell, 82 L. J. P.C. 98; [1913] A.C. 386; [1913] S. C. (H.L.) 14; 108 L. T. 529; 29 T. L. R. 409—H.L. (Sc.)

Publication of Translation of Papal Bull.]—The translation of a Papal bull and its publication in a newspaper simply for the information of readers is not a contravention of 13 Eliz. c. 2. The words of the statute, "publish or . . . put in use" mean publishing so as to make the bull operative in this country. Mathew v. Times Publishing Co., 29 T. L. R. 471—Darling, J.

Libel on a Class.]—A newspaper published an article on Ireland, stating that in Queenstown instructions were issued by the Roman Catholic religious authorities that all Protestant shop assistants should be discharged, and that a shopkeeper who had refused so to act had had his shop proclaimed and had been forced to close it. The Roman Catholic Bishop of Queenstown and six of his clergy (who averred that they were the Roman Catholic religious authorities referred to) sued as individuals to recover separate sums of damages on account of the accusations in the article. The article was innuendoed as charging the pursuers with abusing their religious influence to procure the indiscriminate dismissal of Protestant shop assistants, and with ruining a shopkeeper's business:—Held, first, that the pursuers were entitled to sue for damages as individuals; secondly, that it was for the jury to determine whether they or any of them were the Roman Catholic religious authorities referred to: and thirdly, that the article could bear the defamatory meaning put upon it. Browne v. Thomson & Co., [1912] S. C. 359—Ct. of Sess.

2. In Respect of Trade or Profession.

Slander—Words Spoken in Relation to a Person's Office, Trade, or Profession.]—An action for a slander upon a person in the way of his office, trade, or profession will lie without proof of special damage when, from the nature of the office held by the person slandered, the words uttered will in the ordinary course caused him damage, although the person uttering the slander did not in terms connect the misconduct imputed to the plaintiff with the office held by him. Authorities on the subject discussed. Jones v. Jones, 84 L. J. K.B. 1140; 113 L. T. 336; 31 T. L. R. 245—Lush, J. Reversed, 60 S. J. 140; 32 T. L. R. 171—C.A.

—— Certificated Teacher and Head Master of a County Council School—Imputation of Adultery—No Special Damage Alleged or Proved—Words Actionable per se.]—A certificated teacher and head master of a county council school brought an action against a man and his wife to recover damages for a slander uttered concerning the plaintiff in the way of his business by the female defendant. The words spoken imputed that the plaintiff had been guilty of moral misconduct with a certain woman, but when they were spoken no reference was made by the female defendant to the plaintiff's position as a head master, and it did not appear that she knew that he held that office. No special damage was alleged or proved. The jury found that the words spoken were calculated to imperil the plaintiff's retention of his office, and awarded him damages:—Held, that the words were actionable per se, and that consequently the plaintiff was entitled to judgment. Ib.

Disparagement of System Worked under a Patent—Imputation on Patentee.]—To disparage a trader's goods does not give ground for an action of libel, although, if special damage is proved, the plaintiff may recover in an action on the case. If, however, the words used, though directly disparaging goods, also impute carelessness, misconduct, or want of skill in the conduct of his business by the trader, they may give grounds for an action of libel. An attack upon the system worked under a patent does not necessarily involve an imputation upon the person who supplies the parts and licenses the use of the system. Griffiths v. Benn, 27 T. L. R. 346—C.A.

Allegation of Professional Incapacity—"Quack."]—In an action for slander at the instance of C., the superintendent of a district lunatic asylum (who was admittedly not a qualified medical practitioner), complaining that the defender had said of him, "What does that mannie C. know about treating lunatics? He is just a quack. We will sack him yet":—Held, that the words were capable of meaning that the pursuer was unfit for his duties as superintendent, that he did not know his work, was not properly qualified for the work in which he was engaged, and ought to be dismissed from his post, and therefore that the question must be left to the jury. Chisholm v. Grant, [1914] S. C. 239—Ct. of Sess.

Justification—Failure to Prove—Defamatory Meaning.]—The plaintiffs were the proprietors of a wine, known as "Bendle's Meat-Port Nutrient," and the defendants published a statement which in substance was that the wine, though it was advertised as a really genuine nutritive meat wine, did not contain highly nutritive properties. In an action by the plaintiffs against the defendants for libel the defendants pleaded justification. The Judge found that the plaintiffs' advertisement, if fairly read, was substantially true, and he awarded the plaintiffs damages :—Held, on the evidence (Phillimore, L.J., dissenting), that the words would be understood by reasonable men as imputing to the plaintiffs dishonesty or fraudulent incapacity in the way of conducting their business, and the Judge's decision must be affirmed. Bendle v. United Kingdom Alliance, 31 T. L. R. 403—C.A.

3. Comments on Matters of Public Interest.

Innuendo.]—A ratepayer having made certain charges against the matron of a hospital, an enquiry was held in which evidence was given by the matron and by other members of the hospital staff. The commissioner who conducted the enquiry reported adversely on the credibility of certain members of the staff, but stated his belief in the truthfulness of the matron, and exonerated her from the charges made against her. On this report being sent to the ratepayer, he acknowledged receipt of it in a letter, in which he said "I have but a languid interest in the question of which member of the staff lied the most." In an action of damages for defamation brought by the matron against the ratepayer the pursuer sought to innuendo these words as representing that she had lied in giving evidence at the enquiry :—Held, that the words would not bear this innuendo. Couper v. Balfour of Burleigh (Lord), [1914] S. C. 139—Ct. of Sess.

B. PRIVILEGE.

1. Absolute.

Annual Meeting of Licensing Justices—"Court in law or recognised by law"—Application for Renewal of Licence—Notice of Objection—Defamatory Statement.]—The rule of law that defamatory statements made in the course of proceedings before a Court of justice or a Court having similar attributes are absolutely privileged does not apply in the case of licensing Justices when dealing with an objection to the renewal of an old on-licence. They are not in such case a "Court in law or a Court recognised by law" within the meaning of the rule. Attwood v. Chapman, 83 L. J. K.B. 1666; [1914] 3 K.B. 275; 111 L. T. 726; 79 J. P. 65; 30 T. L. R. 596—Avory, J.

The plaintiff was the holder of an old on-licence of an inn, and applied for the renewal thereof at the general annual meeting of the licensing Justices. The defendant, a bookmaker, gave written notice of his intention to oppose the application, and alleged various grounds of objection to the effect that the plaintiff was not a fit and proper person to hold the licence. He served copies of this notice on the plaintiff, on the clerk to the licensing Justices, on the superintendent of police, and on a firm of brewers, owners of the inn. The plaintiff brought an action claiming damages for libel in respect of the statements contained in the notice, and the defendant pleaded that he was taking a necessary and proper step in a judicial proceeding in serving the notices, and that the publication thereof was absolutely privileged :—Held, first, that the licensing Justices were not a Court of law to which the privilege attached; secondly, that, assuming they were, the defendant, as objector, being neither a party nor a witness in the proceedings, was not a person on whose behalf the privilege could be claimed; and thirdly, that, assuming the defendant was such a person, the privilege did not extend to the notices served on the superintendent of police and on the brewers. Ib.

Dictum of Lord Halsbury, L.C., in Boulter v. Kent Justices (66 L. J. Q.B. 787, 789; [1897] A.C. 556, 561), and adopted by the Court of Appeal in Rex v. Howard (71 L. J. K.B. 754; [1902] 2 K.B. 363), followed. Ib.

2. Qualified.

Privileged Occasion—Communication Made in Discharge of Duty—Public Interest—Trade Protection Association—Confidential Report to Subscriber in Answer to Enquiry.]—An alleged defamatory communication made by a trade protection association to one of its subscribers, in answer to an enquiry by the latter,—Held by the Court of Appeal (Vaughan Williams, L.J., and Hamilton, L.J.; Bray, J., dissenting), having regard to the constitution and method of business of the association, not to have been made on a privileged occasion. Greenlands, Lim. v. Wilmshurst, 83 L. J. K.B. 1; [1913] 3 K.B. 507; 109 L. T. 487; 57 S. J. 740; 29 T. L. R. 685—C.A.

Action for Joint Tort—Separate Defences—Improper Severance of Damages—Unity of Verdict and Judgment.]—Where an action has been brought against several defendants for an alleged joint tort for which all are found liable, then, notwithstanding that they have severed in their defences, only one joint verdict can be found and one joint judgment can be entered against them all. Ib.

A trade protection association existed for the purpose of providing for its subscribers, in answer to their enquiries, confidential information as to the credit and financial position of persons with whom they contemplated dealing, its work being carried on under the supervision of a committee of the subscribers, by a secretary, a solicitor, and various local correspondents, and its surplus income from subscriptions being accumulated in the hands of its trustees and not distributed among the subscribers. The plaintiffs brought an action for libel against the association and one of its correspondents in respect of a communication sent to a subscriber in answer to his enquiry. The defendants delivered separate defences, each pleading (inter alia) that the communication was published on a privileged occasion without malice. The jury found express malice against the correspondent, and they returned separate verdicts against the correspondent for 750*l.* damages and against the association for 1,000*l.* damages. The Judge held that the occasion was not privileged, and gave judgment against the defendants for the above amounts respectively. The association appealed :—Held, by Vaughan Williams, L.J., and Hamilton, L.J., that the occasion was not privileged, but that the damages had been improperly severed, and further that they were excessive as against the association, and therefore that judgment should not be entered for the plaintiffs, but that there must be a new trial of the action. Held, by Bray, J., that the occasion was privileged, that the malice of the correspondent could not be attributed to the association, and that judgment should be entered for the association; but, if this view were wrong, that for the reasons given by the other members of the Court there should be a new trial. Macintosh v. Dun (77 L. J. P.C. 113; [1908] A.C. 390) followed by Vaughan Williams, L.J., and Hamilton, L.J., but distinguished by Bray, J. Ib.

Enquiries involving imputations on the solvency of persons contained in a paper issued only to its members by a voluntary society for the protection of trade are not published on a privileged occasion. Elkington v. London Association for Protection of Trade, 28 T. L. R. 117—Darling, J.

Representation that Person Unworthy of Commercial Credit — Privilege.] — A local association of traders issued to its members a list of the names and addresses of certain persons in the district. The list bore no title and contained no comment on the persons whose names were included; but it was admittedly compiled from the "black lists." A person whose name appeared in the list brought an action of damages for libel against the association, in which he averred that the list was known in the district as the "black list," and that the defenders by inserting his name in it had represented that he was unworthy of business credit :—Held, first, that the publication of the pursuer's name in the list was defamatory; but secondly, that the defenders were privileged in issuing the list, and as facts inferring malice were not averred the action must be dismissed. Macintosh v. Dun (77 L. J. P.C. 113); [1908] A.C. 390) considered. Barr v. Musselburgh Merchants Association, [1912] S. C. 174—Ct. of Sess.

Matter of Public Interest—Duty to Communicate.]—A publication is made on a privileged occasion if the matter published is of public interest and if the party who publishes it owes a moral, though not necessarily a legal, duty to communicate it to the public. The plaintiff publicly attacked an officer of the Army in his character as such, and the Army Council, having investigated the matter, found that the attack was wholly unjustifiable. Thereupon the defendant, who was at the time Permanent Under-Secretary for War, published, under the instructions of his superiors in the War Office, an official communiqué, including a letter to the officer who had been attacked by the plaintiff. This letter the plaintiff alleged to mean that he (the plaintiff) had been guilty of dishonourable conduct and had in consequence thereof been removed from his regiment :—Held, that the letter was published on a privileged occasion. Adam v. Ward, 31 T. L. R. 299—C.A.

Accusation of Dishonesty.]—A cashier, who had been dismissed from his employment, brought an action of damages for slander against the manager of the business. The pursuer averred that, having discovered shortages in the cash, he reported these to his employer; that the same afternoon, in the presence of his employer, the defender charged him with having taken the money, and the same evening dismissed him from the employment. Two days later the defender called on him at his house and, in the presence of his wife, said to him, "I have come to ask for explanations; you must have taken the money" :—Held, that, on the pursuer's averments, the occasion when the slander was uttered in the pursuer's house was not privileged. Suzor v. Buckingham, [1914] S. C. 299—Ct. of Sess.

Master's Liability for Servant's Slander.]—In an action of damages for slander, brought against a limited company owning a music hall, the pursuer averred that, while he was present at a performance in the hall he was falsely accused by an attendant of indecent conduct towards a member of the audience, and that he was taken to a private room where the slander was repeated by the attendant of the hall and by the manager. He averred that these slanderous statements "were made and persisted in most recklessly, pertinaciously, and maliciously" :—Held, that the occasion was privileged, and that as there was no sufficient averment of facts inferring malice, the action was irrelevant. Finburgh v. Moss' Empires, Lim. ([1908] S. C. 928), distinguished. Gorman v. Moss' Empires, Lim., [1913] S. C. 1—Ct. of Sess.

3. Rebuttal of Privilege by Evidence of Malice.

Personal Malice of Servant.]—In an action of damages brought against a railway company on account of a slander uttered by the manager of one of their station bars, the pursuer, who had been employed as a barmaid at this bar, averred that, on the occasion of her dismissal from this post, the manager (who had the control of the servants employed at the bar) uttered the slander complained of—a charge of appropriating the company's funds—knowing it to be false and with the object of gratifying his private ill will towards her. The occasion was admittedly privileged :—Held, that the action was irrelevant, in respect that the pursuer's averments disclosed that the malice alleged as actuating the slander was personal to the manager and in no way connected with the business of the defenders, and accordingly that the defenders could not be held responsible. Citizens' Life Assurance Co. v. Brown (73 L. J. P.C. 102; [1904] A.C. 423) and Finburgh v. Moss' Empires, Lim. [1908] S. C. 928), distinguished. Aiken v. Caledonian Railway, [1913] S. C. 66—Ct. of Sess.

Sufficiency of Averments of Malice—Complaint by Ratepayer to Local Authority—Refusal to Withdraw Statement.]—The matron of a hospital belonging to certain local authorities brought an action of damages against a ratepayer within the hospital district for defamatory statements contained in two letters. The first of these letters was sent by him to the clerk of one of the local authorities, reporting certain information received by him as to the pursuer's conduct as matron (which he stated, if true, pointed, in his opinion, to criminal conduct), and demanding an enquiry. An enquiry was accordingly held by the hospital authorities, and thereafter, on the instigation of the defender, a second enquiry was held by the Local Government Board. In both of these enquiries the pursuer was absolved of blame. The second letter was then sent by the defender to the Local Government Board, in which he expressed dissatisfaction with the result of these enquiries and made another charge, based on fresh information, against the pursuer and asked for a further enquiry. A third enquiry was held, in which the pursuer was again absolved. The defender, however, refused to apologise or withdraw the charges. The defender's letters were admittedly privileged, but the pursuer maintained that malice sufficiently appeared from—first, the violent terms in which the statements in the letters were couched; secondly, the fact that they were made without prior enquiry; thirdly, the reiteration of them; and fourthly, the defender's adherence to them and refusal to apologise:—Held, that these facts and circumstances were not sufficient to infer malice, and action dismissed as irrelevant. Couper v. Balfour of Burleigh (Lord), [1913] S. C. 492—Ct. of Sess.

Observed, that the defender as a ratepayer was entitled to lay the facts reported to him before the proper authorities for investigation, and was under no duty to enquire into them before doing so; and that, although the facts were disproved, he was not bound to apologise or to withdraw the statements made to the authorities, although a duty of future reticence might be imposed on him. Ib.

Privilege of Author Destroyed by Malice—Printers of Libel not Actuated by Malice—Liability of Printers.]—The defendants jointly published a pamphlet containing libellous statements concerning the plaintiff. One of the defendants was the author and the other defendants were the printers of the pamphlet. It was admitted that, so far as the author was concerned, the pamphlet was published on a privileged occasion. The jury found that the author was actuated by malice, but that the printers were not actuated by malice:—Held, that the privilege of the author extended also to the printers, but that the printers were liable as well as the author, inasmuch as that privilege was defeated by the malice of the author, the publication being a joint publication, and the author and printers being joint tortfeasors each tortfeasor was liable for the malice of the other. Smith v. Streatfeild, 82 L. J. K.B. 1237; [1913] 3 K.B. 764; 109 L. T. 137; 29 T. L. R. 707—Bankes, J.

C. PROCEDURE AND PRACTICE.

See also Vol. V. 611, 1666.

Function of Judge and Jury—Libel—Fair Comment.]—In an action for libel in which the defendant pleads fair comment, the Judge, before leaving the question of fair comment to the jury, must be satisfied that the defamatory inference can reasonably be drawn from the stated facts; if it can, it is for the jury to say whether it ought to be drawn. Homing Pigeon Publishing Co. v. Racing Pigeon Publishing Co., 29 T. L. R. 389—Scrutton, J.

Words not Actionable per se—Malicious Falsehoods—Special Damage—Loss of Business.]—In an action for damage to a business caused by malicious falsehoods, where the words are not defamatory nor actionable per se, the plaintiff must prove actual loss of customers to whom the words were spoken, and cannot as a rule give evidence of a general decline of business. Ratcliffe v. Evans (61 L. J. Q.B. 535; [1892] 2 Q.B. 524) applied. Leetham v. Rank, 57 S. J. 111—C.A.

Quære, whether on proof of actual loss the jury might award damages in excess of such actual loss, by way of punishment or example. Ib.

Plea of Justification—Particulars.]—In an action for libel in which the plaintiff by his statement of claim alleges that the libel means that he had acted dishonestly in a certain matter, and, further, that he was a person of dishonest character, and not fit to hold a position of trust, and the defendant pleads justification, he will be allowed to give particulars of other dishonest acts of the plaintiff besides those referred to in connection with the special matter mentioned. Decision of the Court of Appeal affirmed. Maisel v. Financial Times, Lim. (No. 1), 84 L. J. K.B. 2145; 112 L. T. 953; 59 S. J. 248; 31 T. L. R. 192—H.L. (E.)

—— Acts Subsequent to Publication of Libel.]—Particulars in support of a plea of justification of a libel upon character and reputation, which allege acts occurring after the publication of the libel, may be admissible, if the acts have occurred within a reasonable time after its publication. In an action for libel by innuendo that the plaintiff was of a character and reputation such that he was likely to have misappropriated the funds of companies with which he was connected, that he would have misappropriated the funds of a certain company if he had had the opportunity, and that he was an unfit person to be director of any company, the defendants pleaded justification, and in support of their plea delivered particulars of certain alleged acts of the plaintiff's of a financial nature which took place two or three months after the publication of the libel:—Held, that these acts having taken place within a reasonable time of the publication of the libel, the particulars were admissible. Maisel v. Financial Times, Lim. (No. 2), 84 L. J. K.B. 2148; [1915] 3 K.B. 336; 113 L. T. 772; 59 S. J. 596; 31 T. L. R. 510—C.A.

Falsity of Slanderous Statement Admitted in Letter of Apology—Subsequent Action for Repetition of same Statement—Plea of Veritas —Bar.]—The defender in an action of damages for defamation, held (Lord Dundas dissenting) not barred from pleading veritas by having, on a former occasion, written a letter of apology, admitting that similar statements then made by her were false, and undertaking not to repeat them. R. v. S., [1914] S. Re-entry by Lessors—Electric-light Filament Lamps Left on Premises by Lessees—Fixtures.] — The plaintiffs let electric-light filament lamps on hire to the lessees of a theatre. The lamps were affixed to their brackets by the bayonet attachment in common use for this purpose. The defendants, who were the owners of the theatre, re-entered for non-payment of rent, the lamps being then still on the premises and no demand being then made for them by the plaintiffs. Shortly afterwards the plaintiffs claimed them from the defendants, and as the latter did not give them up the plaintiffs sued them in detinue: —Held, that the plaintiffs were not entitled to recover. British Economical Lamp Co. v. Mile End Empire, 29 T. 1. DISCOVERY.

a. In what Matters.

Order for Account—Special Referee—Motion for Receiver after Judgment—Discovery in Aid of Motion—"Documents relating to any matters in question."]—The defendants and the plaintiff had business relations together and the plaintiff commenced an action alleging a partnership and claiming a receiver of the assets of the firm and an account. Upon a motion for a receiver, a consent order was made for the taking of the account between the parties by a special referee. The account was taken before the referee, who ordered discovery. The plaintiff then alleged that the defendants were acting improperly in getting in the debts owing to the firm, and gave notice of motion for the appointment of a receiver, which motion was ordered to be heard with witnesses. The plaintiff then applied to the Court for an order for further discovery and inspection of documents for the purposes of the motion :—Held, that, if the order of the special referee for discovery were insufficient, application should have been made to the referee for a further order; that if the matters to which the discovery claimed related arose out of the judgment, a sufficient order could be made by the special referee; if such matters did not arise out of the judgment, they should be the subject of a new action. Korkis v. Weir & Co., 110 L. T. 794—C.A.

b. Who Compelled to Make.

Guardian Ad Litem to Person of Unsound Mind—Order.]—The guardian ad litem of a person of unsound mind, but not so found by inquisition, can be ordered to give discovery of documents in a suit for nullity of marriage or for restitution of conjugal rights. Paspati v. Paspati, 83 L. J. P. 56; [1914] P. 110; 110 L. T. 751; 58 S. J. 400; 30 T. L. R. 390—Evans, P.

c. Affidavit of Documents.

Person of Unsound Mind not so Found—Next Friend.]—The High Court has no jurisdiction to order the next friend of a person of unsound mind not so found by inquisition to make an affidavit as to documents. Dyke v. Stephens (55 L. J. Ch. 41; 30 Ch. D. 189) followed. Higginson v. Hall (48 L. J. Ch. 250; 10 Ch. D. 235) dissented from. Pink v. Sharwood (No. 1), 82 L. J. Ch. 542; [1913] 2 Ch. 286; 108 L. T. 1017; 57 S. J. 663—Eve, J.

Further Affidavit.]—Although as a general rule it is not permissible to go behind the affidavit of documents in an application for discovery, in the absence of an admission either in the affidavit itself or in some other document shewing that there are other documents which ought to have been included, the rule is qualified where the basis on which the affidavit of documents has been made turns out to have been wrong. If the party making the affidavit has misconceived his case, so that the Court is practically certain that if he had conceived it properly and had acted upon a proper view of the law he would have disclosed further documents, then the Court can refuse to recognise an affidavit as conclusive and order a further affidavit. British Association of Glass-Bottle Manufacturers, Lim. v. Nettlefold, 81 L. J. K.B. 1125; [1912] A.C. 709; 107 L. T. 529; 56 S. J. 702—H.L. (E.)

In an action for calls, brought by the appellants against the respondent, the respondent alleged that the appellants were really a trade union, and their registration was void; and secondly, that they were an illegal combination in restraint of trade. The respondent obtained an order against the appellants for an affidavit of documents. An affidavit of documents was delivered. In the particulars the respondent alleged the existence of a certain contract between the appellants and a foreign company. The appellants alleged that no such contract was relevant. The Court of Appeal, reversing the order of Scrutton, J., ordered production of the contract. On the appellants declining to file a further affidavit, the Court of Appeal, reversing the order of Bucknill, J., ordered a further and better affidavit of discovery, and the House affirmed this decision. Ib.

Specific Document—Application made Ex parte.]—An application under the Irish Order XXXI. rule 20 (3) [corresponding to Order XXXI. rule 19*a* (3)] for an order requiring a party to state by affidavit whether a specific document is or has at any time been in his possession or power may be made ex parte. Henty & Gardners, Lim. v. Beckett, [1914] 2 Ir. d. What Documents.

Newspaper Competition—Failure to Obtain Prize — Action for Damages — Successful Coupons.]—The plaintiff was a competitor in a prize competition which was advertised in a newspaper belonging to the defendants and which consisted in constructing the most clever, apt, and original sentences in accordance with certain rules. The prizes were to be awarded after careful consideration by competent judges and the editor's decision was to be final. The plaintiff, not having been awarded a prize, brought an action against the defendants for breach of contract and applied for discovery of the coupons in respect of which prizes had been awarded :—Held, that as these documents were not relevant to any question in issue, the plaintiff was not entitled to discovery of them. Angell v. John Bull, Lim., 59 S. J. 286; 31 T. L. R. 175—C.A.

Affidavit — Further Affidavit — "Specific documents."]—To justify an application for discovery of documents under rule 19A (3) of Order XXXI., the party making the application must in his affidavit name and specify, so that they can be identified, the particular documents of which he desires discovery; a general allegation that certain classes of documents—for example, telegrams from A to B between 1900 and 1906 containing instructions or requests or comments, as to enquiries upon specified subjects—are in the possession of the opposite party and ought to be produced is not sufficient. Per Fletcher Moulton, L.J. —Rule 19A (3) is not a process of discovery, but only a process in aid of discovery, and documents must be so specified that they can at once be identified. Huntley v. Backworth Collieries, [1911] W. N. 34—C.A.

2. Production.

As between Co-defendants—Rights to be Adjusted.] — The plaintiff claimed to be entitled to a fractional share of certain commissions alleged to be due to one defendant J. from his co-defendants, C. & Co., and asked for a declaration accordingly and for payment of his share. By their defence C. & Co. denied all liability and alleged that they had a claim against J. for damages for misrepresentation which could be set off against any claim for commission by J. or any persons claiming under him. The plaintiff having obtained discovery from J., C. & Co. applied under Order XXXI. rule 14 for production to them of the documents stated in J.'s affidavit of documents to be in his possession or power :—Held (Swinfen Eady, L.J., dissenting), that there were not any rights to be adjusted between J. and C. & Co. in the action, in the sense that there was any matter in issue between J. and C. & Co. which the decision of the action would render res judicata as between them; and held therefore that C. & Co. were not entitled to an order for production. Shaw v. Smith (56 L. J. Q.B. 174; 18 Q.B. D. 193) explained and applied. Birchal v. Crisp & Co., 82 L. J. Ch. 442; [1913] 2 Ch. 375; 109 L. T. 275—C.A.

Slander Action—Imputations of Insolvency and Mismanagement against Trading Company.]—In an action of slander brought by a limited company trading on a co-operative system and registered as a friendly society, the defendant pleaded (inter alia) the truth in their ordinary sense of the words spoken so far as they were allegations of fact, and fair comment as regards expression of opinion. The defamatory matter was contained in a speech delivered by the defendant, and the only allegation of fact in it were statements of the assets and liabilities of the society on the expiration of three several years. Under an order for discovery the society's secretary and manager made an affidavit, the schedule to which disclosed the balance sheets for these years, and also the society's ledgers, books of account, and bank books, claiming no privilege. In accordance with notice by the defendant the society produced the balance sheets for his inspection, but declined to produce the remaining scheduled documents. The balance sheets agreed with the figures quoted by the defendant in his speech. On the society admitting on the order the truth of the figures quoted by the defendant and of the balance sheets, the Court declined to order the production of the society's books. Kent Coal Concessions v. Duquid (79 L. J. K.B. 423, 872; [1910] 1 K.B. 904; [1910] A.C. 452) distinguished. Irish Agricultural Wholesale Society v. McCowan, [1913] 2 Ir. R. 313—C.A.

Owners' Books—Collision—Value of Sunken Lightship.]—The plaintiffs' lightship, while at her station in the Mersey, was run into and sunk by the defendants' steamship. The defendants admitted liability, agreed to a reference, and applied for an order to inspect the plaintiffs' books with a view to ascertain the figures upon which the plaintiffs based the value they set upon their vessel :—Held, that the defendants were entitled to an order for the production of the books forthwith, as the only material question was the value of the lightship at the date of the casualty, and it would assist the defendants if, before going to the reference, they were in possession of the figures relating to the original cost, and subsequent depreciation in value, of the lightship. The Pacuare, 81 L. J. P. 143; [1912] P. 179; 107 L. T. 252; 12 Asp. M.C. 222—C.A.

3. Inspection.

Action against Company—Effect of Articles of Association.]—Article 83 of the articles of association provided that the managers should from time to time determine whether, and to what extent, and at what time and place, and under what conditions or regulations the accounts and books of the company or any of them shall be open to the inspection of the members, and no member should have any right of inspecting any account or book or document of the company, except as conferred by statute or authorised by the managers. In an action against the company,—Held, that an order for discovery must be made. The above article, in such a case as the present, could not be utilised adversely, and to allow such an article to prevail over the Rules of Court might, in some cases, be allowing it to be an engine of dishonesty. Cartland v. British and South American Steam Navigation Co., [1912] W. N. 110—Eve, J.

Transcript of Shorthand Note of Proceedings in Actions—Note Taken for Purpose of Future Action.]—The defendant to an action in the High Court had caused a shorthand note of the proceedings in two prior actions in the County Court, to which he had been a party, to be taken and a transcript made. The note related to matters in question in the High Court action, and had been made expressly for the purposes of such an action. Upon application by the plaintiff for inspection of the transcript,—Held (Channell, J., dissenting), that the transcript, being a mere reproduction of material which was publici juris, was not privileged, and must be produced for inspection. Nordon v. Defries (51 L. J. Q.B. 415; 8 Q.B. D. 508) overruled. Lambert v. Home, 83 L. J. K.B. 1091; [1914] 3 K.B. 86; 111 L. T. 179; 58 S. J. 471; 30 T. L. R. 474—C.A.

Owners' Books—Collision—Value of Sunken Lightship.]—The plaintiffs' lightship, while at her station in the Mersey, was run into and sunk by the defendants' steamship. The defendants admitted liability, agreed to a reference, and applied for an order to inspect the plaintiffs' books with a view to ascertain the figures upon which the plaintiffs based the value they set upon their vessel :—Held, that the defendants were entitled to an order for the production of the books forthwith, as the only material question was the value of the lightship at the date of the casualty, and it would assist the defendants if, before going to the reference, they were in possession of the figures relating to the original cost, and subsequent depreciation in value, of the lightship. The Pacuare, 81 L. B. INTERROGATORIES.

Action to Enforce Charge to Secure Loan—Defence that Plaintiff was an Unregistered Money-lender—Facts Relevant to the Issue—

Disclosure of other Loan Transactions, but not of Borrowers' Names.]—A London tailor brought an action to enforce a charge to secure a loan with interest at 10 per cent. The charge, which was in 1906 given to the plaintiff by the borrower, was upon certain moneys belonging to the borrower in the hands of the trustees of a private Act of Parliament, passed in 1904, being the balance of a sum which they were by such Act authorised to raise for the payment of his then existing debts. The trustees, the defendants to the action, disputed the charge, and by their defence alleged that the plaintiff was, and at the date of the alleged charge was, a money-lender within the meaning of the Money-lenders Act, 1900, s. 6, and was not registered under the Act, and that by reason thereof his alleged charge was illegal and could not be enforced. Interrogatories administered by the defendants to the plaintiff in reference to his other loan transactions were held by Joyce, J., to be inadmissible:—Held (Fletcher Moulton, L.J., dissenting), that the defendants were entitled to interrogate the plaintiff as to any, and if so what, other loans he had made, and on what securities, during the period of twelve months before the date of the loan in question in the action, and as to the dates of such loans and the dates for repayment and the amount made payable on each security, and the actual amounts paid in cash in respect thereof and the rate of interest payable and commission (if any) charged or deducted, and also whether any of such loans were renewals of previous loans, and, if so, the dates of the renewals; but that the defendants were not entitled to require the plaintiff to disclose the names of the borrowers, all these enquiries being directed to facts substantially relevant to the existence or non-existence of the fact whether the plaintiff was carrying on at the critical period the business of a money-lender, which was the fact directly in issue. Observations of Lord Esher, M.R., in Marriott v. Chamberlain (55 L. J. Q.B. 448; 17 Q.B. D. 154) applied. Nash v. Layton, 80 L. J. Ch. 636; [1911] 2 Ch. 71; 104 L. T. 834—C.A.

Action for Defamation—Allegation of Publication to Unnamed Person—Right of Plaintiff to Interrogate Defendant in Support of Allegation.]—As a general rule the plaintiff in an action of defamation is not allowed to allege a specific publication to a named person and further publications to unnamed persons, and then to interrogate the defendant as to whether there have been any such further publications. Russell v. Stubbs, Lim. (52 S. J. 580), considered. Barham v. Huntingfield (Lord), 82 L. J. K.B. 752; [1913] 2 K.B. 193; 108 L. T. 703—C.A.

—— Newspaper — Fair Comment — Fair and Accurate Report of Proceedings of a Public Meeting—Interrogatories to Prove Malice.]—The plaintiff claimed damages for an alleged libel contained in the defendants' newspaper. The defendants pleaded, first, fair comment; and secondly, that the alleged libel formed part of a fair and accurate report of a public meeting within the meaning of section 4 of the Law of Libel Amendment Act, 1888; the matter published was of public concern and for the public benefit, and the newspaper was a newspaper within the above section. The plaintiff did not deliver a reply alleging express malice. He sought to interrogate the defendants as to whether they had been requested to attend the said meeting, and whether they had received remuneration for reporting the proceedings. The interrogatories were consistent with the plaintiff having in fact no information on which to found his interrogatories. The Judge, at chambers, affirming the Master, refused to allow the interrogatories:—Held, that, although the interrogatories were not necessarily inadmissible, the Court would not interfere with the discretion of the Judge at chambers. Dawson v. Dover and County Chronicle, 108 L. T. 481; 29 T. L. R. 373—C.A.

—— Defence of Privilege — Allegation of Express Malice—Defendant's Sources of Information—Nature of Information.]—It is a proper exercise of the discretion of the Judge in chambers for him to refuse to allow the defendant in a libel action to be interrogated as to the sources of his information if that information is of interest to a large number of persons and the defendant occupies a confidential and responsible position. Adam v. Fisher, 110 L. T. 537; 30 T. L. R. 288—C.A.

Malicious Prosecution — Information which Induced Defendant to Prosecute Plaintiff—Facts Shewing Reasonable or Probable Cause.]—In an action for malicious prosecution the plaintiff sought to administer to the defendants the following, among other, interrogatories: "4. What information (if any) had you that induced you to prosecute the plaintiff for stealing gas? What steps (if any) had you taken before commencing the said prosecution to ascertain whether the charge was true or not? What grounds (if any) had you for supposing that the plaintiff had committed the offence charged? Did you before you commenced the said prosecution take any and what precautions or make any or what enquiries as to the truth of the said charge, and what was the result of each such enquiry? 5. What are the facts and circumstances on which you rely as shewing that you had reasonable and proper cause for the said prosecution?"—Held (Kennedy, L.J., dissenting), that the interrogatories ought not to be allowed; interrogatory 4 being one of a kind which, as a general rule, and in the absence of special circumstances, should not be allowed in an action for malicious prosecution, as otherwise it would become very difficult to get persons having reason to suppose that a crime had been committed to give information with a view to its detection and punishment; and interrogatory 5 being clearly inadmissible. Maass v. Gas Light and Coke Co., 80 L. J. K.B. 1313; [1911] 2 K.B. 543; 104 L. T. 767; 55 S. J. 566; 27 T. L. R. 473—C.A.

Facts not Directly in Issue, but Relevant to Facts in Issue—Action for Infringement of Patent—Names of Manufacturers.]—In an action to restrain the infringement of patents relating to the manufacture of incandescent electric lamps the plaintiffs delivered interrogatories. The defendants in answer admitted selling certain alleged infringing lamps, but objected to say by whom the lamps were manufactured and supplied. The plaintiffs sought this information to enable them to identify the process of manufacture, of which the defendants were ignorant and which the plaintiffs alleged could not be ascertained by analysis :—Held, that the information sought was relevant to the existence or non-existence of the fact of infringement which was directly in issue, and that the interrogatories must therefore be answered. Osram Lamp Works, Lim. v. Gabriel Lamp Co., 83 L. J. Ch. 624; [1914] 2 Ch. 129; 111 L. T. 99; 31 R. P. C. 230; 58 S. J. 535—C.A.

Object of Interrogatories to Obtain Names of Opposite Party's Witnesses.]—A party is not entitled to administer interrogatories to his opponent when the object of the interrogatories is to ascertain the names of the persons whom his opponent proposes to call as witnesses in support of his case. Per Vaughan Williams, L.J. : A party, in order to obtain by means of interrogatories the names of persons whom his opponent intends to call as his witnesses, must shew that it is necessary for him to have these names for the purpose of establishing some material fact, not necessarily essential to the issue in the case, but some fact that is necessary to the proof of his case. Knapp v. Harvey, 80 L. J. K.B. 1228; [1911] 2 K.B. 725; 105 L. T. 473—C.A.

Recovery of Possession of Land—Roadside Strips—Acts of Ownership.]—In an action to recover possession of two strips of land forming part of one continuous strip lying on one side of a road, and alleged to be waste within the plaintiffs' manor, the plaintiffs intimated that at the trial they intended to shew acts of ownership by them over parts of the strip contiguous to and at greater distance from the parts of the strip in dispute in the action. They proposed to interrogate the defendants as to facts concerning the defendants' acquisition of other parts of the strip not in dispute lying between inclosures of the defendants and the road :—Held, that the interrogatories ought to be allowed, the answers to be admissible when the plaintiffs had established that they were the owners of the manor, and that the whole strip lay within the manor, and was of one continuous character. Leeke v. Portsmouth Corporation (No. 1), 106 L. T. 627—Eve, J.

Documents in Possession of Secretary of Trade Union.]—The defendant in an action for libel being called upon to give discovery of documents, made an affidavit in which he gave in a schedule a list of documents which he said were in the possession and custody of the trade union of which he was general secretary, and as to which he stated that he had no power to produce them as they belonged to the trade union. The plaintiff applied for an order that he might be at liberty to interrogate the defendant as to the contents of the documents scheduled to his affidavit :—Held, that the application must be refused, inasmuch as a person in the position of a servant cannot be required to answer an interrogatory asking him to give the contents of documents in the possession of his master. Balfour v. Tillett, 57 S. J. 356; 29 T. L. R. 332—C.A.

No Personal Knowledge—Objection to Seek Information — Confidential Documents — Sufficiency of Answer.]—The plaintiff, who was a shareholder in a guarantee society, having brought an action against the chairman for false representations alleged to have been made by the defendant to the plaintiff at a general meeting, administered to the defendant an interrogatory as to whether at the date of the meeting the society had taken over certain properties. The defendant answered that certain of the properties had been taken over, and that certain others had been taken possession of owing to failure of the mortgagors, and he gave the names of these two sets of properties, but he said that he had no personal knowledge with regard to the remaining properties and submitted that he was not bound to seek information about them from confidential documents obtained for the purpose of his defence :—Held, that this was a sufficient answer. Seal v. Turner, 30 T. L. R. 227—C.A.

1. Legal Professional Confidence.

Action by Company against Shareholder—Counterclaim—Opinion of Counsel.]—The rule that where a company takes the opinion of counsel and pays for it out of the funds of the company a shareholder has a right to see it does not apply where the company has brought an action against the shareholder, even although the shareholder has set up a counterclaim alleging the invalidity of the resolution authorising the action. Woodhouse & Co. v. Woodhouse, 30 T. L. R. 559—C.A.

Briefs in Previous Proceedings—Probate.]—In a probate suit, the defendants, alleging that the deceased was not of sound memory and understanding, asked for production of the briefs which had been prepared by one of the plaintiffs as solicitor for the deceased in certain proceedings which had been taken against her, and which the defendants alleged contained matter material to the issue of the deceased's state of mind :—Held, that the defendants were not entitled to production of the briefs, which had been confidentially prepared by a solicitor for counsel to use or not as they might think fit. Cooper, In re; Curtis v. Beaney, 80 L. J. P. 87; [1911] P. 181; 105 L. T. 303; 27 T. L. R. 462—Bargrave Deane, J.

Affidavit of Documents brought into Existence for Purpose of Litigation.]—In an action on a policy of marine insurance to recover a constructive total loss the underwriters, in making discovery of documents, claimed privilege from production in respect of certain cables and correspondence which passed between the Salvage Association and their agents abroad after notice of abandonment had been given and refused and before the commencement of the action, "such cables and correspondence being with regard to the subject-matter of this litigation and expressing or for the purpose of obtaining advice or evidence to be used in it or for the purpose of leading to the obtaining of evidence to enable the defendants' solicitors properly to conduct the action on their behalf":—Held, a good claim of privilege. Birmingham and Midland Motor Omnibus Co. v. London and North-Western Railway (83 L. J. K.B. 474; [1913] 3 K.B. 850) followed. Adam Steamship Co. v. London Assurance Corporation, 83 L. J. K.B. 1861; [1914] 3 K.B. 1256; 111 L. T. 1031; 12 Asp. M.C. 559; 20 Com Cas. 37; 59 S. J. 42—C.A.

—— Sufficiency of Claim of Privilege—Extent of Privilege.]—In an action against a railway company to recover damages for the loss by fire of goods stored with the company, an affidavit of documents filed on behalf of the defendants stated that the defendants objected to produce certain documents on the ground that they were "privileged and came into existence and were made after this litigation was in contemplation and in view of such litigation for the purpose of obtaining for and furnishing to the solicitor of the defendant company evidence and information as to the evidence which could be obtained and otherwise for the use of the said solicitor to enable him to conduct the defence in this action and to advise the defendants":—Held, that the language used in the affidavit brought the case within Southwark and Vauxhall Water Co. v. Quick (47 L. J. Q.B. 258; 3 Q.B. D. 315), and not within Anderson v. British Bank of Columbia (45 L. J. Ch. 449; 2 Ch. D. 644), and stated a good claim of privilege; and that the privilege was not limited to documents which came into existence after the plaintiffs first claimed compensation from the defendants. Birmingham and Midland Motor Omnibus Co. v. London and North-Western Railway, 83 L. J. K.B. 474; [1913] 3 K.B. 850; 109 L. T. 64; 57 S. J. 752—C.A.

2. Evidence of Party's Title.

Privity of Title—Attorney-General.]—The defendants to an injunction on behalf of the Crown claiming part of the foreshore alleged a title derived by various mesne conveyances from a grantee from the Crown. In their affidavit of documents the defendants claimed privilege for these conveyances as solely relating to their own title:—Held, that as the Crown was prima facie entitled to the foreshore, the Attorney-General could insist on the production, in order to see that the alleged grant was vested in the defendants. Semble, the same rule holds good as between two subjects where one claims by privity of title from the other. Att.-Gen. v. Storey, 107 L. T. 430; 56 S. J. 735—C.A

DISORDERLY HOUSE.

Music Licence — Cinematograph Licence — Application by Company — Nationality of Shareholders — Alien Enemies — Discretion of Licensing Authority.]—While a state of war existed between Great Britain and Germany and between Great Britain and Austria the London County Council, acting as the licensing authority under the Disorderly Houses Act, 1751, and the Cinematograph Act, 1909, refused applications for a renewal of music and cinematograph licences made by an English company, on the ground that at the outbreak of war the majority of the shares of the company were held by German or Austrian subjects resident abroad, and that three out of the six directors were German subjects resident abroad. The company obtained rules nisi for writs of mandamus directed to the London County Council, commanding them to hear and determine the applications for such licences according to law, on the ground that in determining the applications they had been actuated by extraneous considerations—namely, the shareholding and nationality of the shareholders and directors of the company:—Held, by the Court of Appeal, affirming the decision of the Divisional Court, discharging the rules, that, whether or not the alien enemy shareholders had a right to vote by proxy in the affairs of the company, the London County Council were entitled to take into consideration the fact that the majority of the shares were held by alien enemies, and in the exercise of their discretion to refuse to renew the licences on that ground. Rex v. London County Council; London and Provincial Electric Theatres, Ex parte, 84 L. The decision in London County Council v. Bermondsey Bioscope Co. (80 L. J. K.B. 141; [1911] 1 K.B. 445), to the effect that the terms and conditions which, by section 2, sub-section 1 of the Cinematograph Act, 1909, a county council may impose on the grant of a cinematograph licence, are not confined to provisions for securing safety, approved. Ib.

Surrender of Tenancy—Tenant Remaining in Possession—Execution—Claim by Landlord for Rent.]—Sections 6 and 7 of 8 Anne, c. 14, do not apply to a case of the seizure of goods by an execution creditor, but are confined to cases between landlord and tenant. Section 160 of the County Courts Act, 1888, has no application to sections 6 and 7 of 8 Anne, c. 14. Lewis v. Davies, 83 L. J. K.B. 598; [1914] 2 K.B. 469; 110 L. T. 461; 30 T. L. R. 301—C.A.

2. What Goods Distrainable and what not.

Piano Hired by Lessee of Theatre—Trade Custom—Goods in Possession, Order, or Disposition of Lessee—Reputed Ownership—Liability of Piano to Distress.]—In the absence of evidence establishing a custom that pianos are so constantly hired to lessees of theatres for theatrical purposes as to exclude the doctrine of reputed ownership, the Court cannot assume as a matter of law that the lessee of a theatre is not the true owner of a piano which is in the theatre. In such a case the piano is not exempted by the Law of Distress Amendment Act, 1908, from liability to distress by the landlord of the theatre. Chappell v. Harrison, 103 L. T. 594; 75 J. Goods Comprised in Hire-purchase Agreement—Notice by Owner Purporting to Terminate Agreement—Demand for Possession of Goods—Subsequent Seizure by Landlord—Declaration by Owner.]—Goods which are in the possession of a tenant under a hire-purchase agreement are comprised in a hire-purchase agreement within the meaning of section 4 of the Law of Distress Amendment Act, 1908, notwithstanding that a demand for possession of the goods has been made by their owner upon the tenant, and consequently such goods are not exempt from being distrained at the instance of the landlord for arrears of rent. London Furnishing Co. v. Solomon (infra) not followed. Hackney Furnishing Co. v. Watts, 81 L. J. K.B. 993; [1912] 3 K.B. 225; 106 L. T. 676; 28 T. L. R. 417—D.

The plaintiffs let furniture to one L. under a hire-purchase agreement which by clause 6 provided that the hirer should regularly and punctually pay the rent of the house where the furniture was and should "keep the articles of furniture . . . free and exempt from all legal process"; and by clause 8 it provided "that if the hirer do not duly perform and observe this agreement the owners may retake possession of the said furniture." L. became in arrears with her rent to the defendant, her landlord, and thereupon the plaintiffs wrote to L. that in consequence of her non-compliance with the terms of the agreement they had decided to terminate the same. They sent a carman to remove the furniture, but he was informed that rent was in arrear, and the furniture was not allowed to be removed. The plaintiffs thereupon served a declaration on the defendant under section 1 of the Law of Distress Amendment Act, 1908, claiming the furniture. Notwithstanding such declaration, the defendant distrained upon the furniture:—Held, that from the time the plaintiffs gave notice terminating the agreement L. had no property or beneficial interest in the furniture, and that as the plaintiffs had served a declaration under section 1 of the Law of Distress Amendment Act, 1908, the defendant was not entitled to distrain on the furniture. London Furnishing Co. v. Solomon, 106 L. T. 371; 28 T. L. R. 265—D.

Provision Determining Agreement ipso Facto on Breach by Hirer—Power on such Determination to Enter and Re-take Goods—Continued Existence of Agreement—Goods "comprised" therein.]—A hire-purchase agreement provided that the hirer of the goods therein comprised should pay punctually the weekly rent commencing on a specified date and all expenses incurred in the collection of any arrears thereof; that if the hirer did not duly perform and observe the agreement, it should ipso facto be determined, and the hirer should return the goods to the owners, and the owners should be entitled to re-take possession of the same and for that purpose to enter upon the premises; and that the hirer should remain liable for arrears of hire up to the date of the determination of the agreement. The hirer committed a breach of the agreement by failing to pay punctually an instalment of rent, and the owners gave him notice terminating the agreement, and then endeavoured to enter and re-take possession of the goods. These had been distrained for rent by the hirer's landlords. The owners, having served the landlords with a declaration under section 1 of the Law of Distress Amendment Act, 1908, that the goods belonged to them, brought an action against them for illegal distress under section 2 of the Act:—Held, that by reason of the provision conferring on the owners the right of entering and re-taking the goods, and of the provisions relating to the hirer's continued liability for arrears, and for expenses in the collection thereof, the agreement did not determine on the breach by the hirer, but was in existence at the date of the distress, and that, consequently, the goods were then comprised in a hire-purchase agreement within the meaning of section 4, sub-section 1 of the Act, and by virtue of that sub-section not within the provisions of the Act exempting from distress the goods of persons other than a tenant. Jay's Furnishing Co. v. Brand & Co., 84 L. J. K.B. 867; [1915] 1 K.B. 458; 112 L. T. 719; 59 S. J. 160; 31 T. L. R. 124—C.A.

Statement by Bailiff that Plaintiff's Cattle not Distrainable—Subsequent Seizure of Cattle—Estoppel.]—The defendant J. was the landlord of a farm the tenant of which was in arrear with his rent. On the farm the plaintiff had cattle grazing. J. instructed the defendant D., a bailiff, to distrain for the rent due, and the fact that a distress was likely to be levied came to the knowledge of the plaintiff, who thereupon had a conversation with the defendant D. and said that he would move his cattle off the farm. D. said, "Don't be such a fool; I can't touch your cattle, because you took the keep by auction." On that the plaintiff, believing the cattle to be safe, took no steps to remove them; but when a distress was subsequently levied four of the plaintiff's cattle were seized. In an action for wrongful distress the jury found that D. or J. led the plaintiff to believe that he was not going to, and had no right to, levy distress on the plaintiff's cattle:—Held, that the statement by D. was either a misstatement of law or a declaration of intention to abandon a legal right to distrain, and that in neither case could it create an estoppel. Cresswell v. Jeffreys, 28 T. L. R. 413—D. Reversed on other grounds, 29 T. L. R. 90—C.A.

3. How Goods Disposed of.

Purchase of Goods Distrained by Landlord at Appraised Value—User of Goods by Landlord—Conversion by Landlord.]—The defendants in 1902 granted to one J. a yearly tenancy of a certain seam of coal, together with the right to take and work all the coal in that seam upon payment quarterly of certain royalties. The agreement contained a provision that if the royalties were unpaid for thirty days after the stipulated quarter days the landlord might distrain. In 1908 J. assigned to the plaintiffs all the plant and machinery used in the colliery, together with the right to get coal in his name, under the agreement upon payment of all such sums of money as should become due in respect of the royalties. The plaintiffs hired from a waggon company two colliery waggons at a certain rent payable quarterly. The defendants in August, 1910, distrained upon the colliery for money due from J. in respect of royalties under the agreement, and seized the two colliery waggons, and also five pit ponies, the property of the plaintiffs. The ponies and waggons were duly appraised, and the defendants purported to buy them at their appraised value. The defendants subsequently used the ponies for their own purposes, but they returned the waggons to the waggon company on a demand being made by that company for them. At the time of the seizure no rent was due by the plaintiffs to the waggon company for the hire of the waggons:—Held, that the user by the defendants of the ponies for their own purposes and the return by them of the waggons were not irregularities or unlawful acts committed after the distress by the party distraining within section 19 of the Distress for Rent Act, 1737, so as to entitle the plaintiffs to recover only compensation for the special damage which they had sustained thereby, but were acts done by the defendants in their capacity as owners and not as distraining landlords; and that, inasmuch as the purported purchase by the defendants of the ponies and waggons was void, such acts constituted a conversion by the defendants of the ponies and waggons which entitled the plaintiffs to recover their full value from the defendants. Plasycoed Collieries Co. v. Partridge, Jones & Co., 81 L. 4. Declarations under Law of Distress Amendment Act, 1908.

Rent in Arrear—Hire-purchase Agreement by Wife of Tenant—Declaration by Owner of Goods Hired—Action by Owner of Goods for Illegal Distress.]—It is not essential to the validity of a declaration under section 1 of the Law of Distress Amendment Act, 1908, that it should be a statutory declaration in the form prescribed by the Statutory Declarations Act, 1835. Rogers v. Martin, 80 L. J. K.B. 208; [1911] 1 K.B. 19; 103 L. T. 527; 75 J. P. 10; 55 S. J. 29; 27 T. L. R. 40—C.A.

A declaration under the Law of Distress Amendment Act, 1908, may be properly made on behalf of a firm by one partner signing in his own name. Ib.

In that part of section 4, sub-section 1 of the Law of Distress Amendment Act, 1908, which provides that the Act shall not apply to goods comprised in "any bill of sale, hire-purchase agreement, or settlement made by such tenant," the words "made by such tenant" are not limited to "settlement," but apply also to "bill of sale" and "hire-purchase agreement," and consequently that part of the sub-section does not except from the protection given by the Act goods comprised in a hire-purchase agreement made by the wife of a tenant. Ib.

That part of section 4, sub-section 1 of the Law of Distress Amendment Act, 1908, which provides that the Act shall not apply to "goods belonging to the husband or wife of the tenant . . . nor to goods in the possession, order, or disposition of such tenant by the consent and permission of the true owner under such circumstances that such tenant is the reputed owner thereof," does not except from the protection of the Act goods comprised in a hire-purchase agreement made by the wife of the tenant and permitted by their owner to remain on the demised premises. Ib.

B. DAMAGE FEASANT.

Right to Impound—Cattle Driven to Pound more than Three Miles.]—The statute 1 & 2 Ph. & M. c. 12, s. 1, provides that "... no distress of cattle shall be driven out of the hundred, rape, wapentake, or lathe where such distress is or shall be taken, except that it be to a pound overt within the same shire, not above three miles distant from the place where the said distress is taken . . . ":—Held, that on the true construction of this section the word "not" should not be read as "nor," and that the section means that the distress may be driven to any pound within the hundred or similar area where the distress was taken, even though more than three miles from the place where the distress was taken, but may not be driven outside that area except to a pound within the same shire and not more than three miles from the place where the distress was taken. Berdsley v. Pilkington (Gouldsb. 100) followed. Coaker v. Willcocks, 80 L. J. K.B. 1026; [1911] 2 K.B. 124; 104 L. T. 769; 27 T. L. R. 357—C.A.

Sale of Land with Right of Way over Adjoining Land of Vendor—Mortgage of Dominant Tenement together with Right of Way—Sale of Servient Tenement Released from Right of Way — Reconveyance by Mortgagee — Sale of Dominant Tenement — No Notice to Purchaser of Release of Right of Way — Extinction of Right of Way — Estoppel.] — By an indenture of May 7, 1897, W., who was the owner of two adjoining pieces of land lying respectively to the east and west of their common boundary line and of a cottage on the western land close to that line, conveyed the western land and the cottage together with a right of way along certain paths over the eastern land to his wife in fee-simple. On May 8, 1897, Mrs. W. mortgaged the western land and cottage with the right of way to certain persons in fee-simple. In April, 1907, in contemplation of the sale of the eastern land by W. to the plaintiff, an agreement was made between Mrs. W. and the plaintiff that a window in the cottage which overlooked that land should be built up, and it was built up accordingly. By an indenture of May 25, 1907, W. conveyed the eastern land to the plaintiff in fee-simple, and in a subsequent part of the indenture it was recited that under the indenture first above mentioned Mrs. W. "is entitled" to a right of way over the said paths, and that it had been agreed for her to join in the reciting indenture for the purpose of releasing the land conveyed from the right of way, and it was then witnessed that she thereby released the land conveyed from the right of way. The plaintiff had no notice or knowledge of the mortgage by Mrs. W. On December 10, 1910, Mrs. W. died, and on November 18, 1909, W. died, R. being executor and trustee of them both. On March 14, 1910, the mortgagees, who had never taken possession, reconveyed the mortgaged premises to R., as executor of Mrs. W., in fee-simple discharged from the mortgage debt. By an indenture of March 25, 1910, R. conveyed to the defendant the western land and cottage, together with a right of way over the aforesaid paths, in fee-simple. In this indenture the release by Mrs. W. of the right of way was not mentioned, and the defendant had no notice or knowledge of it. Subsequently, the defendant entered upon the said paths and re-opened the window. The plaintiff thereupon brought an action in the County Court against the defendant claiming a declaration that the defendant was not entitled to the right of way or of light, an injunction to restrain the defendant from exercising the right of way and damages. The County Court Judge gave judgment for the plaintiff. In the Divisional Court, Bray, J., was of opinion that the judgment of the County Court Judge should be reversed, while Lush, J., who was of opinion that it should be affirmed, withdrew his judgment, with the result that the appeal was allowed:—Held, by the Court of Appeal, that the defendant had no right of way, seeing that Mrs. W., who, at the date of the indenture of May 25, 1907, as mortgagor in possession of the western land, was the only person entitled to the right of way, had by that indenture released the eastern land from that right, subject only to the contingency of the mortgagees taking possession and exercising the right of way; that the mortgagees, by reconveying the western land to R. as the representative of Mrs. W., without having taken possession, had finally determined that contingency; and that, therefore, no interest in the right of way had passed from R. to the defendant. Poulton v. Moore, 84 L. J. K.B. 462; [1915] 1 K.B. 400; 112 L. T. 202; 31 T. L. R. 43—C.A.

Held, further, that the defendant was estopped from claiming the right of way, inasmuch as the recital in the indenture of May 25, 1907, contained so clear, precise, and unambiguous a statement that Mrs. W. was entitled to the entire interest in the right of way as to estop her and those claiming under her from denying that by that indenture she had wholly released the eastern land from the right of way. Ib.

Held, also, that the defendant had no right of light for the window, seeing that Mrs. W., by the agreement between her and the plaintiff as to building up the window, and of her joining in the indenture of May 25, 1907, had abandoned that right subject to the contingency of the mortgagees taking possession and re-opening the window, which contingency had been determined as in the case of the right of way. Ib.

Decision of Divisional Court (83 L. J. K.B. 875) reversed. Ib.

Removal of Refuse—Removal by Local Authority — Lost Grant.] — The owners of adjoining houses A and B had an easement of depositing house refuse in a dustbin on land C, and for twenty years before 1902 the refuse was periodically removed from the dustbin by the local authority across land C, and down a pasage D into E Street. The owners of C had a right of way over D, and a tenant of A had permission to use D from its owner; but there was no evidence of permission to use a way across C. The passage D was kept locked, and the dustmen of the local authority always applied to the owner for the key. In and after 1902 the refuse was not taken through D, but over another part of C into a back road. The owners of C having in 1908 erected a building between the dustbin and D, the owner of A and B brought an action against them, claiming a right of way by presumption of a lost grant, and an injunction against obstruction of such way:—Held, that though the plaintiff had an easement of depositing the refuse, it was for the defendants to remove it; that the removal carried out by the local authority was not carried out by them as agents of the plaintiff; and that a lost grant of a right of way over C could not be presumed. Foster v. Richmond, 9 L. G. R. 65—Swinfen Eady, J.

Verbal Agreement—Construction.]—In 1883 F. the appellants' predecessor in title and P. the respondent's predecessor in title, who were owners of adjacent properties, made a verbal agreement by which F. agreed to set back a party wall which bounded his property in order to give P. a more convenient access by widening a private road on his property, and P. agreed to give F. a right of way along the road to a gate nine feet wide to be made in the wall to give access to the back of his property. In 1911 the appellants widened the gate to fifteen feet, and set back the party wall :—Held, that under the agreement they had no right of access except by a gate of the original width in the original place. Decision of the Court of Appeal (82 L. J. Ch. 57; [1913] 1 Ch. 113) affirmed. Grand Hotel, Eastbourne, Lim. v. White, 84 L. J. Ch. 938; 110 L. T. 209; 58 S. J. 117—H.L. (E.)

Reservation—Easement in Futuro—Covenant to "make and provide"—Crossing over Tramway — Perpetuity — Personal Covenant.] — In 1889 the defendant conveyed to the plaintiff's predecessors in title a strip of land for a tramway, the deed containing a reservation by the vendors of the right to cross the line at two points to be selected by them, and a covenant by the purchasers to "make and provide" crossings at the points selected by the vendors on notice being given. In 1892 the defendants gave notice of one point selected, and from that date crossed the line there from time to time, but no crossing was ever constructed. In 1910 the plaintiff obstructed the crossing, and sought to restrain the defendant from using it :—Held, that the reservation was void as breaking the rule against perpetuities, but that the covenant contained an implied personal obligation not to interfere with the defendants' crossing, which obligation became fixed and attached to the land as soon as the point was selected, and that the plaintiff had notice thereof, and was bound thereby. Sharpe v. Durrant, 55 S. J. 423—Warrington, J.

Obstruction by Gate—No Substantial Interference with Right—Right of Entry into Side of Road from Dominant Tenement—Unreasonable Opening.]—The defendant conveyed to the plaintiff a piece of land, the plaintiff covenanting to make and maintain as a private road a strip of this land ten feet wide. This strip was on the northern boundary of the land conveyed to the plaintiff, running east and west, and connected two roads running north and south, the western being a private lane and the eastern a highway. Land which the defendant retained, and which was open, adjoined the strip all along its northern side. The conveyance reserved to the defendant the right to pass and repass "over and along" the private road, and the plaintiff granted the right of way to the defendant as appurtenant to the defendant's land "and every part of it." The plaintiff duly laid out the strip as a private road, and the defendant placed a wooden fence along its northern side. Subsequently the defendant removed this fence and built shops on his land abutting on the northern side of the private road, except that at about sixteen feet from the eastern end they were curved back so as to leave a triangular strip of the defendant's land vacant and open to the highway and along the sixteen feet of the private road. The plaintiff thereupon put up a fence along the sixteen feet, and a ten-foot gate across the entrance of the private road into the highway. The defendant knocked down the fence and the ten-foot gate. The plaintiff claimed the right to erect and maintain the gate, and also the fence with a small gate in it. Sargant, J., held that the plaintiff was not entitled to put up the fence or the gate. On appeal,—Held, that the plaintiff was entitled to put up a gate across the private way, but that it must be without a lock and be kept open during business hours, such a gate not being a substantial interference with the right of way as granted; and that the plaintiff was also entitled to put up the fence as claimed, as such fence would not interfere with the defendant's reasonable right of access to the way. A gate is not necessarily an obstruction to a private right of way. Pettey v. Parsons, 84 L. J. Ch. 81; [1914] 2 Ch. 653; 111 L. T. 1011; 58 S. J. 721; 20 T. L. R. 655—C.A.

—— Holdings under Common Landlord.] — The plaintiff and the defendant were tenants of holdings held under a common landlord. The defendant had acquired a right of way over the plaintiff's holding. Across the end of this way, where it entered the county road, the plaintiff erected a gate for the convenient use of his holding. The defendant was allowed free ingress and egress through the gate :—Held, no obstruction of the right of way. Flynn v. Harte, [1913] 2 Ir. R. 322—Dodd, J.

—— Locking Gates—Offer to Provide Keys.] —It is an obstruction to a person's free right of way if another person locks gates across such way, and it is no answer to the complaint as to the obstruction to say that keys for the gates will be supplied. Guest's Estates v. Milner's Safes, 28 T. II. LIGHT AND AIR.

See also Vol. V. 1129, 1710.

Variation of Direction of Light — Equal Amount of Light—Future Obstruction.]—In an action for obstruction of ancient lights, it appeared that the defendants' building had been so altered as to greatly diminish the amount of light coming to the plaintiff's window from the east, while allowing it a largely increased access of light from the west :—Held, that the action failed, as the plaintiff was not entitled to any particular rays of light coming from any particular direction, but only to the same quantum of light that he had enjoyed for twenty years. Colls v. Home and Colonial Stores (73 L. J. Ch. 484; [1904] A.C. 179) discussed. Davis v. Marrable, 82 L. J. Ch. 510; [1913] 2 Ch. 421; 109 L. T. 33; 57 S. J. 702; 29 T. L. R. 617—Joyce, J.

Acquiescence by Dominant Owner in Abstraction of Light over Adjoining Property —Easement of Light over other Adjoining Property not Entirely Negatived—Rights of Dominant Owner as to that Property.]—An abstraction or diminution of light coming over adjoining property acquiesced in or consented to by the owner of the dominant tenement does not negative entirely his right to an easement of light in respect of the same openings over other adjoining property, though he does not acquire any further right entitling him to prevent the erection on that other property of a building which he could not have prevented had he not assented to the prior abstraction of light over the first adjoining property. Ankerson v. Connelly (76 L. J. Ch. 402; [1907] 1 Ch. 678) applied. Bailey & Son, Lim. v. Holborn and Frascati, Lim., 83 L. J. Ch. 515; [1914] 1 Ch. 598; 110 L. T. 574; 58 S. J. 321—Sargant, J.

Obstruction—Incidental Injury—Site Value—Measure of Damages.]—In estimating the damages due for the wrongful obstruction of ancient lights, it is proper to consider not only the injury done to the dominant tenement as it actually exists, but also to the dominant tenement as it is capable of being developed in the future. Griffith v. Clay & Sons, 81 L. J. Ch. 809; [1912] 2 Ch. 291; 106 L. T. 963—C.A.

Where, accordingly, the owner of two small houses possessing ancient lights towards the street was also the owner of a separate plot of land at the rear of these two houses that possessed no ancient lights,—Held, that, in assessing the damages due to him for the obstruction of his ancient lights, it was proper to take into consideration the injury inflicted on him by this obstruction with respect to the site value of the two houses and of the separate plot as a whole, in view of the possibility of their future development as a single property. Ib.

Interference with Light and Air—Nuisance.]—In an action for interference with light and air the owner of the dominant tenement is entitled to the uninterrupted access of a quantity of light measured by what is required for the ordinary purposes of the use of his tenement, and the test is whether the obstruction complained of amounts to a nuisance. Colls v. Home and Colonial Stores (73 L. J. Ch. 484; [1904] A.C. 179) and Jolly v. Kine (76 L. J. Ch. 1; [1907] A.C. 1) discussed and explained. Paul v. Robson, 83 L. J. P.C. 304; L. R. 41 Ind. App. 180; 111 L. T. 481; 30 T. L. R. 533—P.C.

Interruption—Verbal Agreement of Tenancy — Tenancy of Dominant Tenement under Person Occupying Servient Tenement.]—The access of light during a verbal agreement for a tenancy is not "enjoyed by some consent or agreement expressly made or given for that purpose by deed or writing" as required by section 3 of the Prescription Act, 1832, and the existence of such a tenancy agreement with a person who was also during the tenancy the occupier of the servient tenement does not prevent the owners of the dominant tenement from acquiring the right to access of light through their windows. Harbridge (or Harbidge) v. Warwick (18 L. J. Ex. 245; 3 Ex. 552) explained. Mallam v. Rose, 84 L. J. Ch. 934; [1915] 2 Ch. 222—Sargant, J.

Grant of Land Reserving Minerals—Right to Work them "in as full and ample a way" as before Grant—No Express Reservation of Right to Let Down Surface—Necessary Implication of Right.]—In 1829 a vendor who was then owner in fee of certain lands conveyed them to a purchaser, but excepting and reserving all the minerals thereunder and the means and power of working them "in as full and ample a way and manner as if these presents had not been made and executed." There was a compensation clause, but only for damage by surface workings. The deed gave no express right in terms to let down:—Held, that by necessary implication from the words "in as full and ample a way and manner" the right to let down the surface in working the minerals was reserved. Beard v. Moira Colliery Co., 84 L. Restricted Interpretation of Words "in as full and ample a way" in Inclosure Acts—Not Applicable to Construction of Deeds.]—The restricted interpretation of such words in the construction of Inclosure Acts is not applicable to the construction of deeds. Ib.

Support of Railway.—The mining sections (77 to 85) of the Railways Clauses Consolidation Act, 1845, relate to mines within forty yards of a railway, and do not apply to mines outside that limit. Prescription—Right of Common—User for Sixty Years—No Acquiescence—Claim to Soil only—Lost Grant.]—Under section 1 of the Prescription Act, 1832, a right of common appurtenant is not taken and enjoyed by the claimant for sixty years within the meaning of that section, if the user has not been acquiesced in by the owner of the servient tenement, or if the claim has not been a claim to a profit, but only a claim to a title in the soil. The doctrine of lost grant only applies where the enjoyment cannot otherwise be reasonably accounted for. Lyell v. Hothfield (Lord), 84 L. J. K.B. 251; [1914] 3 K.B. 911; 30 T. L. Archdeacon's Fees — Procuration.] — The Ecclesiastical Fees Act, 1867, and the table of fees settled thereunder in 1908, have not substituted a fee of two shillings for the old customary procuration. II. NONCONFORMIST MINISTER.

Baptist Minister—Termination of Employment—Effect of Resignation as from a Future Date—Right to Withdraw Resignation.]—A Baptist minister, who expresses his intention to resign his ministry on or before a certain date, at a formal meeting of the communicants of his church, does not thereby terminate his employment. If a Baptist minister does definitely resign his appointment as from a future date, he may, before that date arrives, withdraw his resignation at a formal meeting of the communicants of the church, although the meeting is not such as would have power to appoint a new minister. Nickson v. Dolphin, 56 S. J. 123—Warrington, J.

III. ADVOWSON.

See also Vol. V. 1226, 1728.

Settlement—Power of Appointment among a Class—Failure to Appoint—Gift Over a Power—Refusal by all Members of the Class—Whether "failure" within the Settlement.] —An advowson was conveyed in strict settlement with a declaration of trust that only the Fellows of a certain college should be presented to the benefice. On "failure" of the donees of the power of appointment to make such presentation the advowson was to be for the benefit of the Master and Senior Fellows of the college for ever. The plaintiff, who was a donee of the power, ordered the benefice, which was vacant at the time, to each of the Fellows, but they all refused it, and he appointed himself :—Held, that there had been no "failure" within the meaning of the settlement, and therefore the advowson was still vested in the plaintiff, subject to a trust on future occasions to appoint a Fellow in accordance with the deed. Hopper v. St. John's College, Cambridge, 31 T. Estate Duty—Proceeds of Sale—Chargeability.]—By section 15, sub-section 4 of the Finance Act, 1894, "Estate duty shall not be payable in respect of any advowson or church patronage which would have been free from succession duty under section twenty-four of the Succession Duty Act, 1853." By section 24 of the Succession Duty Act, 1853, "A successor shall not be chargeable with duty in respect of any advowson or church patronage comprised in his succession, unless the same . . . shall be disposed of by or in concert with him for money or money's worth, in which case he shall be chargeable with duty upon the amount or value of the money or money's worth, for which the same . . . shall be so disposed of at the time of such disposal." A testator, who died in 1898, by his will left property, including two advowsons, to three of the defendants as trustees, to the use of his son C. for life, with remainder to the use of his grandson W., the other defendant, for life, with remainders over. C. died in 1901, and in 1905 W. attained the age of twenty-one, and in 1909, under the powers vested in him by the Settled Land Acts, 1882 to 1890, sold the two advowsons. Upon an information by the Attorney-General claiming a declaration that the defendants, upon the death of either the testator or his son, became liable to pay estate duty and settlement estate duty in respect of the advowsons,—Held, that upon the true construction of the above enactments these duties were not payable. Att.-Gen. v. Peek, 82 L. Parish Church — Conventual Church — Perpetual Curate—Churchwardens—Non-repair.] —The perpetual curate and one of the two churchwardens of a parish church instituted an action against the lay rector to restrain him from preventing them resuming possession of certain ruined aisles adjoining the church for the purpose of restoring them :—Held, that one only of two churchwardens could not sue, but that the perpetual curate, though having no seisin of anything appertaining to the church, had sufficient possession to sue for any interference with his right and duty to hold services. Fowke v. Berrington (No. 2), 83 L. J. Ch. 878; [1914] 2 Ch. 308; 111 L. T. 440; 58 S. J. 610—Astbury, J.

A church building may be partly parochial and partly conventual. If the vicar of the parochial part sues to recover the other part, claiming that it is all parochial, the onus lies upon the vicar to shew that the other part was parochial. The fact that the parish has never contributed to the repairs of the other part is strong evidence to shew that it was not parochial. Ib.

Private Chapel—Absence of Dedication—Rights of Public.]—No person can intrude into a private chapel against the will of the owner in the absence of such a dedication as would give the public a legal right to go there. Hancock v. Stephens, 31 T. L. R. 434—C.A.

V. DIVINE SERVICE.

Repulsion from Holy Communion—Marriage with Deceased Wife's Sister — "Open and notorious evil liver."]—Section 1 of the Deceased Wife's Sister's Marriage Act, 1907, makes a marriage between a man and the sister of his deceased wife valid for all purposes, notwithstanding the proviso in the same section, and such a marriage does not now constitute a lawful cause justifying a clergyman in refusing to admit the married persons to Holy Communion. Thompson v. Dibdin, 81 L. J. K.B. 918; [1912] A.C. 533; 107 L. T. 66; 56 S. J. 647; 28 T. L. R. 490—H.L. (E.)

VI. FACULTIES.

See also Vol. V. 1328, 1735.

Wishes of Parishioners — Discretion of Court.]—Where, on an application for a faculty, a Chancellor has all the materials before him, it is open to him, if in the exercise of his judicial discretion he comes to the conclusion that he ought to do so, to grant or refuse the faculty in opposition to the wishes of a majority of the parishioners. St. Stephen's, Hampstead, 28 T. L. R. 584—Consist. Ct. of London.

Erection of Non-provided School on Consecrated Ground—Discretion.]—The Ecclesiastical Courts have jurisdiction in their discretion to grant faculties authorising the erection on consecrated ground of the buildings of public elementary schools not provided by the local education authority in cases where it is proved that in the buildings so to be erected religious instruction will be given according to the principles of the Church of England, and that interments have never taken place in the ground upon which it is proposed that the school buildings shall be erected. Bettison, In re (L. R. 4 A. & E. 294), followed. Corke v. Rainger, [1912] P. 69; 76 J. P. 87; 28 T. L. R. 130—Arches Ct. of Canterbury.

Consecrated Ground—Powers of Secular and Ecclesiastical Courts.]—When ground is once consecrated and dedicated to sacred purposes no secular Court has power to sanction the use of it for secular purposes. Ecclesiastical Courts, however, have discretionary jurisdiction to grant faculties for the erection of buildings and the like in consecrated ground under certain circumstances. Bideford Parish, In re ([1900] P. 314), and Corke v. Rainger ([1912] P. 69) approved. Campbell v. Paddington Parishioners (2 Rob. Ecc. 558) criticised. Sutton v. Bowden, 82 L. J. Ch. 322; [1913] 1 Ch. 518; 108 L. T. 637; 29 T. L. R. 262—Farwell, L.J.

Baldacchino.]—The Court, holding itself bound by the decision in White v. Bowron (43 L. J. Ecc. 7; L. R. 4 Ad. & E. 207), declined to grant a faculty for the erection of a baldacchino over a Communion table. Grosvenor Chapel, South Audley Street, In re (No. 1), 29 T. L. R. 286—Consist. Ct. of London.

Chancel Screen with Figures—Holy Table—Choir Stalls.]—Faculty granted for the erection of a chancel screen surmounted by a figure of the crucified Saviour in the centre, with figures of the Blessed Virgin on one side and St. John on the other. Wherever, on an application to the Court for a faculty, it is proposed to place the holy table on a raised platform, the Court will require that there should be standing room on the platform at the ends as well as at the front of the holy table, and that there should be no fixed curtains at the sides cutting off access to those ends. The Court in granting a faculty for alterations in the arrangement of the chancel required that all choir stalls should run from east to west, and none from north to south. Hendon Parish Church, 28 T. L. R. 438—Consist. Ct. of London.

Rood Beam with Figures—Inscription.]—The Court granted a faculty for the removal from a rood beam of the inscription "O Lord God, Lamb of God, Son of the Father, that takest away the sins of the world," and when that was done authorising the retention of the figures of the Saviour, St. Mary, and St. John on the rood beam. St. Paul, Bow Common, 28 T. L. R. 584—Consist. Ct. of London.

Rood Screen — Discretion.]—Where the erection of a chancel screen, with a rood loft and beam surmounted by the figures of Our Lord upon the Cross, the Virgin Mary, and St. John, is proposed as an architectural decoration and there is no probability of the figures being subjected to superstitious reverence, the Consistory Court is entitled, in its discretion, to grant a faculty for the erection. All Saints, Westbury, In re, 30 T. L. R. 389—Consist. Ct. of Salisbury.

Parish Church—Picture of Crucified Saviour—Opposition of Parishioners—Faculty for Removal.]—The rector of a parish placed a picture of the crucified Saviour near the pulpit in the parish church without consulting the churchwardens or the congregation. The vestry resolved by 37 votes to 27 that the parishioners should apply for a faculty to remove the picture :—Held, on an application for a faculty to confirm the rector's action, that as the introduction of such a picture had not been sanctioned by authority, and as it had not been shewn by the petitioners that there was a general desire on the part of the church-going parishioners for its introduction, a faculty must be decreed for the removal of the picture. Hudson v. Fulford, 30 T. L. R. 32—Consist. Ct. of London.

VIII. SEXTON.

See also Vol. V. 1356.

Ancient Parish—Freehold Office—Presumption of Law.]—The office of sexton in an ancient parish is not by presumption of law a freehold office. Where, therefore, a man claims to be restored to the office of sexton in a particular parish, the Court will not grant a mandamus for that purpose unless there is evidence that the office of sexton in that parish is a freehold office, which the person elected thereto is entitled to hold for life. Ile's Case (Vent. 153), Merrick's Case (2 Peck. 91), and Rex v. Thame (Churchwardens) (1 Str. 115) discussed and applied. Rex v. Dymock (Vicar); Brooke, Ex parte, 84 L. IX. CHURCH AND CHAPEL RATES.

See also Vol. V. 1362, 1750.

Rate made under Authority of Local Act—Rate made in Consideration of Extinguishment of Tithes—Rate Partly for Ecclesiastical and Partly for other Purposes.]—Section 5 of the Compulsory Church Rate Abolition Act, 1868, which saves church rates authorised by any local Act to be made or levied in consideration of the extinguishment of tithes, is not limited to church rates as defined by section 10—that is to say, to rates for ecclesiastical purposes—but applies to any rate so authorised to be made or levied as a church rate, even though it is in part applicable to purposes other than ecclesiastical. By a local Act of Parliament passed in 1825, expressed to be an Act for extinguishing tithes within a certain parish and making compensation to the rector for the time being in lieu thereof, it was enacted as follows : By section 1 the churchwardens for the time being were from time to time for ever thereafter to pay to the rector for the time being a fixed annual sum in lieu, satisfaction, and discharge of all tithes within the parish; by section 7 all tithes within the parish were to cease and be for ever extinguished; and by section 14 the churchwardens were to make an assessment, to be called "the church rate," for raising from time to time the said annual sum and such further sum as should be necessary for repairing the church and churchyard and for the payment of all necessary and proper salaries and disbursements relative to the church and churchyard. In 1912 the churchwardens made a rate under the above Act "for provision of the rector's stipend and for other purposes authorised by that Act" :—Held, that the whole of the rate, and not only that part of it which was applicable to the rector's stipend, was a church rate authorised to be made by a local Act in consideration of the abolition of tithes within the meaning of section 5 of the Compulsory Church Rate Abolition Act, 1868, and was therefore enforceable, notwithstanding section 2 of that Act. London County Council v. St. Botolph-without-Bishopsgate Churchwardens, 83 L. J. K.B. 953; [1914] 2 K.B. 660; 110 L. T. 737; 78 J. P. 161; 12 L. G. R. 168—C.A.

Application for Leave to Intervene after Expiration of Time for Appealing from Grant of Faculty.]—The Consistory Court of London granted a faculty for the erection of a rood screen, a new altar, and certain structural alterations in Grosvenor Chapel, but refused a faculty for a proposed baldacchino. After the time for appealing from that decision had expired an application was made by a parishioner for leave to intervene and to be added as a respondent for the purpose of appealing to the Court of Arches from the decision of the Consistory Court :—Held, that the application must be refused, as the faculty had issued and there was no case before the Court in which an appearance could be entered. Grosvenor Chapel, South Audley Street, In re (No. 2), 29 T. XI. TITHE.

See also Vol. V. 1415, 1755.

Tithe Rentcharge—Bankruptcy of Incumbent—Sequestration—Tithes Paid by Mistake of Fact—Right to Recover from Bishop—Money Had and Received—Principal and Agent.]—Tithe rentcharge paid in mistake of fact to the sequestrator of a benefice appointed by the bishop under the Bankruptcy Act, 1883, s. 52, may be recovered from the bishop as money had and received, even after, in ignorance of the mistake, the bishop has paid the money over to the trustee in bankruptcy of the incumbent or otherwise duly accounted for it to him. Sadler v. Evans (4 Burr. 1984) considered. Baylis v. London (Bishop), 82 L. J. Ch. 61; [1913] 1 Ch. 127; 107 L. T. 730; 57 S. J. 96; 29 T. L. R. 59—C.A.

Decision of Neville, J. (81 L. J. Ch. 586; [1912] 2 Ch. 318), affirmed. Ib.

—— Recovery of—Portion of Land Let on Long Lease—Joint Owners—Whole of Land not in Occupation of same Owner—Proceedings for Recovery—Appointment of Receiver—Distress.]—The respondent U. was the owner in fee-simple of a building estate out of which tithe rentcharge amounting to 2*l.* 14*s.* 4*d.* issued. A portion of the land was let on long leases to various lessees who were in occupation of their respective plots. An application having been made to the County Court for an order for the recovery of the tithe rentcharge issuing out of the land, the County Court Judge made an order, under section 2, subsection 3 of the Tithe Act, 1891, for the recovery of the tithe rentcharge by the appointment of a receiver to receive the rents and profits of the lands out of which the tithe rentcharge issued:—Held, that sub-section 2 of section 2 of the Tithe Act, 1891, under which a County Court Judge may make an order for the recovery of tithe rentcharge by means of distress, only applies where the whole of the lands which are the subject of the application are in the occupation of the owner thereof, and that where the owner is only in occupation of a portion of the lands out of which the tithe rentcharge issues the proper order to be made is an order for the appointment of a receiver under sub-section 3 of section 2 of the Tithe Act, 1891. Ecclesiastical Commissioners v. Upjohn, 82 L. J. K.B. 435; [1913] 1 K.B. 501; 108 L. T. 417—D.

—— Covenant by Tenant to Pay Landlord such Sums as Landlord shall Expend for Tithe Rentcharge—Validity.]—The provision in section 1, sub-section 1 of the Tithe Act, 1891, that "any contract made between an occupier and owner of lands, after the passing of this Act, for the payment of the tithe rentcharge by the occupier shall be void," is not limited to a contract between an occupier and owner of lands for payment of the tithe rentcharge by the occupier to the tithe owner, but extends also to a contract between an occupier and owner of lands for payment by the former to the latter of such sums as the latter shall expend in payment of tithe rentcharge to the tithe owner. Tuff v. Drapers' Co., 82 L. J. K.B. 174; [1913] 1 K.B. 40; 107 L. T. 635; 57 S. J. 43; 29 T. L. R. 36—C.A.

Ludlow (Baron) v. Pike (73 L. J. K.B. 274; [1904] 1 K.B. 531) approved by Vaughan Williams, L.J., and Kennedy, L.J.; disapproved by Buckley, L.J. Ib.

Extraordinary Tithe Rentcharge—Redemption—Money in Court—Costs of Application to Invest.]—The costs of an application to invest money paid into Court under the Extraordinary Tithe Redemption Act, 1886, s. 5, sub-s. 4, in redemption of an extraordinary charge on land, ordered to be paid by the landowner. Extraordinary Tithe Redemption Act, 1886, Ex parte; Wigan, in re, 80 L. J. Ch. 670; [1911] 2 Ch. 438; 105 L. T. 405—Neville, J.

Scheme for Transfer of Townships from One Parish to Another—Provision as to Fees for "marriages, churchings, and burials, and other ecclesiastical dues, offerings, and emoluments."]—In 1909 it was proposed for ecclesiastical purposes to transfer certain townships from the parish of E. to the parish of I., and a scheme was accordingly drawn up under section 26 of the Pluralities Act, 1838, and subsequently approved by Order in Council. The scheme provided that "the incumbent of the said parish of I. shall have exclusive cure of souls within the limits of the said districts now part of the parish of E., and proposed to be annexed to the parish of I., and the fees for marriages, churchings, and burials, and other ecclesiastical dues, offerings, and emoluments arising from the said districts, shall henceforth belong to the incumbent of the said parish of I., to which such districts shall have been so annexed. That no alteration shall be made as to the patronage or (save as aforesaid) the endowments of any of the benefices affected by this scheme":—Held, that the words of the scheme, "other ecclesiastical dues, offerings, and emoluments," did not include tithes. Bolam v. Allgood, 110 L. T. 8; 58 S. J. 46; 30 T. L. R. 46—C.A.

XII. BURIAL.

See also Vol. V. 1433, 1757.

Burial Ground—Proposed Sale—Approval of Charity Commissioners—Authority of Act of Parliament.]—A sale of a disused chapel and burial ground, although authorised by the Board of Charity Commissioners under section 24 of the Charitable Trusts Act, 1853, is not a sale under the authority of an Act of Parliament within section 5 of the Disused Burial Grounds Act, 1884, and therefore the burial ground cannot by virtue of that authority be sold free from restrictions as to building. Howard Street Congregational Chapel (Sheffield), In re, 83 L. J. Ch. 99; [1913] 2 Ch. 690; 109 L. T. 706; 58 S. J. 68; 30 T. L. R. 16—Astbury, J.

—— Portion of—Widening Highway—Faculty—Exercise of Discretion.]—The power to sanction the use of part of a burial ground for widening a highway is one which must be exercised with great discretion and reserve, and where the proposal involves an extensive disturbance of graves and is reasonably obnoxious to many of the relatives of the persons buried there, and where there has been no approval by the vicar, churchwardens, and parishioners, such use ought not to be sanctioned unless there is urgent and immediate necessity. Uxbridge Urban Council, Ex parte, 30 T. L. R. 448—Consist. Ct. of London.

Disused Burial Ground—Acquirement by Public Authority for Street Widening—Statutory Authority to Acquire Freehold.]—On an application by the rector and churchwardens, and by the London County Council, for a faculty authorising an agreement by which the Council was to acquire a strip of a disused burial ground for widening a road, the Court declined to decide whether the Council has statutory authority to acquire the freehold of consecrated land, and determined to deal with the case in its discretion, under the usual procedure, which is to grant a user of the land. St. Anne, Limehouse, 31 T. L. R. 539—Consist. Ct. of London.

—— Extension of Churchyard — Interment within One Hundred Yards of Dwelling House.]—The extension of a churchyard, even if situate in an area in which an Order in Council has been made enacting that no new burial ground shall be opened without the previous approval of the Local Government Board, does not come within the purview of section 9 of the Burial Act, 1855, and the consent in writing of the owner, lessee, and occupier of a dwelling house within one hundred yards of such extension is therefore not required before it can be used for burials. Section 9 of the Burial Act, 1855, applies only to land used as or appropriated for a burial ground, or an addition to a burial ground, by burial boards under the Burial Acts. Greenwood v. Wadsworth (43 L. J. Ch. 78; L. R. 16 Eq. 288) not followed. Clegg v. Metcalfe, 83 L. J. Ch. 743; [1914] 1 Ch. 808; 111 L. T. 124; 78 J. P. 251; 12 L. G. R. 606; 58 S. J. 516; 30 T. L. R. 410—Sargant, J.

ELECTION (IN EQUITY).

See also Vol. V. 1531, 1763.

English Doctrine—Scots Law—"Approbate and reprobate."]—The Scottish doctrine of "approbate and reprobate" is in principle identical with the English doctrine of election. It is that no person can accept and reject the same instrument. Where a deed or will proposes to make a general distribution of property for the benefit of a person named in it, such person cannot accept a benefit under the instrument without at the same time conforming to all its provisions and renouncing every right inconsistent therewith. Pitman v. Crum-Ewing, 80 L. J. P.C. 178; [1911] A.C. 217; 104 L. T. 611—H.L. (Sc.)

A testator bequeathed to his daughter the life rent of a fund with a power of appointment among her children, and in default of appointment among the children equally. The daughter, massing together her own property with the fund bequeathed by her father, purported, by an exercise (which was invalid) of her power of appointment, to bequeath the whole to her children in life rent and then to the children's children in fee:—Held, that these grandchildren were put to their election between their rights under their grandfather's will and their rights under their mother's will, of which they could not accept part and reject part. Ib.

Foreign Will—Devise of Real Estate in England—Defective Execution—Invalidity—Devolution — Residuary Legatee Heir.]—Where by a foreign will, not so executed as to pass real estate in England, real estate in England is devised away from the heir and personal estate is bequeathed to the heir, the heir is not bound to elect between the real and personal estates, but takes both. Hearle v. Greenbank (3 Atk. 695, 715) applied. De Virte, In re; Vaiani v. De Virte, 84 L. J. Ch. 617; [1915] 1 Ch. 920; 112 L. T. 972—Joyce, J.

A testatrix resident and domiciled in Italy in 1899 made an Italian will purporting to give real estate in England to V. absolutely, and her residuary real and personal estate to R. The will was not so executed as to be effectual to pass real estate in England. R. was the testatrix's heiress-at-law. In 1901 the testatrix by deed settled the English real estate upon trust for V. for life, with remainder for his children in tail, and an ultimate remainder to the use of herself in fee. V. died, not having had children:—Held, that R. was entitled to both the English realty as heiress-at-law and the personalty as residuary legatee, and was not put to her election between the two. Ib.

Restraint on Anticipation—Power in Trustees to Vary Trusts—Intention—Spinsters.]—The doctrine of election is not excluded in the case of a spinster who takes a settled interest under a will merely because a restraint on anticipation is attached to her interest while under coverture or because her trustees have powers in certain events to revoke or alter the trusts declared in her favour. Haynes v. Foster (70 L. J. Ch. 302; [1901] 1 Ch. 361) distinguished. Hargrove, In re; Hargrove v. Pain, 84 L. J. Ch. 484; [1915] 1 Ch. 398; 112 L. T. 1062; 59 S. J. 364—Astbury, J.

Spinster—Will—Restraint on Anticipation.]—In the case of a spinster, to whom an interest with a restraint on anticipation during coverture attached thereto is given by the same instrument as that which gives rise to the question of election, the doctrine of election applies. The fact that she would be restrained from anticipation, if and when she married, is immaterial, and she will accordingly be put to her election. Haynes v. Foster (70 L. J. Ch. 302; [1901] 1 Ch. 361) distinguished. Tongue, In re; Burton, In re; Higginson v. Burton, 84 L. J. Ch. 378; [1915] 1 Ch. 390; 112 L. T. 685—Warrington, J. Affirmed, 84 L. J. Ch. 933; [1915] 2 Ch. 283—C.A.

Mortgage by Testator of Property Belonging to His Wife—Election by Wife to Take under Will—Liability of Property Brought in by Election for Debts—Contribution towards Deficiency.]—A testator gave all his estate upon trust for his wife for life, and after her death he gave his leasehold property in James Street upon trust for his daughter for life, and after her death for her children; and after the death of his wife he gave his villa known as "Birchfield" to his niece. The testator died in 1913. The James Street property was assigned to the testator's wife in 1888, and on August 25, 1909, the testator purported to mortgage the same for 400*l*. The "Birchfield" villa was assigned to the testator and his wife jointly, and on August 15, 1905, they mortgaged it for 400*l*. The widow elected to take under the will:—Held, that as to the James Street property it was not primarily liable for payment of the mortgage debt, and what the widow brought in under her election was the property free from the incumbrance; but as to the "Birchfield" property, the Real Estate Charges Act, 1854, applied, and therefore the mortgage debt was primarily payable out of it. Held also, that, the residue of the estate being insufficient for the payment of debts, the property brought in by reason of the widow's election was liable to contribute pari passu with the testator's property in discharging his debts. Cooper v. Cooper (44 L. J. Ch. 6, 14; L. R. 7 H. L. 53, 69) applied. Williams, In re; Cunliffe v. Williams, 84 L. J. Ch. 578; [1915] 1 Ch. 450—Eve, J.

Personalty to be Held on same Trusts as Proceeds of Sale.]—A testator, after devising his land in strict settlement, gave his trustees a power of sale, and declared that the moneys arising from any such sale should, subject to a power of interim investment, be re-invested in land. He then bequeathed all his residuary personal estate to his trustees upon the trusts and with and subject to the powers and provisions applicable to moneys to arise from a sale under the powers of sale thereinbefore contained:—Held, that the residuary personal estate must be treated as realty, though not actually laid out in the purchase of land. Held, also, that the devisees being put to election in respect of the devised real estate, such election, on the true construction of the will, extended so as to include the residuary personal estate. Upton-Cottrell-Dormer, In re; Upton v. Upton, 84 L. J. Ch. 861; 112 L. T. 974; 31 T. L. R. 260—Eve, J.

ELECTION LAW.

A. PARLIAMENTARY.

1. Registration of Voters.

a. Ownership.

County Vote—Ownership Qualification—Receipt of Rents and Profits.]—Four persons claimed to have their names inserted in the list of ownership voters for the parish of Trowbridge. The houses which formed the qualifying property were devised to the mother of the four claimants. At her death it was believed that her husband, the father of the claimants, took a life estate in the houses, and the trustee for some years paid the rents to him. It was afterwards found that he had no life interest, and that the property had passed to his children, and they thereupon authorised the trustee to pay the money direct to their father as before. The Revising Barrister having disallowed the claims,—Held, that under the circumstances there had been a "receipt" by the claimants "of the rents and profits" of the property "for their own use" within the meaning of section 26 of the Representation of the People Act, 1832, and that they were entitled to be registered as ownership voters. White v. Bown, 82 L. J. K.B. 89; [1913] 1 K.B. 78; 108 L. T. 159; 77 J. P. 78; 11 L. G. R. 23; 2 Smith, 386; 29 T. L. R. 63—D.

—— Freehold Premises in Parliamentary Borough—Occupation by Freeholder of Flat in Freehold Premises—"House . . . or other building occupied by himself."]—The appellants claimed the county franchise in respect of their ownership in each case of a freehold house situate in a Parliamentary borough. Each house was divided into two flats—an upper and a lower—each appellant respectively occupying the upper flat, and being registered as a voter in respect of such occupation in Division I. of the occupiers' list for the parish in the said borough in which the flats were situate. In one case the lower flat was in the occupation of a tenant, who was also in Division I., while in the other it was vacant:—Held, that each of the four flats was a separate freehold for the purposes of the county franchise; that the appellants were not in occupation of the lower flats within the meaning of section 24 of the Representation of the People Act, 1832, and, consequently, that each was entitled to the county franchise in respect of his freehold interest in such lower flats respectively. Douglas v. Sanderson; Potts v. Sanderson, 80 L. b. Occupiers.

"Inhabitant occupier"—Dwelling House—Tenant of Part of House—Landlord's Residence in House—Landlord's Control—Evidence to Rebut.—The tenant of rooms forming part of a dwelling house in a borough, in which dwelling house the landlord resides, is not entitled, in virtue of his occupation of the rooms, to the borough franchise as an inhabitant occupier of a dwelling house under section 3 of the Representation of the People Act, 1867, unless he rebuts the presumption of the landlord's right of control over the rooms arising from the latter's residence in the house; and he does not rebut that presumption by merely proving that the landlord has never expressly claimed any right to enter into or exercise control over the rooms, or in fact entered or exercised any control over them, the circumstances not having been such as to require the latter to claim such right or exercise any control, and that no services have been rendered to him in the rooms by the landlord. Kent v. Fittall (No. 4), 81 L. J. K.B. 82; [1911] 2 K.B. 1102; 103 L. T. 668; 9 L. G. R. 27; 75 J. P. 113; 2 Smith, 279; 27 T. L. R. 79—D. See s.c. in C.A. (infra).

Objection—Prima Facie Proof—Evidence—Rebuttal.]—At the Court of a Revising Barrister an objector proved that a person, whose name appeared in a list of voters as the inhabitant occupier of a dwelling house, occupied rooms in a house which itself would ordinarily be described as a dwelling house, that the landlord resided in the house, and that the landlord was rated for the whole house. The name of the same person had, in the previous year, appeared in the similar list for the same qualifying property, the same objector had then made the same objection and proved the same facts, the person objected to had given evidence and been cross-examined, and the same Revising Barrister had retained his name in the list. The Revising Barrister refused to require the person objected to to adduce evidence or to be cross-examined, and held that the objection failed, upon the ground that in the circumstances prima facie proof of the objection had not been given:—Held, that the decision of the Revising Barrister was wrong, inasmuch as prima facie proof of the objection had been given and there was no evidence before him to rebut it. Kent v. Fittall (No. 5), 105 L. T. 428; 9 L. G. R. 1186—C.A.

Evidence of Parting with Control—Hearsay—Question of Fact—Admissibility of Evidence.]—The name of A. B. appeared on the occupation list in respect of his occupation of a dwelling house at No. 20 W. Street. Notice of objection was given, and it was admitted that the house in which A. B.'s rooms were situate was an ordinary dwelling house; that the landlady resided in the house and paid rates for the whole house. The Revising Barrister then held that prima facie proof of the objection had been given so as to satisfy the Registration Act, 1878, s. 28, subss. 10, 11. In order to ascertain the facts, the Revising Barrister proceeded to examine the person employed by the town clerk for the purpose of verifying the accuracy of the entry on the list. He was one of a staff of official canvassers whose duty it was to call at the several houses and obtain from the resident landlord, or some other person competent to give it, all necessary information as to the terms of the occupation of the respective inmates. The canvasser produced his canvass book containing his notes made at the actual time of each enquiry, and reading therefrom deposed on oath that he had been expressly informed by the landlady of the house in question that the premises occupied by A. B. were let to him unfurnished; that he had separate and exclusive occupation; that she performed no services whatsoever for him and exercised no control over the premises. On this evidence, which was uncontradicted, the Revising Barrister decided that the prima facie evidence was rebutted, and he retained the name of the voter on the list of voters:—Held, that it could not be said that the evidence so given was directed to a question of fact solely within section 65 of the Parliamentary Voters' Registration Act, 1843, so that there was no appeal from the decision of the Revising Barrister; and that there was not sufficient or proper evidence to establish the relinquishment by the landlady of the right to control, and therefore the objection had not been rebutted. Astell v. Barrett, 103 L. T. 905; 9 L. G. R. 253; 75 J. P. 225; 2 Smith, 256; 55 S. J. 237; 27 T. L. R. 205—D.

A widower was enrolled as a county voter as tenant of a house which consisted of three rooms and a kitchen. He, however, only occupied one of the rooms, the rest of the house being occupied by his daughter and her husband and family. The daughter cooked her father's meals in the kitchen, but he partook of them in his own room. His son-in-law paid him half the total rent and taxes, and owned the furniture in the portion of the house occupied by himself and his family. All the apartments and the street door were fitted with locks and keys, the key of the street door being left in the lock, and the last person coming in at night locking the door:—Held, that the inference from these facts was that the father-in-law retained the control of the house, and accordingly that the son-in-law was not entitled to the franchise as an inhabitant occupier of a separate dwelling. Gregory v. Traquair, [1912] S. C. 637—Ct. of Sess.

Tenant not Separately Rated—Constructive Rating.]—The tenant of rooms forming part of a dwelling house in a borough, in which dwelling house the landlord resides, is not entitled, in virtue of his occupation of the rooms, to the borough franchise as an inhabitant occupier of a dwelling house under section 3 of the Representation of the People Act, 1867, unless he or some other person is separately rated and pays separate rates for the rooms; and he cannot avail himself of the fact that the landlord is rated for the house as a whole, the cases of constructive rating of the occupier where rates are paid by the owner being limited to the case of a dwelling house or tenement wholly let out in apartments or lodgings under section 7 of the above Act, and the case of small tenements under sections 3 and 4 of the Poor Rate Assessment and Collection Act, 1869. Kent v. Fittall (No. 4), 81 L. J. K.B. 82; [1911] 2 K.B. 1102; 105 L. T. 422; 9 L. G. R. 999; 75 J. P. 378; 2 Smith, 279; 55 S. J. 687; 27 T. L. R. 564—C.A.

c. Service Franchise.

Married Soldiers Living in Barracks.]—Married officers and non-commissioned officers occupied during the qualifying period, with their wives and families, quarters in barracks allotted to them. They took their meals in their quarters; each had a key, and could go in and out of his quarters during the day without hindrance. The quarters consisted of a sitting room, with one or more bedrooms and scullery. The barracks were subject to military control. The commanding officer, who lived outside the barracks, could move an officer to other quarters. Quarters were liable to inspection, and non-commissioned officers could not be out of barracks after midnight without a pass, and lights in quarters were to be out at a certain hour:—Held, that each officer or non-commissioned officer occupied his quarters as a dwelling house by virtue of service, and was entitled to the franchise. McDaid v. Barton (4 Lawson, 61) distinguished. Steele v. Dowling, [1914] 2 Ir. R. 432—C.A.

Attendant in Lunatic Asylum.]—An attendant in a lunatic asylum had the separate and exclusive use and occupation of a room in an asylum, primarily used as a bedroom. There were in the asylum a dining room and recreation room for the attendants, but each attendant was at liberty to receive guests in his own room, and it was the practice for the attendant when off duty to read in his private room, and to provide himself there with food or delicacies in addition to the meals supplied in the dining room. Each attendant had a key to his room, but the same key opened all the rooms in the block. He could not light a fire in his room without leave of the medical superintendent. The attendants had no contractual right to any special rooms, but in practice they were never moved from one to another. They used the rooms as sitting as well as bedrooms. The furniture belonged to the asylum, but any decorations belonged to the attendants. The outer gate of the asylum was closed at a particular hour at night, after which no attendant was allowed in or out without special leave. The Revising Barrister found as a fact that the room occupied by an attendant, whose name appeared on the list of registered voters and was objected to, was a dwelling house, and occupied as such by the attendant during the qualifying period:—Held (Cherry, L.J., dissentiente), that there was no evidence on which the Revising Barrister could properly act that the occupation of the room by the attendant was as a dwelling or dwelling house within section 3 of the Representation of the People Act, 1884, or otherwise than as a bedroom merely. Stribling v. Halse (55 L. J. Q.B. 15; 16 Q.B. D. 246) disapproved. O'Brien v. M'Carthy, [1912] 2 Ir. R. 17—C.A.

"Person under whom" Claimant "serves."]—The supreme authority in an asylum was the chief medical superintendent, who controlled, with power of appointment and dismissal, an assistant medical superintendent and the attendants. The assistant medical superintendent had, under the chief, wide powers of suspension and control, the attendants in the asylum being subject to his orders, and in the chief's absence he exercised full power of control. The chief lived in a separate house, but the assistant occupied rooms in the asylum, and in respect of this occupation was enrolled as a Parliamentary elector under the service franchise. An attendant in the asylum, who also occupied a bedroom there, having claimed the service franchise, it was objected that he was not entitled thereto in respect that the asylum was inhabited by a person—namely, the assistant medical superintendent—"under whom" the claimant served within the meaning of section 3 of the Representation of the People Act, 1884:—Held, that the person under whom the claimant served in the sense of the Act was the chief, and not the assistant superintendent, and that, accordingly, he was entitled to be put upon the roll. Shortt v. Wright, [1911] S. C. 489—Ct. of Sess.

Rating and Payment of Rates—Rating and Payment of Master.]—In order to qualify a servant to be put on Division II. (Service) of the Occupation List of Parliamentary Voters, the rating of and payment of rates by the master for the premises in respect of which the servant claims is sufficient, and he is, by the operation of section 3 and section 9, subsection 8 of the Representation of the People Act, 1884, to be deemed to be an inhabitant occupier of such premises as a tenant, and to be rated and to have paid the rates within the meaning of section 3 of the Representation of the People Act, 1867. Chesterton v. Gardom, 81 L. J. K.B. 198; [1912] 1 K.B. 176; 105 L. T. 300; 9 L. G. R. 1274; 76 J. P. 78; 2 Smith, 353; 56 S. J. 92; 28 T. L. R. 55—D.

d. Lodgers.

Occupation as Sole Tenant—Wife and Children of Occupier Sleeping in Rooms Occupied — Lodgings Occupied "separately and as sole tenant."]—An appellant, who had claimed the lodger franchise, occupied during the requisite qualifying period two bedrooms in a house. He and his wife slept in one of the rooms and his three daughters slept in the other room. If let unfurnished the two rooms jointly were of sufficient value to confer the lodger franchise, but the room in which the appellant and his wife slept was not of sufficient value. The appellant in another case occupied with his wife and two children during the qualifying period one bedroom in a house, the children sleeping in the room :—Held, that the appellant occupied "separately and as sole tenant" the room in which his daughters slept, and in the second case the room which he occupied with his wife and children, and that the appellant in each case was entitled to the lodger franchise. Searle v. Staffordshire County Council (Clerk), 104 L. T. 61; 75 J. P. 116; 9 L. G. R. 24; 2 Smith, 244—D.

Occupation "separately and as sole tenant"—Room Occasionally Shared with Guest.]—A son paid for and had the sole right to occupy a bedroom in his father's house :—Held, that the fact that during the period of qualification for the lodger franchise he had occasionally ex gratia allowed a young brother (who could have had a bed of his own) to sleep in the room with him did not prevent him from having occupied the room separately and as sole tenant. Milne v. Douglas, [1912] S. C. 635—Ct. of Sess.

Occupation of Rooms in Part Remuneration for Lodger's Services.]—An assistant priest, who was provided with board and lodging in the rectory of the priest to whom he was assistant, and whose salary was fixed on the basis that he was so provided,—Held, entitled to the lodger franchise, the rooms occupied exclusively by him being of the requisite value. Doyle v. Craig, [1911] S. C. 493—Ct. of Sess.

Member of Brotherhood Occupying Room in College.]—A member of a voluntary association or brotherhood, which devoted itself to teaching, occupied a bedroom in a college belonging to the brotherhood. He was not paid for his services, but was provided with board, lodging, clothing, and everything necessary for his maintenance :—Held, that he was not a lodger for the purposes of the franchise, in respect that there was no contract, either express or implied, between him and the brotherhood, under which he had a right to occupy the room. Doyle v. Craig ([1911] S. C. 493) distinguished. O'Connell v Blacklock, [1912] S. C. 640—Ct. of Sess.

Occupier or Lodger.]—See cases under (b) (supra).

Rateable Value of House—Rebutting Declaration.]—The appellant, in due form and with the proper declaration, claimed to have his name inserted in the list of lodger voters. The declaration stated that the appellant paid 5*s*. a week for a furnished bedroom. The rateable value of the house in which the appellant lodged was less than 14*l*. per annum. The appellant did not appear at the Revision Court to support his claim, although notice had been served that his claim would be opposed. The Revising Barrister held that the prima facie case established by the declaration attached to the claim had been rebutted, and disallowed the claim :—Held, that the Revising Barrister was entitled to weigh the prima facie case made by the declaration against the rebutting case furnished by the rate book, and in the absence of further evidence to hold that the claim was not established. Ainsworth v. Cheshire County Council (Clerk), 104 L. T. 62; 75 J. P. 117; 9 L. G. R. 21; 2 Smith, 248; 27 T. L. R. 82—D.

The rateable value of a house in which lodgings are let is an admissible but not conclusive test of the sufficiency or otherwise of the annual value of the lodgings to support the lodger's claim to a vote; and a Revising Barrister may properly entertain such evidence of rateable value so long as he does not treat it as conclusive, to the exclusion of other evidence for or against the claim. Rex v. Allen; Griffiths, Ex parte, 74 J. P. 454; 8 L. G. R. 979; 2 Smith, 227—D.

e. Successive Occupation.

Occupation of Part of House—Subsequent Occupation of Entire House.]—J.'s name appeared on the list of voters as "inhabitant householder" of part of a house. J. had during portion of the qualifying period in fact occupied part of the house, a sub-tenant of J.'s occupying the remaining part; but on the determination of the sub-tenancy J. went into possession of and occupied the entire house during the remainder of the qualifying period :—Held (Lord O'Brien, L.C.J., dissenting), that the claimant was entitled to a vote, and that it was unnecessary that the qualifying premises should have been set out in the list of voters as a house in succession from part to the whole of the premises. Jackson v. Mahon, [1911] 2 Ir. R. 318—C.A.

f. Rating.

Borough Franchise—Inhabitant Occupier—Rating—Tenant not Separately Rated—House "wholly let out in apartments or lodgings."]—By section 7 of the Representation of the People Act, 1867, where a dwelling house is "wholly let out in apartments or lodgings not separately rated, the owner of such dwelling house . . . shall be rated in respect thereof to the poor rate." The appellant claimed to be put on Division I. of the occupiers' list of voters in respect of his occupation of certain premises as tenant under section 3 of the Representation of the People Act, 1867. He occupied separately one-half of an ordinary dwelling house—which was not structurally divided—on the "half-house" system, the other half being similarly occupied by another tenant, the passages, front door, &c., being used by them in common, the landlord not residing in nor reserving to himself any part of the house. The appellant was not rated in respect of his occupation :—Held, that the house was "wholly let out in apartments"; that the landlord ought, consequently, to have been rated in respect thereof by virtue of section 7; and that, therefore, under section 19 of the Poor Rate Assessment and Collection Act, 1869, and section 14 of the Parliamentary and Municipal Registration Act, 1878, the appellant must be deemed to be rated, and, being otherwise properly qualified, was entitled to have his claim allowed. Crow v. Hilleary, 82 L. J. K.B. 380; [1913] 1 K.B. 385; 108 L. T. 300; 77 J. P. 164; 11 L. G. R. 226; 2 Smith, 410; 29 T. L. R. 147—D.

Landlord not Residing in House—Rates Paid by Landlord—Qualification of Occupier.]—The appellant had during the whole of the qualifying period been the inhabitant occupier as tenant of a dwelling house which was separately rated, the rateable value being 12*l*. The landlord, who did not reside in the house, paid all the rates under an arrangement entered into with the rating authority. His name, as well as that of the appellant, appeared in the rate book, but there was evidence that the rating authority considered that the ultimate liability for the rates rested upon the appellant, and that in case the landlord made default they would have enforced payment against the appellant. The overseers having inserted the appellant's name in Division I. of the occupiers list,—Held, that the appellant was the rated occupier of the house, and had paid the rates through his landlord, and that his name must therefore be retained in the list. Kent v. Fittall (81 L. J. K.B. 82; [1911] 2 K.B. 1102) distinguished. Smith v. Newman, 81 L. J. K.B. 183; [1912] 1 K.B. 162; 105 L. T. 631; 9 L. G. R. 1254; 76 J. P. 25; 2 Smith, 327; 56 S. J. 16; 28 T. L. R. 19—D.

Occupier of Separate Floor of House—Landlord Rated in Respect of Whole House.]—The appellant occupied part of an ordinary house, the whole of which was rented by a doctor, who was the rated occupier, who used the ground floor and paid the rates for the whole house. The top floor was occupied by the appellant, and the first floor by another claimant. The appellant's name did not appear in the occupiers' column of the rate book, but for part of the qualifying period only it did appear in the column headed "Representation of the People Act, 1884," as follows: "Josh Havercroft. Top floor." The appellant contended that he was entitled to be put on the occupiers' list either as a householder or as a 10*l*. occupier:—Held, following Kent v. Fittall (81 L. J. K.B. 82; [1911] 2 K.B. 1102), that the appellant was not entitled to be put on the register, inasmuch as the premises occupied by him had not been rated as a separate hereditament and no rates had been paid in respect of them. Havercroft v. Dewey, 108 L. T. 296; 77 J. P. 115; 11 L. G. R. 28; 2 Smith, 393; 29 T. L. R. 62—D.

Vestry Clerk—Obligation in Making Out Lists of Voters.]—Under section 7 of the Vestries Act, 1850, the obligation imposed upon the vestry clerk to "prepare, make out, and publish" lists of voters does not extend to cover the verification at his own expense of the accuracy of the returns made by owners. Rex v. Davies; Peake, Ex parte, 80 L. Parliamentary Borough—More than One Municipal Borough within its Boundaries—Creation of New Municipal Borough—New Borough having Largest Population—Lists of Parliamentary Voters—Delivery to Town Clerk of Original Municipal Borough.]—Under the Representation of the People Act, 1867, the Parliamentary borough of The Hartlepools comprised the municipal borough of Hartlepool and three townships. The municipal borough of West Hartlepool was created in 1887, and the Parliamentary borough of The Hartlepools then consisted of the municipal boroughs of Hartlepool and West Hartlepool and portions of three townships. According to the last census, the municipal borough within the Parliamentary borough of The Hartlepools having the largest population was the municipal borough of West Hartlepool. On the completion of the revision of the lists of voters the town clerk of West Hartlepool claimed that the revised lists of voters should be delivered to him. The Revising Barrister decided that the town clerk of Hartlepool was the proper person to receive the revised lists of Parliamentary voters, as the writs of election had on the occasion of every Parliamentary election since 1867 been directed to the mayor of Hartlepool:—Held, that, inasmuch as the writs of election for all the Parliamentary elections since 1867 had always been directed to the mayor of Hartlepool, he was entitled under section 12, sub-section 4 of the Redistribution of Seats Act, 1885, to be the returning officer for the Parliamentary borough of The Hartlepools, and that, therefore, the town clerk of Hartlepool was the proper person to receive the revised lists of Parliamentary voters from the Revising Barrister. Rex v. Macaskie; West Hartlepool Corporation, Ex parte, 83 L. J. K.B. 1158; [1914] 3 K.B. 62; 111 L. T. 160; 78 J. P. 333; 12 L. G. R. 964; 2 Smith, 427—D.

Municipal Borough a County of itself—Two Mayors in One Parliamentary Borough.]—The provisions of the Municipal Corporations Act, 1882, s. 224, sub-s. 1, which provides that "In boroughs, other than cities and towns being counties of themselves, the mayor shall be the returning officer at parliamentary elections; . . ." and sub-section 2, which enacts that "If there are more mayors than one within the boundaries of a parliamentary borough, the mayor of that borough to which the writ of election is directed shall be the returning officer," taken in conjunction with section 12, sub-section 4 of the Redistribution of Seats Act, 1885, have no application where one of such boroughs is a city or town being a county of itself; and where the writ of election has formerly been directed to the sheriff of such borough, he still remains the returning officer, and the town clerk of such borough is entitled to receive the revised list of voters. Rex v. Richards; Rex v. Williams; Llanelly Corporation, Ex parte, 84 L. Lists of Voters—Omission through Inadvertence to Expunge Names of Persons Successfully Objected to—Lists with Names not Expunged Handed to Town Clerk—Register Printed from Lists Containing Names Successfully Objected to—Power of Court to Order Revising Barrister to Correct Mistake—Lists Lost or Destroyed — Mandamus.] — A Revising Barrister in the course of revising the list of voters of a Parliamentary borough decided that the names of 316 persons who had been duly objected to should be expunged from the lists of voters, and be duly read out in open Court the names so expunged. In consequence, however, of an accident, the Revising Barrister was unable to write, and had to avail himself of clerical assistance in striking off the lists of voters the names of persons successfully objected to. The lists of voters, which were copied and printed by the town clerk of the borough from the revised lists of voters delivered to him by the Revising Barrister, and which formed the register of electors for the borough, contained, as printed, the names of the 316 persons which had been directed by the Revising Barrister to be expunged, those names having been retained on the lists of voters through some mistake or inadvertence. In July of the following year the mistake was discovered, a Parliamentary election being then pending. The original lists of voters handed to the town clerk were then either lost or destroyed :—Held, that the Court had power, notwithstanding the lapse of time and the fact that the original lists were destroyed, to order the Revising Barrister to correct the mistake by making on a copy of the register the alterations which ought to have been made in the original lists of voters—namely, by striking off the register the names of those 316 persons, and to direct the town clerk to insert those corrections in his copies of the register. Rex v. Hanley Revising Barrister; Rex v. Stoke-on-Trent (Town Clerk), 81 L. 1. Burgesses.

Residence "in the borough or within seven miles thereof"—Residence for Part of Qualifying Period Within Seven Miles of, but Outside, and for Residue of the Period Within, a Borough.]—Section 9, sub-section 2 (c) of the Municipal Corporations Act, 1882, provides that a person shall not be entitled to be enrolled as a burgess unless he has during the whole of the twelve months then last preceding July 15 in any year resided in the borough, or within seven miles thereof :—Held, that residence for part of the twelve months within seven miles of, but outside, and for the residne of the twelve months within, the borough of which a person claims to be enrolled as a burgess, is a proper qualification therefor by reason of residence within the meaning of the section. Lloyd v. Shrewsbury (Town Clerk), 84 L. 2. Election to Corporate Offices.

Election as Mayor and as Alderman—Qualification — "Councillor" — Disqualification of Councillor having Interest in Contract—"Being."]—A person elected a member of a borough council, although disqualified under the provisions of section 12, sub-section 1 (c) of the Municipal Corporations Act, 1882, for being elected or for being a councillor by reason of his having an interest in a contract with the council, is nevertheless a councillor within the meaning of section 14, sub-section 3, and section 15, sub-section 1, and qualified to be elected alderman and mayor of the borough where, under the provisions of section 73, his election is to be deemed to all intents good and valid because it has not been questioned within twelve months thereof. And within the meaning of the above sub-sections he is "qualified to be a councillor." Forrester v. Norton, 80 L. J. K.B. 1288; [1911] 2 K.B. 953; 105 L. T. 375; 75 J. P. 510; 9 L. G. R. 991; 55 S. J. 668; 27 T. L. R. 542—D.

"Being" in section 12, sub-section 1 (c), means "holding the office of." Ib.

Borough Council—Member of Committee—Power to Resign.]—A member of a borough council appointed member of a committee of the council under the powers of section 22, sub-section 2 of the Municipal Corporations Act, 1882, does not hold a public office within the operation of the common law rule that a person qualified and duly elected to serve in a public office cannot refuse to serve, and consequently such member of a committee may resign. Rex v. Sunderland Corporation, 80 L. J. K.B. 1337; [1911] 2 K.B. 458; 105 L. T. 27; 75 J. P. 365; 9 L. G. R. 928; 27 T. L. R. 385—D.

ELECTRIC LIGHTING AND SUPPLY.

See also Vol. VI. 219, 1930.

"Supply" of Electricity—Sale of Electric Fittings—Ultra Vires.]—There is nothing in the Electric Lighting Act, 1882 (even when read in conjunction with the Electric Lighting Act, 1909), to justify undertakers, who have obtained powers to "supply" electric energy under a Provisional Order made under that statute, to engage in the sale, or hire, of apparatus for the use of the energy thus supplied by them. On the contrary, the powers bestowed upon them under the statute are completely exhausted the moment that they have supplied electric energy at the consumer's terminals. Att.-Gen. v. Leicester Corporation, 80 L. J. Ch. 21; [1910] 2 Ch. 359; 103 L. T. 214; 74 J. P. 385; 9 L. G. R. 185; 26 T. L. R. 568—Neville, J.

—— Common Law Powers of Municipal Corporation.]—Under the Electric Lighting Acts and Provisional Orders made thereunder a municipal authority has no power to carry on the trade or business of supplying electric fittings and wires for use by those to whom they supply electrical energy or by others. While a municipal corporation may have a common law right to carry on such a trade or business, it has no power to use for that purpose funds raised under statutory authority for the purpose of supplying electrical energy. Att.-Gen. v. Leicester Corporation (80 L. J. Ch. 21; [1910] 2 Ch. 359) followed. Att.-Gen. v. Sheffield Corporation, 106 L. T. 367; 76 J. P. 185; 10 L. G. R. 301; 56 S. J. 326; 28 T. L. R. 266—Eve, J.

Differentiation by Undertakers in Charges to Different Consumers—"Similar circumstances" — "Undue preference."] — Undertakers for the supply of electricity, subject to the provisions of the Electric Lighting Act, 1882, proposed to make a higher charge for the supply of power to those consumers who took a supply for power only, or for power and partial lighting, than to consumers who took from them exclusively for both power and lighting :—Held, that this proposal was a breach of section 19 of the Act, which provides that every consumer is to be entitled to a supply on the same terms on which any other consumer is entitled under similar circumstances to a corresponding supply; and that it was an "undue preference" within section 20 of the Act. Long Eaton Urban Council v. Att.-Gen., 84 L. J. Ch. 131; [1915] 1 Ch. 124; 111 L. T. 514; 79 J. P. 129; 13 L. G. R. 23; 31 T. L. R. 45—C.A.

Decision of Sargant, J. (83 L. J. Ch. 774; [1914] 2 Ch. 251), affirmed. Ib.

To carry on the trade or business of providing, selling, or letting on hire electric lamps, electric heating apparatus, electric motors, or other electric fittings, appliances, or apparatus, is ultra vires of a local authority. A reduction by the local authority in the price for electricity in respect of houses electrically lighted throughout constitutes an "undue preference" within the meaning of sections 19 and 20 of the Electric Lighting Act, 1882. Long Eaton Urban Council v. Att.-Gen. (84 L. J. Ch. 131; [1915] 1 Ch. 124) applied. Att.-Gen. v. Ilford Urban Council, 84 L. J. Ch. 860; 13 L. G. R. 441—Sargant, J.

Provisional Order—Laying Mains—Board of Trade Sanction to Overhead Mains—Erection of Standard on Highway—Street or Part of a Street—Portion not Repairable by Inhabitants at Large—No Consent of Owner of Soil—Mandatory Injunction.]—The plaintiff was the owner and occupier of a hotel which fronted on a street. The hotel was erected on land which, at the time when the hotel was erected, was bounded by an old parish road. It was set back four or five feet from the boundary of the road, a pavement being laid in front by the plaintiff's predecessor in title (his father) upon his own land. The defendants (a local authority) having obtained a Provisional Order (duly confirmed) for the supply of electrical energy, which empowered and required them to lay distributing mains in the street on which the hotel fronted, subsequently obtained the sanction of the Board of Trade to a supply by means of overhead mains in that street. For the purposes of that supply, but without the consent either of the plaintiff or of the Board of Trade, they erected a standard on the pavement in front of, and close to, the hotel, and fixed it below the soil into the footings of the hotel wall. The paved strip of land had never been acquired by the defendants; it had become a highway as having been dedicated by the plaintiff's father to the use of the public; but it was not repairable by the inhabitants at large. It remained the property of the plaintiff, who, although not legally liable to repair the pavement, had done so from time to time. The plaintiff having brought an action for a mandatory injunction to compel the defendants to remove the standard.—Held, by Warrington, J., applying Escott v. Newport Corporation (73 L. J. K.B. 693; [1904] 2 K.B. 369), that, the defendants having, under clause 21 of the schedule to the Electric Lighting (Clauses) Act, 1899, and the corresponding section of their Provisional Order, power to lay mains in the street, and the pavement being part of the street, they were entitled to place the standard on the pavement, as being necessary and incidental to the work they had to carry out, and that the plaintiff's remedy (if any) was a claim for compensation under section 68 of the Lands Clauses Consolidation Act, 1845. Held, by all the members of the Court of Appeal (reversing Warrington, J.), that the plaintiff was entitled to a mandatory injunction for the removal of the standard on the ground that the fixing of the standard into the footings of the hotel wall without the plaintiff's consent was a breach of section 7 of the Gasworks Clauses Act, 1847, which was incorporated in the Electric Lighting Act, 1882; and also (by Cozens-Hardy, M.R., and Buckley, L.J.; Kennedy, L.J., dissenting) on the ground that, upon the true construction of section 13 of the Electric Lighting Act, 1882, and section 12, sub-section 2 of the schedule to the Electric Lighting (Clauses) Act, 1899—which prohibit the breaking up or interference with any street or part of a street not repairable by the local authority without the consent of the person by whom the same is repairable, or of the Board of Trade after notice to such person—it was not competent to the defendants under the circumstances to break open any portion of the pavement opposite the plaintiff's hotel. Kennedy, L.J., considered that these latter sections had no application, inasmuch as there was no person by whom the pavement in question was repairable, and consequently there was no person whose consent could be obtained. Andrews v. Abertillery Urban Council, 80 L. Connection between Authorised Areas—More than One Connection between Same Areas.]—The London Electric Supply Act, 1908, s. 4, sub-s. 2, which provides that authorised undertakers or specified companies may "by means of electric mains make a connection" between any two or more of their areas of supply or between any such area and a generating station, empowers such undertakers or companies to lay more than one connecting main between any two of their areas. Battersea Borough Council v. County of London Electric Supply Co., 82 L. Contract—Construction—Agreement to Grant Licence to Take Water—Rent Varying with Certain Contingencies.]—In an agreement for a licence to take water from a river within defined limits for the purpose of constructing works and generating and supplying electricity, the respondent company agreed to pay a fixed rental of fifteen thousand dollars a year, and a rental varying in amount by reference to the electricity generated and used and sold or disposed of by the respondent company:—Held, that in ascertaining the amount of the varying rent the true standard was the highest amount or quantity of electricity generated and used and sold or disposed of which the accommodation and facilities afforded enabled the respondents to attain, and remained the standard until a higher point was reached. Att.-Gen. for Ontario v. Canadian Niagara Power Co., 82 L. J. P.C. 18; [1912] A.C. 852; 107 L. T. 629—P.C.

Construction and Effect of Agreement between Two Electric Supply Companies.]—By the London Electric Supply Act, 1908, electrical supply companies were authorised to enter into and carry into effect, with the approval of the Board of Trade, any agreement for mutual assistance or for association with each other in regard to (inter alia) the giving and taking of a supply of electrical energy and the distribution and supply of the same so taken and for the management and working of any part of their undertakings. Two electrical supply companies obtained statutory powers to supply electrical energy within the City of Westminster, and at the expiration of a certain period the City of Westminster had the right to acquire the undertakings of the respective companies. One of the two companies (the respondents) supplied within the district of their operations electricity on the system of continuous current; the other company (the appellants) supplied electricity on the principle of alternating current. In 1910 an agreement was come to by which the respondent company was to manage the appellants' undertaking in the Westminster area, receiving and retaining all amounts due for energy consumed by the appellants' customers therein. The appellants were to supply the respondents all alternating current required by the appellants' customers in Westminster. The respondents were to pay to the appellants a fixed annual sum until the year 1931, when the undertakings of both parties might be acquired by the London County Council, and in the event of the purchase price of the appellants' undertaking being less than a certain sum the respondents were to make up the deficiency. The question between the parties was—first, whether on the construction of that agreement, in view of the powers granted by the Electric Lighting Acts, the respondents were entitled to reduce the working of the appellants' undertaking by soliciting persons, who were entitled to apply and did apply to the appellants to supply them with electricity, to take their supply from the respondents instead; and secondly, whether under the terms of the appellants' Provisional Order, 1889, the respondents were entitled to claim a supply from the appellants, and having acquired the right to manage the appellants' undertaking as well as their own had an option to dictate to consumers which supply they should have:—Held, that the respondents were under a statutory obligation so to manage the appellants' undertaking as not to lessen its receipts nor interfere with the consumers' right to be supplied with alternating current; and further that they could do nothing which would be likely to decrease the value of the appellants' undertaking whenever it should be acquired by the City of Westminster, although they had contracted with the appellants that if the purchase price paid was below a certain sum they should be answerable to make up the price paid by the City of Westminster to that sum. London Electric Supply Corporation v. Westminster Electric Supply Corporation, 11 L. G. R. 1046—H.L. (E.)

Exclusive Right of Company to Supply Electrical Energy in Urban District—Tramways—Inclusion of District in Adjoining City.]—By an Electric Lighting Order of 1899 the W. Council obtained power to supply electrical energy in their own district. In 1900 the council agreed with a company to take their supply of energy from the company for a period of ten years ending August 6, 1910. In 1902 the corporation of N. agreed with the council to take energy for its tramways in the W. district from the council through the company during the period of ten years; and that afterwards (clause 4) it would take the energy from "the council or their contractors," and would not itself supply it without the consent of the council. In 1903 the council assigned to the company their undertaking under the 1899 Order, with the benefit of the 1902 agreement, and undertook to appoint the company to be the council's contractor and to do anything necessary to enable the company to enjoy the full benefit of clause 4 of the 1902 agreement. Clause 9 of the deed of assignment provided that the council should not sanction or consent to the taking of any steps by any person or body other than the company with the object (inter alia) of supplying electricity in the council's district, and the clause then proceeded: "But nothing in this clause shall prevent the Council after the sixth day of August, 1910, entering into any agreement with the N. Corporation in respect of the laying or placing of electric mains and lines and the transmission and user of energy in connection with their tramways undertaking." By the Newcastle-upon-Tyne (Extension) Order, 1904, confirmed by a Provisional Order Confirmation Act of that year, the boundaries of N. were enlarged so as to include the district of W.; and it was provided that "all the property, powers, duties, and liabilities" attaching to the Council under the 1899 Order should be transferred to the corporation. As from August 6, 1910, the corporation declined to take from the company electricity for its tramways in the former district of the council:—Held, on the construction of the documents, that the proviso to clause 9 of the deed of 1903 only reserved to the council a right to consent as to "the transmission and user" of the electricity, but not as to its "supply"; and that, in view of the assignment of the benefit of the 1902 agreement, neither the council nor the corporation as their successors, could give the consent required by clause 4 of the 1903 agreement. And therefore that the corporation was bound to take from the company the energy for its tramways in the former district of W., and that an injunction must go to restrain the corporation from itself supplying such energy. Newcastle-upon-Tyne Electric Supply Co. v. Newcastle-upon-Tyne Corporation, 9 L. Negligence—Electrical Supply in Street—Escape of Electric Spark into Electric Chamber—Escape of Gas from Main—Leakage of Gas into Electric Chamber—Explosion—Injury to Foot Passenger—Liability of Electrical Undertaker.]—The principle enunciated in Rylands v. Fletcher (37 L. J. Ex. 161; L. R. 3 H.L. 330), that a person who brings into being, or collects on his premises, an agent likely to do damage if it escapes, is liable for the consequences of such escape, does not apply where, in the absence of negligence or nuisance, the consequences are the result of a combination between that agent and another agent over which the owner or possessor of the first agent has no control. Goodbody v. Poplar Borough Council, 84 L. J. K.B. 1230; 79 J. P. 218; 13 L. G. R. 166—D.

A local authority, authorised under the Electric Lighting Acts to supply electricity within their district, had, as part of their system, a brick-built chamber under the pavement of a street within their district, inclosing a box containing electric cables or wires and a fusing apparatus which acted as a kind of safety valve whenever the electric current was overloaded. The construction of the chamber and box was that generally adopted by suppliers of electricity. When the "fusing" took place, electric sparks were emitted from the "fuse." Near the chamber were the gas mains of two gas companies, and gas frequently escaped from the mains and found its way into the chamber. This chamber was periodically examined, but it was found impossible to prevent the gas entering therein. An explosion occurred in this chamber, caused by a spark from the fusing (which took place at the time) coming into contact with a mixture of air and gas in the chamber, with the result that the plaintiff, who was walking on the pavement close to the chamber, was injured. In an action brought by him against the local authority for damages for personal injuries, the jury found, in answer to questions put to them by the County Court Judge with the consent of both parties, that the chamber did not constitute a nuisance, and that the defendants were not guilty of negligence in having the chamber improperly constructed, and they assessed the damages (if recoverable) at 25*l*. The Judge entered judgment for the defendants:—Held, on appeal, that his decision was right. Ib.

Equitable Estate in Fee—No Words of Inheritance—Estate for Life or in Fee-simple—Intention.]—A limitation in a deed of an equitable estate without words of limitation may confer the equitable fee where the intention to do so appears from the deed. Cross's Trust, In re; Cross v. Cross, [1915] 1 Ir. R. 304—M.R.

By deed, reciting that C. had agreed, in consideration of B. paying off certain debts of C., to convey certain lands held in fee-farm to a trustee in trust for B. and his wife during their lives, with remainder to C. and his wife during their lives, with remainder, subject to a sum of 600*l*. charged in favour of the eldest son of C. and his issue, in trust for the children of C. and his wife as he should appoint, and in default of appointment for all the children save the eldest son, C. conveyed the lands unto, and to the use of, a trustee and his heirs upon the trusts so agreed upon, the ultimate trust being for the children of C. as he, or in default his wife, should appoint, and in default of such appointment "then to such issue save the eldest son, share and share alike." The lands were not of very great value:—Held, that there was sufficient evidence on the face of the instrument to shew that it was the intention of the settlor to dispose of his whole estate, and that the younger children, notwithstanding the absence of words of inheritance in the limitation to them in default of appointment, took an equitable estate in fee-simple, as tenants in common in equal shares, in the lands. Tringham's Trusts (73 L. Estate for Life and Ultimate Remainder in Fee—Contingent Remainder Interposed—Merger of Life Estate and Remainder—Extinguishment of Charge on Inheritance.]—A., by her mother's will, was given a life estate in realty, which, subject thereto, was to be settled on her issue in such way as she might desire. In default of issue she was given a general power of appointment with remainder to herself in fee. A., at the time of her mother's death, was entitled to a charge on the estate. She died at the age of seventy without having been married, and without having done any act indicating a desire to keep the charge alive:—Held, that A. took under the will an estate in fee, subject to be re-opened if the contingent estate to the issue became vested in interest, and that the charge had become extinguished. Toppin's Estate, In re, [1915] 1 Ir. R. 198—Ross, J.

Devise to Widow for Life—Remainder to Son—Executory Gift over on Death of Son—Conveyance of Life Interest to Son—Death of Son in Lifetime of his Mother.]—A testator devised a farm to his widow for life, with remainder to his son in fee, with an executory gift over in case his son died unmarried in the lifetime of his mother. The widow conveyed her life interest to her son, who afterwards died unmarried in the lifetime of his mother: —Held, that the fact that the executory gift over took effect before the determination of the life interest did not prevent a merger, and that there had been a merger both at law and in equity. Attkins, In re; Life v. Attkins, 83 L. Barring of Estate Tail—Common Recovery—Tenant to the Præcipe.]—In order that a common recovery should have been effective to bar an estate tail, the tenant to the præcipe must have been seised of the lands for an estate of freehold, either by right or by wrong. The presumption of law is that seisin follows the title, and the Court will not presume disseisin of a tenant for life for the purpose of upholding a recovery purporting to have been suffered by a tenant in tail in remainder. Witham v. Notley, [1913] 2 Ir. Grant by Settlor of Rentcharge de Novo to Trustee and his Heirs in Trust for Persons in Tail—Ultimate Remainder to Use of Settlor to Attend Inheritance—Effect of Barring Entail.]—A, the tenant in fee-simple of certain lands, granted a rentcharge issuable out of the lands to a trustee and his heirs upon trust for successive tenants in tail, with ultimate remainder to the use of A, his heirs and assigns, to attend upon the inheritance or be disposed of as A, his heirs and assigns, should think proper:—Held, that an equitable tenant in tail in possession could, by a valid disentailing assurance, bar the subsequent limitations, and thereby acquire for himself an absolute equitable estate in fee-simple in a perpetual rentcharge. Chaplin v. Chaplin (3 P. Wms. 229) and Drew v. Barry (Ir. R. 8 Eq. 260) considered. Franks's Estate, In re, [1915] 1 Ir. R. 387—C.A.

Two tenants in tail of equitable rentcharges, which had been granted to them de novo without remainders over, executed a disentailing deed:—Held, that the disentailing deed created merely a base fee in each rentcharge determinable on failure of the issue in tail. Chaplin v. Chaplin (3 P. Wms. 229) applied. Franks's Estate, In re (supra), distinguished. Pinkerton v. Pratt, [1915] 1 Ir. R. 406—Barton, J.

Joint Tenancy—Severance.]—Semble, the demise by three joint tenants to one of themselves severs the joint tenancy during the term, and the lessee is entitled to two-thirds of the land by virtue of the lease, remaining seised of his original one-third for his original estate in fee. Napier v. Williams, 80 L. Implication of Equitable Assignment of a Share of an Estate.]—If A executes an equitable assignment of his reversionary interest under the will of B, and such reversionary interest is an interest as joint tenant with others expectant on the death of the then tenant for life, such assignment will operate by implication to create a severance of the joint tenancy, for it could not have been the intention of the parties thereto that the security should be void if A should predecease any of the joint tenants in reversion. Sharer, In re; Abbott v. Sharer, 57 S. Action to Recover Money Lent—Writ Issued before Two Instalments Due—Objection not taken on Application for Judgment under Order XIV.]—The plaintiffs sued the defendant to recover the amount of three promissory notes signed by him, amounting in all to 960*l*. By mistake, the writ was issued before the second and third notes were due. A summons for judgment under Order XIV. was taken out, on the hearing of which the defendant was represented by a solicitor who did not raise the defect in the writ in the defence. —— Action for Criminal Conversation—Judgment that Action not Maintainable—Subsequent Ordinance Restoring Jurisdiction in Action for Criminal Conversation—New Action after Ordinance on Same Facts.] — The respondent in 1907 brought an action in Hong-Kong against the appellant for criminal conversation. That action was dismissed on the ground that by the effect of certain ordinances such actions had been abolished in Hong-Kong. In 1908 a new ordinance was promulgated restoring the jurisdiction of the Hong-Kong Courts in such actions, and that ordinance had a retro-active effect to the extent of enabling actions to be brought in respect of criminal conversation during the period when the right of action in such cases had ceased to exist in the colony. After the promulgation of the new ordinance the respondent commenced a fresh action against the appellant in respect of the same acts of misconduct as he had alleged in the former action. The appellant pleaded res judicata :—Held, that the judgment in the first action brought by the respondent was a final determination of the rights of the parties; that the ordinary principle that a man was not to be vexed twice for the same alleged cause of action applied, unless it was excluded by the Legislature in unmistakable terms; and that there was nothing in the new ordinance to indicate that the Legislature intended not merely to alter the law, but to alter it so as to deprive the appellant of the subsisting judgment in his favour. Lemm v. Mitchell, 81 L. —— Desertion — Dismissal of Summons — Adjournment — Second Summons for same Cause of Complaint—Res Judicata.]—A wife, whose summons against her husband for desertion under the Summary Jurisdiction (Married Women) Act, 1895, has been dismissed, cannot obtain an order on a second summons for the same cause of complaint. It is immaterial that desertion is a continuing offence: its commencement must be referable to some particular date, and if the evidence of it is incomplete or unavailable on the return of a summons complaining of it, the wife should apply for, and be allowed, an adjournment for the purpose of completing her case. When the complaint has been once disposed of by the Justices, the matter is res judicata. Stokes v. Stokes, 80 L. J. P. 142; [1911] P. 195; 105 L. T. 416; 75 J. P. 502; 55 S. J. 690; 27 T. L. R. 553—D.

Bequest to Chapel Building Fund—Reversionary Bequest to Same—Immediate Bequest Held Invalid in 1876 under then Existing Statute of Mortmain—Claim to Reversionary Bequest—Res Judicata.]—A will proved in 1874 gave an immediate legacy of 200*l.* to a chapel building fund, and also a reversionary bequest, payable after the death or re-marriage of the testator's widow. The executors believed that these legacies transgressed the then operative Statutes of Mortmain, and an order was made in chambers, dated May 8, 1876, directing that the 200*l.* should fall into the residue. The testator's widow died in 1909 :—Held, that the representatives of the building fund were entitled to the reversionary bequest, inasmuch as the fund had other objects than those involving the purchase of land, to which the money might be applied. Held, further, that the order of 1876 did not constitute an estoppel by res judicata, as such order had been in respect of another bequest, and had been based on a belief which was erroneous. Surfleet's Estate, In re; Rawlings v. Smith, 105 L. B. BY DEED.

Implied Right of Way—Deed—Alteration of Date—Parcels—Plan.]—A lessor granted a lease of certain plots of land on which had been erected certain then nearly finished houses. The grant was defined by reference to a plan in the margin, which shewed a narrow strip of ground, coloured brown, at the rear of the plots, and running along other land that belonged to the lessor, but was not included in the lease. The lease contained no express grant of any right of way along this strip, nor indeed further reference to it; but the evidence shewed that the use of the strip was essential to the tenants of the new houses for the convenient ingress of coal and manure, and for the egress of garden rubbish. At the time of the original granting of the lease the dates of the day and month were left in blank, but subsequently there was an alteration of the year (with the consent of all parties), and the blanks were also filled in. At the date of the original granting of the lease the plots were not yet fenced on the side towards the strip; but at the time of the alteration they were so fenced, and the position was indicated for gates communicating between the plots and the strip :—Held, that the alteration of the lease did not avoid it, and that the lessor was estopped from shewing that the date inserted by himself was not the date from which the demise operated, so as to prevent any one claiming under the lease from relying upon the circumstances existing at the date that the lease finally bore. Held, further, that under those circumstances, an implied right of way over the strip in question had passed under the lease from the lessor to the lessee. Rudd v. Bowles, 81 L. J. Ch. 277; [1912] 2 Ch. 60; 105 L. T. 864—Neville, J.

By Recital—Applicability of Doctrine to Easement.]—On May 7, 1897, W. sold a plot of land, on which was situated a cottage, to his wife, and by the deed effecting the sale granted to her, her heirs and assigns, a right of way over an adjoining plot of land belonging to him. By a deed dated May 8, 1897, Mrs. W. mortgaged the cottage, and on May 25, 1907, whilst the mortgage was still in force, W. sold the adjoining plot of land to the plaintiff, and with a view to extinguishing the right of way Mrs. W. joined in the deed of conveyance. The deed contained a recital to the effect that under and by virtue of the deed of conveyance to her of May 7, 1897, she was entitled to the right of way for herself, her heirs and assigns, and that it had been agreed for her to join in the deed of conveyance to the plaintiff for the purpose of releasing the hereditament thereby conveyed from such right of way. The mortgagees were not parties to the deed, and the mortgage was not recited or referred to in it. Mrs. W. died on December 10, 1907, and W. died on November 18, 1909, the second defendant R. being the executor of both. After the death of W. and his wife the mortgagees were paid off, and the mortgage premises reconveyed to R. by a deed of March 14, 1910. By a further deed of March 25, 1910, R. conveyed the cottage to the defendants Mr. and Mrs. M., and by the same deed granted to them the same right of way over the plaintiff's land which had been released by Mrs. W., the release not being mentioned in the deed, and none of the defendants having notice of it. The defendants Mr. and Mrs. M. claimed to have and use the right of way:—Held, that they had no such right; that the doctrine of estoppel by recital applied to the case of an easement, and that the words of the recital in the deed of May 25, 1907, was sufficiently precise and particular to estop Mrs. W. and her successors in title from asserting that the right of way was not extinguished, and that the plaintiff was accordingly entitled to maintain an action of trespass. Poulton v. Moore, 84 L. J. K.B. 462; [1915] 1 K.B. 400; 112 L. T. 202; 31 T. L. R. 43—C.A.

—— Deviation from Statutory Form—Joinder of Wife of Grantor.]—A husband and wife were parties to a bill of sale and joined in executing it, but the wife did not purport to grant the chattels, the subject of the bill of sale, the husband alone actually assigning those chattels. The bill of sale also contained recitals stating how the liability, in respect of which the security was given, arose:—Held, that the bill of sale was valid, as the joining of the wife was mere surplusage, and did not give the bill of sale a legal consequence other than that which would attach to it if drawn in the form required by the Bills of Sale Act (1878) Amendment Act, 1882, s. 9, and schedule, and that it would not prevent a borrower understanding the nature of the security, nor a creditor, searching the register, understanding the position of the borrower; and further, that the recitals could not operate against the wife by way of estoppel, as she had not entered into any contract. Brandon Hill, Lim. v. Lane, 84 L. J. K.B. 347; [1915] 1 K.B. 250; 112 L. T. 346; 59 S. J. 75—D.

See also Vol. VI. 444, 1978.

Owner by Estoppel.]—The secretary of a club put a caretaker into possession of a cottage on grounds belonging to the club, the legal estate in which was vested in trustees for the club:—Held, that the secretary was owner by estoppel and was also the known agent of the actual owners, and as such was entitled to take summary proceedings for recovery of the premises after reasonable notice to the caretaker to give up possession. Rex v. Swifte, [1913] 2 Ir. R. 113—C.A.

Invalid Exercise of Power to Appoint by Will—Entry of Tenant for Life under the Will—Acquisition of Statutory Title—Position of Remainderman.]—Where a person enters as tenant for life under a will, which purports to be an exercise of a power to appoint lands, whether rightfully as a proper appointee or wrongfully under a void appointment, he is not estopped from saying as against the remainderman that the devise over to him is void as being an invalid exercise of the power. Paine v. Jones (43 L. Misrepresentation as to Character of Document—Signature to Document Obtained by Misrepresentation — Document Amounting to Guarantee—Defence to Action on Guarantee.]—One R., a customer of the plaintiffs, who were bankers, having overdrawn his account, was pressed by them to give a guarantee for a larger sum than was secured by a guarantee which they then held. R. thereupon went to the defendant, and, having produced a paper, induced him to sign it upon the misrepresentation that it was an insurance paper, whereas it was a guarantee of R.'s account at the bank up to a certain amount. R. had so folded the paper that only the space for the defendant's signature was visible. Subsequently R., having fraudulently affixed the name of a certain person as attesting witness, gave the paper to the plaintiffs, who thereupon allowed

R. to increase his overdraft. In an action against the defendant as guarantor the jury found that the defendant was induced to sign the guarantee by R.'s fraud; that he did not know that the document he signed was a guarantee; and that he was negligent in signing the document:—Held, that in the circumstances the finding of negligence on the part of the defendant in signing the document was immaterial, and that the defendant, not being prevented by that finding from setting up the defence that the signature on the document sued on by the plaintiffs was not his signature by reason of its having been obtained by the misrepresentation of R, was entitled to judgment. Foster v. Mackinnon (38 L. J. C.P. 310; L. R. 4 C.P. 704) considered. Carlisle and Cumberland Banking Co. v. Bragg, 80 L. J. K.B. 472; [1911] 1 K.B. 489; 104 L. T. 121—C.A.

Pledge of Certificates—Blank Transfer.]—The plaintiff employed a firm of stockbrokers to buy for him shares in a Colonial railway, and the brokers did so. The shares were registered in the name of one H., the certificates were in his name, and the transfers on the back had been signed by him in blank. On the brokers' suggestion the plaintiff left the certificates with them and subsequently consented to the shares being put into other names. The brokers deposited the shares with the defendant bank as security for loans, and at the broker's request the shares were put in the names of the bank's nominees. The defendant bank took the shares in good faith. In an action by the plaintiff against the defendant bank to recover the share certificates,—Held, that the bank was not put upon enquiry by the mere fact of the brokers depositing the shares as security for their own account, that the transfer from H.'s name was not an intimation to the bank that the shares did not belong to the brokers and did not put the bank upon enquiry, that the principle of Colonial Bank v. Cady (60 L. J. Ch. 131; 15 App. Cas. 267), that any one who signs a transfer on a certificate in blank and hands it to another person knows that third persons would think that that person had authority to deal with it, extends to a person who without having had such a certificate in his possession leaves it in the hands of his broker, and that therefore the plaintiff was estopped from recovering the certificates from the defendants. Fuller v. Glyn, Mills, Currie & Co., 83 L. Statements by Deceased against Interest.]—In a probate suit it was alleged that the testatrix destroyed her will at a time when she was not of sound mind, memory, or understanding. Under the will which had been destroyed her husband took a life interest in her estate, whereas under an ante-nuptial settlement he was, in the events that had happened, entitled absolutely to her estate:—Held, that a statement by the husband, who had died before the suit was brought, that he did not think the testatrix was of sound mind when she destroyed her will, was admissible in evidence as being in disparagement of his own title by limiting it to a life estate. Fawke v. Miles, 27 T. L. R. 202—Evans, P.

Statements by Deceased as to Paternity of Posthumous Illegitimate Child.]—In proceedings taken under the Workmen's Compensation Act, 1906, on behalf of the posthumous illegitimate child of a workman who was killed by an accident, statements made by the deceased man to the effect that he admitted that he was the father of the child, and would marry the mother before its birth, and would provide a home for her, are admissible in evidence on the issues of paternity and dependence. Lloyd v. Powell Duffryn Steam Coal Co., 83 L. Report by Agent—Death of Agent—Admissibility of Report—Shares—Action for Rescission on Ground of Misrepresentation in Prospectus.]—In an action for rescission of a contract to take shares in a company on the ground of misrepresentations contained in the prospectus, the plaintiff tendered as evidence of the misrepresentations a confidential report as to the property in question made to the company by an agent since deceased. The report had not been drawn up for more than a month after the inspection of the property by the agent had taken place:—Held, that the report, not having been made contemporaneously with the inspection by the agent, was not admissible in evidence. Djambi (Sumatra)

Duty of Historian.]—When a matter of history which is not of general importance is in issue, a statement bearing on the point in issue made by a particular person (since deceased) under no duty to make it is not admissible unless the statement purported to be made from reputation. As to whether or not a church is a parish church is not a matter of general importance. Fowke v. Berrington (No. 1), 83 L. J. Ch. 820; [1914] 2 Ch. 308; 111 L. T. 440; 58 S. J. 379—Astbury, J.

a. Public, Official and other Documents.

Regulations for Territorial Force.]—The Regulations for the Territorial Force and for County Associations fall within section 163 of the Army Act, 1881 (as amended by the Army Annual Acts to 1911), and may accordingly be proved by production of a copy purporting to be printed by a Government printer, without other evidence; but the Court does not take judicial notice of the Regulations. Todd v. Anderson, [1912] S. C. (J.) 105—Ct. of Just.

Post Office—Telegrams—Times of Delivery — Written Records — Admissibility.] — The documents kept by the Post Office shewing the times of the receipt and delivery of telegrams are not admissible in evidence as public records, inasmuch as they are kept only a short time, are not accessible to the public, are not the result of a public enquiry, and do not deal with a general public right, but are merely kept for the purpose of regulating the pay and the work of Post Office servants. Heyne v. Fischel & Co., 110 L. T. 264; 30 T. L. R. 190—Pickford, J.

Tithe Map.]—A tithe map certified by the Tithe Commissioners as a first-class map is not admissible as evidence of the extent of a public right, though it may be evidence that at the date the map was made certain land was not inclosed or was not titheable. Copestake v. West Sussex County Council, 80 L. Ancient Maps—Public Highways—Reputation.]—Ancient maps produced from the custody of the British Museum and Guildhall Library, there being no evidence that the map makers were competent or had any special duty to perform in making the maps or that the maps had been received and acted on by the public, are not admissible as evidence of reputation of public highways. Att.-Gen. v. Horner (No. 2), 82 L. J. Ch. 339; [1913] 2 Ch. 140; 108 L. T. 609; 77 J. P. 257; 11 L. G. R. 784; 57 S. J. 498; 29 T. L. R. 451—C.A.

P. 242) that the competence of the map maker goes more to the weight of the evidence than to its admissibility disapproved of. Statement of Cave, J., in Reg. v. Berger (63 L. J. Q.B. 529; [1894] 1 Q.B. 823), that a map if made by one of the public cannot be excluded on a question of highway, considered too wide. Ib.

Ordnance Survey Map.] — An Ordnance survey map of 1841 held admissible to shew what physical features the persons employed to make the survey did or did not see at the time of the survey. Att.-Gen. v. Meyrick, 79 J. P. 515—Scrutton, J.

Certificate of Conviction.]—Where a convicted felon, or the personal representative of a convicted murderer who has been executed, brings any civil proceedings to establish claims or to enforce rights which result to the felon or to the convicted testator from his own crime, the conviction is admissible in evidence, not merely as proof of the conviction, but also as presumptive proof of the commission of the crime. Crippen, In the goods of, 80 L. Non-parochial Registers—Society of Friends —Entries Prior to 1837—Extracts from Digest — Copies.] — The Non-parochial Registers Act, 1840, provides (section 6) that all registers deposited in the General Register Office by virtue of that Act shall be deemed to be in legal custody, and (section 9) that certified copies thereof under the seal of the office shall be receivable in evidence. In 1840 the registers of the Society of Friends, prior to 1837, were duly deposited in accordance with that Act, but a digest of all births, deaths, and marriages recorded therein was retained at the central office of the society:—Held, that the registers were only admissible in evidence by virtue of the above Act and in the manner there provided: and that extracts from the digest relating to births, deaths, and marriages before 1837, certified by the recording clerk of the society, were inadmissible. Woodward, In re: Kenway v. Kidd, 82 L. Bankers' Books—Copy made by Person not an Official of Bank—"Some person."]—The words "some person" in section 5 of the Bankers' Books Evidence Act, 1879, are not limited to a partner or officer of a bank; they include any person who has examined the copy of the books which it is proposed to give in evidence with the books themselves. Rex v. Albutt, 75 J. P. 112—C.C.A.

—— Application for Inspection in Case of Criminal Libel.]—In proceedings for criminal libel, in which they proposed to put in a plea of justification, the defendants applied for an order under the Bankers' Books Evidence Act, 1879, to inspect the banking account of the person they were alleged to have libelled:—Held, that an order would not be made in those circumstances. Rex v. Bono, 29 T. L. R. 635—D.

b. Parol Evidence as to Documents.

To Vary the Effect of a Deed of Sale.]—Under section 92 of the Indian Evidence Act extrinsic evidence is admissible to shew that a deed which was in form a deed of sale with a receipt for the consideration was in reality intended to operate as a deed of gift. Hanif-un-nisa v. Faiz-un-nisa, L. Promissory Note Given by Makers in Payment for Goods—Note Signed by Indorser as Surety—Admissibility of Oral Agreement that Surety was not to be Liable if Goods not up to Sample — Liability of Surety.] — The defendant company bought certain leather goods from the plaintiffs and gave the plaintiffs in payment therefor a promissory note of which they were the makers, and which the defendant D. at the request of the plaintiffs indorsed as surety. The plaintiffs delivered the goods to the defendant company, who kept them. The plaintiffs subsequently sued the defendant company as the makers, and the defendant D. as the indorser of the promissory note. The defendant company did not appear at the trial, but the defendant D. pleaded that he signed the note as surety, and proved an oral agreement with the plaintiffs, contemporaneous with the promissory note, that if the goods when received by the defendant company should not be equal to sample, he was not to be called upon to pay the promissory note. He also proved that the goods were in fact not equal to sample:—Held, that evidence of the oral agreement relied upon by D. was not admissible, as it was not an agreement suspending the coming into force of the contract contained in the promissory note, but was an agreement in defeasance of that contract, and that therefore the defendant D. was liable on the promissory note. Hitchings and Coulthurst Co. v. Northern Leather Co. of America, 83 L. Documents—Production of Partnership Deed by One of Several Partners.]—Each of several members of a firm signed a copy of the partnership deed and each partner retained a copy of the deed. Bundle of Copy Correspondence—Taken as Put in—Agreement by Parties—Indorsement on Bundle.]—Where at the trial parties agree that a bundle of copy correspondence shall be taken as put in, saving all just exceptions, it is desirable that the agreement should be indorsed on the bundle and signed by the parties or their solicitors. The Registrar ought not to be called upon to say whether the whole of the bundle is put in. Perry v. Hessin, 56 S. J. 345—Eve, J.

Res inter Alios Acta—Frauds in other Case as Evidence of Systematic Course of Dealing.]—An action was brought by a life insurance company claiming to have a policy set aside on the ground of fraud. There was no averment in the statement of claim that the alleged fraud was part of a fraudulent system, nor any allegation that the defendant had been a party to any similar acts of fraud. At the trial it was proposed, without previous notice to the defendant, to adduce evidence connected with the effecting of other policies by the defendant under similar fraudulent circumstances as evidence of a system of fraud:—Held, that the evidence of the similar frauds would be admissible if the substance of the allegation that the fraud was part of a system were stated in the statement of claim. Edinburgh Life Assurance Co. v. Y., [1911] 1 Ir. Examination at Request of Foreign Court—Production of Documents—Documents in Possession of Servant — No Instructions from Master as to Production—Right of Servant to Refuse to Produce — Attachment.] — Pursuant to letters rogatory addressed to it by a foreign Court in an action pending in that Court, the English Court made an order under the Foreign Tribunals Evidence Act, 1856, requiring a witness who was resident within the jurisdiction of the latter Court to attend before an examiner to be examined and to produce certain documents alleged to be relevant. The witness was a salaried managing clerk in the employment of an English firm, and the documents were the property of the firm, and were only in the possession, custody, or control of the witness as such managing clerk. The witness had never received from the firm any instructions either to produce the documents or not to produce them. At a previous examination held by agreement between the parties the witness had voluntarily produced some of the documents and promised to produce others, and had answered some questions regarding them; but at the examination held pursuant to the order of the Court he refused to produce the documents or to answer any questions regarding them. The plaintiffs in the action obtained an order for the issue of a writ of attachment against the witness for his refusal to comply with the order for examination and production:—Held (Kennedy, L.J., dissenting), that the witness, in the absence of instructions from his employers in that behalf, could not without violating his duty towards his employers, produce the documents and answer the questions, and was therefore entitled to refuse to do so, and consequently that the order for his attachment should be set aside. Eccles v. Louisville and Nashville Railroad Co., 81 L. Privilege of Witness—Preliminary Examination by Solicitor.]—The preliminary examination of a witness by a solicitor is within the same privilege as that which the witness would have if he had said the same thing in his sworn testimony in Court. Beresford v. White, 58 S. Affidavit Sworn before Solicitor of any of the Parties to the Proceeding—Deed of Arrangement—Validity of Registration.]—A commissioner for oaths who is acting as solicitor for any of the parties on the registration of a deed of arrangement under the Deeds of Arrangement Act, 1887, is disabled by the Commissioners for Oaths Act, 1889, s. 1, sub-s. 3, from administering an oath to the debtor and from taking the debtor's affidavit mentioned in section 6 of the Deeds of Arrangement Act, 1887; and inasmuch as the filing of such affidavit is an essential constituent of a valid registration, the fact that the affidavit was sworn before a commissioner acting as solicitor for any of the parties is not an irregularity which is cured by registration, but on the contrary renders the registration bad and the deed void. Baker v. Ambrose (65 L. Seizure under Writ—Writ Set Aside—Liability of Treasury Solicitor in Trespass.]—The plaintiff's goods were seized under a writ of extent, which was subsequently set aside on the ground that the affidavit upon which the fiat of the Judge was obtained for the issue of the writ was defective in not alleging that the plaintiff was insolvent. In an action against the defendants—the Treasury Solicitor and his assistants—for the trespass to the plaintiff's goods by their seizure under the writ,—Held, that as there was a judicial determination interposed between the filing of the affidavit upon which the writ was obtained and the issue of the writ, and as such issue was in consequence of that interposition, the defendants were protected from liability. Pridgeon v. Mellor, 28 T. Chattels — Equitable Interest — Vesting of Whole Interest—Rights of Creditor.]—Though as a general rule a judgment creditor may not be entitled under a writ of fi. fa. to seize goods which are only at the equitable disposition of the judgment debtor, yet where the whole of the beneficial interest in the chattels is vested in the judgment debtor, the trust is no defence to an execution at the instance of the judgment creditor. Stevens v. Hince, 110 L. T. 935; 58 S. J. 434; 30 T. L. R. 419—Bailhache, J.

Sheriff's Fees—Execution Withdrawn under Order of Court — Liability of Execution Creditor.]—By the Order as to Fees made under section 20, sub-section 2 of the Sheriffs Act, 1887, where an execution is withdrawn, satisfied, or stopped, the fees under the Order are to be paid "by the person issuing the execution, or the person at whose instance the sale is stopped, as the case may be. . . ." The defendants, having obtained a judgment against a certain company, issued a writ of fi. fa., under which the sheriff seized the goods of the company. On the day on which the sheriff went into possession a resolution to wind up the company voluntarily had been passed, and a summons was afterwards issued by the liquidator asking that the defendants should be restrained from selling the goods. An order was made in accordance with the summons, and the sheriff was subsequently ordered to withdraw. He thereupon brought an action in the County Court to recover from the defendants the amount of his fees, but the County Court Judge gave judgment for part only of the fees claimed :—Held, that, under the law as existing at the time when the Order as to fees was made, the execution creditors would, under the circumstances, have been liable to pay the sheriff's fees; that the Order did not affect such liability; and that the sheriff was therefore entitled to judgment for the full amount of his claim. Montague v. Davies, Benachi & Co., 80 L. C. ELEGIT.

Judgment Creditor—Land in Mortgage—Registration of Writ or Order Affecting the Land—Arrangement between Debtor and Tenant—Subsequent Appointment of Receiver.]—Under the Judgments Act, 1838, s. 13, and the Land Charges Act, 1900, s. 2, a judgment creditor obtains a charge on the land of the judgment debtor upon the registration of a writ of elegit under section 5 of the Land Charges Registration and Searches Act, 1888, even though the judgment debtor's interest in the land is not of a nature which is capable of being extended under a writ of elegit :—So held by Lord Cozens-Hardy, M.R., and Swinfen Eady, L.J. (Kennedy, L.J., dissenting). Ashburton (Lord) v. Nocton, 84 L. J. Ch. 193; [1915] 1 Ch. 274; 111 L. T. 895; 59 S. J. 145; 31 T. L. R. 122—C.A.

After the registration by a judgment creditor of writs of elegit, but before the appointment of a receiver, the judgment debtor, whose land was subject to a legal mortgage, entered into an arrangement with a tenant by which the tenant paid him rent in advance. The judgment creditor obtained the appointment of a receiver before the rent became due. The tenant made the arrangement bona fide and without notice of the judgment creditor's claim :—Held (Kennedy, L.J., dissenting), that the arrangement was not binding on the judgment creditor, and that he was entitled to payment of the rent by the tenant. Ib.

D. SEQUESTRATION.

Liability of Sequestrators for Costs.]—A writ of sequestration issued to enforce an order of Court, the defendants being the sequestrators. Under the writ they claimed certain property which had been purchased by the plaintiff, they alleging fraud and mala fides in the plaintiff. On the trial of an issue the jury found in favour of the plaintiff :—Held, that although the defendants, as sequestrators, had acted under the direction of the Court, that did not justify them in taking action as to property to which they had no right, and therefore that they were liable for the costs of the action. Wiebalck v. Told, 29 T. Rent of House and Furniture—Apportionment—Lump Sum Payable to Debtor's Mortgagee—Creditor Entitled to have Rent of Furniture Apportioned.]—A mortgagor and mortgagee of houses joined in making a lease of the houses and of furniture in them which belonged to the mortgagor at an inclusive rent payable to the mortgagor until the mortgagee should give notice to the contrary. The mortgagee entered into receipts of the rents, and a judgment creditor of the mortgagor obtained the appointment of a receiver of the interest of the mortgagor in the rent reserved by the lease. The mortgagor was under covenant not to remove the furniture from the houses without the mortgagee's consent :—Held, that the creditor was entitled to have the rent apportioned as between the houses and the furniture, so that the receiver could recover the amount apportioned to the furniture, and that it must be referred to a Master to make the apportionment. Hoare v. Hove Bungalows, 56 S. J. 686—C.A.

Sheriff Unable to Identify Property.]—The Court has no jurisdiction to appoint a receiver by way of so-called equitable execution in aid of a judgment at law, except in cases where, by reason of the nature of the property, execution cannot be levied in the ordinary way, and in which the Court of Chancery would, before the Judicature Act, 1873, have had jurisdiction to make the order. Harris v. Beauchamp (63 L. EXECUTOR AND ADMINISTRATOR.

I. TITLE OF EXECUTOR OR ADMINISTRATOR.

Executor de Son Tort—Liability—Repairing Covenant in Lease — Death of Assignee Intestate.]—The plaintiffs sued the defendant as executor de son tort for breaches of covenant in a lease of which they were the lessors and the defendant's mother had been assignee. The defendant's mother died in 1910 intestate. No letters of administration were taken out. From that date onwards the defendant, who had collected the rents in his mother's lifetime, collected them for her sister. The sister died in 1912. The defendant continued to collect the rents, and, after paying ground rent to the plaintiffs, held the balance for the owners, whoever they might be. In December, 1912, the plaintiffs first discovered that the defendant's mother was dead, and, acting on the defendant's suggestion, they took possession of the premises. Subsequently they brought this action. There were no assets of the mother's estate :—Held, that the defendant was not liable by privity of estate since the term had not vested in him, and he was not liable by estoppel. Position of a lawful executor distinguished. Stratford-upon-Avon Corporation v. Parker, 83 L. J. K.B. 1309; [1914] 2 K.B. 562; 110 L. T. 1004; 58 S. J. 473—D.

Grant of Letters of Administration—Subsequent Discovery of Will—Sale of Property by Administratrix—Action by Executors to Set Aside Sale.]—H. died in 1899 without issue, but leaving a widow. No will being found, letters of administration were granted to the widow, who sold part of the estate to the defendant and conveyed it to him. Of the proceeds of sale one-third was invested as dower for the widow, and the remainder was divided among three co-heiresses of the deceased. After the widow's death in 1911 her executor discovered the will of her husband H., and by it H. appointed the plaintiffs his executors, and left the property which had been sold to the defendant to the widow for life, and after her death to one of the plaintiffs, whom he exhorted to hold the property " as an heirloom and on no account to sell it, but should such occur " the proceeds were to be equally divided among certain named persons. The letters of administration granted to the widow were revoked and probate of the will was granted to the plaintiffs, and they now sought to set aside the sale of the property to the defendant :—Held, that the plaintiffs were not entitled to recover possession of the estate, as the person for the time being clothed by the Court of Probate with the character of legal personal representative had all the powers of a legal personal representative until the grant of administration was revoked or had determined, and as section 2 of the Land Transfer Act, 1897, conferred upon the legal personal representative for the time being the same powers (with certain immaterial exceptions) with reference to real estate as he would have with reference to personal estate. Held, further, that the title of the purchaser was protected under section 70 of the Conveyancing Act, 1881, even if the grant of administration could be held void. Hewson v. Shelley, 83 L. a. Allowances and Indemnity.

Executors Carrying on Business of Testator —Right of Indemnity Subject to Satisfaction of Liability to Estate—Priority.]—A testator by his will directed his executors to carry on his business as long as they should think fit. At his death there was a considerable balance of assets over liabilities. The executors, with the financial assistance of the testator's bank and the assent of some creditors, carried on the business for three years, when it had become insolvent. In an administration action commenced by the bank against the executors, —Held, that the executors' right of indemnity, to which the bank claimed to be subrogated, was subject to the satisfaction of their own liability to the estate, and that creditors of the testator who had not assented were entitled to be paid out of the available assets in priority to the bank and other creditors of the executors. Form of order for accounts and enquiries in administration discussed. East, In re; London and County Banking Co. v. East, 111 L. T. 101; 58 S. J. 513—C.A.

—— Assets of Testator—Rights of Creditors of Testator and Subsequent Creditors of Executors—Right of Executors to Indemnity—Acquiescence of Original Creditors.] — A testator who carried on a business died in 1908, leaving all his property to his widow and appointing her and a son his executors. He died solvent. There was no provision in his will for the carrying on of the business, but his executors carried it on for four years after his death, his widow drawing money from it, and his sons being employed in it. At his death there were certain creditors of his estate. These creditors knew that the business was being carried on by the executors and did not interfere, but there was no agreement or arrangement with them. In 1912 the executors became bankrupt, whereupon the creditors brought an action for administration of the testator's estate. They did not claim the business assets so found. Now creditors of the business since the testator's death claimed that the executors were entitled, in priority to the old creditors, to be indemnified out of the testator's estate against their business debts, and that they ought to have the benefit of such indemnity : —Held, that the old creditors had not assented to the business being carried on by the executors, who were not therefore entitled to be indemnified. Oxley, In re; Hornby v. Oxley, 83 L. J. Ch. 442; [1914] 1 Ch. 604; 110 L. T. 626; 58 S. J. 319; 30 T. L. R. 327—C.A.

Account against Executor at Suit of Creditor —Right to be Allowed Payments made to Beneficiaries more than Six Years before Action Brought—Trustee Act, 1888.]—In 1902, on the death of a testator, his two executors distributed all his estate except a leasehold property which they held upon trust for beneficiaries under the testator's will. One of the executors died in 1906. In 1909 the rack rents of the leasehold property became insufficient to keep down the head rents. In 1911 the lessors commenced an action for an account against the surviving executor and the executors of the deceased executor:—Held (Phillimore, L.J., dissenting), that in taking the account the executors must be allowed the sums which had been honestly paid away to the beneficiaries more than six years before proceedings were commenced, as they were protected by the Trustee Act, 1888, s. 1, sub-s. 1 (b), executors being as much entitled to plead the statute against creditors as against beneficiaries. Blow, In re; St. Bartholomew's Hospital (Governors) v. Cambden, 83 L. Right of Executor to Commission for Professional Services—Art Expert.]—By his will the testator declared that any executor or trustee for the time being of his will engaged in any profession or business should be entitled to charge and be paid all usual professional or other charges for any business done by him in the premises, whether in the ordinary course of his profession or business or not. The testator had a large and valuable collection of works of art, and in the sale of this collection the defendant, who was one of the executors and was a well-known art expert and keeper of mediæval antiquities at the British Museum, priced the various articles and gave valuable advice as to their sale:—Held, that the defendant was carrying on a profession or business within the meaning of the clause of the will, and was entitled to be paid a commission of 10*s.* per cent. on the sale prices. Wertheimer, In re; Groves v. Read, 106 L. b. Right of Retainer.

Specialty and Simple Contract Creditors.]—An executor may retain his simple contract debt as against both specialty and simple contract creditors, inasmuch as by Hinde Palmer's Act both classes of creditors are made of equal degree as regards priority of payment in the administration of estates. The ratio decidendi in Samson, In re (76 L. J. Ch. 21; [1906] 2 Ch. 584), and in Jennes, In re (53 S. D. 440), not followed. Olpherts v. Coryton (No. 1), [1913] 1 Ir. R. 211—Barton, J.

Retaining Simple Contract Debt against Specialty Creditors.]—It follows from the decision of the Court of Appeal in Samson, In re; Robbins v. Alexander (76 L. J. Ch. 21; [1906] 2 Ch. 584), that the effect of the Administration of Estates Act, 1869, has been to enlarge the right of retainer of a legal personal representative, by enabling him to retain his simple contract debt against specialty as well as simple contract creditors. Olpherts v. Coryton ([1913] 1 Ir. R. 211) followed. Harris, In re; Davis v. Harris, 83 L. J. Ch. 841; [1914] 2 Ch. 395; 111 L. T. 666; 58 S. J. 653—Sargant, J.

Letters of Administration Granted to Undischarged Bankrupt—Debt Due from Deceased to Administrator.—Letters of administration of the estate of a deceased person were granted to the defendant, who was an undischarged bankrupt. The deceased at the time of his death was indebted to the defendant for money lent, but the defendant was adjudicated a bankrupt after the debt was contracted:—Held, that the defendant was not entitled as administrator to retain out of the assets collected by him the amount of the debt due to him from the deceased, the proper person to sue for the debt being the trustee in the bankruptcy. Wilson v. Wilson, 80 L. J. K.B. 296; [1911] 1 K.B. 327; 104 L. T. 96; 18 Manson, 18—Channell, J.

Covenant in Marriage Settlement—Legal Personal Representative and Beneficiary—Trustees' Right of Action.]—A testator by his marriage settlement covenanted that he would by deed or will, or his heirs, executors, or administrators would within twelve months after his decease, transfer to the trustees 3,000*l.* in trust for his then intended wife for life, with remainders over for the children of the marriage. By his will he appointed his wife sole executrix, and directed that in accordance with the covenant the 3,000*l.* should be realised and paid to the trustees of the settlement within six calendar months after his decease. There was one child only of the marriage, a daughter. The wife appointed the daughter to be one of the executors of her will. Upon the death of the wife, the 3,000*l.* not having been paid, the daughter claimed to be entitled to retain that sum out of the estate of her mother, as a debt due from her mother to herself:—Held, that the 3,000*l.* was not a simple debt due to the daughter, but was a debt due to the trustees of the marriage settlement, who were the only persons capable of giving a discharge for the money, and that the daughter had no right of retainer in respect thereof. Cockroft v. Black (2 P. Wms. 298) discussed. Sutherland (Dowager Duchess), In re; Michell v. Bubna (Countess), 84 L. J. Ch. 126; [1914] 2 Ch. 720; 112 L. T. 72—Joyce, J.

Partnership Debt—Legacies to Individual Partners.]—The doctrine of Cherry v. Boultbee (9 L. J. Ch. 118; 4 Myl. & Cr. 442)—namely, that executors may retain out of a legacy or share of residue a debt owing to their testator by the legatee—does not entitle them to retain a joint debt owing from a firm out of legacies or a share of residue given to the individual partners. Smith v. Smith (31 L. J. Ch. 91; 3 Giff. 263) explained and distinguished. Turner v. Turner, 80 L. J. Ch. 473; [1911] 1 Ch. 716; 104 L. T. 901—C.A.

Legatee Indebted to Testator's Firm—Executor not Entitled to Retain Legacy.]—An executor cannot, as a general rule, retain a legacy in satisfaction of a debt which was due by the legatee, not to the testator, but to a firm in which the testator was a partner. Jackson v. Yeats, [1912] 1 Ir. R. 267—Barton, J.

Administration of Insolvent Estate.]—An executor can retain the whole of his testator's chattels for the payment of a debt due to him from his testator, and is not obliged to appropriate chattels of the exact amount of his debt. When the chattels are realised the balance over (if any) goes to the other creditors. Broad, In re; Official Receiver, ex parte, 105 L. T. 719; 56 S. J. 35—D.

The exercise of the right of retainer by an executor, after an administration order under section 125 of the Bankruptcy Act, 1883, of chattels in his possession before the making of the order, to which he had not signified his election, is not forbidden by sub-section 9 of that section. Ib.

Receiver—Executor Surety for Testator—Right of Indemnity.]—There can be no retainer by an executor-surety in respect of a right to indemnify out of the testator's estate. The right of retainer only arises when there is a debt, and a surety has no debt against his principal until he has paid off the principal debt. When an executor-surety has paid off the principal debt his right of retainer arises, but only in respect of assets actually in his hands at the time he pays off the debt or assets coming to his hands thereafter. Orme, In re; Evans v. Maxwell (50 L. T. 51), followed. Giles, In re; Jones v. Pennefather (65 L. J. Ch. 419; [1896] 1 Ch. 956), not followed. Beavan, In re; Davies, Banks & Co. v. Beavan, 83 L. J. Ch. 109; [1913] 2 Ch. 595; 109 L. T. 538; 58 S. J. 31—Neville, J.

Retainer by Executor Jointly Guilty with Testator of Breach of Trust—Innocent Co-executor Appointed Trustee in Place of Testator.]—An executor who has been guilty, jointly with his testator, of a breach of trust cannot retain assets against the trust liability to the prejudice of the other creditors; nor are the beneficiaries claiming through him in any better position. Sander v. Heathfield (44 L. J. Ch. 113; L. R. 19 Eq. 21) and Faithfull, In re (57 L. T. 14), distinguished. Ib.

His co-executor, however, being himself innocent of the breach of trust, may, on being appointed trustee in place of the testator, even after the latter's death, exercise the right of retainer in respect of the trust liability. Barratt, In re; Whitaker & Co. v. Barratt (59 L. J. Ch. 218; 43 Ch. D. 70), followed. Jones v. Evans (45 L. J. Ch. 751; 2 Ch. D. 420) distinguished. Ib.

Executor of Executor—One Estate Liable to Account to Other—Creditor's Application to Enforce Exercise of Right.]—The defendant was the executor of the will of F., deceased, who, as executor of the will and legal personal representative of M., deceased, had got in and received assets of M.'s estate, which was insolvent:—Held, that the defendant could not be compelled to exercise his right of retainer over the assets of F.'s estate coming into his possession in favour of the creditors of M.'s estate. Funnell, In re; Dyne v. Funnell, 107 L. T. 145—Joyce, J.

—— Two Estates.]—The estates of A and B were administered in one action. The estate of B (who was A's executor) was entitled to the residue of the estate of A when ascertained. B's executor, who was a creditor of B, brought the action as executor and creditor on behalf of himself and all other creditors; and asserted his right of retainer in the statement of claim, and throughout the proceedings. A's estate was realised, and the money representing the proceeds was brought into Court. The executor of B died pending the suit, which was continued by substituting his executors as plaintiffs. After A's estate had been realised an order was made, upon the application of the plaintiffs, directing an enquiry to ascertain what part of the funds in Court represented the residue of A's estate, and ordering the same to be transferred to the credit of B's estate, and it was declared that the plaintiffs were entitled to exercise their right of retainer, as the executors of B's executor in respect of the amount so ascertained, in discharge of the debt due to them from B's estate. Olpherts v. Coryton (No. 2), [1913] 1 Ir. R. 381—Barton, J.

c. Respecting Creditors.

Preference—Money Advanced to Estate for Payment of Debts—Insolvent Estate—Repayment of Executor in Full—Assets in Hands of Executor.]—An executor of an insolvent estate who himself advances money to the estate for the purpose of paying the debts of the testator, looking to the estate to repay him at some future time, is entitled to prefer creditors and to be allowed the amounts so paid by him in full when assets fall in; he need not establish that at the time he made the payments he had assets of the testator in his hands, if at that time there was an outstanding reversionary interest of the testator. Jones, In re; Peak v. Jones, 83 L. J. Ch. 568; [1914] 1 Ch. 742; 58 S. J. 579—Warrington, J.

d. Respecting Legacies.

Sole Executor a Beneficiary — Legacy — Appropriation of Securities—Ademption.]—A sole executor who is also a beneficiary cannot validly appropriate towards his own legacy or share of residue any securities which have no market value and at his own price. Bythway, In re; Gough v. Dames, 80 L. J. Ch. 246; 104 L. T. 411; 55 S. J. 235—Joyce, J.

A sole executrix was entitled to pecuniary legacies of 10,000*l.* and 1,000*l.* under the will. By her own will she specifically bequeathed those legacies, describing them as "the two several sums of 10,000*l.* and 1,000*l.*" During her life she purported to appropriate certain shares and debentures towards her legacies :—Held, that she had made no valid appropriation, and that therefore her bequest of these legacies was not pro tanto adeemed. Barclay v. Owen (60 L. T. 220) distinguished. Ib.

Specific Legacy—French Duties.]—In the case of a specific legacy of chattels situate in France, inasmuch as the droits de mutation par décès are by French law a debt due by the legatee, they are not charges and expenses of the executors payable out of the general estate unless the legatee can shew that the will imposes on the executors the duty of paying them. Scott, In re; Scott v. Scott, 83 L. J. Ch. 694; [1914] 1 Ch. 847; 110 L. T. 809; 30 T. L. R. 345—Warrington, J.

Legacy Duty on Life Interest—Administration—Mistaken Payment out of Capital—Executors Beneficially Entitled — Recoupment.]—A testator bequeathed a sum of 20,000*l.* to M. S. for life, and directed that on her death such sum should fall into his residuary estate, and he appointed special trustees of the fund. Under the provisions of section 12 of the Legacy Duty Act, 1796, the legacy duty was payable by four equal annual payments out of the income derived from the fund. By inadvertence the executors, two of whom were residuary legatees, paid this duty out of capital, and transferred the residue of the 20,000*l.* to the special trustees :—Held, that the error must be rectified, the sum paid as legacy duty upon all proper adjustments being made being retained out of the future payments of income to M. S. Horne, In re; Wilson v. Cox-Sinclair (74 L. J. Ch. 25; [1905] 1 Ch. 76), considered. Ainsworth, In re; Finch v. Smith, 84 L. J. Ch. 701; [1915] 2 Ch. 96; 113 L. T. 368; 31 T. L. e. Power to Pledge Assets.

Pledge by One of Two Executors and Trustees — Validity — Payment of Debts — Passing of Residuary Account — Lapse of Time—Assent to Trusts of Will.]—A testator by his will, after appointing two persons executors and trustees and giving pecuniary legacies, gave his residuary estate to his trustees upon trust for sale and distribution as therein mentioned. Fourteen years after the testator's death one of the executors, without the knowledge of his co-executor, pledged certain plate, forming part of the testator's residuary estate, with a firm of pawnbrokers, who had no notice that he was not the absolute owner thereof, and misapplied the money so raised. All the debts and legacies, so far as was known, were paid, and the residuary account was passed, within one year of the testator's death, but the residuary estate had not been completely distributed. On the death of the pledgor the transaction was discovered, and an action was brought by the co-executor and a new trustee against the pawnbrokers to recover the plate : —Held, that the proper inference to be drawn from the facts was that at the date of the pledge the executors had assented to the trust dispositions taking effect, and held the plate as trustees; that, therefore, the deceased executor had no power to pledge the plate, and the existing trustees were entitled to recover it. Attenborough v. Solomon, 82 L. J. Ch. 178; [1913] A.C. 76; 107 L. T. 833; 57 S. J. 76; 29 T. L. R. 79—H.L. (E.) f. Powers as to Realty.

Sale of Surface — Minerals Reserved — Sanction of Court—When Necessary.]—The power of an executor over the real estate of his testator is, since the Land Transfer Act, enlarged, and he has now the same power in dealing with it as he previously had in dealing with the personal estate. His power of realising the estate for the benefit of creditors is paramount to the provisions of the will. The phrase trustee "or other person" in section 44 of the Trustee Act, 1893, does not include an executor. Cavendish and Arnold's Contract, In re, 56 S. J. 468—Neville, J.

Conveyance by Executor—"All estate, right and title"—Interpretation of Deed—Purchasers for Value.]—An executor, who had a beneficial interest in the testator's estate, joined with other beneficiaries in the sale and conveyance of a part of the estate to bona fide purchasers for value. The executor did not purport to convey in his capacity as executor, but the deed stated that all the estate, right, and title of the vendors were conveyed :—Held, that the deed conveyed the whole title vested in the executor, and that it was not proper to infer from the conduct of the parties and from indications in the deed that the intention was only to convey the beneficial interest, since that inference was contrary to the terms of the conveyance. Bijraj Nopani v. Pura Sundary Dassee, L. R. 41 Ind. App. 189—P.C.

III. LIABILITIES.

See also Vol. VI. 1344, 2036.

Leaseholds—Assignment—"Purchaser."]—Where a testator's residuary estate comprises leaseholds of so onerous a nature that they can only be assigned on the executors paying the assignees a sum of money to accept the assignments, such assignees are not "purchasers" within the meaning of section 27 of the Law of Property Amendment Act, 1859, and consequently the executors ought to set apart out of the residuary estate a sufficient sum to meet future liabilities in respect of the rents reserved by and the covenants contained in the leases. Lawley, In re; Jackson v. Leighton, 81 L. J. Ch. 97; [1911] 2 Ch. 530; 105 L. T. 571; 56 S. J. 13—Swinfen Eady, J.

Executor de Son Tort—Repairing Covenant in Lease—Death of Assignee Intestate.]—The plaintiffs sued the defendant as executor de son tort for breaches of covenant in a lease of which they were the lessors and the defendant's mother had been assignee. The defendant's mother died in 1910 intestate. No letters of administration were taken out. From that date onwards the defendant, who had collected the rents in his mother's lifetime, collected them for her sister. The sister died in 1912. The defendant continued to collect the rents, and, after paying ground rent to the plaintiffs, held the balance for the owners, whoever they might be. In December, 1912, the plaintiffs first discovered that the defendant's mother was dead, and, acting on the defendant's suggestion, they took possession of the premises. Subsequently they brought this action. There were no assets of the mother's estate:—Held, that the defendant was not liable by privity of estate since the term had not vested in him, and he was not liable by estoppel. Position of a lawful executor distinguished. Stratford-upon-Avon Corporation v. Parker, 83 L. J. K.B. 1309; [1914] 2 K.B. 562; 110 L. T. 1004; 58 S. J. 473—D.

Breach of Promise of Marriage—Death of Defendant — Action Continued against Executor — Damages — Special Damage — Giving up Millinery Business—Survival of Action.]—Pecuniary loss sustained by a woman through giving up an employment or business in consideration of a promise of marriage, or any similar loss suffered in such circumstances, is not special damage flowing from the breach of the promise to marry so as to be recoverable by her in an action against the personal representative of the promisor. Quirk v. Thomas (Executor of), 84 L. J. K.B. 953; [1915] 1 K.B. 798; 113 L. T. 239; 59 S. J. 350; 31 T. L. R. 237—Lush, J.

Quære, whether an action for damages for breach of promise will in any circumstances lie against the personal representative of a deceased promisor. Ib.

Attachment — Executor and Creditor of Estate — Fiduciary Relation — Personal Judgment against Executor — Determination of Fiduciary Relation.]—Where the only creditor of a deceased debtor has obtained in an administration action a personal order against the executor for payment of his certified debt, the fiduciary relation which previously existed between the creditor and executor is determined, and the creditor cannot subsequently pursue any remedy depending on the continued existence of this fiduciary relation. He is not entitled, therefore, to an order against the executor for payment into Court of money in his hands as such executor, or to the subsequent attachment of the executor under the punitive jurisdiction reserved to the Court under the third exception to section 4 of the Debtors Act, 1869. Thomas, In re; Sutton, Carden & Co. v. Thomas, 81 L. J. Ch. 603; [1912] 2 Ch. 348; 106 L. T. 996; 56 S. J. 571—C.A.

a. Debts, Liabilities and Priorities.

Gift of Specific Foreign Realty and Personalty Subject to Legacies and Debts—No Express Exoneration of Residuary Estate — Foreign Personalty Primarily Liable — Foreign Realty not so Liable—Mixed Fund.] A testator appointed executors and gave legacies free of duty and, subject to the payment of the said legacies and duty and his funeral and testamentary expenses and debts, he gave all his real estate situate in the Argentine Republic, together with certain personal property in or about the same, to his trustees upon trust to sell and to pay the proceeds to certain nephews in equal shares, and he gave all the residue of his real and personal estate to the plaintiff. On the question whether the testator had charged his specifically given real and personal estate in the Argentine Republic with the payment of his legacies, duties, expenses, and debts in exoneration of his residuary estate,—Held, first, that, as a matter of construction, the charge was confined to the Argentine property. Secondly, that the rule that something must be found in the will to shew that the testator intended not only to charge the realty, but to discharge the personalty, applies to land outside the jurisdiction. Thirdly, that, since there was no trust for conversion for the purposes of satisfying the charge upon the specifically given property, it was not a "mixed fund" within the authority of Roberts v. Walker (1 Russ. & M. 752). Fourthly, that the specifically given personalty was charged in exoneration of the residuary estate. Fifthly, that the legacies, duties, expenses, and debts were therefore payable out of the several funds in the following order of administration: (a) the specifically given personalty, (b) the residuary estate, and (c) the specifically given realty. Smith, In re; Smith v. Smith, 83 L. J. Ch. 13; [1913] 2 Ch. 216; 108 L. T. 952—Eve, J.

Proceedings by Beneficiaries — Clause Throwing Costs on Plaintiff—Repugnancy—Claim for Wilful Default.]—A testator by a clause in his will provided that "in case any action or other proceedings for the administration of my estate shall be commenced in the High Court of Justice in the name of any son or daughter or grandchild or reputed grandchild of mine of full age, as plaintiff or plaintiffs, then my trustees shall henceforth stand possessed of moneys to which such plaintiff or plaintiffs would otherwise have been entitled under this my will in trust to pay thereout in the first place the costs as between solicitor and client of all parties having liberty to attend such action or proceedings and that this present trust shall have priority over all trusts herein declared in favour of such plaintiff." The testator died in 1886, and in 1910 certain grandchildren of the testator commenced proceedings against the trustees for administration on the ground of wilful default. At the hearing, the defendants admitted liability, but contended that they were not liable for costs up to and including the hearing, having regard to the above clause in the will:—Held, that the above clause did not apply to the present action, the gist of which was lawful default; and that in any case the clause was repugnant to the gift. Williams, In re: Williams v. Williams, 81 L. J. Ch. 296; [1912] 1 Ch. 399; 106 L. T. 584; 56 S. J. 325—Swinfen Eady, J.

Estate Consisting Partly of Mortgage Debts —Interest in Arrear at Death—Tenant for Life and Remainderman—Rents of Mortgaged Premises, how Applicable.]—A testator gave an estate consisting partly of mortgage debts to trustees for beneficiaries for life and afterwards for others. Mortgage interest was in arrear at his death. His trustees continued, as he had been, in receipt of the rents of the mortgaged premises:—Held, that the rents were applicable, first, in discharge of the arrears due to the estate; next, in payment to the tenants for life of sums not exceeding the mortgage interest; and lastly, as capital. Coaks, In re; Coaks v. Bayley, 80 L. J. Ch. 136; [1911] 1 Ch. 171; 103 L. T. 799—Warrington, J.

Insolvent Estate—Realisation of Assets—Separate Account—Priority.]—In a creditor's administration suit, in which the general assets turned out to be insufficient to pay the costs of suit in full, the defendants, the executors of the deceased, claimed priority for their costs of suit, as against a secured creditor who had established a charge upon a fund which had been realised in connection with a sale in another suit and had been brought into Court and carried to a separate account:—Held, that they could only claim priority for such of their costs of suit as were relative to the separate account. Bell v. Butterly, [1911] 1 Ir. R. 312—Barton, J.

Specific Gift of French Assets—Executors and Trustees—Sale of French Assets by Trustees — French Succession Duty — Costs Incurred in France—Incidence of Duty and Costs.]—Where trustees of a will incurred costs and paid duties abroad in respect of foreign property specifically bequeathed, they having as executors assented to the bequest,—Held, that both the foreign costs and the foreign duty must be borne by the specifically bequeathed property and not by the residue. Brewster, In re; Butler v. Southam (77 L. J. Ch. 605; [1908] 2 Ch. 365), followed. Perry v. Meddowcroft (12 L. J. Ch. 104; 4 Beav. 197, 204) doubted. De Sommery, In re; Coelenbier v. De Sommery, 82 L. J. Ch. 17; [1912] 2 Ch. 622; 107 L. T. 253; 57 S. J. 78—Parker, J.

Promise by Testator to Pay for Alterations in Chapel—Contract Entered into on Faith of Promise—Liability of Testator's Estate.]—A testator promised to defray the cost of certain alterations in a chapel in which he was interested, provided the total expense did not exceed a certain amount. Estimates were obtained and submitted to the testator, and thereafter the provost of the chapel entered into a formal contract for the work. The testator died after some of the work had been executed, but before a contract for the remainder had been entered into:—Held, that the testator's estate was liable for the cost of so much only of the work in respect of which a contract had been entered into before the testator's death. Mountgarret (Viscount), In re: Ingilby v. Talbot, 29 T. L. R. 325—Swinfen Eady, J.

Fraud by Broker—Transactions in Stocks — Claim against Broker's Estate.] — One Franklyn, who carried on business as an outside stockbroker, induced a client to enter into transactions by fraudulent statements that he was buying for her when in fact he was himself selling to her. None of the transactions were genuine purchases or sales, as Franklyn never intended to deliver, and the client never intended to accept, delivery of the stocks. In the result the client incurred a considerable loss:—Held, in an action for the administration of Franklyn's estate, that the client's executor was entitled to prove against Franklyn's estate for the amount which the client had placed in Franklyn's hands—first, because the transactions were induced by fraud; and secondly, because Franklyn was in a fiduciary position and the representatives of a deceased trustee were never allowed to say that they could not pay a cestui que trust the amount which their testator ought to have paid. Franklyn, In re; Franklyn v. Franklyn, 30 T. L. R. 187—C.A.

b. Practice.

Manager Appointed by Court to Carry on Testator's Business—Indemnity.]—A manager appointed by the Court in an administration action to carry on the business of a testator in the place of the executor, who had an implied power to carry it on, no particular assets being devoted by the will for that purpose, is entitled to be indemnified by the general assets against liabilities incurred by him in carrying on the business, and the trade creditors are consequently entitled to resort to such assets for payment of their debts. The fact that funds have been carried to the separate credits of legatees does not free such funds from liability in this respect. The effect of carrying funds to a separate credit considered. O'Neill v. McGrorty, [1915] 1 Ir. R. 1—M.R.

Sale of Land—Approval of Master—Order not Entered—Judge's Refusal to Confirm.]—In an administration suit an estate was ordered to be sold. A contract was entered into, subject to confirmation by the Court, and approved by the Master, but before the order was passed and entered a third party, a creditor of the estate, offered to purchase the property at a higher price. Upon summonses by the third party for liberty to attend proceedings under the administration order, and by the purchaser for the passing of the Master's order,—Held, that the Master's confirmation was ineffective until the order had been passed and entered, and that the Judge had power to re-open the matter and refuse confirmation. Bartlett, In re; Newman v. Hook (50 L. J. Ch. 205; 16 Ch. D. 561), considered. Thomas, In re; Bartley v. Thomas, 80 L. J. Ch. 617; [1911] 2 Ch. 389; 105 L. T. 59; 55 S. J. 567—Warrington, J.

—— Order for Sale of Real Estate — Conversion.]—An absolute order for sale of real estate made within the jurisdiction of the Court in an administration action operates as a conversion of such real estate into personalty from the date of the order. Fauntleroy v. Beebe, 80 L. J. Ch. 654; [1911] 2 Ch. 257; 104 L. T. 704; 55 S. J. 497—C.A.

Following Assets — Secured Creditor — Equitable Right — Acquiescence — Lapse of Time—Delay—Not Amounting to Laches.]—Where mortgagees of a deceased mortgagor have neither actively assented to the distribution of the estate nor prejudiced by their conduct the beneficiaries in realisation, mere delay is not in itself a bar to their commencing a creditors' administration action to enforce their security by following the assets. Eustace, In re; Lee v. McMillan, 81 L. J. Ch. 529; [1912] 1 Ch. 561; 106 L. T. 789; 56 S. J. 468—Swinfen Eady, J.

Insolvent Estate—Transfer to Bankruptcy Court — Discretion.] — The jurisdiction to transfer administration proceedings from the Chancery Division to the Bankruptcy Court under section 125 of the Bankruptcy Act, 1883, may be exercised at any stage of the proceedings, and therefore after judgment. Such an order will be made where the principal questions to arise will be outside the administration action. Tarr, In re; Darley v. Tarr, 57 S. J. 60—Eve, J.

Parties—Summons—Real Estate—Creditors' Action by Single Creditor as Individual.]—Since the Land Transfer Act, 1897, it is no longer necessary for a creditor, in order to obtain an order for the administration of real estate, to sue on behalf of himself and all other creditors. James, In re; James v. Jones, 80 L. J. Ch. 681; [1911] 2 Ch. 348; 106 L. T. 214—Warrington, J.

Costs—Order without Reservation of Costs—Further Consideration.]—In an action against an executor or trustee where the Court, after hearing the facts, makes an order for administration without any reservation of costs, it is not in accordance with the practice to entertain an application on further consideration that the executor or trustee should be ordered to pay costs down to the judgment; but this practice does not extend to a case where the order is made without evidence on both sides, or full discussion, either for the sake of convenience or to save expense, or otherwise in circumstances in which the Court has not a sufficient knowledge of the facts. Gardner, In re; Roberts v. Fry, [1911] W. N. 155—Eve, J.

—— Trust Fund—Division into Thirds—Ultimate Subdivision of a Third into Moieties—Direction to Pay Testamentary Expenses out of Personalty—Costs of Ascertaining Beneficiaries.]—A testatrix (after giving a general direction for the payment of her testamentary expenses, &c., out of personalty) divided her real and personal residuary estate into thirds, with a direction that, on the happening of certain events (which had occurred), one of these shares should be further subdivided into moieties. The trusts of this last third having been administered by the Court,—Held, that each moiety of the third (and not the third as a whole) constituted a share within the meaning of Order LXV. rule 14B; that there were no special circumstances in the case (notwithstanding the presence of the general direction for the payment of testamentary expenses out of personalty) to justify the Court in interfering with the ordinary operation of the rule; and that, accordingly, the costs of ascertaining the beneficiaries of each separate moiety must be borne by each moiety respectively. Whitaker, In re; Pender v. Evans, 80 L. J. Ch. 63; [1911] 1 Ch. 214; 103 L. T. 657—Neville, J.

V. DISTRIBUTION.

See also Vol. VI. 1582, 2051.

Express Trustee—Earmarking Entries.]—The mere fact that an executor, who is not also appointed a trustee by the will, retains a fund to answer the claim of a particular next-of-kin, is not enough to turn the executor into an express trustee of the fund, but if, in addition, he earmarks the fund as the fund of the particular next-of-kin, and uses express words which shew that he intends to hold the fund, not for himself, but for the persons entitled to it, he does become an express trustee of the fund. Gompertz Estate, In re; Parker v. Gompertz, 105 L. T. 664; 56 S. J. 11—Warrington, J.

Personal Estate—Settled Residue—Payments by Executors—Adjustment of Accounts between Tenant for Life and Remainderman.]—Where executors at various dates long before the expiration of one year from the death of the testator paid out sums amounting to many thousands of pounds in respect of estate duty, legacy duty, and legacies,—Held, that, on taking the account of the share of income due to the tenants for life during the year succeeding the testator's death, the proper mode of adjustment was to charge against them in respect of the sums so paid interest on the capital sum which would with such interest make up the sums so paid, such interest being calculated only from the time of the death of the testator until the respective dates when the payments were in fact made. McEuen,

The rule laid down in Allhusen v. Whittell (36 L. J. Ch. 929; L. R. 4 Eq. 295), that in adjusting accounts between tenant for life and remainderman the executors must be taken to have paid debts and legacies not out of capital only, nor out of income only, but with such portion of capital as, together with the income of that portion for one year, was sufficient for the purpose, is not to be slavishly followed in every case where residue is settled, and should not be applied in a case where large sums have been expended in clearing an estate at intervals considerably prior to the end of the first year. Lambert v. Lambert (43 L. J. Ch. 106; L. R. 16 Eq. 320) observed upon. Ib.

Gift of Specific Foreign Realty and Personalty Subject to Legacies and Debts—No Express Exoneration of Residuary Estate—Foreign Personalty Primarily Liable—Foreign Realty not so Liable—Mixed Fund.]—A testator appointed executors and gave legacies free of duty and, subject to the payment of the said legacies and duty and his funeral and testamentary expenses and debts, he gave all his real estate situate in the Argentine Republic, together with certain personal property in or about the same, to his trustees upon trust to sell and to pay the proceeds to certain nephews in equal shares, and he gave all the residue of his real and personal estate to the plaintiff. On the question whether the testator had charged his specifically given real and personal estate in the Argentine Republic with the payment of his legacies, duties, expenses, and debts in exoneration of his residuary estate,—Held, first, that, as a matter of construction, the charge was confined to the Argentine property. Secondly, that the rule that something must be found in the will to shew that the testator intended not only to charge the realty, but to discharge the personalty, applies to land outside the jurisdiction. Thirdly, that, since there was no trust for conversion for the purposes of satisfying the charge upon the specifically given property, it was not a "mixed fund" within the authority of Roberts v. Walker (1 Russ. & M. 752). Fourthly, that the specifically given personalty was charged in exoneration of the residuary estate. Fifthly, that the legacies, duties, expenses, and debts were therefore payable out of the several funds in the following order of administration: (a) the specifically given personalty, (b) the residuary personal estate, and (c) the specifically given realty. Smith, In re; Smith v. Smith, 83 L. J. Ch. 13; [1913] 2 Ch. 216; 108 L. T. 952—Eve, J.

Intestacy—Children Taking by Representation Debt of Parent to the Intestate—Original Title of the Children.]—Where a father had covenanted with his brother to pay off a mortgage debt, and had died without carrying out such covenant, leaving four children, and the brother had subsequently died intestate,—Held, that the four children were entitled to receive their share of the personal estate of the intestate without first making good to the estate of the intestate the moneys secured by the mortgage; for although they did in fact take a distributive share between them as the persons who legally represented their father, yet they nevertheless took by original title, and not under or through their father. Gist, In re; Gist v. Timbrill (75 L. British Subject—Offence Committed in France—Requisition by French Diplomatic Agent.]—Where, under the Extradition Act, 1870, and the treaties with France of 1876 and 1908, a British subject is sought to be extradited from England to France, the only requisition necessary is a requisition by the French diplomatic agent. It is not necessary that there should also be a requisition by the diplomatic agent of the British Government. Rex v. Brixton Prison (Governor); Wells, Ex parte, 81 L. J. K.B. 912; [1912] 2 K.B. 578; 107 L. T. 408; 76 J. P. 310; 23 Cox C.C. 161; 28 T. L. R. 405—D.

France—Time within which Surrender to Take Place—Fugitive "committed to prison"—"Two months after such committal"—Lapse of Two Months from Arrest of Fugitive.]—Article X. of the Extradition Treaty with France, signed August 14, 1876, provides that "if the fugitive criminal who has been committed to prison be not surrendered and conveyed away within two months after such committal, or within two months after the decision of the Court upon the return to a writ of habeas corpus in the United Kingdom, he shall be discharged from custody, unless sufficient cause be shewn to the contrary":—Held, that the words "committed to prison" in the article mean committed to prison by the magistrate to await surrender to the French Government, and that therefore the period of two months within which the fugitive criminal must be surrendered runs from the date of such committal and not from the date of the arrest. Rex v. Brixton Prison (Governor); Mehamed Ben Romdan, Ex parte, 81 L. J. K.B. 1128; —— Treaty Expressed in Two Languages.]—Where the articles of an extradition treaty with a foreign country are expressed both in the English language and in a foreign language, the English Courts, in construing the treaty, can only look at the English version of the treaty. Ib.

French Subject — Robbery with Violence — Conviction and Sentence in France — Prison Breach — Flight to England — "Fugitive criminal" — Extradition Order — Validity — Habeas Corpus.]—M., a French subject, was convicted and sentenced in France for robbery with violence, a crime for which, by the Extradition Treaty, 1876, between Great Britain and France, extradition is to be granted. While he was serving his sentence he broke prison, and fled to England. The French police applied for his extradition on the ground that he was a fugitive criminal who had been convicted of an extradition crime, and the magistrate made an order of committal under section 10 of the Extradition Act, 1870. An application was then made on his behalf for a rule nisi for a writ of habeas corpus on the ground that, his crime of robbery with violence having become merged in his conviction, the crime for which he was now sought to be extradited was that of prison breach, which was not an extradition crime; and, further, that he was not a "person who had been convicted of a crime" within the meaning of Article I. of the Extradition Treaty between Great Britain and France, 1876:—Held, refusing the rule, that M. was a "fugitive criminal" within the meaning of section 10 of the Extradition Act, 1870, and also a "person who had been convicted of a crime" within the meaning of Article I. of the Extradition Treaty between Great Britain and France, 1876, and that therefore the order of committal was good. Held, further, that the words "poursuivi pour vol," as used in the documents sent from France, meant "prosecuted to conviction for," and not merely "charged with" robbery, and that the magistrate, in committing the applicant on the ground that he had been convicted, had not therefore made an order in respect of an offence for which the extradition had not been demanded. Moser, Ex parte, 84 L. J. K.B. 1820; [1915] 2 K.B. 698; 113 L. T. 496; 31 T. L. R. 384, 438—D.

Germany—Grounds for Refusing Extradition —"Tried and discharged."]—Article IV. of the Extradition Treaty with Germany of 1872 provides that "The extradition shall not take place if the person claimed . . . has already been tried and discharged or punished . . . in the United Kingdom . . . for the crime for which his extradition is demanded":—Held, that, in order to claim the benefit of that article, there must have been a trial of the person for the crime alleged against him, accompanied by an acquittal or a sentence of punishment; and that the discharge of the person owing to some informality in the procedure on a preliminary enquiry in which the charge could not have been finally decided was not sufficient to enable him to escape extradition. Rex v. Brixton Prison (Governor); Stallmann, In re, 82 L. J. K.B. 8; [1912] 3 K.B. 424; 107 L. T. 553; 77 J. P. 5; 23 Cox C.C. 192; 28 T. L. R. 572—D.

—— Obtaining Money by Cheating at Cards—False Pretences.]—Section 17 of the Gaming Act, 1845, provides that "Every person who shall by any fraud . . . in playing at or with cards, . . . win from any other person to himself, or any other or others, any sum of money or valuable thing, shall be deemed guilty of obtaining such money or valuable thing from such other person by a false pretence, with intent to cheat or defraud such person of the same, and, being convicted thereof, shall be punished accordingly." A person, therefore, who obtains money or a valuable security by cheating at cards can be extradited under the Extradition Treaty with Germany of 1872 for obtaining money or goods by false pretences, notwithstanding that the offence under section 90 of the Larceny Act, 1861, of inducing a person by a false pretence, with intent to defraud, to accept or indorse a valuable security, was only made an extradition crime by the Extradition Act, 1873, and therefore does not come within the Extradition Treaty with Germany of 1872. Rex v. Brixton Prison (Governor); Stallman, In re, 82 L. J. K.B. 8; [1912] 3 K.B. 424; 107 L. T. 553; 77 J. P. 5; 23 Cox C.C. 192; 28 T. L. R. 572—D.

Italy—Order in Council—No Formal Proof of Order—Committal—Habeas Corpus—Jurisdiction of Committing Magistrate.]—Where a foreign State demands the surrender of a criminal fugitive and an Order in Council is in existence applying the Extradition Acts to that State, a writ of habeas corpus will not be granted for his discharge, after committal for extradition, on the mere ground that the Order in Council was not formally proved before the committing magistrate. Rex v. Brixton Prison (Governor); Servini, Ex parte, 83 L. J. K.B. 212; [1914] 1 K.B. 77; 109 L. T. 986; 78 J. P. 47; 23 Cox C.C. 713; 58 S. J. 68; 30 T. L. R. 35—D.

A prisoner, who had been arrested in England on the requisition of the Italian Government, was brought before a Metropolitan police magistrate and committed by him to Brixton Prison for the purpose of extradition on charges of forgery and other offences alleged to have been committed in Italy. The Order in Council applying the Extradition Acts to Italy, although in existence, in accordance with the general practice of the police Court in extradition cases was not formally proved before the committing magistrate, nor was any objection taken on behalf of the prisoner to this omission. A rule nisi to shew cause why a writ of habeas corpus should not be issued on the ground (inter alia) that no proof of the Order in Council was given having been obtained,—Held (by Ridley, J., and Scrutton, J.; Bailhache, J., dubitante), that a writ of habeas corpus ought not to be granted, as there had merely been an omission to give formal evidence on a matter necessary to give jurisdiction to the committing magistrate, although there was in fact no question as to the existence of such jurisdiction. Ib.

Per Scrutton, J.: It was desirable that in future in every case the Order in Council should be formally proved, because it might be of importance to the prisoner to know whether it contained any provisions which might assist him. Ib.

Requisition for Surrender not in Form Prescribed by Treaty—Order by Home Secretary to Arrest—Jurisdiction of Magistrate.]—A warrant for the arrest of a French subject who was in England was issued by a French magistrate, but the depositions accompanying the requisition for surrender were taken before a Belgian official. The treaty between this country and France required that the requisition for the surrender of the accused should be accompanied by depositions taken before the same magistrate as had issued the warrant of arrest. Nevertheless, the Home Secretary issued an order to a London magistrate requesting him, if there were due cause, to issue a warrant of arrest. The magistrate, after hearing evidence, issued the warrant:—Held, that, as the requirements as to depositions were procedure only, the magistrate had jurisdiction to issue the warrant, and that it was not essential to the validity of the order of the Home Secretary that the procedure in France should have been regular. Rex v. Brixton Prison (Governor); Thompson, Ex parte, 80 L. Committal—Order Nisi for Habeas Corpus Discharged by High Court—Original Application to Court of Appeal for Relief—Res Judicata.]—A native of India having, under section 5 of the Fugitive Offenders Act, 1881, and in pursuance of an Indian warrant charging him with certain offences, been committed to prison by a Metropolitan police magistrate to await his return to India, an application was made on his behalf to the King's Bench Division of the High Court of Justice for an order nisi for a writ of habeas corpus addressed to the governor of the prison. The King's Bench Division made an order nisi calling upon the governor of the prison to shew cause why a writ of habeas corpus should not issue directed to him to bring the body of the applicant before the Court. This order was expressed to be made on various grounds, one of which was that (following the words of section 10 of the Fugitive Offenders Act, 1881) it would be "unjust or oppressive or too severe a punishment to return" the applicant to India, because the alleged offences were of a "trivial nature," and because the application for his return was not "made in good faith in the interests of justice." On the hearing of the argument on cause being shewn before the King's Bench Division questions arising under section 10 of the Fugitive Offenders Act were discussed by counsel and were considered by the Judges in their judgments, but the order of the Court as drawn up and perfected was simply an order that the order nisi should be discharged. The Court of Appeal having dismissed an appeal by the applicant from that decision on the ground that it was a decision in a criminal cause or matter, the applicant made an original application to the Court of Appeal to exercise in his favour the powers conferred on the Court by section 10 of the Fugitive Offenders Act, which empowers a "superior Court" in the circumstances therein mentioned to discharge the applicant or make such other order as to the Court seems just. The objection was taken on the part of the Crown that, assuming the Court of Appeal to be by virtue of section 39 of the Fugitive Offenders Act a "superior Court" within the meaning of section 10, having concurrent jurisdiction with the High Court, this application could not be entertained, for the matter of the application was res judicata between the applicant and the Crown:—Held, that, inasmuch as the only matter which the records of the Court shewed to have been adjudicated by the King's Bench Division was that the order nisi for a writ of habeas corpus should be discharged, the matter of this application was not res judicata, and therefore the Court of Appeal had jurisdiction to entertain the application. Rex v. Brixton Prison (Governor); Savarkar, Ex parte, 80 L. River Navigable and Floatable—Exclusive Right of the Crown to Fishing—Letters Patent—Construction.]—The appellants were grantees of lands on both sides of a river which was shewn by the evidence to be navigable and floatable at such locality and from thence to its mouth :—Held, that the right of fishing in the river vested exclusively in the Crown, and that, as the letters patent to the appellants in 1883 granting the said lands were plain and unambiguous in their terms and did not specifically grant rights of fishing in the river opposite thereto, the patentees could not claim such rights under previous or subsequent correspondence as enlarging the terms of the grants, or by reason of such rights having been exercised by them continuously from the date of the patents without hindrance or interference. Wyatt v. Att.-Gen. of Quebec, 81 L. J. P.C. 63; [1911] A.C. 489; 105 L. T. 259—P.C.

Navigable Non-tidal Lake—Public User for Centuries—Prescription—Documentary Title—Evidence.]—The Crown is not of common right entitled to the soil or waters of an inland non-tidal lake, and no right can exist in the public to fish in such waters. One and the same law applies to inland non-tidal waters whatever may be the area of the water space. Johnston v. O'Neill, 81 L. P. P.C. 17; [1911] A.C. 552; 105 L. T. 587; 55 S. J. 686; 27 T. L. R. 545—H.L. (Ir.)

The respondents claimed the exclusive right of fishing for eels in lough Neagh and over a great stretch of the river Bann, under grants from the Crown to their predecessors in 1605 and later documents; that the Crown had a title to make the grants; that they and their predecessors had continuously possessed and enjoyed the fishery in the river and possessed the fishery on the lough, and that their predecessors had also received rents from others for the fishery in the lough itself, and that, although the public had in fact always fished in the lough, they had done so by indulgence and not of right. The appellants claimed that the public can in law have a right of fishery in non-tidal waters, and that the respondents had not established their documentary title, and the action of the respondents did not lie :—Held (The Lord Chancellor, Lord Shaw, and Lord Robson dissenting), that the respondents had established their documentary title, and were entitled to an injunction to restrain the appellants from fishing. Ib.

Fishing within "exclusive fishery limits of the British Islands"—Foreigner not Subject of a Power Signatory to Convention.]—The Sea Fisheries Act, 1883, enacts that no person on board a foreign sea-fishing boat shall fish within "the exclusive fishery limits of the British Islands"; these limits being defined in the Act as that portion of the sea within which British subjects have, by international law, the exclusive right of fishing or, where such portion is defined by any convention with any foreign State, as regards the subjects of that State, the portion so defined. By Article II. of a convention between Great Britain and certain States (of which Norway is not one) which appears in a schedule to, and is incorporated with, the Act, it is provided that the fishermen of each country shall, as regards bays, have the exclusive right of fishing within three miles of a straight line drawn across the bay at a point described. A Norwegian subject, the master of a trawler registered in Norway, having been convicted on a complaint which set forth that, contrary to the Act, he had fished "within the exclusive fishing limits of the British Islands as defined by Article II." of the schedule—namely, at a point within three miles of the line drawn across a certain bay,—Held, that the accused, not being the subject of a signatory nation, was not bound by the provisions of the convention, and that, accordingly, as the locus of the offence was defined in the complaint by reference to these provisions, the complaint was bad, and the conviction must be quashed. Jensen v. Wilson, [1912] S. C. (J.) 3—Ct. of Just.

Powers of Sea Fishery Officer—Power to "take" Offending Trawler to Nearest Port—Trawler Ordered to "go" to Nearest Port.]—A sea fishery officer, who had reasonable grounds for believing that he had detected a trawler fishing within the three mile limit, ordered the captain to go with his vessel to C., which was the nearest and most convenient port. At the time the sea was too rough to permit of a boat being sent to the trawler to put any one on board:—Held, that the order to go to C. was a lawful order, although the only express authority given by section 12 of the Sea Fisheries Act, 1883, was authority to "take" the offender to port, and that the master of the trawler by refusing to comply was guilty of a contravention of section 14, sub-section 2 of the Act. Semble, the order would have been lawful even if the weather had permitted of a boat being sent to the trawler. Held, further, that, as the officer had reasonable grounds for believing that the master had been trawling within the three-mile limit, the lawfulness of the order was not affected by the fact that the charge against the master was subsequently found to be not proved. Gordon v. Hanson, [1914] S. C. (J.) 131—Ct. of Just.

Trawling — Prohibition — By-law — Validity.]—Under the Sea Fisheries Regulation Act, 1888, s. 2, the Devon local committee made a by-law which prohibited trawling within a certain area. The by-law was made for the protection of a crab fishery:—Held, that the by-law was not ultra vires. Friend v. Brehout, 111 L. T. 832; 79 J. P. 25; 58 S. J. 741; 30 T. L. R. 587—D.

Unlimited Commercial Right of Fishing in Alieno Solo—Freeholders of Manor—Presumption of Charter.]—An unlimited commercial right of fishing in alieno solo cannot pass as appurtenant to a freehold, and in the absence of evidence a grant to a corporation cannot be presumed from the assertion and exercise of such an alleged right, for however long a period, by individual freeholders. Harris v. Chesterfield (Earl), 80 L. J. Ch. 626; [1911] A.C. 623; 105 L. T. 453; 55 S. J. 686; 27 T. L. R. 548—H.L. (E.)

Canal—Reservation to Landowners of Right to Fish—Right to Fish from Towing Path—Appurtenant or in Gross—General Words in Conveyance—Lease of Fishery to Angling Club—Estoppel.]—By a canal Act it was provided that the owners of land through which the canal was made should be entitled to a right of fishery in the canal, but so that the towing path should not be thereby prejudiced or obstructed. Part of the land was in 1845 conveyed without any mention of the fishery to a purchaser who leased the fishery to an angling club of which the defendant was a member:—Held, that the right to fish carried with it the right to use the towing path, but that the fishery was a right in gross and did not pass under the general words in the conveyance of 1845, and therefore the defendant had no right to use the towing path. Chesterfield (Earl) v. Harris (77 L. J. Ch. 688; [1908] 2 Ch. 397) applied. Staffordshire and Worcestershire Canal Navigation v. Bradley, 81 L. J. Ch. 147; [1912] 1 Ch. 91; 106 L. T. 215; 56 S. J. 91—Eve, J.

Disturbance of — Penalties — Action for Damages.]—The lessee of a dwelling house and premises and of certain rights of fishing attached to the demised premises sued the occupiers of a mill on the stream in which the fishing rights were enjoyed in respect of certain acts which the plaintiff alleged obstructed the free passage of salmon to and from the sea and destroyed large numbers of young fish. An objection was taken that an action for damages for the injury to the fishery and for an injunction restraining the continuance or repetition of the acts complained of would not lie in view of the penalties imposed by the Salmon Fishery Acts:—Held (Kennedy, L.J., dubitante), that the Legislature had provided means for enforcing the prohibitions in the Acts, and that was the proper mode to deal with such a case as the present; and that, although an illegal act causing special and peculiar damage to the property of another person might justify an action to abate the mischief, it could not be said that any and every person having fishery rights in the river in question could maintain an action against the mill owners, but some special and definite damage clearly attributable to the illegal act must be established. Stevens v. Chown (70 L. J. Ch. 571; 1901] 1 Ch. 894) approved. Fraser v. Fear, 107 L. T. 423; 57 S. J. 29—C.A.

Held, also (Farwell, L.J., dissentiente), that the plaintiff had failed in proving that any property right had been substantially interfered with. Ib.

Device for Catching—Device for Catching Fish Placed on Apron of Weir.]—Sluice gates or hatches extended over the entire width of a salmon river, which were raised or lowered from a platform above. When lowered the passage of the water was entirely barred, and it flowed off elsewhere. When a hatch was opened the water dropped down sloping masonry and then up and along a wooden platform, the entrance to which rested on the slope at two points, which led to a trap for taking eels. The water flowed into culverts with hard, smooth flat bottoms, and thence into a pool below:—Held (Rowlatt, J., dubitante), that the above structure was a weir and the aprons of the hatches were the apron of the weir, and that the wooden platform was a device for taking fish placed upon the apron of a weir within section 15 of the Salmon Fishery Act, 1873. Spent or injured salmon had at times been found in the trap:—Held, that it was a device for catching salmon within the meaning of section 36 of the Salmon Fishery Act (1861) Amendment Act, 1865, although intended only to catch eels. Lyne v. Leonard (37 L. J. M.C. 55; L. R. 3 Q.B. 156) followed. Maw v. Holloway, 84 L. J. K.B. 99; [1914] 3 K.B. 594; 111 L. T. 670; 78 J. P. 347—D.

Drift Net—"Fixed engines"—Nuisance at Common Law.]—The use of drift nets in a tidal channel for the capture of salmon by night from boats which are not moored or anchored, the nets moving with the tide and the salmon becoming enmeshed in the nets, is not illegal, such nets being licensed under the Irish Fishery Acts and regulated in many districts by by-laws under those Acts. Such nets are not an obstruction to the free passage of fish, and are not a nuisance at common law as "fixed engines" prohibited by the Acts. Irish Society v. Harold, 81 L. J. P.C. 162; [1912] A.C. 287; 106 L. T. 130; 28 T. L. R. 204—H.L. (Ir.)

Decision of the Court of Appeal in Ireland, sub nom. Irish Society v. Fleming ([1911] 1 Ir. R. 323), affirmed. Ib.

Using Net without Licence—Net not Actually Put into Water.]—In order to constitute the offence of "using" a net for catching salmon without having a proper licence under section 36 of the Salmon Fishery Act, 1865, it is not necessary that the net should have been actually put into the water. If the Justices are of opinion that the person charged was on the river for the purpose of catching salmon, and had the net with him for that purpose, it is sufficient to justify them in convicting him under the section. Moses v. Raywood, 80 L. J. K.B. 823; [1911] 2 K.B. 271; 105 L. T. 76; 75 J. P. 263; 22 Cox C.C. 516—D.

Pollution—Private Owner's Tank Waggon—Leakage of Creosote—"Causing" Creosote to Flow into Stream.]—By section 5 of the Salmon Fishery Act, 1861, "Every person who causes or knowingly permits to flow, or puts or knowingly permits to be put, into any waters containing salmon, or into any tributaries thereof, any liquid or solid matter to such an extent as to cause the waters to poison or kill fish, shall incur" certain penalties. Whilst a tank waggon, belonging to a private owner, which contained creosote, was travelling on the respondents' railway, the creosote, owing to a defective tap, leaked from the waggon through the permanent way into a stream which was a tributary of a salmon river, and killed fish. The waggon shewed no defect on examination before the train started, and there was no neglect or default on the part of the respondents:—Held, that the respondents had not "caused" the creosote to flow into the stream within the meaning of section 5 of the Act. Moses v. Midland Railway, 84 L. J. K.B. 2181; 113 L. T. 451; 79 J. P. 367; 31 T. L. R. 440—D.

Carvings — Settlement — Sale under Settled Land Acts — Will — Construction — "Pictures and other works of art or curiosity"—Legatee and Devisees in Remainder.]—A testator devised his mansion house in strict settlement, and bequeathed to the first life tenant (subject to a bequest of certain personalty upon trusts to follow the settled estate) all his "pictures and other works of art or curiosity" absolutely. The house contained certain carvings in wood fixed to the walls by nails, screws, or pegs, serving as overmantels or as frames to pictures, which had been in the house, and (with a few exceptions) in their original positions, even since it was rebuilt about two hundred years before. The first tenant for life sold one of these pieces of carving, and claimed the proceeds of sale under the bequest to him. On a summons by the trustees of the settlement,—Held, that the carvings were fixtures and formed part of the mansion house, and that they were not included in the bequest, and that the proceeds of sale were capital money subject to the settlement. Chesterfield's (Lord) Settled Estates, In re, 80 L. Covenant by Tenant to Complete Fittings to Shop — Covenant to Deliver up Demised Premises in Good Repair—Tenant's Right to Remove Trade Fixtures Affixed in Pursuance of Covenant.]—By the lease of an unfinished shop the lessees covenanted at their own expense to "complete and finish . . . all necessary fittings for the carrying on of the trade of a provision merchant," and also to deliver up the demised premises in good repair at the end of the term. In pursuance of their covenant the lessees affixed certain fittings to the premises which became "trade fixtures," and they removed them shortly before the end of the term :—Held (Vaughan Williams, L.J., dissenting), that the covenant in the lease did not take away the right of the lessees during the term to remove the fittings as trade fixtures. Mowats v. Hudson, 105 L. T. 400 —C.A.

Larceny—Tenancy Agreement Entered into with Intention to Steal Fixtures.]—Where a person enters into an agreement for the lease of a house with the fraudulent intention of stealing the fixtures on getting into possession, and where in fact he steals the fixtures on entering into possession, he is guilty of larceny under section 31 of the Larceny Act, 1861. Rex v. Munday (2 Leach C.C. 991) followed. Rex v. Richards, 80 L. Action of Deceit—False Statements to Parties other than the Plaintiff—Plaintiff Acting on False Statement to his Detriment—Intention of Defendant to Induce Persons to Sell Shares—Direction to Jury.]—The appellant brought an action of deceit against the respondent for damages for causing the appellant to sell certain shares in a company at an undervalue. The respondent, under pressure and not of his own motion, had made an untrue statement to a third party, a broker, and subsequently voluntarily to other parties, with the effect of depressing the shares in the market to the detriment of the appellant, who had acted on such statement. At the trial, the Judge directed the jury that to render the respondent liable they must find that there must have been a direct intention on his part that people should be induced to sell shares, and that he must have had the intention when he made his statement of making people sell. The jury having absolved the respondent from fraud,—Held, that there had been no misdirection on the part of the Judge, and therefore no ground for granting a new trial. Tackey v. McBain, 81 L. —— Misrepresentation without Fraud—Confidential Relation — Solicitor and Client — Negligence.]—Nothing short of proof of a fraudulent intention in the strict sense will suffice to maintain an action of deceit, but an action for damages for negligence may lie, without evidence of an actual intention to deceive, where a confidential relationship exists, such as that of solicitor and client, so that the person to whom a representation was made was entitled to rely, and did in fact rely, upon it, and sustained damage in consequence. The necessity of proving moral fraud in order to succeed in an action of deceit has not narrowed the scope of this remedy. Derry v. Peek (58 L. J. Ch. 864; 14 App. Cas. 337) discussed and explained. Nocton v. Ashburton (Lord), 83 L. J. Ch. 784; [1914] A.C. 932; 111 L. T. 641; 30 T. L. R. 602—H.L. (E.)

Ante-nuptial Settlement—Intent to Defeat or Delay Creditors—Inference of Intent—Interest to Daughter by Previous Marriage.]—A voluntary settlement may be declared void, as against the settlor's trustee in bankruptcy, without proof of actual intention to defeat or delay creditors if the circumstances of the particular case be such that the settlement must necessarily have that effect. A settlement by a widower on re-marriage is voluntary as regards a daughter by a previous marriage interested therein. Freeman v. Pope (39 L. J. Ch. 689; L. Intention to Defeat and Delay Creditors—13 Eliz. c. 5.]—A deed of assignment made in good faith by a debtor in favour of his creditor is not rendered invalid under the statute 13 Eliz. c. 5, by reason of its being made with the express intention of defeating some other particular creditor or creditors of the assignor. Glegg v. Bromley, 81 L. J. K.B. 1081; 106 L. T. 825—C.A.

A wife who was in debt to her husband for a large advance executed a deed of assignment by which she assigned to him the sum of money to which she might become entitled by virtue of a pending action of slander in which she was plaintiff. Her husband then made her a further advance to enable her to prosecute the action. The wife subsequently recovered a verdict in the action for damages. A judgment creditor of the wife thereupon served a garnishee order nisi attaching the damages which she had recovered :—Held, that the deed of assignment was not invalid either for want of consideration or as savouring of champerty, or under the statute 13 Eliz. c. 5, and that the husband, as assignee under the deed, was entitled to the damages recovered by the wife as against the execution creditor. Ib.

Post-nuptial Settlement—Recital of Ante-nuptial Agreement—Intention to Defeat or Delay Creditors.]—A recital in a post-nuptial deed of settlement that the settlement is made in pursuance of a parol ante-nuptial agreement is a memorandum in writing sufficient to satisfy the Statute of Frauds; but it does not dispense with the necessity of proving that the recited ante-nuptial agreement was actually made. Validity of a post-nuptial setlement under 13 Eliz. c. 5, and section 47 of the Bankruptcy Act, 1883, considered. Gillespie, In re; Knapman v. Gillespie, 20 Manson, 311—Horridge, J.

Judgment against Partner — Transfer of Business to Company—Consideration—Shares and Debentures—Notice to Company—Setting Aside.]—On November 27, 1907, an injunction was granted, at the suit of H. & Co., who were former partners of G., restraining G. from manufacturing under a certain patent in breach of an agreement. G. was then in partnership with J., in a business of the same character. On November 29, 1907, G. and J. entered into an agreement to sell to a company, which was formed for the purpose, the goodwill of their business, and all their interest in the business, and all the assets to which they were entitled in relation to it. The consideration for the sale was 1,050*l.*, paid by allotting to G. and J. 793 fully paid ordinary shares of 1*l.* each in the company, paying them 7*l.* in cash, and issuing two debentures for 125*l.* each to their nominees. The nominal capital of the company was 800*l.*, in 800 1*l.* ordinary shares. The same solicitor acted in the promotion of the company and for J. in reference to the transaction. J. was by the agreement to be first managing director of the company, at a minimum salary of 150*l.* per annum. In September, 1908, G. was adjudicated a bankrupt. H. & Co. were the principal creditors :—Held, that the company had notice of the character of the transaction; that an object of the formation of the company, and of the assignment to it of the property of the partnership under the agreement, was to defeat and delay the creditors of G., as well as to avoid the consequences of the injunction granted against him; and that the transaction must be set aside as fraudulent and void under 13 Eliz. c. 5. Gonville's Trustee v. Patent Caramel Co., 81 L. Enlargement of Objects—Special Resolution—Memorandum of Association—Parties to Proceedings.]—A friendly society registered under the Friendly Societies Act, 1896, passed a special resolution under section 71 to convert itself into a limited company having a memorandum of association with enlarged objects, so that, according to the decision of the Court in Blythe v. Birtley (79 L. J. Ch. 315; [1910] 1 Ch. 228) the resolution was invalid. On July 31, 1908, the Registrar of Joint-Stock Companies issued a certificate of incorporation of the company. In 1910 the plaintiff, suing on behalf of himself and all other shareholders of the company, moved for an injunction to restrain the company from carrying out any of the powers stated in the memorandum of association which were in excess of the powers possessed by a friendly society:—Held, that whatever relief the plaintiff might be entitled to in properly constituted proceedings, he could not while suing as a member of the company claim to restrain the company from carrying on any of the objects stated in its memorandum of association, and that the injunction must therefore be refused. McGlade v. Royal London Mutual Insurance Society, 79 L. J. Ch. 631; [1910] 2 Ch. 169; 103 L. T. 155; 17 Manson, 358; 54 S. J. 505; 26 T. L. R. 471—C.A.

Conversion into Limited Company—Members—Validity of Special Resolution.]—It was decided to convert a friendly society registered under the Friendly Societies Act, 1896, into a limited company under section 71 of the Act, and this was effected in 1913 by special resolution. No names were subscribed to the memorandum of association, and no shares had been allotted to any persons. In 1914 the company purported to pass and confirm a special resolution, by which the objects clause of the memorandum was altered and extended:—Held, that upon the conversion of a friendly society, under section 71 of the Friendly Societies Act, 1896, into a limited company, the members of the society are not simultaneously converted into members of the company; that at the date of the resolution of 1914 no persons had so far agreed to become members of the company, and that the resolution was not effectively passed. Blackburn Philanthropic Assurance Co., In re, 84 L. J. Ch. 145; [1914] 2 Ch. 430; 21 Manson, 342; 58 S. J. 798—Eve, J.

—— Consent of Members.]—By the rules of a registered friendly society it was provided that meetings for the "management of the society" should consist of "delegates" elected by the members:—Held, that a resolution for the conversion of the society into a limited company, in terms of section 71 of the Friendly Societies Act, 1896, passed by a general meeting of "delegates," was ultra vires, in respect that under that Act a resolution for conversion could only be carried by a certain majority of the members of the society at a general meeting of members, and that that requirement was not affected by the rule of the society providing that meetings should consist of "delegates." Wilkinson v. City of Glasgow Friendly Society, [1911] S. C. 476—Ct. of Sess.

Payment of Pensions Ultra Vires the Rules—Society which "exists for an illegal purpose"—Cancellation of Registry of Society.]—The Friendly Societies Act, 1896, s. 77, provides that upon proof "that a society exists for an illegal purpose" the Chief Registrar may cancel the registry of the society:—Held, first, that the time to be considered in determining whether a society is one which exists for an illegal purpose is the date on which the order is made cancelling the registry. Secondly, that the illegal purpose must be one which exists independently of the rules, and the mere fact that payments are made by the society which are ultra vires the rules does not make the society one which exists for an illegal purpose within the meaning of section 77 of the Act. Middle Age Pension Friendly Society, In re, 84 L. B. RULES.

Effect of Alteration of Rules.]—An action was brought by the plaintiff, the widow of a member of a friendly society, against the defendant, who was the statutory officer of the society, to recover a benefit to which she claimed to be entitled under the rules. Rule 20 of the society's rules of 1908 provided that disputes between members or persons claiming through or on account of a member and the society should be decided by arbitration, and prescribed certain formalities to be observed. It further provided that each dispute should be decided by three arbitrators, the first elected by the claimant, the second by the society, and the third to be a County Court Judge or other person agreed on by the parties, who should act as umpire. The Friendly Societies Act, 1896, s. 68, sub-s. 6, provides that "Where the rules [of a friendly society] contain no direction as to disputes, or where no decision is made on a dispute within forty days after the application to the society . . . for a reference under its rules, the member or person aggrieved may apply either to the County Court or to a court of summary jurisdiction, and the court to which application is so made may hear and determine the matter in dispute." On March 11, 1910, the plaintiff applied for benefit under the rules. On April 2 the society passed a resolution refusing the plaintiff's application as being contrary to rule. On April 18 the plaintiff made an application for arbitration under the rules. This was assented to by the society, but the parties were unable to agree as to an umpire, and, after the expiration of forty days, the plaintiff in January, 1911, commenced proceedings in the County Court by virtue of section 68, sub-section 6 of the Friendly Societies Act, 1896. In September, 1910, the society had amended its rules, and by rule 20 as so amended it was provided that disputes should in the first instance be referred to the general committee, from whose decision there should be an appeal to an appeal committee. It was contended before the learned Judge that, the plaintiff not having complied with these regulations, he had no jurisdiction to entertain the action. To this contention he gave effect and declined to hear the case:—Held, that the learned Judge was wrong, and that the alteration in the rule could not affect the right of the plaintiff, which had become vested, to go to the County Court, and that the learned Judge accordingly had jurisdiction to try the case. Ritson v. Dobson, 104 L. T. 808—D.

Alteration — Calendar Month's Notice — Whether Lunar Month Sufficient—Resolution —Invalidity.]—The plaintiff was a member of a branch of a friendly society, and by the rules of 1906 he was entitled to certain benefits. The rules provided that before they could be altered a calendar month's notice must be given by the central committee to the local meeting. In 1914 a lunar month's notice of a proposed alteration, which would have prevented the plaintiff from being entitled to the benefits in question, was given by the central committee to the local meeting, and resolutions were passed purporting to alter the rules and the tables of payments. In an action by the plaintiff for a declaration that he was entitled to the benefits fixed by the rules of 1906,—Held, that as a calendar month's notice was required by the rules, a lunar month's notice, even if reasonable, was insufficient, but on the facts with regard to the adoption of the new tables of payments the resolution was bad, and that therefore the plaintiff was entitled to the benefits in question. Orton v. Bristow, 32 T. L. R. 129—Sargant, J.

Transfer of Sum to Pension Fund—Validity.]—The transfer by a friendly society of 50,000*l.* out of its actuarial surplus to the fund for providing pensions on retirement for those engaged in the active service of the society,—Held, not to be ultra vires of the society. Kirsopp v. Highton, 56 S. J. 750; 28 T. L. R. 493—C.A.

No Power to Resolve to Wind up Voluntarily—Alteration of Rules—Evidence of Acquiescence Necessary for Alteration—Ultra Vires.]—Where by its original rules a friendly society was unable to pass a resolution for a voluntary winding-up, but where at a subsequent meeting it was purported by the unanimous vote of those present to create a new rule that a resolution for voluntary winding-up could be carried if passed by a majority of two-thirds, and where subsequently such a resolution was passed by such a majority under the alleged new rule,—Held, that in the absence of evidence that the new rule was ratified by the acquiescence of all the members of the society, such new rule was ultra vires, and an order for compulsory winding-up was accordingly made. Tean Friendly Society, In re, 58 S. J. 234—Astbury, J.

Action to Enforce Decision of Society.]—A member of a friendly society, who had been expelled by decree of his lodge and had had that decree reversed on appeal by a superior court of the society, brought an action in the Sheriff Court for declarator that he was a member of the society and entitled to certain benefits:—Held, that the action was competent, and decree of declarator and payment granted. Gall v. Loyal Glenbogie Lodge of the Oddfellows Friendly Society (2 Fraser, 1187) distinguished. Collins v. Barrowfield United Oddfellows, [1915] S. Misapplication of Property—Time for Taking Proceedings.]—By section 87, sub-section 3 of the Friendly Societies Act, 1896, if any person wilfully applies any property of the society to purposes other than those expressed or directed by the rules, he is liable on complaint to be summarily convicted and fined, and ordered to deliver up such property or to repay sums of money applied improperly. By section 9 of the Friendly Societies Act, 1908, where, on such a complaint, it is not proved that he acted with any fraudulent intent, he may be ordered to repay any sum of money applied improperly, but shall not be liable to conviction, and the order is to be enforceable as an order for the payment of a civil debt :—Held, that the period of six months imposed by section 11 of the Summary Jurisdiction Act, 1848, within which a complaint or information must be made or laid applies to summary proceedings for an order for repayment of a sum of money under the Friendly Societies Act, 1896, which was misapplied more than six months before the laying of the information. Mackie v. Fox, 105 L. Rule for Settlement of Disputes by Arbitration—Election of Member to Board of Management Contrary to Rule—Competency of Action for Declaration that Election Void.] —In an action by a member of a friendly society against the society for a declaration that the appointment of another member to the board of management was void in respect that under the rules of the society he was ineligible for election, it was pleaded by the defendants that the action was excluded by a rule of the society that "all disputes between the society and any member as such . . . may be determined by arbitration." The rule was passed under the Friendly Societies Act, 1896, which provides that every dispute between a member and the society shall be decided in manner directed by the rules of the society "without appeal, and shall not be removable into any Court of law . . ." :—Held, that the action was competent in respect that the jurisdiction of the Court was not excluded in a case where the averment was that the society had acted in violation of its rules and constitution. M'Gowan v. City of Glasgow Friendly Society, [1913] S. Against Registered Branch.]—An action can be maintained by the trustees of a friendly society against the trustees, secretary, and treasurer of a registered branch in respect of their breach of trust in applying the funds of the branch in a manner not authorised by the rules of the society; for, in such a case, the trustees, secretary, and treasurer of the branch are not sued as members, but in the character of persons standing in a fiduciary relationship, and the provision of section 68 of the Friendly Societies Act, 1896, that a dispute between "an officer of" a "registered branch and the society of which that registered branch is a branch shall be decided in manner directed by the rules," does not apply. Winter v. Wilkinson, 84 L. G. DISSOLUTION.

Unregistered Friendly Society — Unexpended Funds.]—A society was established by a canal company for the benefit of its boatmen and workmen. Each member contributed a weekly sum, which was supplemented by a weekly contribution from the company. The society was not registered. The management of the society was entrusted to a committee, which consisted of three elected members and three officials of the company. This committee was given the regulation of the affairs of the society, and the power to frame or amend the rules when requisite. The contributions to the funds were lodged to the credit of the society and the company was trustee for it. The funds of the society were applied, pursuant to the rules, in payment of sick and mortality benefits to members and their families. When the National Insurance Act, 1911, came into force it was found impossible to carry on the business of the society, and it was resolved to wind it up, and an action for that purpose was brought on behalf of the members against the committee of the company, the Attorney-General being afterwards made a party. The unexpended funds amounted to 1,170*l.* :—Held, first, that the society was not a charity to which the doctrine of cy-près could be applied, neither was the Crown entitled to the funds as bona vacantia; secondly, that the contributions of the company were absolute gifts to the society, and that there was no resulting trust in favour of the company; and thirdly, that the funds were the property of the society, and were divisible amongst the existing members at the time when the business of the society ceased to be carried on, in proportion to the amounts contributed by them. Cunnack v. Edwards (65 L. Ground Game—Setting Spring Traps in Open—Person Authorised by Owner and Occupier of Land.]—The prohibition in the Ground Game Act, 1880, against laying spring traps, except in rabbit holes, for killing ground game, does not extend to a person who is duly authorised by the owner and occupier of land to take the ground game on his land. Authorisation by deed is not essential for this purpose. Leworthy v. Rees, 109 L. T. 244; 77 J. P. 268; 23 Cox C.C. 522; 29 T. L. R. 408—D.

Trespass in Pursuit of Game—Sending Dog on Land in Pursuit of Game—"Entering or being" upon Land.]—The words "entering or being" upon land in "search or pursuit of game" in section 30 of the Game Act, 1831, mean entering or being on such land personally; and a person who sends his dog on to such land in search or pursuit of game, and shoots game put up by such dog, cannot be convicted under that section of trespassing in pursuit of game. Dicta in Reg. v. Pratt (24 L. J. M.C. 113; 4 E. & B. 860) followed. Pratt v. Martin, 80 L. J. K.B. 711; [1911] 2 K.B. 90; 105 L. T. 49; 75 J. P. 328; 22 Cox C.C. 442; 27 T. L. R. 377—D.

—— Retrieving Dead or Wounded Game.]—A rabbit after being shot on the public road ran into private ground, and there fell dead or moribund. The shooter thereupon sent his dog into the private ground to retrieve it:—Held, that he did not thereby commit a trespass "in search or pursuit of" game within the meaning of section 1 of the Game (Scotland) Act, 1832 [corresponding to section 30 of the Game Act, 1831]. Nicoll v. Strachan, [1913] S. C. (J.) 18—Ct. of Just.

—— Alleged Permission—Bona Fide Belief—Reasonable Grounds—Poaching.]—On a summons under section 2 of the Poaching Prevention Act, 1862, for obtaining game by unlawfully going on land in search or pursuit of game, it is a good defence to prove that the defendant had a bona fide belief that he had permission to go on the land, together with reasonable grounds for that belief. Dickinson v. Ead, 111 L. Tame Pheasants Bought for Breeding Purposes—Seller and Purchaser not Licensed to Deal in Game—Liability of Purchaser to Penalty.]—The word "game" in section 27 of the Game Act, 1831, applies to live as well as to dead game; it applies also to game which has never been wild—for example, to pheasants reared in captivity and kept for breeding purposes. If, therefore, a person who is not licensed to deal in game purchases tame pheasants for breeding purposes from a person not licensed to deal in game he commits an offence against section 27 of the Act. Harnett v. Miles (48 J. Dealing in Game without a Licence—Time within which Proceedings to be Taken.]—The limitation of time for proceedings against a person for dealing in game without a licence in contravention of the Game Licences Act, 1860, is that prescribed by section 3 of the Excise Act, 1848—namely, six months, and not three months as prescribed by section 41 of the Game Act, 1831. M'Lean v. Johnston, [1913] S. Unlawful Possession of Eggs—Evidence.]—The appellant having been summoned for being in possession of game eggs unlawfully obtained, evidence was given on behalf of the prosecution that a constable, having seen the appellant in the month of May under circumstances of suspicion with other men, searched the appellant's cart and found a large number of game eggs which the appellant stated came off his own farm. No evidence was called on behalf of the appellant:—Held, that the appellant was rightly convicted of an offence within section 2 of the Poaching Prevention Act, 1862. Stowe v. Marjoram, 101 L. Game Played in Refreshment House — Whether "unlawful game" — Question of Fact.]—Section 32 of the Refreshment Houses Act, 1860, provides that "Every person licensed to keep a refreshment house under this Act who shall . . . knowingly suffer any unlawful games or gaming therein . . . shall, upon conviction thereof . . ." be liable to a penalty. Whether a game is or is not a game of chance, and, consequently, an unlawful game within the meaning of this section, is a question of fact to be decided in each particular case. Bracchi v. Rees, 84 L. J. K.B. 2022; 79 J. P. 479; 13 L. G. R. 1365—D.

Penny-in-the-slot Machine.]—By an agreement the plaintiffs let certain automatic machines to the defendant. To an action for three weeks' rent of the machines the defendant pleaded that the use of the machines by the public constituted an unlawful game, and that the plaintiffs, in order to induce the defendant to enter into the agreement, had represented to him that the use of the machines constituted a game of skill and not a game of chance. The nature of the working of the machines was this: By means of the insertion of a penny in a slot a ball was set in motion and worked its way down among a number of pins, and the object of the player was to catch the ball, as it emerged from the pins, in a cup attached to a sliding bar. Witnesses for the plaintiffs gave evidence that skill in the game was improved by practice:—Held, that there was evidence of a governing element of skill in the game, and therefore that the plaintiffs were entitled to recover the amount claimed. Pessers v. Catt, 77 J. P. 429; 29 T. L. R. 381—C.A.

The appellant was convicted of using his premises for the purpose of "unlawful gaming" being carried on thereon. Proof was given of the user on the appellant's premises of an automatic machine. On the insertion of a halfpenny in the machine, a marble was released, which by the operation of a trigger manipulated by the player, was shot up to the top of the machine, whence it descended through a series of pins which deflected its course. The player, while the marble was falling, tried to bring beneath it a cup in the machine. The cup was fixed to a movable lever which could be moved laterally right or left at the option of the player. The object of the player was to catch the marble in the cup. If he succeeded, by an automatic action, a disc was released which entitled him to a pennyworth of the appellant's goods; if he failed, the halfpenny inserted became the property of the appellant without any return to the player. The appellant was convicted under section 4 of the Gaming Houses Act, 1854, the Justices finding that the game played with the machine was predominantly one of chance; that skill did not enter substantially into the game; that having regard to the players contemplated by the appellant as using the machine the chances were not alike equal to all the players including the appellant; that the chances were in the appellant's favour; and that the game could not be converted from one of chance to one of skill:—Held, that the findings of the Justices as to the character of the game played with the machine were questions of fact and consequently not reviewable by the Court, and that the finding that the game was one of chance and one in which the chances were not equal alike to all the players, including the appellant, brought the game within section 2 of the Gaming Act, 1845, and consequently that the game played with the machine was unlawful gaming within section 4 of the Gaming Houses Act, 1854, and that the appellant was rightly convicted. Fielding v. Turner (72 L. J. K.B. 542; [1903] 1 K.B. 867) applied and followed. Donaghy v. Walsh, [1914] 2 Ir. R. 261—K.B. D.

In a prosecution under a local Act for exposing in a shop "a lottery" consisting of a machine, it was proved that the machine was actuated by placing a penny in a slot, that this enabled a spring to be worked which projected a ball to the top of the machine, whence it descended through a number of irregularly placed pins and emerged at any one of five openings, where it might be intercepted by a sliding cup operated by the manipulator, whose object was to catch the ball in the cup. There was no part of the machine where the ball could emerge that was not within reach of the sliding cup. The manipulator, if successful, received a metal disc entitling him to twopence worth of goods in the shop; if unsuccessful he forfeited his penny:—Held (Lord Johnston dissenting), that although, in the hands of an ordinary member of the public, success depended largely on chance, yet, as the desired result might be attained on every occasion by the exercise of skill, the machine was not a lottery. Forte v. Dewar (7 F. (J.) 82) overruled. Di Carlo v. M'Intyre, [1914] S. C. (J.) 60—Ct. of Just.

"Three-card trick"—"Fraud or unlawful device or ill practice in playing at or with cards."]—The applicants were charged with obtaining money by false pretences within section 17 of the Gaming Act, 1845, which makes it an offence to win money of another by fraud "in playing" at cards, and enacts that it shall be deemed an obtaining of money by a false pretence. They won money from the prosecutor at a game substantially identical with the "three-card trick." The false pretences or fraud suggested were that the applicants pretended they were strangers to each other, and that the game to be played with the prosecutor would be played in the same way as a previous game between the applicants, at which latter game one of them, purporting to be the prosecutor's friend, won:—Held, that there was no evidence of fraud "in playing" at cards, but only in inducing the prosecutor to play; that the game, as played, was one of skill only; and that, consequently, no offence had been committed. Rex v. Brixton Prison (Governor); Sjoland, Ex parte, 82 L. J. K.B. 5; [1912] 3 K.B. 568; 77 J. P. 23; 29 T. L. R. 10—D.

"Progressive whist."]—The appellant was the occupier of certain premises which were let to him, together with the use of one hundred tables with accompanying chairs, for 2*l.* 10*s.* per occasion, for the purpose of carrying on a game of cards known as "progressive whist," and otherwise as "whist drives." The appellant advertised these whist drives, which were to be held at the said premises weekly through the winter season, by issuing posters inviting the public to attend on payment of 6*d.* per ticket, which would admit one person. The poster stated that ten valuable prizes would be given each week. The admission tickets were obtainable on or off the premises by any one who applied for them, and were ultimately exchanged for cards on which were marked the score obtained while playing progressive whist, but did not entitle the holder to refreshments. Having obtained these cards, the players were shewn to tables and proceeded to play the ordinary game of whist. There was no choice of partners, but the winning couple on the termination of each hand proceeded to the next tables, one to the table higher up the room and the other to the table down the room, and the couple who had lost remained at the same table, one of them changing his or her seat, so as not to play with the same partner in the next hand. After about twenty hands had been played in this manner the scores were totalled up and the five ladies and five gentlemen returning the highest scores were presented with prizes varying in value from 3*s.* to 18*s.*, which were provided by the appellant out of the proceeds of the ticket money, the balance of such ticket money, after paying all expenses, being retained by the appellant for his personal profit. The appellant having been convicted of using the premises for the purpose of unlawful gaming contrary to section 4 of the Gaming Houses Act, 1854.—Held, that on the facts the element of skill in the game was so slight and that of chance so predominant, that the game must be considered as one of pure chance, and that, as the appellant had allowed a game of chance to be carried on for money, he had been rightly convicted. Morris v. Godfrey, 106 L. Partnership — Bookmakers — Accounts.] — In 1908 the plaintiff and the defendant entered into a partnership to carry on a betting business. No money was subscribed at the time, but money was found by the plaintiff for the conduct of the business as required. In 1910 the partnership was dissolved by mutual consent, and on an account being taken the defendant agreed that 100*l.* was due to the plaintiff, and he gave the plaintiff an I O U for that amount. Subsequently he paid 7*l.* on account, but as he did not pay the balance of 93*l.* he was sued for that amount by the plaintiff. It was proved in evidence that 173*l.* had been drawn out of the partnership account by the defendant for private purposes; that 35*l.* was standing to the credit of the partnership at the date of the dissolution; and that the 100*l.* for which the I O U was given was a rough estimate of the share due to the plaintiff:—Held, first, that there was no evidence that the partnership business was carried on in a manner that was illegal within the Betting Act, 1853; secondly, that the I O U was not a promise, express or implied, to pay a sum to the plaintiff within the Gaming Act, 1892, and that the plaintiff was entitled to recover. Brookman v. Mather, 29 T. Forbearance to Make Defendant's Default Public—New Contract.]—The plaintiff and defendant were bookmakers, and as the result of certain betting transactions between them a sum of 30*l.* 10*s.* was due from the defendant to the plaintiff. In an action to recover this amount the plaintiff stated that when the debt became due the defendant asked for time to pay, and requested that the matter might be kept absolutely confidential, as if it got about it would do him a lot of harm. The plaintiff agreed to give defendant time, and promised to keep the matter confidential. He stated in his evidence that, if the matter had got about, the defendant would have been finished as a bookmaker. The County Court Judge gave judgment for the plaintiff, holding that a new contract had been entered into between the parties by which the plaintiff forbore to sue the defendant or declare him a defaulter in consideration of the defendant's promise to pay the debt at a future time:—Held, that there was evidence upon which the County Court Judge could come to that conclusion. Wilson v. Conolly, 104 L. T. 94; 27 T. L. R. 212—C.A.

The plaintiff was a bookmaker, and as the result of betting transactions the defendant owed him 138*l.* The plaintiff instructed his solicitor to proceed against the defendant, whereupon the defendant wrote saying he was trying to carry out a financial arrangement, and as soon as it was completed he would attend to the plaintiff's claim. He asked the plaintiff to withdraw the matter from the hands of his solicitor, as if anything leaked out to shew that he had lost money, and had been gambling, the financial arrangements would become impossible. The plaintiff thereupon instructed his solicitor not to proceed at that time against the defendant, but the debt not having been paid, the plaintiff subsequently sued the defendant, contending that the letter constituted a valid and binding contract to pay :—Held, that the action failed, as on the facts there was a mere request for and obtaining further time for the payment of a debt which the plaintiff could not in any circumstances have enforced. Hyams v. Coombes, 28 T. L. R. 413—Lush, J.

Agreement to Submit Question of Account to Committee of Tattersall's.]—The plaintiff, a bookmaker, made bets with the defendant, and a dispute arising as to the amount owing to the plaintiff, the parties agreed to go before the committee of Tattersall's, and the defendant further agreed that if the committee decided against him he would send the plaintiff a cheque for the amount found due. The committee decided that 37*l.* 11*s.* 3*d.* was due from the defendant to the plaintiff. As the defendant did not pay this amount the plaintiff sued him to recover same. At the trial the defendant set up the Gaming Acts :—Held, that upon the facts there was a new promise to pay by the defendant founded upon a fresh consideration which was sufficient to prevent the operation of the Gaming Acts; and therefore that the plaintiff was entitled to recover. Whiteman v. Newey, 28 T. L. R. 240—D.

Guarantee to Bank to Enable Debtor to Pay Lost Bet—Money Paid under Guarantee.]—In March, 1904, a bookmaker borrowed 1,000*l.* to enable him to make bets on horse races, and upon the terms that the lender should have half of all the profits made by the betting. In April, 1903, the lender guaranteed an overdraft to the extent of 1,000*l.* at his debtor's bank for the purpose of the bookmaking business, and the whole of the money having been lost the lender guaranteed a further 500*l.* at the bank to enable the debtor to pay another bookmaker lost debts to that amount, and which were duly paid. In September, 1906, the lender paid the bank 1,633*l.* under the two guarantees, and on his death in 1907 his executors obtained final judgment in default of defence against the debtor for 3,019*l.* odd and costs. A bankruptcy petition having been presented against the debtor, in which the act of bankruptcy alleged was that he had failed to comply with the requirements of a bankruptcy notice founded upon the judgment, the Registrar dismissed the petition on the ground that the case was within the mischief of the Gaming Acts, and that there was no valid debt to support the petition :—Held (reversing the Registrar), that, irrespective of the other parts of the transaction, the guarantee for 500*l.* was not invalid under the law prior to 1892; that under such law the debt resulting from money lent to enable the borrower to pay a bet already lost by him, not being a debt for an illegal consideration, could be proved in his bankruptcy; that the law had not been altered by section 1 of the Gaming Act, 1892, but prevailed, and that the 500*l.* was not money paid by the lender under or in respect of any contract rendered null and void by the Gaming Act, 1845, within the language of section 1 of the Act of 1892 :—Held, also, that, the guarantee having been given in 1903, but no payment having been made in respect thereof until 1906, although the banking account still continued, the presumption was, having regard to the rule in Clayton's Case (1 Mer. 572), that the original transaction in respect of any vice attaching to it by reason of the Gaming Acts must have been wiped out, so that no question arose with regard to it, and consequently that there was a good debt to support the petition. O'Shea, In re; Lancaster, ex parte, 81 L. Cheques Given for Racing Bets—Cheques Paid by Payee into his Bank—Claim by Drawer to Recover from Payee as "Holder" Amount of Cheques—Whether Banker an "Indorsee."]—By the conjoint effect of section 1 of the Gaming Act, 1710, and section 1 of the Gaming Act, 1835, all securities (including bills) given for gaming considerations shall be deemed and taken to have been made, drawn, given, or executed for an illegal consideration. By section 2 of the Gaming Act, 1835, if any person shall make, draw, give, or execute (inter alia) any bill for such gaming consideration, and such person shall actually pay to any indorsee, holder, or assignee of such bill the amount of the money thereby secured, or any part thereof, such money so paid shall be deemed and taken to have been paid for and on account of the person to whom such bill was originally given for such gaming consideration, and shall be deemed and taken to be a debt due and owing from such last-named person to the person who shall so have paid such money, and shall be recoverable by an action at law. The plaintiff gave the defendant five cheques in payment of certain racing bets. These cheques were made payable to the defendant or order and crossed, and were paid by the defendant into his bank. The plaintiff afterwards sued the defendant for the amount of the cheques, under section 2 of the Gaming Act, 1835. There was no evidence that the defendant's banking account was overdrawn :—Held, that the action failed, as the defendant was not the "holder" of the cheques within the meaning of section 2, and it must be inferred that the bankers to whom the defendant paid the cheques merely collected them for the defendant, and were therefore not "indorsees" within the meaning of the section. Nicholls v. Evans, 83 L. Deposit of Money to be Used for Speculation in Stocks—Sums Deposited to be Repaid in Full if no Profit made—Loss of Interest on Deposit.]—The defendant sent out a circular in which he stated that if the persons receiving it would contribute certain sums to a three months' "Trust" he was about to open, he would operate in specified stocks, and if at the end of ninety days those stocks stood at a higher figure than at the opening of the "Trust," he would divide the profit, less 10 per cent., among the contributors; and that the amount of the subscription to the "Trust" would in any event—that is, whether there was a profit or a loss on the stocks—be repaid at the end of the ninety days. The plaintiff paid a sum to the defendant on the terms of the circular, and, profits having been made on the specified stocks, he sued the defendant to recover the same. He also claimed to recover the amount of his contributions to three other "Trusts" of similar kind, each of which had resulted in a loss:—Held, that the contract between the parties was a wagering contract, and that the plaintiff was therefore not entitled to recover. Richards v. Starck, 80 L. "Racecourse" — Inclosed Field — Athletic Sports—Horse Races.]—In an inclosed field, to which admission was obtained by payment, athletic sports were held. The programme included two horse races and ten other events, consisting of foot races, jumping, and other athletic competitions. At the entrance to the field there was, conspicuously exhibited, a notice prohibiting betting:—Held, that the field was not a "racecourse" within section 2 of the Street Betting Act, 1906, and therefore a conviction of the appellant under section 1 of that Act for betting in the field was right. Stead v. Aykroyd, 80 L. D. STATUTORY OFFENCES.

1. Lottery.

See also Vol. VII. 522, 1716.

Sale of Tickets—Publication of Scheme—Prize not Purchased out of Money Paid for Tickets.]—The sale of tickets which give the holders a chance of winning a prize is an offence under section 41 of the Lotteries Act, 1823, as being the sale of tickets in a lottery, notwithstanding that the prize has been presented and has not been purchased out of the money paid by the ticket holders for the tickets. Bartlett v. Parker, 81 L. J. K.B. 857; [1912] 2 K.B. 497; 106 L. T. 869; 76 J. P. 280; 23 Cox C.C. 16—D.

—— Newspaper Article.]—By the Lotteries Act, 1823, s. 41, any person who "shall publish any proposal or scheme for the sale of any ticket" in any lottery not authorised by Act of Parliament "shall, for every such offence, forfeit and pay the sum of fifty pounds, and shall also be deemed a rogue and a vagabond. . . .":—Held, that an article in a newspaper favourably criticising a proposal for a sweepstake upon a horse race, and giving information as to from whom, and at what price, tickets could be purchased, was not the "publication of a proposal or scheme for the sale of tickets in an unauthorised lottery" within the meaning of section 41 of the Lotteries Act, 1823; and that, consequently, neither the editor nor the printer of the newspaper were guilty of the offence created by that section. Bottomley v. Director of Public Prosecutions, 84 L. J. K.B. 354; 112 L. T. 458; 79 J. P. 153; 31 T. L. R. 58—D.

Per Darling, J.: The editor and printer might have been proceeded against under the Lotteries Act, 1836, because the article in question advertised the lottery. Ib.

Offer of Prize for Composing Sentence—Chance—Skill.]—The proprietors of a newspaper offered prizes of 500*l.*, 100*l.*, 50*l.*, twenty of 5*l.*, two hundred of 1*l.*, and one hundred of 10*s.* each, aggregating 1,000*l.* By the conditions a competitor had to select one from a list of given words, and, subject to certain rules as to initial letters, compose a sentence having some bearing on the word selected, write it on a coupon, and send it in, together with the sum of 6*d.* Specimen words and sentences and the winning sentences of the preceding competition were given. The editor undertook that every answer reaching him should receive careful consideration, and his decision as to the prizewinners was to be final. The result was to be announced ten days after the latest date for sending in the coupons:—Held, that this was not a lottery on the face of it, the result not being dependent on chance only. Scott v. Director of Public Prosecutions, 83 L. J. K.B. 1025; [1914] 2 K.B. 868; 111 L. T. 59; 78 J. P. 267; 24 Cox C.C. 194; 30 T. L. R. 396—D.

The alderman held that as it must be assumed that the competition was not intended to be conducted at a loss, he assumed that the proprietors contemplated at least 40,000 coupons at 6*d.* each, equivalent to the 1,000*l.* prize money; that on that footing it would be impossible to consider each of these on its merits in the ten days allotted for consideration, and that therefore the distribution must be by chance only:—Held, that the above facts did not constitute evidence upon which the alderman could find that the competition had been in fact conducted as a lottery. Ib.

Distribution of Postal Orders—Destination Determined by Chance — Exercise by Donor of Honest Judgment.] — The respondent, the proprietor of a variety entertainment, in the course of a performance distributed a number of postal orders to various persons in the audience. The respondent controlled to some extent the action of his assistants in making the distribution, but there was no evidence that he exercised any honest judgment as to the persons who were to receive the orders :—Held, that the destination of the orders was determined by chance, and that the distribution was therefore a lottery within section 2 of the Lotteries Act, 1699. Minty v. Sylvester, 84 L. J. K.B. 1982; 79 J. P. 543; 13 L. G. R. 1085; 31 T. L. R. 589—D.

Company Publishing Chances in Lottery—"Rogues and vagabonds."]—A body corporate cannot be convicted as rogues and vagabonds under section 41 of the Lotteries Act, 1823. Action to Recover Share in Lottery.]—The plaintiff alleged that she bought from the defendant one-eighth of a ticket in the Hamburg State Lottery; that the ticket had won a prize in the lottery; that the prize money had been paid to the defendant; but that the defendant refused to pay over to the plaintiff the share to which she was entitled :—Held, that the action being in respect of a sum of money alleged to be due as the proceeds of a lottery was not maintainable. Gorenstein v. Feldmann, 27 T. Distribution of Handbills Containing Offers by Another to Bet.]—A person who distributes to people in the street handbills which contain an offer by another person named therein to bet with any recipient thereof, the events of which he is prepared to bet, the odds offered, and the means whereby a bet can be made, can be convicted of loitering in the street for the purpose of betting within the meaning of section 1 of the Street Betting Act, 1906. Dunning v. Swetman, 78 L. J. K.B. 359; [1909] 1 K.B. 774; 100 L. T. 604; 73 J. P. 191; 22 Cox C.C. 93; 25 T. L. R. 302—D.

3. Sending Money-lending Circulars to Infants.

Reasonable Ground for Believing that Circular only Sent to Persons of Full Age.]—The respondent, who was a money-lender, was summoned for having sent a circular to an infant inviting him to borrow money contrary to the Betting and Loans (Infants) Act, 1892. The respondent had given instructions to his clerk to send out circulars to captains and lieutenants in the Army, but, knowing that many second lieutenants were minors, he directed the clerk to send no circulars to second lieutenants. Without his knowledge the clerk sent a circular to a second lieutenant who was in fact under twenty-one. The magistrate held that as the respondent had distinctly told his clerk not to send the circular to second lieutenants he did not send or cause to be sent the circular in question, and that even if he were bound by the act of his clerk he had reasonable ground for believing that all persons to whom the circulars were sent were of full age; he accordingly dismissed the summons :—Held, that there was evidence upon which the magistrate could so find. Director of Public Prosecutions v. Witkowski, 104 L. T. 453; 75 J. P. 171; 22 Cox C.C. 425; 27 T. L. R. 211—D.

4. Keeping a Place for Betting and Gaming.

See also Vol. VII. 526, 1721.

"Using" House for the Purpose of Betting with Persons "Resorting" thereto.]—Section 1 of the Betting Houses Act, 1853, declares that any house used by any person for the purpose of betting with any persons resorting thereto shall be a common nuisance and contrary to law, and section 3 of the Act imposes penalties on any person so using the same. The appellant employed a man to stand on the footway outside the door of a house to receive betting slips and money from persons passing along the highway, and another man to stand inside the doorway of the house and receive the bets from the first man and send them on to the appellant elsewhere. He also gave the occupier of the house various sums of money for the privilege of his employees using the house in this manner. The Justices convicted the appellant of "using the house for the purpose of betting with persons resorting thereto :—Held, that there was evidence of a "user of the house" and of "persons resorting thereto" within the meaning of the Act, although the persons making the bets did not enter the house, and that the Justices were entitled on the evidence to convict the appellant of the offence charged. Reg. v. Brown (64 L. J. M.C. 1; [1895] 1 Q.B. 119) distinguished. Taylor v. Monk, 83 L. J. K.B. 1125; [1914] 2 K.B. 817; 110 L. T. 980; 78 J. P. 194; 24 Cox C.C. 156; 30 T. L. R. 367—D.

"Receiving" Money as a Deposit on Bet.]—Under section 4 of the Betting Act, 1853, it is not necessary in order to constitute a receiving of money as a deposit on a bet by the occupier of premises that such deposit should be physically received in the premises from the persons making the bet. It is an offence if the money is handed to the occupier of the premises outside and is then taken by him into the premises. Boulton v. Hunt, 109 L. T. 245; 77 J. P. 337; 23 Cox C.C. 427—D.

—— "Deposit."]—A person makes a deposit within section 4 not only where he hands over a sum smaller than the stake, but where he hands over the full amount of the stake (Avory, J., dissenting). Ib.

Newspaper Offering Prizes for Forecasts of Football Matches.] — The proprietors of a weekly newspaper inserted in certain issues of their paper a notice offering a money prize to the person who, on a coupon cut from the paper and sent to their office, should give a correct forecast of the result of certain football matches. The papers were sold by the proprietors at 9*d.* a dozen to newsagents, who retailed them to members of the public at 1*d.* each. No papers were sold directly to the public by the proprietors, and no coupons were sold apart from the papers. A certain number of papers were bought by members of the public from the newsagents solely for the sake of the coupons :—Held, that the proprietors of the paper used their premises solely for the selling of newspapers, and not for the receipt of money on a promise to pay on a contingency, and accordingly that they had not contravened section 1 of the Betting Act, 1853. Leng & Co. v. Mackintosh, [1914] S. C. (J.) 77—Ct. of Just.

Evidence of User.]—M., with the assistance of her brother P., kept a shop nominally for the sale of chandlery, tobacco, and stationery. The police observed that on days when the newspapers announced that horse races would take place numbers of persons visited the shop, including a man known to the police to be a bookmaker's tout, who on such days was seen to visit the shop several times a day. On making a raid the police found M. behind the counter and three men in the shop, one of whom was writing out a betting docket on the counter. Two other betting dockets were found on the floor beside another of the men, and M. was seen to crush up and throw behind the counter two slips of paper which were found to be betting dockets. Betting newspapers were found on the counter, and betting literature behind the counter and in the back parlour. M. was charged with using the shop for the purpose of betting with persons resorting thereto, and P. with "assisting in the conduct and management of the shop." The only evidence against P. was a statement that he "assisted M. in the shop," made by the prosecutor in giving evidence before the magistrate. Both M. and P. were convicted and fined :—Held, that the shop presented all the indicia of a "betting establishment," and that on the evidence the magistrate was justified in convicting in both cases. Maguire v. Quinn, [1911] 2 Ir. R. 216—K.B. D.

A local Act provided that "any constable having reason to suspect that any house . . . is kept or used as a gambling or betting house may enter such house . . . and take into custody every person who shall be found therein. . . ." A bookmaker occupied premises at which he carried on his business. No persons resorted to the premises for the purpose of betting, the bookmaker communicating with his customers only by letter, telegram, or telephone. No money was deposited when the bet was made, but accounts were rendered weekly, and the balance remitted to or by the bookmaker according to the result of the events on which the bets were made, and the state of the customer's account :—Held, that the premises were not kept as a "betting house" within the meaning of the local Act. Traynor v. Macpherson, [1911] S. C. (J.) 54—Ct. of Just.

The appellant, a bookmaker, received from E. by post at his house postal orders in order that E. might open a deposit account with him for the purpose of making future bets. Shortly afterwards E. backed horses with him, portions of the deposit being appropriated for that purpose. The appellant's house was entered by the police a few days later, and a large number of slips and account books relating to betting were found therein. It was not shewn that any of these related to illegal bets, and the appellant had, in fact, a large credit betting business :—Held, that there was evidence upon which the jury could find that the appellant used the house for the purpose of money (assuming the postal orders to be money) being received by him in consideration for his promise to pay thereafter money on the event of horse races within the meaning of section 1 of the Betting Act, 1853. Rex v. Mortimer, 80 L. J. K.B. 76; [1911] 1 K.B. 70; 103 L. T. 910; 22 Cox C.C. 359; 75 J. P. 37; 27 T. L. R. 17—C.C.A.

An accused was charged with, and convicted of, contravening the Betting Acts by keeping a room at an address and a room at another address "for the purpose of money . . . being received . . . as the consideration for an undertaking . . . to pay thereafter money on events . . . relating to games . . ." :—Held, that the conviction was good, although all the money was received and all the correspondence relating to bets was conducted at one room, while the other was used exclusively for settling up accounts. Stoddart v. Hawke (71 L. J. K.B. 133; [1902] 1 K.B. 353) applied. Hodgson v. Macpherson, [1913] S. C. (J.) 68—Ct. of Just.

Ready Money or Credit Betting.]—A bookmaker occupied premises where he carried on his business by receiving communications from his clients by telephone, the client subsequently sending by post a note of the bet along with a postal order for the sum staked. In a prosecution of the bookmaker for a contravention of the Betting Act, 1853, no nuisance was proved of money being received by the bookmaker before the race on which it was staked was run, but it was proved that clients did not receive their winnings until after their money had been received by the bookmaker :—Held (Lord Salvesen dissenting), that the bookmaker had committed a contravention of the Act. Traynor v. Macpherson, [1914] S. C. (J.) 174—Ct. of Just.

Search of Suspected House — Seizure of Documents—Unopened Letters.]—Section 11 of the Betting Act, 1853, empowers a Justice of the peace in certain circumstances to authorise any constable by special warrant to enter any house or premises suspected of being used as a betting house "and to seize all lists, cards, or other documents relating to racing or betting found in such house or premises" : Held, that "documents" does not cover unopened letters found on the premises. M'Lauchlan v. Renton, [1911] S. C. (J.) 12—Ct. of Just.

—— "Lists, cards, and other documents relating to betting."] — Postal orders are covered by the words "lists, cards, or other documents relating to betting" within section 11 of the Betting Act, 1853. Therefore they may be seized under a search warrant granted under that section, and are admissible in evidence against the person charged with being the keeper of the betting house. Hodgson v. Macpherson, [1913] S. 5. Betting in a Public Place.

Place to which Public have Restricted Right of Access—Railway Depot.]—A mineral depot belonging to a railway company was an irregularly shaped piece of ground surrounded by a fence except for a distance of about 213 yards, where it was bounded by and open to the main line of the company's railway. The railway system of the company was inclosed by walls or fences except where it connected with other railway systems. The only persons who had a right to enter the depot were railway servants and persons who had business with the railway company:—Held (dubitante the Lord Justice-Clerk), that the depot was an "inclosed place" to which the public had a "restricted right of access" within the meaning of section 1, sub-section 4 of the Street Betting Act, 1906. Walker v. Reid, [1911] S. C. (J.) 41—Ct. of Just.

Open Shed on Quay.]—On a quay belonging to a harbour trust there was a shed in the sides of which there were large openings without gates or doors. The public had free access to both quay and shed:—Held, that the shed was "uninclosed ground," and was a "public place" within the meaning of the Street Betting Act, 1906. Campbell v. Kerr, [1912] S. C. (J.) 10—Ct. of Just.

"Racecourse" — Inclosed Field — Athletic Sports—Horse Races.]—In an inclosed field, to which admission was obtained by payment, athletic sports were held. The programme included two horse races and ten other events, consisting of foot races, jumping, and other athletic competitions. At the entrance to the field there was, conspicuously exhibited, a notice prohibiting betting:—Held, that the field was not a "racecourse" within section 2 of the Street Betting Act, 1906, and therefore a conviction of the appellant under section 1 of that Act for betting in the field was right. Stead v. Aykroyd, 80 L. Gas Supplied by Meter—Improper Use.]—A manufacturer, who was supplied with gas for power purposes at a certain rate, the quantity used being ascertained by a meter, was charged with an offence under section 18 of the Gasworks Clauses Act, 1847, in respect that he improperly used and burned such gas for lighting purposes, for which a higher rate was exigible:—Held, that the complaint was irrelevant as the improper using and burning of gas prohibited by section 18 referred only to gas not ascertained by meter. Falkirk Magistrates v. Russell, [1911] S. In Highway — Tunnel under Highway — Laying Pipes through Tunnel—"Building"—"Tunnel" — Re-instating Tunnel.] — The owner of land on both sides of a highway made a tunnel under the road in order to connect his two properties. A gas company having power to lay pipes in the highway laid them through the tunnel, and in doing so removed part of the roof of the tunnel:—Held, that the tunnel was a "building" within the meaning of section 7 of the Gasworks Clauses Act, 1847, and therefore the company had no power to lay pipes through it. Held also, that the tunnel in question was not a "tunnel" within the meaning of section 6 of the Act with which they could interfere, and that, even if it were, they had not re-instated the tunnel in accordance with the provisions of the Act. Schweder v. Worthing Gas Light and Coke Co. (No. 1), 81 L. J. Ch. 102; [1912] 1 Ch. 83; 105 L. T. 670; 76 J. P. 3; 10 L. G. R. 19; 56 S. J. 53; 28 T. L. R. 34—Eve, J.

The word "tunnel" in section 6 is used to describe something ejusdem generis with sewers and drains. Ib.

Power to Break up Roads—Land Dedicated to Public—Extent of Dedication—Depth of Soil—Laying Pipes Five Feet Below Surface.] —Although only so much of the soil of a highway is dedicated to the public as is necessary to support the road, yet under the Gasworks Clauses Act, 1847, a gas company can lay their pipes below the stratum necessary for that purpose. The dedication of the road to public use brings it within section 6 of that Act, and no part of the soil underlying the road is "land not dedicated to public use" within the meaning of section 7 of the Act. Schweder v. Worthing Gas Light and Coke Co. (No. 2), 82 L. J. Ch. 71; [1913] 1 Ch. 118; 107 L. T. 844; 77 J. P. 41; 11 L. G. R. 17; 57 S.J. 44—Eve, J.

—— Highway not Repairable by Inhabitants at Large—Notice to Local Authority.]—By section 8 of the Gasworks Clauses Act, 1847, "Before the undertakers proceed to open or break up any street . . . they shall give to the persons under whose control or management the same may be, or to their clerk, surveyor or other officer, notice in writing of their intention to open or break up the same, not less than three clear days before beginning such work . . ." The appellants, for the purposes of their undertaking, broke up a road in the respondents' district without having given notice under the above section of their intention to break up the same. The road had been dedicated to the public by the landowner, but had not been taken over or repaired by the respondents:—Held (Bankes, J., dissenting), that the road being a highway not repairable by the inhabitants at large, the respondents had not such a "control or management" of it as to entitle them to receive notice from the appellants under the section. Redhill Gas Co. v. Reigate Rural Council, 80 L. J. K.B. 1062; [1911] 2 K.B. 565; 105 L. T. 24; 75 J. P. 358; 9 L. G. R. 814—D.

Prohibition against Extending "Mains"—Service Pipes.]—By a local Act it was provided that it should not be lawful for the defendants to extend their existing "mains" for the supply of gas unless with the previous consent in writing of the plaintiffs. The defendants, without such consent, laid a two-inch pipe eighty-eight yards in length from their fifteen-inch main to supply a foundry with gas for power and lighting purposes. The pipe was laid alongside the road and was not of any greater capacity than was required for the present purposes of the foundry:—Held, that the pipe was not a "main" within the meaning of the Act, either by reason of its position or capacity or otherwise. Whittington Gas Light and Coke Co. v. Chesterfield Gas and Water Board, 83 L. J. Ch. 662; [1914] 2 Ch. 146; 111 L. T. 422; 78 J. P. 379; 12 L. G. R. 892; 58 S. J. 577; 30 T. L. R. 519—C.A.

Decision of Eve, J. (83 L. J. Ch. 390; [1914] 1 Ch. 270), affirmed. Ib.

Duty to Re-instate after Breaking up Street to Lay Pipes.]—A gas company are not released from their liability under section 10 of the Gasworks Clauses Act, 1847, to re-instate the soil and pavement of a street, after breaking up the street for the purpose of re-laying gas pipes, although the local authority have passed a resolution, under the powers given them by section 114 of the Metropolis Management Act, 1855, that they will in all such cases do the work of re-instatement themselves. To transfer the duty from the gas company to the local authority, together with consequent liability for negligence, it is necessary that the local authority should have actually entered upon and taken over the control of the work of re-instatement. A Metropolitan borough council passed a resolution that they would, in all cases where any pavement was opened by a gas company in their borough, do the work of re-instatement themselves. The defendants, having subsequently opened the pavement of a street for the purpose of re-laying gas pipes, temporarily re-instated the soil and pavement, and gave notice to the local authority of such temporary re-instatement. The plaintiff, a foot passenger, sustained personal injuries by reason of the negligent re-laying of one of the paving stones. There was evidence that just before and after the accident the defendants' servants exercised acts of re-instating the paving stones:—Held, that the mere resolution of the local authority did not, after the expiration of a reasonable time after receipt of the notice of temporary re-instatement, ipso facto release the defendants from their liability under the Gasworks Clauses Act, 1847, and that they were responsible for the plaintiff's injuries. Brame v. Commercial Gas Co., 84 L. J. K.B. 570; [1914] 3 K.B. 1181; 111 L. T. 1099; 79 J. P. 55; 12 L. G. R. 1270—D.

3. Purchase of Undertaking.

Purchase by Corporation—Statutory Powers—Basis of Price.]—By section 50 of the Perth Gas Company's Act, 1886, it was made lawful for the Perth Corporation "to purchase all the land, buildings, works, hereditaments, lamps, pipes, stock and appurtenances of and belonging to the company in the name and on behalf of the corporation . . . upon such terms and conditions as shall or may be mutually agreed upon . . . but in case of any dispute or disagreement between the directors and the corporation respecting such purchase as aforesaid, then it shall be lawful for the directors or the corporation, if they or either of them think fit, to require that it shall be left to arbitration to determine what amount of purchase money shall be paid to the directors":—Held, that the price to be paid was the value of the commercial undertaking of the company as a going concern, not only the physical apparatus by which the company carried on their business, but their powers to use that apparatus for the purposes of carrying it on. Perth Gas Co. v. Perth Corporation, 80 L. J. P.C. 168; [1911] A.C. 506; 105 L. T. 266; 27 T. L. R. 526—P.C.

GIFT.

Imperfect Gift—Contractual Obligation.]—At the death of the testator certain promises by him of donations to various institutions remained unredeemed:—Held, that these promises created no contractual obligation between the parties, and therefore that there was no legal debt due from the testator's estate to the institutions. Cory, In re; Kinnaird v. Cory, 29 T. L. R. 18—Eve, J.

Undue Influence — Parent and Child — Manager of Business.]—It is not every fiduciary relation existing between donor and donee which raises a presumption that the gift was made under undue influence. Coomber, In re; Coomber v. Coomber, 80 L. J. Ch. 399; [1911] 1 Ch. 723; 104 L. T. 517—C.A.

For several years prior to his father's death a son assisted his father in the business of an ale-store keeper, and after his father's death in July, 1905, acted as manager of the same business for his mother, who was sole executrix and universal legatee under the father's will. In September, 1905, the mother, being fully advised as to the nature and consequences of her act by an independent solicitor, executed a voluntary assignment of the ale stores in favour of the son, being actuated by affection for her son and a desire to carry out what she believed to have been a wish of the father. The mother died in 1906, having by her will given her residuary estate between her three children equally. In an action impeaching the voluntary assignment,—Held, that the son stood in no such fiduciary relation to the mother as to throw upon him the burthen of shewing that the gift was not made under undue influence. Held, also, that in any case any presumption of undue influence was sufficiently rebutted by the facts. Ib.

Independent Advice—Duty of Solicitor.]—Per Fletcher Moulton, L.J.—An independent solicitor advising a competent adult donor in the matter of an intended gift should fully explain to the donor the nature and consequences of his act, but it is no part of his duty to express his approval or disapproval of the donor's intentions. Ib.

Donatio Mortis Causa — Sufficiency — Chattels — Bearer Bonds — Partial or Inchoate Delivery—Handing over of Key of Receptacle of Property.]—A valid donatio mortis causa of chattels may be made by a partial or inchoate delivery of them, effected by delivery of the means, or part of the means, of obtaining possession of the property. W., when about to undergo a serious operation, from the effects of which he died, placed a number of bearer bonds in a parcel, and wrote his wife's name on the parcel. He then left the parcel at his bank in a locked box, of which he retained the key. He handed a list of the bonds to his wife, and afterwards gave her the key of the box; and she, under his direction, then locked the list and the key in a drawer in her own room, of which she always kept the key:—Held, that this constituted an effectual donatio mortis causa of the bonds to the wife. Jones v. Selby (Pr. HABEAS CORPUS.

Previous Extradition Proceedings in India with Respect to Same Charge—Applicant Discharged Owing to Informality in Proceedings—Prima Facie Case.]—Section 6 of the Habeas Corpus Act, 1679, which provides that "no person or persons which shall be delivered or set at large upon any habeas corpus, shall at any time hereafter be again imprisoned or committed for the same offence by any person or persons whatsoever, other than by the legal order and process of such Court wherein he or they shall be bound by recognizance to appear, or other Court having jurisdiction of the cause," only applies when the second arrest is substantially for the same cause as the first arrest, so that the return to the second writ of habeas corpus raises for the opinion of the Court the same question with reference to the validity of the grounds of detention as the first. The fact, therefore, that a person who had been committed for extradition in India upon the report of a magistrate was, owing to some informality in the procedure before the magistrate, released by the High Court at Calcutta on a write in the nature of a habeas corpus, notwithstanding that there was evidence of a prima facie case against him, is no bar to his being re-arrested in England and committed for extradition to Germany upon the same charge as that preferred against him in India. Rex v. Brixton Prison (Governor); Stallmann, In re, 82 L. Refusal of Rule Nisi by Divisional Court—Court of Appeal—Jurisdiction.]—Where a Divisional Court has refused to grant a rule nisi for a habeas corpus in the case of a prisoner who has been committed with a view to extradition, the Court of Appeal has no original jurisdiction to grant such a rule. Le Gros, Ex parte, 30 T. Application for Licence—Discretion of Commissioner of Police to Refuse.]—The Commissioner of Police is not entitled to lay down and act upon a general rule to refuse a licence for a cab where the applicant for the licence holds his cab under a hire-purchase agreement. Rex v. Metropolitan Police Commissioner; Randall, Ex parte, 75 J. P. 486; 55 S. J. 726; 27 T. L. R. 505—D.

Under the regulations dated December 30, 1907, made by the Secretary of State in pursuance of sections 6 and 11 of the Metropolitan Public Carriage Act, 1869, the Commissioner of the Metropolitan Police has a discretion in regard to the granting of a licence for a cab or a stage carriage. This discretion is not limited to the excepted cases set out in clauses (a) and (b) of regulation 1, but is a general discretion in regard to all applications. Rex v. Metropolitan Police Commissioner; Pearce, Ex parte, 80 L. J. K.B. 223; 104 L. T. 135; 75 J. P. 85—D.

Under the regulations in the Order dated December 30, 1907, and made by the Secretary of State in pursuance of sections 6 and 11 of the Metropolitan Public Carriage Act, 1869, the Commissioner of Metropolitan Police has not a general discretion in regard to the granting or refusing of a licence for a cab or stage coach, but such discretion is limited to the excepted cases set out in clauses (a) and (b) of regulation 1 of the Order. Rex v. Metropolitan Police Commissioner; Pearce, Ex parte (80 L. By-laws—Validity—Certainty and Reasonableness—Light on Dial of Taxi-cab.]—The L. Corporation made the following by-law: "The owner of every motor hackney carriage shall have fitted on such carriage an efficient lamp solely for the purpose of illuminating the dial of the taximeter whenever it is necessary in such a manner that the amount of fare recorded can be clearly seen from the inside of the carriage at all times, and every driver shall see that the lamp is properly lighted and adjusted and so kept." On a summons against a driver for breach of this by-law, the learned stipendiary magistrate declined to convict the driver, being of opinion that the by-law was invalid for uncertainty and unreasonableness, since it imposed two duties, one on the owner and one on the driver; that although the duty on the owner was to fit an efficient lamp for illuminating the dial "whenever it was necessary," these words did not appear in the part of the by-law relating to the driver; and further, that the by-law did not contain adequate information as to the driver's duties:—Held, that the words "whenever it was necessary" applied both to the driver and the owner; that it required the lamp to be fitted by the owner and kept alight by the driver; that it was not unreasonable that the lamp should be solely for the purpose of lighting the dial; and therefore that the by-law was valid. Dunning v. Maher, 106 L. 1. Validity.

a. Petition for Declaration of Validity.

Apart from special statutory provision, such as the Legitimacy Declaration Act, 1858 (21 & 22 Vict. c. 93), the Court has no power to entertain a petition for or pronounce a declaration of the validity of a marriage. Such power, being absent in the Ecclesiastical Courts, is not supplied by the operation of Order XXV. rule 5. De Gasquet James (Countess) v. Mecklenburg-Schwerin (Duke), 83 L. J. P. 40; [1914] P. 53; 110 L. T. 121; 58 S. J. 341; 30 T. L. R. 329—Evans, P.

Marriage Void by Law of Roman Catholic Church.]—A marriage effected in accordance with the law of the land, and followed by cohabitation, is not invalidated by the fact that such marriage is void by the law of the Roman Catholic Church, and that the parties, had they known this, would not have entered into the marriage contract. Ussher v. Ussher, [1912] 2 Ir. R. 445—K.B. D.

b. Solemnisation.

Marriage Celebrated in Austria between Irish Protestant and Austrian Catholic.]—Section 1 of an Irish statute of 1745—19 Geo. 2. c. 13—provided that every marriage after the year 1746 celebrated between a Papist and any person who hath been, or hath professed himself or herself to be, a Protestant at any time within twelve months before such celebration of marriage, if celebrated by a Popish priest, is to be null and void:—Held, that a marriage celebrated in 1833 in Austria between a domiciled Irish Protestant and an Austrian Catholic by a Catholic priest in accordance with the ceremonies of the Catholic Church, was a valid marriage, inasmuch as section 1 of the Act of 1745 while it was in force had no extra-territorial operation. Swifte v. Att.-Gen. for Ireland (No. 1), 81 L. J. P.C. 158; [1912] A.C. 276; 106 L. T. 3; 28 T. L. R. 199—H.L. (Ir.).

c. Evidence.

2. Legitimacy of Children.

Children of Marriage Validated by Deceased Wife's Sister's Marriage Act.]—Notwithstanding the fact that one of the parties to a marriage with a deceased wife's sister has died before the passing of the Deceased Wife's Sister's Marriage Act, 1907, the children of that marriage are legitimated by that Act. Green, In re; Green v. Meinall, 80 L. The spes successionis which the brother of a person has during his lifetime to a share in his property is not a right, title, estate, or interest in expectancy in, to, or in respect of property protected by section 2 of the Act. Ib.

Legitimacy Suit — Costs — Successful Petitioner — Attorney-General's Costs — Costs of other Parties.]—In a legitimacy suit the Attorney-General neither receives nor pays costs, but the Court in view of all the circumstances of this suit, although giving judgment in favour of the petitioner, ordered each of the other parties to pay his own costs. Slingsby v. Att.-Gen., 31 T. L. R. 246—Bargrave Deane, J.

3. Suits for Nullity.

a. Grounds for.

Incapacity — Non-consummation — Absence of Cohabitation.]—Circumstances in which the Court inferred the incapacity of the wife by her persistent refusal to consummate the marriage. F. v. F., 55 S. J. 482; 27 T. L. R. 429—Bargrave Deane, J. S.P. C. v. C., 27 T. L. R. 421—Bargrave Deane, J.

No Cohabitation—Wife's Persistent Refusal to Cohabit and Refusal to take Medical Advice or to Submit to Inspection—Inference of Physical Impediment.]—The persistent refusal of a wife, respondent to a petition for nullity on the ground of physical incapacity, to cohabit, coupled with her refusal to avail herself of medical advice, entitles the Court to draw the inference that there is more than wilful refusal on her part and that physical impediment also exists, and in the absence of submission on her part to the usual order for inspection, the husband being reported as capable by the inspectors, to pronounce a decree nisi annulling the marriage. W. v. W., 81 L. J. P. 29; [1912] P. 78—Evans, P.

Impotence — Admitted Non-consummation — No Apparent Defect in Either Party.]—If the Court is satisfied that a marriage has not been and that, quoad hanc et quoad hunc, it cannot be consummated by the spouses, although no impediment to consummation is clear or apparent in either of them, the Court is justified in annulling the marriage. In a case of this description, where there are cross-prayers for relief, a decree nisi may be pronounced at the suit of both parties, leaving both or either of them to apply for the decree to be made absolute. G. v. G., 81 L. J. P. 90; [1912] P. 173; 106 L. T. 647; 28 T. L. R. 481—Bargrave Deane, J.

Non-consummation—Incapacity not Inferred —Wilful Refusal.]—The contract of marriage implies not merely the ability, but also the willingness, to consummate it. There is no good reason why mere wilful refusal on the part of a woman to consummate marriage should not be a ground for annulling the marriage—provided that such wilful refusal is not a mere temporary unwillingness due to a passing phase or the result of coyness, a feeling of delicacy affected or real, or a nervous ignorance which might be got rid of or cured by patient forbearance, care, and kindness, but a wilful, determined, and stedfast refusal, likely or threatened to be persistent, to perform the obligations and to carry out the duties which the matrimonial contract involves. D. v. D. (or Dickinson v. Dickinson), 82 L. J. P. 121; [1913] P. 198; 109 L. T. 408; 58 S. J. 32; 29 T. L. R. 765—Evans, P.

A wilful and determined refusal to consummate of a like kind on the part of a man would confer the same right to relief on a woman with whom he had passed through the ceremony of marriage. Ib.

If either incapacity or unwillingness to carry out the contract exists, and the Court finds a suit for that purpose to be brought in good faith, the contract is voidable at the suit of the party conceiving himself or herself to be wronged, and the parties are not to be left bound by the tie until one of them is guilty of matrimonial misconduct, giving the other party a right to relief upon that ground. Ib.

Wilful and persistent refusal to allow any marital intercourse is not sufficient ground for a decree of nullity of marriage where no inference of incapacity is drawn. D. v. D. (or Dickinson v. Dickinson) (82 L. J. P. 121; [1913] P. 198) overruled. Decision of Sir Samuel Evans, P. (84 L. J. P. 77; [1915] P. 65), affirmed. Napier v. Napier, 84 L. J. P. 177; [1915] P. 184; 113 L. T. 764; 59 S. J. 560; 31 T. L. R. 472—C.A.

b. Procedure.

Power of Court to Hear Case in Camera— Effect of Order—Subsequent Publication of Evidence.]—Courts of justice in this country must administer justice in public. To justify an order for a hearing in camera it must be shewn that the paramount object of securing that justice should be done would be rendered doubtful of attainment if such order were not made. It cannot be dealt with by the presiding Judge as a matter resting in his individual discretion as to what is expedient. The Court established by the Matrimonial Causes Act, 1857, for the hearing of matrimonial causes was a new Court constituted with the ordinary incidents of other English Courts of justice, and therefore had no greater power of hearing cases in camera than any other Court, whatever may have been the previous practice of the Ecclesiastical Courts abolished by that statute. Scott v. Scott (No. 1), 82 L. J. P. 74; [1913] A.C. 417; 109 L. T. 1; 57 S. J. 498; 29 T. L. R. 520—H.L. (E.)

In any case an order for a hearing in camera extends only to the hearing, and does not prohibit the subsequent publication of what passed at such hearing, provided that such publication be made in good faith and without malice. Ib.

Decision of the Court of Appeal (81 L. J. P. 113; [1912] P. 241) reversed. Ib.

Discovery—Liability of Person of Unsound Mind not so Found, or his Guardian ad Litem.]—A person prosecuting a suit for nullity of marriage in this Division on behalf of a person of unsound mind not so found by inquisition is as compellable to disclose documents as the person on whose behalf the suit is brought would be if he himself were prosecuting the same and of sound mind. Paspati v. Paspati, 83 L. J. P. 56; [1914] P. 110; 110 L. T. 751; 58 S. J. 400; 30 T. L. R. 390—Evans, P.

Decree Absolute — Delay.] — Semble, delay in application is in the absence of other reasons no ground for refusing a decree absolute, where the only result would be to put the petitioner to the expense of commencing proceedings de novo and filing a fresh petition. Giannetti v. Giannetti, 82 L. J. P. 111; [1913] P. 137; 108 L. T. 1037; 57 S. J. 774; 29 T. L. R. 654—Evans, P.

Maintenance — Application by Respondent "Wife" — "Husband's" Petition — Bigamy of "wife"—"Marriage" Declared Null and Void.]—It is enacted by section 1, subsection 1 of the Matrimonial Causes Act, 1907, that "The court may, if it thinks fit, on any decree for dissolution or nullity of marriage, order that the husband shall, to the satisfaction of the court, secure to the wife such gross sum of money or such annual sum of money for any term not exceeding her life as, having regard to her fortune (if any), to the ability of the husband, and to the conduct of the parties, it may deem reasonable, and for that purpose may refer the matter to any one of the conveyancing counsel of the court to settle and approve of a proper deed or instrument to be executed by all necessary parties, and the court may, if it thinks fit, suspend the pronouncing of its decree until such deed shall have been duly executed." A petitioner obtained a decree for nullity of marriage on the ground that at the time of the ceremony the respondent had a husband still living. An application was made that he should be ordered to pay maintenance to the respondent. The contention of the petitioner, who opposed the application, was that the Matrimonial Causes Act, 1907, under which it was made, did not apply to marriages that were void ab initio:—Held, that the Court had power to order maintenance. Ramsay v. Ramsay, 108 L. T. 382—Bargrave Deane, J.

—— Allowance for Woman — Amount — Security.] — Section 1 of the Matrimonial Causes Act, 1907, gives the Court power, after a decree of nullity on the ground of impotence, to order the man to make an allowance to the woman, although there has been a finding against both of them, and, where security can be given, to order the whole or any part of such allowance to be secured. Gullan v. Gullan, 82 L. J. P. 118; [1913] P. 160; 109 L. T. 411—Evans, P.

Semble, the amount of the allowance is in the discretion of the Court on the facts of each case, but will not be regulated by the scale obtaining in cases of dissolution. Ib.

—— Permanent Maintenance — Dum Sola Clause—Reduced Amount on Re-marriage.]— The Court has power in nullity suits to fix permanent maintenance dum sola, and to reduce amount on re-marriage. Marigold v. Marigold, 55 S. J. 387—Evans, P.

4. Action for Breach of Promise of Marriage.

Special Damage — Giving up Business—Pecuniary Loss—Liability of Executor.]—A pecuniary loss suffered by a woman through giving up an employment or business in contemplation of marriage, or any similar loss sustained by her in such circumstances, cannot properly be treated as special damage flowing from a breach of the promise to marry her, and cannot be recovered in an action against the executor of the promisor. Quirk v. Thomas (Executor of), 84 L. J. K.B. 953; [1915] 1 K.B. 798; 113 L. T. 239; 59 S. J. 350; 31 T. L. R. 237—Lush, J.

Belief that Plaintiff Unfit for Marriage—Whether a Defence.]—In an action for breach of promise of marriage the plea that the defendant honestly and on reasonable grounds believed the plaintiff to be unfit for marriage is no defence in law if the plaintiff was not in fact unfit for marriage, but such a belief may affect the amount of the damages. Jefferson v. Paskell, 32 T. L. R. 69—C.A.

5. Restitution of Conjugal Rights.

a. Jurisdiction.

The Matrimonial Causes Act, 1884, has altered the consequences of disobedience to a decree for restitution of conjugal rights, but does not affect the question of service out of the jurisdiction of a petition in that form. The jurisdiction to decree restitution arises from the Matrimonial Causes Act, 1857. The joint operation of sections 41 and 42 of that Act negatives jurisdiction to order service out of the jurisdiction of the petition and citation where this class of relief is claimed. Semble, the domicil of the respondent is immaterial. Firebrace v. Firebrace (47 L. J. P. 41; 4 P. D. 63) approved and followed. Dicks v. Dicks (68 L. J. P. 118; [1899] P. 275) dissented from. De Gasquet James (Countess) v. Mecklenburg-Schwerin (Duke), 83 L. J. P. 40; [1914] P. 53; 110 L. T. 121; 58 S. J. 341; 30 T. L. R. 329—Evans, P.

Apart from the question of service out of the jurisdiction the Court has no jurisdiction to entertain a suit for restitution against a respondent not domiciled in England and not resident in England at the time of the institution of the suit. Ib.

Quære, whether after due service, and where jurisdiction exists to pronounce a decree, that decree can be served upon the respondent out of the jurisdiction. Ib.

The principle of the decision in De Gasquet James (Countess) v. Mecklenburg-Schwerin (Duke) (83 L. J. P. 40; [1914] P. 53), negativing power in the Court to order service of process out of the jurisdiction in a suit for restitution of conjugal rights, is restricted to the case of a respondent not domiciled or resident in England at the time of the institution of the suit, or, semble, who had not a matrimonial home in England at the date when cohabitation ceased. Where it appears from the petition that the parties were domiciled in England at the time of the institution of the suit, or that they had a matrimonial home in England at the date when cohabitation ceased, or that they were both resident in England at the time of the institution of the suit, the petition and citation may be served either within or without his Majesty's dominions, and in any event a decree for restitution of conjugal rights may be so served if made in a suit which there was jurisdiction to entertain. Additional Divorce Rules 221 and 222 will regulate the practice so laid down. Perrin v. Perrin; Powell v. Powell, 83 L. J. P. 69; [1914] P. 135; 111 L. T. 335; 30 T. L. R. 497—Evans, P.

b. Demand.

Written Demand by Solicitor.]—With reference to petitions for restitution of conjugal rights, Divorce rule 175 runs: "The affidavit filed with the petition, as required by rule 2, shall further state sufficient facts to satisfy one of the Registrars that a written demand for cohabitation and restitution of conjugal rights has been made by the petitioner upon the party to be cited, and that, after a reasonable opportunity for compliance therewith, such cohabitation and restitution of conjugal rights have been withheld." The "written demand" in accordance with the above rule should be conciliatory in tone and devoid of any threat; the spirit and not the letter of the rule should be observed. Neumann v. Neumann, 108 L. T. 48; 57 S. J. 228; 29 T. L. R. 213—Bargrave Deane, J.

c. When Decree will be Granted.

Previous Order Obtained from Magistrate on Account of Husband's Desertion—Non-cohabitation Clause—Whole Order Subsequently Discharged on Wife's Application.]—In 1904 a wife, who had been deserted by her husband, obtained a summary order for maintenance. The usual non-cohabitation clause was inserted in the order, but without the knowledge or approval of the applicant. In 1912 the entire order was discharged upon the wife's application. Subsequently she petitioned in the High Court for restitution of conjugal rights. The Court granted her a decree for restitution. Niland v. Niland, 108 L. T. 50; 57 S. J. 248—Evans, P.

Petitioner Guilty of Physical Violence, but not of Cruelty.]—In a suit by a wife for restitution of conjugal rights the husband alleged that the petitioner drank to excess, and, further, that she had been guilty of cruelty towards him. The jury found—first, that the petitioner had been guilty of physical violence to the respondent, but not of cruelty; secondly, that the petitioner drank to excess; thirdly, that it was not unsafe at the time the respondent left the petitioner for the parties to live together:—Held, that a decree of restitution of conjugal rights should be refused. Butland v. Butland, 29 T. L. R. 729—Bargrave Deane, J.

Petition by Wife—No Adultery by Petitioner—Opposition to Decree on Ground of Wife's Conduct—Grant of Decree.]—In a suit by a wife for restitution of conjugal rights, where the husband alleged that the wife's conduct, though she had not been guilty of adultery, had been such as to disentitle her to a decree, the Court declined, on a consideration of all the circumstances, to exercise its discretion by refusing to grant a decree. Fletcher v. Fletcher, 31 T. L. R. 306—Evans, P.

Separation Deed — Subsequent Bankruptcy of Husband.]—A husband and wife entered into a deed of separation which included a covenant that neither party should endeavour to compel the other to live with him or her by any proceeding for restitution of conjugal rights, and a further covenant by the husband to pay the wife 300*l.* a year for her maintenance and support. Subsequently the husband became bankrupt and obtained his discharge:—Held, that in these circumstances the wife was not precluded by the covenant in the deed from instituting a suit for restitution of conjugal rights. McQuiban v. McQuiban, 83 L. J. P. 19; [1913] P. 208; 109 L. T. 412; 29 T. L. R. 766—Evans, P.

d. Procedure and Practice.

Service of Process and Decree—Domicil—Residence—Matrimonial Home—New Divorce Rules.]—The principle of the decision in De Gasquet James (Countess) v. Mecklenburg-Schwerin (Duke) (infra), negativing power in the Court to order service of process out of the jurisdiction in a suit for restitution of conjugal rights, is restricted to the case of a respondent not domiciled or resident in England at the time of the institution of the suit, or, semble, who had not a matrimonial home in England at the date when cohabitation ceased. Where it appears from the petition that the parties were domiciled in England at the time of the institution of the suit, or that they had a matrimonial home in England at the date when cohabitation ceased, or that they were both resident in England at the time of the institution of the suit, the petition and citation may be served either within or without his Majesty's dominions, and in any event a decree for restitution of conjugal rights may be so served if made in a suit which there was jurisdiction to entertain. Additional Divorce Rules 221 and 222 will regulate the practice so laid down. Perrin v. Perrin; Powell v. Powell, 83 L. J. P. 69; [1914] P. 135; 111 L. T. 335; 30 T. L. R. 497—Evans, P.

The Matrimonial Causes Act, 1884, has altered the consequences of disobedience to a decree for restitution of conjugal rights, but does not affect the question of service out of the jurisdiction of a petition in that form. The jurisdiction to decree restitution arises from the Matrimonial Causes Act, 1857. The joint operation of sections 41 and 42 of that Act negatives jurisdiction to order service out of the jurisdiction of the petition and citation where this class of relief is claimed. Semble, the domicil of the respondent is immaterial. Firebrace v. Firebrace (47 J. P. 41; 4 P. D. 63) approved and followed. Dicks v. Dicks (68 L. J. P. 118; [1899] P. 275) dissented from. De Gasquet James (Countess) v. Mecklenburg-Schwerin (Duke), 83 L. J. P. 40; [1914] P. 53; 110 L. T. 121; 58 S. J. 341; 30 T. L. R. 329—Evans, P.

Apart from the question of service out of the jurisdiction the Court has no jurisdiction to entertain a suit for restitution against a respondent not domiciled in England and not resident in England at the time of the institution of the suit. Ib.

Quære, whether after due service, and where jurisdiction exists to pronounce a decree, that decree can be served upon the respondent out of the jurisdiction. Ib.

Apart from special statutory provision, such as the Legitimacy Declaration Act, 1858 (21 & 22 Vict. c. 93), the Court has no power to entertain a petition for or pronounce a declaration of the validity of a marriage. Such power, being absent in the Ecclesiastical Courts, is not supplied by the operation of Order XXV. rule 5. Ib.

Where a sealed copy of a petition for the restitution of conjugal rights and a copy of the citation had been duly served upon the respondent in Ireland, the Court granted a decree, although no leave had been previously obtained, for service out of the jurisdiction. Bateman v. Bateman (70 L. J. P. 29; [1901] P. 136) not followed. Buckley v. Buckley, 107 L. T. 590; 57 S. J. 9—Evans, P.

Answer by Husband Alleging Wife's Adultery —Reply by Wife Alleging Husband's Adultery — Relevancy — "Compensatio criminis."] — Where a wife petitions for restitution of conjugal rights and the husband by his answer alleges adultery by the wife but does not himself ask for any relief, an allegation by the wife in her reply that the husband has committed adultery is irrelevant by way of rebuttal of the husband's answer, is no ground in support of her petition, and should be struck out. Brooking Phillips v. Brooking Phillips, 82 L. J. P. 57; [1913] P. 80; 108 L. T. 397; 29 T. L. R. 288—C.A.

The doctrine of compensatio criminis is not now recognised by the law, and the rule laid down in Seaver v. Seaver (2 Sw. & Tr. 665) has no longer any application in England since the Matrimonial Causes Acts, 1857 and 1884. Ib.

Petition by Wife—Refusal of Compliance by Husband—Periodical Payments by Husband—For "joint lives" or "for life of wife"—Discretion.]—By section 2 of the Matrimonial Causes Act, 1884, it is enacted: "From and after the passing of this Act a decree for restitution of conjugal rights shall not be enforced by attachment, but where the application is by the wife the Court may, at the time of making such decree, or at any time afterwards, order that in the event of such decree not being complied with within any time in that behalf limited by the Court, the respondent shall make to the petitioner such periodical payments as may be just, and such order may be enforced in the same manner as an order for alimony in a suit for judicial separation. The Court may, if it shall think fit, order that the husband shall, to the satisfaction of the Court, secure to the wife such periodical payment, and for that purpose may refer it to any one of the conveyancing counsel of the Court to settle and approve of a proper deed or instrument to be executed by all necessary parties." A wife, aged forty-two, having obtained a decree for restitution of conjugal rights, petitioned for periodical payments to be secured to her by the respondent. The Registrar by his report submitted that the husband, who was seventy-seven years of age, should be ordered to secure periodical payments at the rate of 60*l.* per annum "during their joint lives." On a motion to vary the report to the effect that the periodical payments should be secured to the wife for her life,—Held, that the Court had a discretion as to the duration of time for the payments, and that, having regard to the respective ages of the parties, the report should be varied as prayed. Clutterbuck v. Clutterbuck, 108 L. T. 573; 57 S. J. 463; 29 T. L. R. 480—Bargrave Deane, J.

Non-compliance with Decree — Periodical Payments—Analogy to Alimony—Duration of Payments.]—An order for periodical payments made under the Matrimonial Causes Act, 1884, s. 2, is a personal order against the respondent who has failed to comply with a decree for restitution of conjugal rights, and enforceable in the same manner as an order for alimony in a suit for judicial separation. The payments are analogous to alimony, depending on the means of the parties, and the Court has power by section 4 to modify them. These considerations shew that it was not the intention of the statute to make the payments under section 2 to extend for a longer period than that of the alimony, which would be a consequence of proceeding for a judicial separation as a remedy for the same non-compliance under section 5, and which would be limited to the joint lives of the parties. The power of the Court to order security to be given for the payments does not alter their character, which the statute expresses to be variable as that of alimony. Clutterbuck v. Clutterbuck (29 T. L. R. 480; 108 L. T. 573) disapproved. Tangye v. Tangye, 83 L. J. P. 164; [1914] P. 201; 111 L. T. 944; 58 S. J. 723; 30 T. L. R. 649—Evans, P.

Wife's Suit—Decree—Husband Serving with Army Abroad—Decree to Lie in Office.]—In a wife's suit for restitution of conjugal rights, where it was shewn that the respondent, who was in the Army, was serving abroad at the time of the hearing of the suit, the Court pronounced a decree and directed that it should remain in the office and should not be served till further order. Lang v. Lang, 59 S. J. 561; 31 T. L. R. 467—Evans, P.

II. DIVORCE.

1. Jurisdiction and Duty of Court.

Co-respondent an Indian Native Prince—Extra-territoriality — Status of Sovereign.]—The native princes of India, falling within the class referred to in section 18, sub-section 5 of the Interpretation Act, 1889, though not independent, but subject to the suzerainty of His Majesty, are reigning sovereigns to the extent that they are immune from the jurisdiction of an English Court. An Indian prince, coming within this category and sued as co-respondent in a suit for divorce, was on his application struck out of the proceedings. Statham v. Statham, 81 L. J. P. 33; [1912] P. 92; 105 L. T. 991; 28 T. L. R. 180—Bargrave Deane, J.

Marriage in England between Englishwoman and Domiciled Mexican — Irregularity by Mexican Law.]—The petitioner, an Englishwoman, married in England a domiciled Mexican. By Mexican law a marriage is not valid in Mexico unless it is registered by one or other of the parties to it. The marriage of the petitioner and respondent had not been registered in Mexico. The petitioner, by registering the marriage in Mexico, could have obtained a judicial separation, a decree of divorce not being granted in that country. The petitioner having brought a suit for divorce in this country on the ground of the respondent's adultery, cruelty, and desertion:—Held, that as the respondent's domicil was Mexican, the Court had no jurisdiction to entertain the suit. Ramos v. Ramos, 27 T. L. R. 515—Bargrave Deane, J.

Marriage in England of Domiciled Greek and Englishwoman—Marriage Invalid by Greek Law — Change of Domicil — Original Status.]—A wife, before her marriage domiciled in England, who has contracted in England a marriage valid in English law with a domiciled foreigner, and has thereby acquired the domicil of her husband, is nevertheless, upon the marriage being annulled by the Court of her husband's domicil, for a cause unknown to English law, remitted to her original domicil, and thereby obtains the right to sue in the English Court for breaches of matrimonial obligations, recognised by English law, in the same manner as if her domicil had remained unchanged. Stathatos v. Stathatos, 82 L. J. P. 34; [1913] P. 46; 107 L. T. 592; 56 S. J. 114; 29 T. L. R. 54—Bargrave Deane, J.

A domiciled Englishwoman validly married in England to a domiciled Greek, who later deserted her and obtained from the Court of his (Greek) domicil a decree of nullity on the ground that no Greek priest had been present at the ceremony, was held thereby remitted to her English domicil, entitling her to a divorce in England on the grounds of the desertion and adultery of her husband, who had married and cohabited with a second wife in Greece. The suggestion of the Court of Appeal in Ogden v. Ogden (77 L. J. P. 34, at p. 51; [1908] P. 46, at pp. 82, 83) adopted and followed. Ib.

Deed of Separation—Covenant not to Sue—Provision for Avoidance of Deed by Subsequent Judicial Separation or Dissolution on Ground of Subsequent Misconduct of Husband—Effect of Subsequent Misconduct on Covenant not to Sue—Circuity of Proceedings.]—A husband was guilty of cruelty and adultery. He and his wife then separated under the provisions of a deed which contained a mutual covenant for the condonation of antecedent offences, with a covenant not to sue in respect of them, and a further provision that all the covenants of the deed should be avoided by any further misconduct of the husband resulting in a judicial separation or dissolution of the marriage:—Held, that, although subsequent adultery of the husband could not per se revive his expressly condoned offences so as to permit his wife to sue in respect of them, nevertheless, as he did not set up the deed, his wife need not be put to the circuitous method of obtaining redress by first suing for a judicial separation on the ground of the subsequent adultery and then suing for dissolution from which the covenant in the deed debarred her previous to a judicial separation, and that she could proceed at once for dissolution. Bourne v. Bourne, 82 L. J. P. 117; [1913] P. 164; 108 L. T. 1039; 29 T. L. R. 657—Evans, P.

Dowling v. Dowling (68 L. J. P. 8; [1898] P. 228) followed; the ratio decidendi of the same case doubted. Ib.

—— Desertion.]—The Court granted a decree nisi for divorce at the instance of a wife on the ground of her husband's adultery and desertion where, after the parties had lived apart under a deed of separation, the husband, by his conduct, repudiated the deed. Hussey v. Hussey, 109 L. T. 192; 29 T. L. R. 673—Evans, P.

Wife's Petition for Divorce — Clause in Separation Deed — Bar to Relief — Grant of Judicial Separation.]—On a wife's petition for divorce on the grounds of her husband's cruelty and adultery it was proved that the parties had entered into a separation deed, and evidence of cruelty before the deed, and of adultery after it, was given. The deed provided in clause 3 that neither party should bring against the other any proceedings relating to their relationship of husband and wife, and in clause 9 that in the event of a divorce or judicial separation by reason of misconduct occurring after the date of the deed the provisions thereinbefore contained should become void, but without prejudice to any act previously made or done thereunder or to any pledges on the part of either party in respect of any then antecedent breach of any covenant or provision therein contained. As the wife was debarred by the deed from relying on antecedent cruelty, the Court only granted her a judicial separation on the ground of adultery. Lipman v. Lipman, 60 S. J. 157; 32 T. L. R. 173—Horridge, J.

2. Cruelty.

Communication of Venereal Disease—Communication Knowingly, Wilfully, or Recklessly—Onus of Proof.]—In order to establish a charge of cruelty arising from the communication of a venereal disease, it is sufficient to prove in the first instance that the petitioner has had no intercourse with a third person and has in fact suffered from the disease. The onus then lies upon the respondent to prove that he was ignorant or innocent or otherwise not guilty of the legal cruelty constituted by the communication of the disease. Morphett v. Morphett (38 L. J. P. 23; L. R. 1 P. & D. 702) disapproved. The dissenting judgment of Willes, J., in that case adopted. Browning v. Browning, 80 L. J. P. 74; [1911] P. 161; 104 L. T. 750; 55 S. J. 462; 27 T. L. R. 404—Evans, P.

—— Pleading.]—Allegations in pleading that the respondent knowingly, wilfully, or recklessly communicated the disease are unnecessary. Ib.

Covenant Prohibiting Proceedings for Prior Matrimonial Offences—Husband's Subsequent Adultery—Petition for Divorce by Wife—Cruelty Revived—Deed not Set up by Husband.]—A wife, who had entered into a deed of separation with her husband by which both parties covenanted not to institute proceedings in respect of matrimonial offences committed prior to the deed, petitioned for a divorce on account of the husband's subsequent adultery. It was contended that the condoned cruelty of the husband was thereby revived and that she was entitled to a decree: —Held, that as the husband had not set up the deed a decree could be granted to the wife. Dowling v. Dowling (68 L. J. P. 8; [1898] P. 228) considered and followed. Bourne v. Bourne, 82 L. J. P. 117; [1913] P. 164; 108 L. T. 1039; 29 T. L. R. 657—Evans, P.

3. Desertion.

Petition for Judicial Separation—Adultery and Desertion—Supplemental Petition for Dissolution—Two Years' Desertion not Complete at Date of Petition.]—A wife presented a petition for judicial separation on the ground of her husband's adultery. Before the petition was heard she presented a supplemental petition for dissolution of marriage on the ground of her husband's adultery and desertion for two years. At the date of the presentation of the original petition the desertion had been for eighteen months only:—Held, that there had not been desertion without reasonable excuse for two years, as the presentation of the original petition for judicial separation prevented the subsequent desertion being without excuse. Lapington v. Lapington (58 L. J. P. 26; 14 P. D. 21), Kay v. Kay (73 L. J. P. 108; [1904] P. 382), and Harriman v. Harriman (78 L. J. P. 62; [1909] P. 123) followed. Stevenson v. Stevenson, 80 L. J. P. 137; [1911] P. 191; 105 L. T. 183; 27 T. L. R. 547—C.A.

Deed of Separation—Failure of Husband in Payment of Allowance.]—A husband having threatened to break up the home, which led to the execution of a deed of separation, failed to keep up the payments under the deed. In the circumstances of the case, having also committed adultery, he was held guilty of desertion. But quære, whether in all cases mere failure to pay will avoid the consequences of a deed. Smith v. Smith, 85 L. J. P. 16; [1915] P. 288; 60 S. J. 25; 32 T. L. R. 43—Horridge, J.

Separation Order by Justices—Two Years' Desertion before Order—Subsequent Adultery by Husband.]—A wife obtained from Justices an order under the Summary Jurisdiction (Married Women) Act, 1895, in respect of her husband's desertion for over two years, and that order contained a non-cohabitation clause. Subsequently she discovered that her husband had committed adultery. She then filed a petition for divorce:—Held, that as there had been desertion for more than two years at the time when the separation order was made, and as the husband had committed adultery, the wife was entitled to a decree. Churner v. Churner, 28 T. L. R. 318—Evans, P.

Statutory Desertion — Revival of Condoned Adultery.]—The offence of statutory desertion arising under section 5 of the Matrimonial Causes Act, 1884, for non-compliance with a decree for restitution of conjugal rights has for the purpose of revival the same effect as desertion in fact for two years and upwards and will revive antecedent adultery which has been condoned. Price v. Price, 80 L. J. P. 145; [1911] P. 201; 105 L. T. 441; 55 S. J. 689; 27 T. L. R. 560—Evans, P.

Suppression of Material Facts—Intervention of King's Proctor—Fresh Allegations by Petitioner in Answer to King's Proctor's Plea—Discretion of Court to Rescind or Suspend Decree Nisi or Adopt Intermediate Course—Further Enquiry—Definition of "Material facts"—Purpose of Exercise of Discretion.]—On an intervention by the King's Proctor, even where material facts have been withheld or deliberately suppressed at the original hearing of the petition, the Court must consider all the facts then established by either the King's Proctor or the petitioner before deciding whether it will rescind the decree nisi or exercise a discretion under section 31 of the Matrimonial Causes Act, 1857, or adopt some intermediate course which would necessitate a further enquiry in order to ascertain the true facts. Brooke v. Brooke (No. 1), 81 L. J. P. 75; [1912] P. 136; 106 L. T. 766; 56 S. J. 382; 28 T. L. R. 314—Evans, P.

The suppression of material facts is of grave importance, and even when innocent may bring about the rescission of a decree nisi. Ib.

All facts are material which the Court ought to know and weigh when determining how its discretion should be exercised. The Court has to deal with cases as justice may require, not regarding merely the parties themselves and other persons, such as issue whose interest is more remote, but what is right in the interests of public decency and the State. To this end the Court may rescind the decree nisi or suspend its operation or direct that notice of any fresh allegations made by a petitioner in answer to the King's Proctor's plea should be served upon the respondent to enable the King's Proctor to make further investigation and to lay before the Court all that it should know to guide the exercise of its discretion. Roche v. Roche (74 L. J. P. 50; [1905] P. 142) disapproved. Ib.

Adultery of Petitioner — Application for Exercise of Discretion of Court.]—Although the discretion given to the Court by section 31 of the Matrimonial Causes Act, 1857, is unfettered, the Court ought to be extremely careful in exercising that discretion, not only with respect to the parties concerned in the particular case, but also in the interests of public morality. Circumstances in which the Court exercised its discretion in favour of a petitioner who had not disclosed the fact of her own adultery. Brooke v. Brooke (No. 2), 81 L. J. P. 147*n.*; [1912] P. 205*n.*; 107 L. T. 202; 28 T. L. R. 577—Evans, P.

Where it is shewn that the misconduct of a petitioner has been fully forgiven and completely condoned by the respondent, the Court ought to exercise its discretion in favour of the petitioner, unless there are special or aggravating circumstances in the case or unless strong overriding public reasons exist for denying the relief claimed. The Court refused to exercise its discretion in favour of a petitioner where it was not satisfied as to the fact of condonation, and where it was satisfied that the petitioner had given false testimony on oath. Munzer v. Munzer, 81 L. J. P. 148*n.*; 107 L. T. 203; 57 S. J. 45; 28 T. L. R. 596—Evans, P.

On an undefended petition filed by the wife on the grounds of the cruelty and misconduct of the husband, consisting of an isolated act after his wife had left him, a decree nisi was pronounced, but was subsequently rescinded on the intervention of the King's Proctor alleging the adultery of the wife. Condonation and re-cohabitation followed. On further and subsequent misconduct on the part of the wife a decree nisi was pronounced upon the petition of the husband, the Court exercising the discretion conferred on it by section 31 of the Matrimonial Causes Act, 1857, in his favour upon the facts as stated, and expressly laying down that each case should be dealt with on its own merits and that the exercise of the discretion of the Court should be fettered by no strict rule of law. Woltereck v. Woltereck, 81 L. J. P. 145; [1912] P. 201; 107 L. T. 27; 56 S. J. 706; 28 T. L. R. 532—Evans, P.

In exercising the discretion given it by section 31 of the Matrimonial Causes Act, 1857, to pronounce a decree of dissolution at the instance of a petitioner guilty of adultery, the Court does not treat the sexes on an equal footing. That which would not be excusable in the man may be excusable in the woman, and when the adultery has resulted from her husband's treatment she may retain a decree obtained on the ground of his misconduct, even although she has concealed her own fault from the Court and committed perjury in denying it, provided that the Court is of opinion on the facts that leniency towards the erring petitioner may result in her moral re-instatement. Pretty v. Pretty, 80 L. J. P. 19; [1911] P. 83; 104 L. T. 79; 27 T. L. R. 169—Bargrave Deane, J.

A wife petitioner obtained a decree nisi for the dissolution of her marriage on the grounds of the adultery and cruelty of her husband. At the hearing of her petition, she was advised, in view of her denial of actual misconduct, that no disclosure was to be made of circumstances communicated by her to her solicitor, in consequence of which, on the subsequent hearing of an intervention by the King's Proctor, a jury, disbelieving her denial on oath, found her guilty of adultery and of suppression of material facts:—Held, nevertheless, that, having regard to her future in life, and to the fact that her misconduct had been brought about by the treatment of her husband, the case was one fit for the exercise of the discretion of the Court in her favour. The Court expressed disapproval of the course adopted at the original hearing. Ib.

In the exercise of its discretion under section 31 of the Matrimonial Causes Act, 1857 (20 & 21 Vict. c. 85), the Court is not bound by any rigid rules, but will consider every case entirely upon its own merits. Bullock v. Bullock, 103 L. T. 847—Evans, P.

The Court, while allowing an intervention by the King's Proctor, exercised its discretion in favour of the petitioner, who had been guilty of desertion, but ordered him to pay a weekly sum to the respondent, with liberty to apply to rescind or vary that order. Freeman v. Freeman, 105 L. T. 383; 27 T. L. R. 523—Evans, P.

The Court exercised its discretion in favour of a husband guilty of misconduct which he had not kept back from the Court, when his guilty wife had condoned such misconduct and had by her persistent refusal to cohabit conduced to it. Habra v. Habra, 83 L. J. P. 54; [1914] P. 100; 110 L. T. 991; 30 T. L. R. 391—Bargrave Deane, J.

On a wife's petition for divorce, the Court, being satisfied that but for the husband's gross misconduct she would not have committed adultery, exercised its discretion by granting her a decree nisi, notwithstanding her adultery. Cleland v. Cleland, 109 L. T. 744; 58 S. J. 221; 30 T. L. R. 169—Bargrave Deane, J.

In the special circumstances of the case, on the promise to marry her of the man with whom she had misconducted herself, a wife's decree for divorce was allowed to be made absolute, the Court exercising its discretion in her favour, in spite of the intervention of the King's Proctor, on the grounds that the petitioner had suppressed material facts and denied the misconduct on oath, being thereby guilty of perjury. The Court intimated that in future the discretion would only be exercised in favour of petitioner's making full disclosure. Hampson v. Hampson, 83 L. J. P. 53; [1914] P. 104; 110 L. T. 992; 58 S. J. 474; 30 T. L. R. 392—Bargrave Deane, J.

Semble, misconduct of a petitioner should not only be disclosed at the hearing, but also admitted in the petition. Ib.

Circumstances in which the Court will exercise its discretion by refusing to rescind a decree nisi on the ground that material facts have been withheld from the knowledge of the Court. Barrett v. Barrett, 30 T. L. R. 63—Evans, P.

Circumstances in which the Court will exercise its discretion in favour of a guilty petitioner considered. Coverdale v. Coverdale, 30 T. L. R. 20—Evans, P.

A petitioning wife who had herself been guilty of adultery was granted a decree nisi for divorce in the exercise of the discretion of the Court upon evidence being given that a man with whom she had lived was willing to marry her. Hale v. Hale, 32 T. L. R. 53—Bargrave Deane, J.

On a divorce petition by a husband who had been guilty of adultery which had been condoned, the Court granted a decree nisi on the terms that the petitioner's father should enter into a deed making an allowance to the wife. Strutt v. Strutt, 31 T. L. R. 156—Evans, P.

The Court, in the exercise of its discretion, granted a decree nisi to a petitioning husband, though he had himself been guilty of adultery on two isolated occasions. Clutterbuck v. Clutterbuck, 31 T. L. R. 614—Horridge, J.

On the hearing of a wife's petition for a divorce from her husband on the ground of his desertion and adultery, where it appeared that the petitioner had herself been living in adultery with a man who was now willing to marry her, the Court came to the conclusion that the husband's conduct ought not to have conduced to the wife's adultery, and refused to exercise its discretion in her favour. Goddard v. Goddard, 31 T. L. R. 616—Horridge, J.

After a long separation from his wife, her husband, the present petitioner for dissolution on the ground of her adultery, himself committed an isolated act of misconduct, resulting in the birth of a child. There had been no condonation on the wife's part by reason of the separation, and the husband believed himself a widower. On the intervention of the King's Proctor the Court, although there had been no disclosure at the hearing, exercised its discretion on the grounds of public morality, and in the interest of the woman with whom misconduct had been committed and her child, and allowed the decree nisi to stand. Schofield v. Schofield, 84 L. J. P. 186; [1915] P. 207; 112 L. T. 1000; 31 T. L. R. 236—Evans, P.

Where a wife had obtained a decree nisi for a divorce on the ground of her husband's cruelty and adultery, and the King's Proctor, on the ground of the wife's adultery, intervened to shew cause why the decree should not be made absolute, but was satisfied that the husband's conduct had conduced to the wife's adultery, the Court exercised its discretion in favour of the petitioner and made the decree absolute. Firman v. Firman, 32 T. L. R. 50—Evans, P.

—— Terms.]—The petitioning husband had been guilty of adultery, which had been condoned, and the Court exercised its discretion in the petitioner's favour on the terms that before the decree nisi was made absolute he should secure a weekly allowance to the respondent. Fremantle v. Fremantle, 31 T. L. R. 180—Evans, P.

No Admission in Petition—Pleading—Discretion of the Court to Grant Relief.]—In cases where the Court is asked to exercise its discretion under the Matrimonial Causes Act, 1857, s. 31, to grant a decree to a petitioner who has been guilty of misconduct, that guilt must be expressly admitted in the petition and the exercise of the discretion specifically asked for in the prayer of the petition. King v. King, 84 L. J. P. 80; [1915] P. 88; 112 L. T. 1047; 59 S. J. 334; 31 T. L. R. 240—Bargrave Deane, J.

b. Condonation.

Condonation not Pleaded—Powers of Judge.] Where in a suit for divorce condonation is not pleaded, but becomes an issue in the course of the trial, the Judge and not the jury can find whether there has been condonation or not. Moosbrugger v. Moosbrugger (No. 2), 109 L. T. 192; 29 T. L. R. 715—Evans, P.

c. Collusion.

Collusion is an improper act done by a petitioner with another person, or an improper refraining from an act with a dishonest purpose. It amounts to misconduct which will deprive a party of a decree to which he or she would otherwise on the facts be entitled. Scott v. Scott (No. 2), 82 L. J. P. 39; [1913] P. 52; 108 L. T. 49; 57 S. J. 227; 29 T. L. R. 206—Bucknill, J.

A petitioning wife, who had already obtained a decree of judicial separation on the ground of her husband's desertion, accepted his offer of a sum of money to be paid at once, a further like sum on decree absolute, and an increase of her allowance if she would proceed for a dissolution of marriage on the further ground of her husband's adultery, the means of proving which were furnished to her:—Held, that there was no collusion. Ib.

5. Custody of and Access to Children.

Right of Access of Divorced Mother—Age of Child — Discretion — Mother Living in Adultery.]—Although the former rule that a guilty mother who has been divorced by her husband cannot be allowed access to the child of the marriage against the husband's wish is no longer the law, the Court has a discretion to permit such access. Where the child was a boy eight years of age, about to be sent to school, and the mother was living in adultery with the co-respondent, the Court refused to order that she should be allowed access. Mozley Stark v. Mozley Stark (79 L. J. P. 98; [1910] P. 190) distinguished. Clarke v. Clarke, 57 S. J. 644—C.A.

6. Judicial Separation.

See also Vol. VII. 798, 1795.

Jurisdiction—Act on Petition—Summons to Strike out—Procedure.]—A wife, who was living within the jurisdiction, filed a petition for judicial separation on the ground of adultery, alleging that her husband's residence was in England and that his domicil was either Spanish or English. The petition was served on the husband in England, and he appeared under protest and filed an action on petition, alleging that his domicil of origin was Spanish and that he had never acquired an English domicil or had a permanent residence in this country, and that he was only temporarily within the jurisdiction. On a summons to strike out the act on petition on the ground that it did not shew that the Court had no jurisdiction,—Held, that the act on petition should not be struck out by an order made on the summons, but should be tried along with the wife's suit for judicial separation. Riera v. Riera, 112 L. T. 223; 59 S. J. 206; 31 T. L. R. 50—Bargrave Deane, J.

Countercharge of Adultery against Wife Petitioner—Claim for Damages in Answer.]—A husband countercharging his wife with adultery in her suit for judicial separation may also by his answer claim damages against the alleged adulterer. N. v. N., 82 L. J. P. 56; [1913] P. 75; 108 L. T. 271; 57 S. J. 343; 29 T. L. R. 321—Evans, P.

No Appearance by Respondent—Application by Respondent to Dismiss Petition for Non-prosecution — Decree Nisi Rescinded and Decree for Judicial Separation Granted at Petitioner's Instance.]—A wife petitioned for dissolution of marriage or in the alternative for a judicial separation. The husband did not enter an appearance and filed no answer. On June 11, 1909, a decree nisi for dissolution was granted. In 1912 the respondent applied by summons that the decree nisi should be rescinded and the petition dismissed for want of prosecution on the ground that the decree had never been made absolute. The petitioner opposed that application and asked for a rescission of the decree nisi and for a decree of judicial separation in lieu thereof: —Held, that the decree nisi should be rescinded and a decree of judicial separation pronounced. Griffiths v. Griffiths, 106 L. T. 646; 56 S. J. 364; 28 T. L. R. 281—Evans, P.

7. Variation of Settlements.

See also Vol. VII. 806, 1796.

Petition before Decree Absolute—Jurisdiction.]—There is no jurisdiction under section 5 of the Matrimonial Causes Act, 1859, to take any proceedings to vary a settlement until the decree for dissolution of marriage has been made absolute. The Court, however, may allow a petition for variation of a settlement to remain on the file, but only in order that it may take effect the moment the decree is made absolute. Constantinidi v. Constantinidi (73 L. J. P. 91; [1904] P. 306) considered. Clarke v. Clarke, 80 L. J. P. 135; [1911] P. 186; 105 L. T. 1; 55 S. J. 535—C.A.

Insertion of Fresh Power of Appointment among Children of Future Marriage—Protection of Interest of Existing Child.]—The Court varied a marriage settlement by the insertion of a power to a petitioning husband, who was sole contributor of the settled funds, of appointment to the extent of three-fourths of the capital and income of the funds in favour of a second wife and the children of a second marriage respectively, with provision for a minimum interest for the existing child of the dissolved marriage. Atkins v. Atkins, 83 L. J. P. 18; [1913] P. 211; 109 L. T. 640—Evans, P.

Wife Guilty of Adultery — Allowance to Wife—"Dum sola et casta."]—Where a decree for dissolution of marriage has been pronounced on the ground of the wife's adultery, and application is made for variation of the marriage settlement, any allowance directed to be paid to the wife should be made payable only while she remains sola et casta. Squire v. Squire (74 L. J. P. 1; [1905] P. 4) followed. Ollier v. Ollier, 84 L. J. P. 23; [1914] P. 240; 111 L. T. 697; 58 S. J. 754—C.A.

Moiety of Income to Wife of Property Brought into Settlement by Husband—Bargain—Discretion of Court.]—There is nothing in an agreement—even assuming it to be a valid one—between a husband and wife that in proceedings by the husband for dissolution of their marriage their marriage settlement shall in no circumstances be so varied as to deprive the wife of a certain portion of the income of the settled property that will have the effect of fettering the judicial discretion of the Court as to the insertion of the dum sola et casta vixerit clause in an order made for the dissolution of the marriage. Ollier v. Ollier (supra) considered and applied. Woodcock v. Woodcock, 111 L. T. 924—C.A.

Scheme for Settlement of Property of Guilty Wife — Property subject to Forfeiture on Alienation and to Restraint on Anticipation — Jurisdiction.] — The Court has no power under section 45 of the Matrimonial Causes Act, 1857, to make such a settlement of the property of a divorced woman as will involve the removal of a restraint on anticipation; and this is true even in a case in which the petition for a settlement under section 45 has been presented whilst the divorced woman was still unmarried, but in which she has married again prior to the hearing of the petition. Constantinidi v. Constantinidi (73 L. J. P. 91; [1904] P. 306) distinguished. Loraine v. Loraine, 82 L. J.

Alimony Pendente Lite — Allegation by Husband that Wife Cohabiting with and Maintained by Co-respondent—Denial by Wife on Oath—Right to Cross-examine.]—A wife petitioned for alimony pendente lite in divorce proceedings brought against her by her husband on the ground of adultery. The husband alleged in answer to this petition that the wife was cohabiting with and being maintained by the co-respondent. The wife made an affidavit in reply denying this :—Held, that the husband ought to be allowed to cross-examine the wife on her affidavit and to file evidence as to her means of support, but only on condition that no question was put in cross-examination and no affidavit filed which would go directly or indirectly to the issue of adultery, so as not to deprive her of the protection afforded by the Evidence Further Amendment Act, 1869, s. 3. Bass v. Bass, 84 L. J. P. 53; [1915] P. 17; 112 L. T. 70; 31 T. L. R. 49—C.A.

Alimony—Conduct of Petitioning Wife, short of Matrimonial Misconduct — Proportion to Joint Means of Amount of Alimony to be Ordered.]—In considering a wife's claim to alimony, her conduct, short of matrimonial misconduct, should be looked to. If she has no means, her husband must make her some allowance, but the Court is not bound in the quantum of its order to observe any fixed proportion to the joint means of the parties. Leslie v. Leslie, 80 L. J. P. 139; [1911] P. 203; 104 L. T. 462; 55 S. J. 386; 27 T. L. R. 316—Evans, P.

—— Application to Reduce—Means of Husband—Irrelevant Allegations.]—Upon a husband's petition for the reduction of the amount of alimony payable to a wife under an absolute order, the only material matter for the consideration of the Court is the ability of the husband to pay, and allegations in the petition with respect to the past conduct of the parties will be struck out as irrelevant, although the conduct of the parties is a material matter to be considered when the order for alimony is made. Hall v. Hall, 111 L. T. 403—C.A.

Permanent Maintenance—Consent Order for Payment to Wife "for her life"—Jurisdiction to Vary Order—Wife's Subsequent Petition for Increase — Husband's Cross-petition for Decrease—Withdrawal of Wife's Petition.]—In 1908 a wife obtained a decree for divorce, and filed a petition for permanent maintenance. The Registrar reported that the amount to be paid was agreed by both parties at 90*l.* a year for the wife and 30*l.* a year for the only issue of the marriage, a daughter, until twenty-one; he submitted that the husband should be ordered to pay the agreed amount of 90*l.* a year to the wife for her life and 30*l.* a year to the daughter till she was twenty-one. In June, 1908, an order was made confirming the report and ordering the payment in the terms of the Registrar's submission. In 1913 the wife petitioned for an increase of maintenance, and the husband cross-petitioned for a decrease. At the hearing before the Registrar the wife's petition was withdrawn on the ground that as the order of June, 1908, was a consent order the Court had no power to vary it. The Registrar dismissed the cross-petition, and the President affirmed his order. The husband appealed :—Held, by the Court of Appeal, dismissing the appeal, that, if there had been an order by consent for the payment of maintenance to the wife during the joint lives of the husband and wife, the mere fact that the parties had agreed the amount to be paid would not have prevented an application under section 1, subsection 2 (a) of the Matrimonial Causes Act, 1907, for an increase or decrease of the sum if the circumstances of the parties afterwards changed, but that as the consent order was for the payment to the wife "for her life" there was no jurisdiction, and that the presentation and withdrawal of the wife's petition for increase of maintenance did not affect her position, there having been no fresh agreement. Maidlow v. Maidlow, 84 L. J. P. 20; [1914] P. 245; 112 L. T. 804—C.A.

—— Registrar's Report Recommending Quarterly Payments during Joint Lives—Decree not made Absolute—Order Nunc pro Tunc for Monthly Payments.]—An order under section 1, sub-section 2 of the Matrimonial Causes Act, 1907, for the payment by a husband to his wife during their joint lives of a weekly or monthly sum of money may be made before decree absolute by way of confirmation of the usual Registrar's report recommending such an order, such confirmation to be nunc pro tunc and the order operative as from the date of the decree absolute. Cavendish v. Cavendish, 82 L. J. P. 112; [1913] P. 138; 108 L. T. 1039; 57 S. J. 741; 29 T. L. R. 653—Evans, P.

—— Restraining Dealings with Property—No Subsisting Order for Payment of Fixed Sum.]—The principle laid down in Newton v. Newton (55 L. J. P. 13; 11 P. D. 11)—that the Court will not restrain from dealing with his property a husband against whom no order has yet been made—is of general application and not confined to the case of alimony pending suit. The Court will not, in order to protect a wife's right to permanent maintenance, restrain a husband against whom no order for a fixed sum has been made. Noakes v. Noakes (47 L. J. P. 20; 4 P. D. 60) commented on. Burmester v. Burmester, 82 L. J. P. 54; [1913] P. 76; 108 L. T. 272; 57 S. J. 392; 29 T. L. R. 323—Evans, P.

—— Petition for Reduction—Consent Order "until further order"—Power to Vary.]—On February 5, 1906, a wife obtained a decree absolute for the dissolution of her marriage, and on February 26, 1906, she obtained a consent order for maintenance, under which the husband was ordered to pay her maintenance at the rate of 120*l.* per annum "out of his present income and until further order." On March 26, 1914, the husband petitioned for a reduction of the maintenance on the grounds, first, that since the date of the order he had been compelled to commute a part of his army pension for the purpose of paying legal costs and expenses incurred through illness, and had thereby reduced his pension, which was his sole source of income, from 420*l.* to 320*l.* per annum; and secondly, that the wife's means had increased since that date:—Held, that the Court had power to reduce the amount of the maintenance, and that in a case where the original order for maintenance was made until further order the decrease in the husband's income and the increase in the wife's means were both matters which might be taken into account as grounds for granting a reduction. Dictum of Bargrave Deane, J., in Sharpe v. Sharpe (78 L. J. P. 21, at p. 22; [1909] P. 20, at p. 23), discussed and distinguished. Hall v. Hall, 84 L. J. P. 93; [1915] P. 105; 113 L. T. 58; 59 S. J. 381—C.A.

a. Petition.

No Addresses Given—Refusal of Certificate of Completion—Application to Enter Case.]—Where a Registrar had refused a certificate owing to a petition not setting out the addresses where the parties thereto had cohabited, and had thereby caused the case to be too late for insertion in the next term's list, the Court, while refraining from laying down any rule, ordered the case to be entered as on the date when the certificate was refused. Lawton's Petition, In re, 107 L. T. 591; 57 S. J. 61—Bargrave Deane, J.

Pleading — Venereal Disease.]—Where a petitioner relies upon a charge of wilfully communicating a venereal disease it should be specifically pleaded in the petition. E. v. E. (23 T. L. R. 364) distinguished. Walker v. Walker, 107 L. T. 655; 57 S. J. 175—Bargrave Deane, J. But see Browning v. Browning, ante, col. 641.

—— Wife's Petition—Bigamy with Adultery—Specific Plea of Bigamy—General Charge of Adultery.]—Where a case of bigamy is specifically pleaded, adultery with the same woman ought to be specifically pleaded, in order to entitle the petitioner to relief for bigamy with adultery, and a general charge of adultery with divers women will not suffice for this purpose. Sparrow v. Sparrow, 30 T. L. R. 47—Bargrave Deane, J.

—— Answer—Cross-relief—Claim for Nullity—Trial.]—The answer to a petition for dissolution of marriage may set up a claim for a decree of nullity on the ground of the impotence of the petitioner, and the issue as to nullity will be tried first. S. v. S., 81 L. J. P. 16; [1912] P. 16; 106 L. T. 464—Bargrave Deane, J.

b. Particulars.

Explanatory Affidavit in Default of Further and Better Particulars—Sufficiency.]—In a petition for divorce the petitioner alleged adultery by the respondent at two addresses between various dates. On an application for further and better particulars, the Registrar ordered particulars of "dates and times of day, or explanatory affidavit." The petitioner's solicitor filed an affidavit that he personally or through his agent had caused the witnesses who would be subpœnaed to be carefully questioned and that they were unable to fix the dates:—Held, that a person who swears an explanatory affidavit must himself have seen and questioned the witnesses; and therefore that the affidavit sworn by the petitioner's solicitor was insufficient. C. v. C., 27 T. L. R. 161—Bargrave Deane, J.

c. Discovery.

Notes Made by Medical Man.]—Where a husband, respondent in a divorce suit, asked for discovery of notes made by a medical man who had attended the wife petitioner, the Court refused to make an order. D. v. D., 55 S. J. 331—Evans, P.

d. Delay in Prosecuting Suit.

Motive for Presenting Petition—Refusal of Decree — Discretion — Appeal.]—Where there has been great delay in instituting proceedings for a divorce, the motive for commencing the suit may be taken into consideration when deciding whether there has been unreasonable delay in presenting the petition within section 31 of the Matrimonial Causes Act, 1857; and where the Judge in the exercise of his discretion under that section has refused to grant a divorce on the ground of unreasonable delay, the Court of Appeal will not interfere unless he has decided the case on some wrong principle of law. Pears v. Pears, 107 L. T. 505; 56 S. J. 720; 28 T. L. R. 568—C.A.

On a petition by a husband for divorce on the ground of his wife's adultery, the Court refused a decree for the reason that the petitioner had been guilty of three years' delay without any excuse. Hughes v. Hughes, 31 T. L. R. 631—Horridge, J. Affirmed, 32 T. L. R. 62—C.A.

e. Intervention of King's Proctor.

Striking out Petitioner's Answer on Ground of his Silence.]—In a matrimonial suit, where the King's Proctor shewed cause against the decree being made absolute, the petitioner's solicitors were directed to communicate with their client with a view to ascertaining whether he still defended the proceedings, and whether he would agree to certain evidence being taken on affidavit. For several months communications passed between the petitioner and his solicitors, but the solicitors were left without instructions. On a summons being taken out, the Court directed the petitioner's answer to the King's Proctor's plea to be struck out, and subsequently on motion rescinded the decree. Forster v. Forster, 29 T. L. R. 22—Bargrave Deane, J.

Discretion of Court to Grant Relief notwithstanding Intervention of King's Proctor.]—See cases under BARS TO DIVORCE, ante, cols. 642 et seq.

f. Other Interveners.

Person not a Party to Suit—Allegation of Adultery.]—In a divorce suit, between the decree nisi and the application to make it absolute, the Court, on terms, allowed the intervention of a lady who was not a party to the suit, but with whom the respondent was alleged by the petition to have committed adultery. French v. French, 30 T. L. R. 584—Evans, P.

Decree Nisi—No Evidence Adduced—Intervention by Stranger—Order to Try Issue of Wife's Adultery—Security for Wife's Costs—Jurisdiction.]—A husband presented a petition for divorce against his wife. She presented a cross-petition for divorce against him. The suits were heard together. No evidence was given in support of the husband's petition, which was dismissed, but the wife obtained a decree nisi on her petition. Before it was made absolute a stranger intervened, and the issue of the wife's adultery was ordered to be tried. No terms as to costs were then imposed, but a fortnight later the wife applied that the intervener should be ordered to give security for her costs of the intervention:—Held, that the Court had no jurisdiction to order the intervener to give security. Gilroy v. Gilroy, 83 L. J. P. 49; [1914] P. 122; 110 L. T. 601; 58 S. J. 378; 30 T. L. R. 365—C.A.

Power to Hear in Camera.]—See Scott v. Scott (No. 1), ante, col. 632.

Evidence Taken in Camera.]—In cross-suits for divorce, the case for the wife having been opened in public, and the wife, on being called as a witness, finding it almost impossible to give her evidence by reason of the presence of people in Court, the President directed this part of the case to be heard in camera. Moosbrugger v. Moosbrugger (No. 1). 29 T. Identification of Petitioner—Photograph.]—Circumstances in which the Court is justified in acting on a photograph of a party to a divorce suit as evidence of identification. Hills v. Hills, 31 T. L. R. 541—Horridge, J.

Factum of Marriage Established in Previous Suit for Restitution of Conjugal Rights.]—When the factum of marriage has been established in a suit for restitution of conjugal rights it is unnecessary to give further proof of it in a subsequent suit between the same parties for dissolution of marriage unless upon any grounds the validity of the marriage is then put in issue. Cowley (Countess) v. Cowley (Earl), 82 L. J. P. 120; [1913] P. 159; 109 L. T. 48; 29 T. L. R. 690—Evans, P.

Incestuous Adultery with Wife's Sister—Proof of Relationship.]—In a suit by a wife for divorce on the ground of her husband's incestuous adultery with her sister, a certificate of birth to prove the relationship should, as a rule, be produced. Green v. Green, 29 T. L. R. 357—Bargrave Deane, J.

Cross-examination as to Adultery.]—Notwithstanding the provisions of section 3 of the Evidence (Further Amendment) Act, 1869, a wife respondent who countercharged her husband with conduct conducing to her adultery and connivance at it was allowed to be cross-examined as to her relations with the co-respondent upon her electing to give evidence in support of her countercharges. Ruck v. Ruck, 80 L. J. P. 17; [1911] P. 90; 104 L. T. 462; 27 T. L. R. 191—Evans, P.

It is contrary to the intention of the Evidence Further Amendment Act, 1869, that a witness, party to the suit, should be questioned concerning adultery which has not been alleged in the pleadings. Brown v. Brown, 84 L. J. P. 153; [1915] P. 83; 113 L. T. 190; 59 S. J. 442; 31 T. L. R. 280—Evans, P.

A husband, respondent to a petition for dissolution of marriage on the ground (inter alia) of several alleged acts of adultery, was asked in cross-examination whether he had committed adultery on another and earlier occasion not charged in the petition. The question was objected to and disallowed. Ib.

Where cruelty is alleged to have consisted in part of the making by one spouse against the other of a charge of adultery which is stated to be false and the truth or falsity of the charge is therefore material on the question of cruelty, the party alleging the cruelty in a suit for judicial separation may be cross-examined as to her or his adultery, although she or he may not have already given evidence in denial of such adultery. Lewis v. Lewis, 81 L. J. P. 24; [1912] P. 19; 106 L. T. 191; 56 S. J. 189; 28 T. L. R. 174—Bargrave Deane, J.

"Proceedings instituted in consequence of adultery."]—Semble, the consolidation for purposes of hearing of a suit for judicial separation with a cross-suit for dissolution of marriage on the ground of adultery does not have the effect of making the consolidated suits a "proceeding instituted in consequence of adultery" within the meaning of section 3 of the Evidence Further Amendment Act, 1869. Ib.

Plea of Connivance—Cross-examination as to Adultery.]—Where in a divorce suit a respondent made a counter-charge of connivance against her husband, the Court permitted her to be cross-examined as to her own adultery, although she had previously not denied it. Dennys v. Dennys, 107 L. T. 591; 57 S. J. 61—Bargrave Deane, J.

Corroboration—Previous Statement Admitted to Corroborate Testimony in the Box—Circumstances Precluding Motive to Misrepresent.]—The co-respondent, having given evidence that he had not committed adultery with the respondent, a letter written by him to the respondent, at a date subsequent to that on which adultery was now alleged to have taken place, but previous to any charge having been made, in which he referred to the fact that he had not "held her in his arms" since her marriage was relied on to prove the truth of the fact stated in corroboration of the testimony of the co-respondent in the box. O'Gorman v. O'Gorman, 56 S. h. Co-respondent.

Leave to Proceed without Naming Co-respondent.]—Circumstances in which the Court, in the exercise of its discretion, gave leave to a petition to proceed without naming a co-respondent. Jeffreys v. Jeffreys, 28 T. L. R. 504—Evans, P.

Death of Co-respondent after Appearance—Order Dismissing Co-respondent from Suit—Charge of Adultery with Co-respondent Proceeded with.]—In a husband's petition for divorce an appearance was entered for the co-respondent L. Shortly thereafter L. died, and an order was made that he should be dismissed from the suit:—Held, that, notwithstanding that order, the charge of adultery by the respondent with L. could be gone into at the trial. Wigglesworth v. Wigglesworth, 27 T. L. R. 463—Horridge, J.

Rescission of Decree—Dismissal of Petition—Fresh Order Condemning Co-respondent in Costs.]—Where on the reconciliation of the petitioner and the respondent the decree nisi is rescinded and the petition is dismissed, the co-respondent remains liable for the costs of the suit in which he has been condemned by the decree nisi. The decree nisi will not be severed, retaining that portion of it which deals with the costs, but the order rescinding the decree and dismissing the petition will contain a provision condemning the co-respondent in the costs. Quartermaine v. Quartermaine, 80 L. J. P. 89; [1911] P. 180; 105 L. T. 80; 55 S. J. 522; 27 T. L. R. 458—Bargrave Deane, J.

Discharge of Jury.]—Before a jury can be discharged it is necessary that all parties should express their consent. Jones v. Jones (No. 2), 108 L. T. 1038—Evans, P.

j. The Decree.

Decree Nisi—No Application for New Trial—Decree Absolute—Motion by Co-respondent to Set Aside both Decrees and Verdict on Ground of Alleged Fraud.]—After decree absolute the Court has no jurisdiction at the instance of a co-respondent, upon motion made for that purpose, to rescind that decree and the decree nisi or to set aside the verdict of a jury against the co-respondent which these decrees have followed, although fraud is alleged by him in the obtaining of that verdict and decree nisi, the co-respondent having had time and opportunity for applying for a new trial after the decree nisi and having failed to do so. Kemp-Welch v. Kemp-Welch, 81 L. J. P. 25; [1912] P. 82; 106 L. T. 643; 28 T. L. R. 185—Evans, P.

Rescission.]—On the intervention of the King's Proctor the Court, on the ground that the petitioning wife had concealed material facts, rescinded the decree nisi, which, although the wife had committed adultery, the Court had granted in its discretion (vide King v. King (No. 1), 84 L. J. P. 80; [1915] P. 88). King v. King (No. 2), 32 T. L. R. 78—Bargrave Deane, J.

k. Costs.

i. Wife's Petition.

Costs Incurred by Wife Unpaid—Reversionary Interest—Injunction.]—In a suit at the instance of the wife for divorce an order was made on the husband to pay a certain sum in respect of the wife's costs, and to give security for a further sum. The order was served on the husband's solicitor, but it was not possible to serve the husband himself as he had gone out of the jurisdiction. The husband had no property in this country on which execution could be levied to pay those costs, but he had a reversionary interest under his father's will which he had partially charged and which he had expressed his intention of further charging. On an application by the wife to restrain the trustees of the husband's father's will from paying over, and the husband and his agents from receiving, charging, or dealing with the property in question,—Held, that an injunction should be granted. Dooley v. Dooley, 56 S. J. 207; 28 T. L. R. 113—Bargrave Deane, J.

Wife's Costs—Change of Solicitor—Resumption of Cohabitation—Application to Dismiss Petition—Remedy of Discharged Solicitor—Stay of Proceedings.]—A wife client in the Divorce Division cannot by simply giving notice of change of solicitors deprive the solicitor, who has hitherto acted for her, of the right to tax his costs in that Division or drive him to his remedy by an action against the husband for necessaries at common law. In spite of the parties in a matrimonial suit returning to cohabitation, an immediate order need not be made for the dismissal of the petition without provision being made for the costs of a discharged solicitor of the wife, but the proceedings may be stayed pending the taxation of his bill of costs. Jinks v. Jinks, 80 L. J. P. 84; [1911] P. 120; 104 L. T. 655; 55 S. J. 366; 27 T. L. R. 326—Evans, P.

Jurisdiction of Divorce Division to Decide Reasonableness of Solicitor's Charges and to Tax.]—The liability for, or the reasonableness of, the charges in the bill can be determined in the Divorce Division without the necessity of instituting an action against the husband at common law. Ib.

ii. Husband's Petition.

Husband's Petition Dismissed — Second Petition—Stay of Proceedings till Wife's Costs of First Petition Paid.]—The husband's first petition for dissolution of marriage on the ground of the adultery of the wife was dismissed with costs. Some of the wife's costs of this petition had not yet been paid. The husband now presented a second petition for dissolution of marriage on the ground of the adultery of the wife with another co-respondent, the acts of adultery alleged being all prior in date to the first petition:—Held, that the principle of Kemp-Welch v. Kemp-Welch (79 L. J. P. 92; [1910] P. 232) applied to the case, and that the wife was entitled to a stay of proceedings in the second petition until her costs of the first petition had been paid by the husband. Yeatman v. Yeatman (39 L. J. P. 37) not followed. Sanders v. Sanders, 80 L. J. P. 44; [1911] P. 101; 104 L. T. 231; 55 S. J. 312—C.A.

Wife's Costs — Guilty Wife — Duration of Trial Exceeding Estimate—Further Taxation of Wife's Costs—Party and Party Costs—Discretion of Judge at Trial.]—When after a a trial exceeding the duration anticipated on the Registrar's estimate of her costs a respondent wife is found guilty of adultery and obtains the "usual" order for her costs, she is not, in the absence of special application on behalf of the petitioning husband, limited to the sum previously fixed by the Registrar and ordered to be secured before the trial, but is entitled to such further sum (if any) as in the opinion of the taxing Registrar would have been allowed if the duration of the trial had been known at the time of the previous order, and these further costs will be taxed as between party and party. Robertson v. Robertson (51 L. J. P. 5; 6 P. D. 119) followed. Palmer v. Palmer, 83 L. J. P. 58; [1914] P. 116; 110 L. T. 752; 58 S. J. 416; 30 T. L. R. 409—Evans, P.

Secus, if the Judge at the trial is applied to and exercises the discretion given to him by statute, and by the Divorce Rules—Butler v. Butler (15 P. D. 126). Ib.

Wife's Costs—Husband's Petition—Wife's Cross-charges and Claim for Relief—Non-compliance by Husband with Order for Security for Costs—Attachment.]—The wife, respondent in the original suit, who puts cross-charges upon the record and claims relief becomes in fact a petitioner in respect of her cross-charges, and may move for a writ of attachment on failure to get her costs of the suit secured pursuant to an order. Clarke v. Clarke (60 L. J. P. 97; [1891] P. 278) dissented from. Jones v. Jones (No. 1), 82 L. J. P. 16; [1912] P. 295; 107 L. T. 590; 57 S. J. 10; 29 T. L. R. 22—Bargrave Deane, J.

iii. Against Co-respondent.

Infant Co-respondent.]—Where a petitioner obtained a decree of divorce against the respondent and co-respondent,—Held, that the fact that the co-respondent was an infant and had not appeared was no reason for not making an order against him for costs. Brockelbank v. Brockelbank, 55 S. J. 717; 27 T. L. R. 569—Evans, P.

Rescission of Decree—Dismissal of Petition—Fresh Order Condemning Co-respondent in Costs.]—Where on the reconciliation of the petitioner and the respondent the decree nisi is rescinded and the petition is dismissed, the co-respondent remains liable for the costs of the suit in which he has been condemned by the decree nisi. The decree nisi will not be severed, retaining that portion of it which deals with the costs, but the order rescinding the decree and dismissing the petition will contain a provision condemning the co-respondent in the costs. Quartermaine v. Quartermaine, 80 L. J. P. 89; [1911] P. 180; 105 L. T. 80; 55 S. J. 522; 27 T. L. R. 458—Bargrave Deane, J.

iv. Of King's Proctor and other Interveners.

Decree Nisi—Rescission—Petitioning Wife—No Separate Estate.]—Where the Court on the intervention of the King's Proctor rescinds a decree nisi obtained by a wife, the Court will not condemn the wife in costs unless it is proved that the wife has separate estate. Morris v. Morris, 112 L. T. 999; 31 T. L. R. 217—Bargrave Deane, J.

Discretion—Order for Costs against Married Woman — Evidence of Separate Estate.] — The general rule that a wife shall not be condemned in the costs of litigation with her husband in the Divorce Division without evidence of her having separate estate does not extend to cases in which she is party to intervention proceedings in that division. In intervention proceedings the Court has an absolute discretion as to costs. This discretion is conferred by the Matrimonial Causes Act, 1878, s. 2, which is silent as to separate estate, and the Court exercises its power as it may think proper in intervention proceedings to make orders for costs against a married woman without evidence of her having separate estate. Kennard v. Kennard. Morris v. Morris, 84 L. J. P. 172; [1915] P. 194; 59 S. J. 630; 31 T. L. R. 534—Bargrave Deane, J.

Wife's Petition—Charge of Adultery against Husband—Intervention of Woman Charged with Adultery—Costs of Intervener.]—Where a wife presents a petition for divorce against her husband on account of his alleged adultery and cruelty, and the person with whom he is alleged to have committed adultery intervenes under section 28 of the Matrimonial Causes Act, 1857, or section 3 of the Matrimonial Causes Act, 1907, such person is an "opposite party" within the meaning of section 2 of the Married Women's Property Act, 1893, and on the petition being dismissed an order may be made for payment of her costs out of property of the wife which is subject to a restraint on anticipation. Studley v. Studley, 82 L. J. P. 65; [1913] P. 119; 108 L. T. 657; 57 S. J. 425—C.A.

The "property" out of which payment of costs may be ordered under section 2 of the Married Women's Property Act, 1893, is the whole property which is subject to a restraint on anticipation, and not merely that portion of the property which is for the time being effectively restrained from anticipation. An order for payment of costs thereout need not therefore be limited to the period during which the married woman is under coverture, and the restraint applies. Ib.

10. Summary Proceedings.

See also Vol. VII. 823, 1832.

a. In what Cases.

Desertion—Dismissal of Summons—Adjournment—Second Summons for same Cause of Complaint — Res Judicata.]—A wife, whose summons against her husband for desertion under the Summary Jurisdiction (Married Women) Act, 1895, has been dismissed, cannot obtain an order on a second summons for the same cause of complaint. It is immaterial that desertion is a continuing offence; its commencement must be referable to some particular date, and if the evidence of it is incomplete or unavailable on the return of a summons complaining of it, the wife should apply for, and be allowed, an adjournment for the purpose of completing her case. When the complaint has been once disposed of by the Justices, the matter is res judicata. Stokes v. Stokes, 80 L. J. P. 142; [1911] P. 195; 105 L. T. 416; 75 J. P. 502; 55 S. J. 690; 27 T. L. R. 553—D.

After the dismissal of a summons under the Summary Jurisdiction (Married Women) Act, 1895, for desertion at the instance of a wife who has left her husband, it must be taken that she has left him voluntarily, and the charge of desertion is res judicata; she cannot afterwards prosecute a second summons against him on the same ground of complaint, on the suggested subsequent discovery by her of fresh evidence in support of it which has not been brought forward upon the hearing of the first summons—for example, of the husband having suffered from a venereal disease; and his refusal to maintain her, on the footing that since that discovery she is not bound to return to him, does not constitute desertion by him as from the date of such refusal. Blackledge v. Blackledge, 82 L. J. P. 13; [1913] P. 9; 107 L. T. 720; 77 J. P. 427; 23 Cox C.C. 230; 57 S. J. 159; 29 T. L. R. 120—D.

The withdrawal by a wife of a summons under the Summary Jurisdiction (Married Women) Act, 1895, does not necessarily render the subject-matter of complaint res judicata or dispose of her right to take further proceedings on similar facts. The withdrawal may be conditional; but if it is unconditional, it is an estoppel, barring the same cause of complaint in subsequent proceedings before Justices, though the complaining wife may be able to raise the same subject-matter, coupled with adultery, to obtain relief in the Superior Court. Pickavance v. Pickavance (70 L. J. P. 14; [1901] P. 60) commented on. Hopkins v. Hopkins, 84 L. J. P. 26; [1914] P. 282; 112 L. T. 174—D.

—— Persistent Cruelty—Time within which Proceedings to be Taken.]—A married woman took out a summons in October, 1912, under the Summary Jurisdiction (Married Women) Act, 1895, for a maintenance order on the ground of her husband's desertion since April, 1900. At the hearing the Justices held that the husband had been guilty of cruelty towards his wife, and that on April 2, 1900, he struck her in the eye; they considered that he had persisted in that conduct with the view of forcing her to leave him, and that she was obliged to and did actually leave him on April 2, 1900; and they held that such cruelty, coupled with such intention, amounted to desertion from that date. They accordingly made an order for maintenance:—Held, that such order could not stand as there was no evidence of desertion in April, 1900, and that the proceedings were out of time in respect of the charge of cruelty. Kay v. Kay, 108 L. T. 813; 77 J. P. 128—D.

b. Practice and Procedure.

Desertion — Evidence — Complaint by Wife of Desertion—Finding as to Date of Commencement of Desertion.]—Courts of summary jurisdiction, purporting under the Summary Jurisdiction (Married Women) Act, 1895, to find desertion established, should insert in their finding of fact, or in the order drawn up afterwards, the date on which they held that desertion commenced. Fengl v. Fengl, 84 L. J. P. 29; [1914] P. 274—D.

—— Corroboration.]—The Court will not act upon the uncorroborated evidence of a party, contradicted by the other party, alleging marital intercourse at a material date, upon a summons taken out under the Summary Jurisdiction (Married Women) Act, 1895, complaining of desertion. Joseph v. Joseph, 84 L. J. P. 104; [1915] P. 122; 112 L. T. 170—D.

Separation Order—Weekly Payments—Effect of Resumption of Cohabitation—Discharge of Order—Arrears of Weekly Payments—Limitation as to Number Recoverable.]—Where an order has been made by a Court of summary jurisdiction under section 5 of the Summary Jurisdiction (Married Women) Act, 1895, that a wife be no longer bound to cohabit with her husband and that the husband should make weekly payments to his wife, the payment of arrears of such weekly sums which can be enforced is, by virtue of section 9 of the Act of 1895, section 4 of the Bastardy Laws Amendment Act, 1872, section 54 of the Summary Jurisdiction Act, 1879, and section 11 of the Summary Jurisdiction Act, 1848, limited to the arrears which accrued due within six months before the date when the application to enforce payment of such arrears was made. Matthews v. Matthews, 81 L. J. K.B. 970; [1912] 3 K.B. 91; 107 L. T. 56; 76 J. P. 315; 23 Cox C.C. 65; 28 T. L. R. 421—D.

Semble, per Lord Alverstone, C.J., and Pickford, J. (Avory, J., dissenting), an order for separation and for maintenance made under section 5 of the Act of 1895 is not ipso facto discharged by the voluntary resumption by the wife of cohabitation with her husband; it remains in force until it is discharged under section 7 of the Act by a Court of summary jurisdiction acting within the district in which the order was originally made, upon a proper application made to the Court for that purpose. Ib.

Failure to Comply with Maintenance Order — Jurisdiction to Commit Defendant — No Evidence of Means.]—An order for the payment of maintenance money to a wife under the Summary Jurisdiction (Married Women) Act, 1895, may be enforced in default of sufficient distress by committal to prison, although no affirmative evidence of means is given by the person applying for such committal. Rex v. Richardson; Sherry, Ex parte, 79 L. J. K.B. 13; [1909] 2 K.B. 851; 101 L. T. 541; 73 J. P. 434; 22 Cox C.C. 182; 25 T. L. R. 711—D.

Justices' Separation Order—Evidence Required—Allowance of Wife's Costs.]—On this appeal by a husband from a maintenance order made by Justices under the Summary Jurisdiction (Married Women) Act, 1895, the Court made some observations on the evidence which Justices ought to require before making such an order, and allowed the appeal, but granted the respondent her costs. Terry v. Terry, 32 T. L. R. 167—D.

c. Appeal.

Refusal to Enforce Payment of Arrears under Justices' Order.]—An appeal from the refusal of a Court of summary jurisdiction to enforce arrears under an order for maintenance made under the Summary Jurisdiction (Married Women) Act, 1895, lies to the King's Bench Division under section 9 of the Summary Jurisdiction Act, and not to the Probate, Divorce, and Admiralty Division under section 11 of the Act. Ruther v. Ruther (72 L. J. K.B. 826; [1903] 2 K.B. 270) followed. Adams v. Adams, 83 L. J. P. 151; [1914] P. 155; 111 L. T. 414; 58 S. J. 613—D.

Aggravated Assault — Conviction — Grounds of Conviction.]—In the case of a conviction under the Offences Against the Person Act, 1861, s. 43, of a husband of an aggravated assault upon his wife as a ground for entitling the Court, so convicting, to make an order for separation on the application of the wife, pursuant to the proviso concluding the Summary Jurisdiction (Married Women) Act, 1895, s. 4, and to section 8 of the same Act, there is no appeal under section 11 of the later Act to the Probate, Divorce, and Admiralty Division against the merits of the conviction. In such a case the order for a separation is complete in itself without reference to the conviction or its grounds or their sufficiency. Bryant v. Bryant, 84 L. J. P. 30; [1914] P. 277; 112 L. T. 171; 59 S. J. 75; 31 T. L. R. 36—D.

Appeal of Husband — Poor Person — Wife's Costs.]—The fact that a husband, successfully appealing from an order of Justices under the Summary Jurisdiction (Married Women) Act, 1895, has been admitted to appeal as a poor person is no ground for departing from the usual practice to allow the wife respondent her costs of supporting the order made in the Court below. Order XVI. rule 29 is in point. Hope v. Hope, 84 L. J. P. 176; [1915] P. 125; 113 L. T. 377; 79 J. P. 320; 59 S. J. 457—D.

Security for Costs—Appeal by Husband to Divisional Court. — Where a husband, possessed of means, appealed from an order of a Court of summary jurisdiction, the President granted the application of the wife, without means, that the husband should find security for her costs of appeal. L. v. L. (No. 1), 55 S. J. 330—Evans, P.

—— Stay of Husband's Appeal.]—On the appeal of a husband from an order made at the instance of his wife under the Summary Jurisdiction (Married Women) Act, 1895, the wife made an application in chambers, supported by an affidavit as to the means of the parties, for security for her costs of the appeal. The Judge in chambers, considering the application fit for a Divisional Court, consulted the other Judge of the Division, and afterwards announced their decision in Court without the Divisional Court being actually constituted to sit. The application was allowed, the husband being ordered to pay into Court a sum fixed, or give security to the satisfaction of a Registrar, and the hearing of the appeal being in the meanwhile stayed. Sirrell v. Sirrell, 80 L. J. P. 8; [1911] P. 38; 104 L. T. 79; 27 T. L. R. 155—D.

Striking out Non-cohabitation Clause.]—In proceedings before Justices under the Summary Jurisdiction (Married Women) Act, 1895, a married woman obtained an order by which it was adjudged that her husband had deserted her, and it was ordered that she was no longer bound to cohabit with him. The husband unsuccessfully appealed, but on his application the Court varied the Justices' order by striking out the non-cohabitation clause. Dunning v. Dunning, 55 S. J. 650; 27 T. L. R. 534—D.

Res Judicata—Wife's Costs.]—Semble, a wife whose ground of complaint is held by the Court of Appeal to be res judicata is not, when that point has been taken before the Justices, entitled to costs against her husband either in the Court of Appeal or before the Justices. Blackledge v. Blackledge, 82 L. Agreement Providing for Immediate Reconciliation and for Contingency of Future Separation.] — An agreement entered into between a husband and wife while living separate and apart, providing for their resuming cohabitation, and further that, in the event of a future separation, provision should be made for the wife, is legal and enforceable.

MacMahon v. MacMahon; Purser v. Purser, [1913] 1 Ir. R. 428—C.A.

Covenant by Husband for Allowance to Wife — Consideration — Wife Refraining from taking Legal Proceedings against Husband.]—A deed of separation was entered into between a husband and wife after the latter had been subjected to treatment at the hands of her husband which would have justified her in taking proceedings for assault against him before a magistrate. Such proceedings were not in fact taken. By the terms of the deed of separation the husband agreed to make his wife a weekly allowance. In an action by the wife to recover arrears of the allowance due to her,—Held, that the fact that the wife refrained from taking proceedings against her husband when she was legally entitled to do so was sufficient consideration to support the agreement for separation, which was accordingly not void as being against public policy, and that the defendant was liable thereunder upon his covenant to make his wife an allowance. Hulse v. Hulse, 103 L. T. 804—D.

Recital of Agreement that Husband is to Pay Weekly Sum to Wife while she Remains Chaste—Covenant by Husband to Pay Weekly Sum in General Terms—Recital Controlling Covenant.]—By a deed of separation, after a recital that the husband had "agreed to allow" the wife "the sum of five shillings per week for her maintenance during her life so long as she shall remain chaste, such weekly payments to commence as from February 5, 1910," it was witnessed that "for effectuating the said agreement and in consideration of the premises" the husband "doth hereby covenant that he . . . will duly and punctually pay or cause to be paid the said sum of five shillings per week to" the wife "or to such person as she shall from time to time authorise to receive the same on Saturday in each week":—Held, that the covenant was controlled by the recital and that the weekly sum of five shillings was only payable to the wife while she remained chaste. Hesse v. Albert (3 Man. & Ry. 406) followed. Crouch v. Crouch, 81 L. J. K.B. 275; [1912] 1 K.B. 378; 106 L. T. 77; 56 S. J. 188; 28 T. L. R. 155—D.

Validity of Deed of Separation as Bar to Suit for Restitution.]—Where a deed of separation contains covenants not to sue for restitution of conjugal rights and for the payment by the husband of an allowance to his wife, it is of the essence of the agreement that the allowance be maintained. As the allowance is provable in bankruptcy, and an action cannot after discharge in bankruptcy be maintained on the covenant, it is clear, after the husband has made default in payment, been adjudicated a bankrupt and received his discharge, and the wife has proved in the bankruptcy, that the deed and the covenant not to sue cannot be set up in bar of proceedings by the wife for restitution of conjugal rights. McQuiban v. McQuiban, 83 L. J. P. 19; [1913] P. 208; 109 L. T. 412; 29 T. L. R. 766—Evans, P.

IV. WIFE'S RIGHTS AND PROPERTY.

See also Vol. VII. 1022, 1847.

1. Dower.

Sale of Land—Purchase Money—Claim of Doweress.]—On the sale of lands out of which dower is payable the doweress is not entitled, as of right and against the heir, to have an apportioned part of the purchase money paid to her in satisfaction of her claim to dower, but is only entitled to payment of the dower as it accrues due. Wilson, In re; Wilson v. Clark, 32 T. L. R. 150—Sargant, J.

2. Jointure.

Prima facie a jointure is an estate to the wife for life to take effect on the death of the husband. De Hoghton v. De Hoghton (65 L. J. Ch. 667; [1896] 2 Ch. 385) followed. Greenwood v. Lutman, [1915] 1 Ir. R. 266—Barton, J.

3. Power to Disclaim.

Gift by Will of Annuity for Separate Use—Restraint on Anticipation.]—A married woman may, since the Married Women's Property Act, 1882, disclaim a gift to her by will of personal estate although it is given to her with a restraint on anticipation. Wimperis, In re; Wicken v. Wilson, 83 L. J. Ch. 511; [1914] 1 Ch. 502; 110 L. T. 477; 58 S. J. 304—Warrington, J.

4. Effect of Deceased Wife's Sister's Marriage Act on Property.

Gift of Interest during Widowhood—Marriage with Deceased Sister's Husband—Subsequent Validation — Right to Retain Interest.]—The effect of section 2 of the Deceased Wife's Sister's Marriage Act, 1907, is that no rights of property, whether of the so-called husband and wife or of third parties, depending on the invalidity of a marriage with a deceased wife's sister contracted before the Act, are to be altered or interfered with by the validation of the marriage, as a civil contract, by section 1:—Held, therefore, that a widow who, being entitled to an interest during widowhood, had before the passing of the Act married her deceased sister's husband, was entitled to retain the interest notwithstanding the validation of her second marriage by the Act. Whitfield, In re; Hill v. Mathie, 80 L. J. Ch. 263; [1911] 1 Ch. 310; 103 L. T. 878; 55 S. J. 237; 27 T. L. R. 203—Parker, J.

5. Policies of Insurance.

Policy "for the benefit of" Wife.]—A married man effected with a life assurance society a policy of assurance, described as an "endowment bond," in terms of which the society undertook, in consideration of the payment of certain annual premiums, to pay to him the principal sum assured, with interest and profits, on the expiry of twenty years. The society also undertook, in the event of the husband's death before the expiry of the twenty years, to pay the principal sum assured to his widow, whom failing, to the husband's executors, administrators, or assigns. The husband having died within the twenty years, survived by his widow, and his estate having been sequestrated,—Held (dub. the Lord President), that the policy in question was a policy "for the benefit of his wife" within the meaning of section 2 of the Married Women's Policies of Assurance (Scotland) Act, 1880 (cf. section 11 of the Married Women's Property Act, 1882), and accordingly that the proceeds thereof fell to the widow and not to the husband's creditors. Chrystal's Trustee v. Chrystal, [1912] S. C. 1003—Ct. of Sess.

Trust for Wife and Children — Tontine Dividends — Assignment by Husband for Benefit of Creditors—Rights to Benefits under Policy.]—By a policy effected by a husband on his own life, the insurance company contracted to pay to E. M., the wife of the insured, for her sole use, "if then living," and, if not living, to the children of the insured or their trustees for their use, or if there should be no such children surviving, then to the executors, administrators, or assigns of the insured, the sum of 1,000*l*. On the back of the policy were various conditions, from which it appeared that the policy was issued on the semi-tontine plan; that the tontine dividend period expired on June 20, 1910; that no dividend was to be allowed unless the insured survived the completion of that period and the policy should be then in force; that the surplus or profits derived from semi-tontine policies not in force when their respective tontine dividend periods expired were to be apportioned among such as completed their periods; and that on June 20, 1910, the insured in question, if the policy was then in force, would have the option of—first, withdrawing in cash the policy's entire share of the assets; secondly, of converting the same into a paid-up policy for an equivalent amount; thirdly, of withdrawing in cash the share of accumulated surplus and continuing the policy on the ordinary plan; or fourthly, of continuing the assurance for the original amount and applying the entire dividend to the purchase of an annuity payable together with the annual dividends in cash to the insured or his assigns. The insured's wife died before the completion of the dividend period, leaving one daughter. In 1905 the insured assigned his property to a trustee for the benefit of his creditors, and the terms of the assignment were wide enough to include the policy if capable of assignment. On the expiration of the dividend period the insured was still alive, and the trustee for his creditors claimed the right to exercise the first option and of receiving the entire assets for the creditors:—Held, that the options under the policy could only be exercised for the benefit of the persons for whom the trust was created; that so long as any objects of the trust remained unperformed the trusts could not be defeated; that the options must be exercised in the best manner for the benefit of those entitled, and that the proper course was for the insurance company to issue a paid-up policy within the meaning of option 2 for the benefit of the child or children surviving the insured, and if there should be none the benefit of it would fall into his estate. Equitable Life Assurance Society of United States and Mitchell, In re, 27 T. L. R. 213—Swinfen Eady, J.

Insurance by Married Woman for Benefit of Children.]—On August 2, 1872, a married woman effected a policy of insurance on her own life for the benefit of her children. By her will she bequeathed the policy moneys to her four daughters equally. She survived her husband and died in November, 1914, leaving four daughters and five sons, all of whom were born before the date of the policy:—Held, that the testatrix had no power, under the Married Women's Property Act, 1870, s. 10, to take out a policy for the benefit of her children, and that the four daughters were entitled to the policy moneys as legatees under the will. Burgess's Policy, In re; Lee v. Scottish Union and National Insurance Co., 113 L. T. 443; 59 S. J. 546—Eve, J.

6. Receipt by Husband.

Whether Gift to Husband by Wife.]—Where husband and wife are living together in amity, and the husband, with the wife's consent, receives her separate income, he is, in the absence of an agreement express or to be inferred from the circumstances, taken to receive it in his capacity as head of the family and is entitled to deal with it as he pleases and is not liable to account for it to his wife or to repay any part of it to her. It is a question of fact whether an agreement has been arrived at which rebuts the presumption arising from the receipt of the wife's money by the husband. A wife's separate income was, with her consent, received by her husband:—Held, on the evidence, that the money was only paid to the husband for the purpose of investment and that it remained the wife's property. Young, In re; Young v. Young, 29 T. L. R. 391—Warrington, J.

7. Dealings with.

Undue Influence — Common Solicitor for Husband, Wife, and Creditor—Surrender of Wife's Property—No Independent Advice.]—A married woman living with her husband, at her husband's request and with the knowledge of her husband's solicitor, who was also the solicitor of the appellant bank, in a long series of transactions surrendered to the bank her whole fortune as guarantee for the company of which the solicitor was a director and shareholder, but was himself unwilling to guarantee the liabilities:—Held, that the transactions must be set aside; that the solicitor ought to have plainly informed the lady of the whole situation and the risks which she was incurring, and ought to have insisted on her taking independent advice. Bank of Montreal v. Stuart, 80 L. J. P.C. 75; [1911] A.C. 120; 103 L. T. 641; 27 T. L. R. 117—P.C.

Transfer of Wife's Money into Joint Names of Husband and Wife — Intention — Joint Tenancy.]—A, who carried on business in a small shop and was possessed of 1,200*l.* in money, married B, a workman earning wages. According to evidence accepted by the Court, A, both before and after marriage, announced her intention, in the presence of B, of putting the 1,200*l.* in their joint names, to become the property of the survivor; and she did, in fact, a few days after the marriage, without any solicitation or pressure by B, lodge the money on deposit receipt, in the joint names of A and B; and in answer to the question, "Whose was the money to be?" she said in her evidence, "On both our names to work on it as husband and wife should." After the marriage B paid his wages to A, and the money on deposit receipt was drawn on from time to time as required for the shop or other expenses, the profits of the shop being lodged from time to time on deposit receipt, in the names of A and B:—Held, that the money so lodged on deposit receipt was the joint property of A and B during their joint lives, and would become the absolute property of the survivor of them. Foley v. Foley, [1911] 1 Ir. R. 281—C.A.

8. Restraint on Anticipation.

Restraint on Anticipation at Time of Entering into Contract—Judgment against Married Woman—Instalments of Annuity Accruing Due before Judgment—Money in Hands of Trustee.]—A contract entered into by a married woman can, under section 1 of the Married Women's Property Act, 1893, be enforced only against such of her separate property as neither at the time when she entered into the contract nor at any subsequent time has been subject to restraint against anticipation. Wood v. Lewis, 83 L. J. K.B. 1046; [1914] 3 K.B. 73; 110 L. T. 994—C.A.

A bill of exchange was accepted by a married woman at a time when she was entitled to the benefit of a deed of covenant, by the terms of which a sum of money was to be paid quarterly to a trustee in trust to pay the same to her for her separate use without power of anticipation. After the commencement of an action against her on the bill a sum of money was under the covenant paid to the trustee, and five days later judgment was entered against her in default of defence. In garnishee proceedings taken by the judgment creditor against the trustee,—Held, that the sum of money in the hands of the trustee was not attachable to answer the judgment debt. Barnett v. Howard (69 L. J. Q.B. 955; [1900] 2 Q.B. 784) followed. Ib.

9. Mortgages.

Mortgage of Wife's Estate — Money Expressed to be Paid to Husband and Wife—Inference—Exoneration of Wife's Estate—Rebutting Evidence.]—The law as stated by Wood, V.C., in Hudson v. Carmichael (23 L. J. Ch. 893, at p. 894; Kay, 613, at p. 620)—that "Whenever the wife's estate is mortgaged, and the money is paid to the husband, or" (in a case arising before 1883) "to the husband and wife . . . If the deed expresses that it was paid to the husband and the wife . . . it may be shewn by extrinsic evidence that the payment was in fact for the benefit of the wife. If it was not, then, the estate of the wife being a surety for the husband's debt, she has the advantage of that position as against all persons except the husband's other creditors"—and to the same effect by Hardwicke, L.C., in Kinnoul (Earl) v. Money (3 Swanst. 202*n.*, at p. 208*n.*), is not, and was not intended to be, overruled or dissented from by Lindley, L.J. (in delivering the judgment of the Court of Appeal) in Paget v. Paget (67 L. J. Ch. 266, at p. 270; [1898] 1 Ch. 470, at pp. 474, 475). Hall v. Hall, 80 L. J. Ch. 340; [1911] 1 Ch. 487; 104 L. T. 529—Warrington, J.

To prevent an inference being drawn that the wife was a surety only, it must be shewn by affirmative evidence either that the money was applied for her benefit, or that, when raised, it became, by assent or agreement of the husband, her separate property and was afterwards given by her to him. Ib.

V. HUSBAND'S LIABILITIES.

See also Vol. VII. 1198, 1865.

Authority of Wife to Pledge Husband's Credit after Leaving Him — Ostensible Authority.]—A wife who was living with her husband received authority from the latter to order goods from the plaintiffs. The goods so ordered were booked to the "account address," that being the house at which the wife was living with her husband, and the bills therefore were settled by the husband. The defendant's wife left him and went to live with another man. Between the date when she left her husband and the time when he discovered her whereabouts the wife ordered goods from the plaintiffs, which she directed to be booked to the account address and forwarded to the place where she was living. On learning where his wife was, the defendant inserted an advertisement in the newspapers stating that he would not be responsible for her debts. In an action by the plaintiffs against the defendant to recover the amount due for the goods supplied to his wife after she had left him,—Held, per Darling, J., that the ostensible authority given by the defendant to his wife to pledge his credit only continued whilst she was living with him as a virtuous wife, and did not continue after she had left him to live with another man. Held, per Bucknill, J., that the ostensible authority given to the wife by her husband to order goods on his behalf was subject to the limitation that it only applied to such goods as were to be sent to the house where she was living with her husband. Swan & Edgar v. Mathieson, 103 L. T. 832; 27 T. L. R. 153—D.

Wife's Tort—Husband's Liability—Decree of Judicial Separation.]—The plaintiff sued the defendants, who were husband and wife, to recover 3,590*l.*, which he alleged he had been induced to pay by reason of certain false and fraudulent statements of the female defendant. The defendants were living together at the time the money was so paid by the plaintiff, but subsequently the male defendant obtained a judicial separation from his wife. At the trial the jury found—first, that the alleged misrepresentations were made by the female defendant to the plaintiff; secondly, that the alleged misrepresentations were not made by her as agent for her husband, that they were not made at his instigation, but that they were made with his knowledge, authority, and acquiescence; thirdly, that the male defendant derived benefit by receiving 240*l.* from his wife knowing it to be derived from the swindle; fourthly, that the motive of the male defendant in petitioning for a decree of judicial separation from his wife was to avoid liability:—Held, that the male defendant was in the position of an independent tortfeasor; that his liability extended to all money obtained in consequence of the frauds in which he took part; and that he was liable to the plaintiff for the full amount claimed. Burdett v. Horne, 28 T. L. R. 83—C.A.

Presumption of Advancement — Resulting Trust—Deposit Receipt in Names of Husband, Wife, and Third Party.]—A placed on deposit receipt with his bankers the sum of 1,200*l.*, his own money, in the names of himself, his wife, and his brother. By his will, made shortly afterwards, he left all his property to his wife and his brother for their lives, and after their deaths for charitable purposes. There was no evidence beyond the fact of the deposit to shew A's intention in making it in the joint names:—Held, that the presumption of advancement in favour of the wife was not affected by the insertion of the name of the brother in the receipt, and that he was trustee of the fund for her. Eykyn's Trusts (6 Ch. D. 115) followed. Condrin, In re; Colohan v. Condrin, [1914] 1 Ir. R. 89—M.R.

VII. ACTIONS BETWEEN HUSBAND AND WIFE.

See also Vol. VII. 1272, 1871.

Marriage Settlement—Chattels Assigned to Trustees—Wife Entitled to User—Detention by Husband—Action by Wife—Trustees not Joined.]—By a marriage settlement a husband assigned to trustees certain chattels upon trust to allow them to be used by the wife during her life free from the control of her husband. In an action by the wife against her husband for the wrongful detention of the chattels,—Held, that the action could be maintained by the wife without joining the trustees of the settlement as parties. Healey v. Healey, 84 L. J. K.B. 1454; [1915] 1 K.B. 938; 113 L. T. 694—Shearman, J.

Dispute as to Property — Reference to Registrar to Report — Conclusiveness of Report.]—Where in proceedings by a husband to recover property from his wife under section 17 of the Married Women's Property Act, 1882, the Judge refers the question to a Registrar for report, it is not necessary for the claimant to move to adopt the report, but either party may move to vary the report, and unless so varied the report must be taken to be correct in subsequent proceedings. When the report did not find that the property in dispute was in the wife's possession, an order on the wife to deposit it in Court within three days cannot be supported. On proof of possession such an order may be made under Order L. rule 3, with a view to the interim preservation of the property pending the determination of the right of ownership. Wilder v. Wilder, 56 S. Native Prince—Extra-territoriality—Status of Sovereign—"India."]—The native princes of India, falling within the class referred to in section 18, sub-section 5 of the Interpretation Act, 1889, though not independent, but subject to the suzerainty of His Majesty, are reigning sovereigns to the extent that they are immune from the jurisdiction of an English Court. An Indian prince, coming within this category and sued as co-respondent in a suit for divorce, was on his application struck out of the proceedings. Statham v. Statham, 81 L. J. Jurisdiction as to Infants.]—The High Court of Madras has no jurisdiction to make an order directing a guardian of Hindu infants, who are residing in England, to hand the infants over to their father in India. Besant v. Narayaniah, L. R. 41 Ind. App. 314; 30 T. L. R. 560—P.C.

3. Legal Decisions.

See also Vol. VII. 1314, 1878.

Administration—Inventory Required by Law—Approximate Lump Figure—Motion for Enquiry—Time Limit.]—By section 98 of the Probate and Administration Act, 1881, as substituted in that Act by section 15 of the Probate and Administration Act, 1889 (Acts of the Governor-General of India in Council), "An executor or administrator shall, within six months from the grant of probate or letters of administration, or within such further time as the Court which granted the probate or letters may from time to time appoint, exhibit in that Court an inventory containing a full and true estimate of all the property in possession . . ." By section 2, sub-section 4 of the Court Fees Amendment Act, 1889 (also an Indian Act), "If the petitioner does not amend the valuation to the satisfaction of the Collector, the Collector may move the Court before which the application for probate or letters of administration was made to hold an inquiry into the true value of the property: provided that no such motion shall be made after the expiration of six months from the date of the exhibition of the inventory required by . . . section 98 of the Probate and Administration Act, 1881":—Held, that the time limited in this proviso only ran from the date of the lodging of the inventory required by law, and that it could not run from the depositing of a document which omitted the details of a full and true estimate and only gave an estimated lump figure of the approximate value. Musammat Rameshwar Kumar v. Gaya (Collector), L. R. 40 Ind. App. 236; 30 T. L. R. 65—P.C.

Adoption — Partition — Share of Adopted Son.] — In certain instances, according to Hindu law, on the distribution of family property by partition, an adopted son is only entitled to a reduced share, but those instances do not include cases where there is no competition between an adopted son and a subsequently born legitimate son of the same father. Nagindas Bhugwandas v. Bachoo Hurkissondas, 32 T. L. R. 132—P.C.

Benami Transaction—Purchase of Bungalow — Registration in Name of Purchaser's Mistress.]—Held, on the facts, that the purchase by a Rajput of a bungalow, of which the deed of sale was registered in the name of his mistress, was a benami transaction, which resembled the doctrine of English law that the trust of the legal estate results to the person who pays the purchase money. Musammat Bilas Kunwar v. Desraj Ranjit Singh, 31 T. Burma—Appeal to Privy Council—Award of Compensation for Land Compulsorily Taken.]—A special and limited appeal is given by the Indian Land Acquisition Act, 1894, from the award of "the Court" to the High Court, but no appeal lies under the Act from the High Court to the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council. Rangoon Botatoung Co. v. Rangoon Collector, L. Ejectment—Land in Cantonment—Proprietor or Licensees.]—Held, that certain land within the Poona Cantonment was only held by the appellants on military or cantonment tenure, and that the Government could resume it at their pleasure, subject to making compensation for buildings erected by the licensees thereon. Ghaswala v. Secretary of State for India, 27 T. L. R. 521—P.C.

Fishery in Ganges — Shifting Channel — Right to Follow.]—By the law of Bengal the grantee from the Crown of a several fishery in the river Ganges, in which new channels are frequently formed, can follow the shifting river for the enjoyment of his exclusive fishery so long as the waters form part of the river system within the upstream and downstream limits of his grant, whether the Government owns the subjacent soil or whether it is still in a riparian proprietor as being the site of a recent encroachment of the river. Raja Srinath Roy v. Dinabandhu Sen, L. R. 41 Ind. App. 221; 30 T. L. R. 662—P.C.

Infants — Guardianship — High Court of Madras—Jurisdiction.]—By Hindu as well as by English law the father is the natural guardian of his children during their minorities, but this guardianship is in the nature of a sacred trust, and he cannot therefore during his lifetime substitute another person to be guardian in his place. If he affects to do so, the authority conferred upon the substituted guardian is revocable, and the question whether the father is entitled to revoke it depends on the infants' interests, welfare, parentage, and religion. The High Court of Madras has no jurisdiction to make an order directing a guardian of Hindu infants, who are residing in England, to hand the infants over to their father in India. Besant v. Narayaniah, L. R. 41 Ind. App. 314; 30 T. L. R. 560—P.C.

—— Specific Performance.]—It is not within the competence of a manager of a minor's estate, or within the competence of a guardian of a minor, to bind the minor or the minor's estate by a contract for the purchase of immovable property. Therefore such a contract, if entered into, cannot be specifically enforced. Mir Sarwarjan v. Fakaruddin Mahomed Chowdhry, 28 T. L. R. 56—P.C.

Joint Hindu Family—Widow's Share of Immovables on Partition—Succession.]—The members of a joint Hindu family effecting a partition may agree that a portion of the property shall be transferred to the widow by way of absolute gift as part of her stridhan so as to constitute a provision for her stridhan heirs; but in the absence of such an agreement the property acquired by a widow on a partition of the joint estate is on the same footing as property coming to her by way of inheritance. Debi Mangal Prasad Singh v. Mahadeo Prasad Singh, L. R. 39 Ind. App. 121; 28 T. L. R. 219—P.C.

—— Contract by Managing Members of Family — Power to Sue.]—The managing members of a Hindu joint family, who are entrusted with the management of a business carried on in the interests of the family, are entitled to enforce at law the ordinary business contracts entered into by them without joining the other members of the family as plaintiffs. Kishen Parshad v. Har Narain Singh, L. R. 38 Ind. App. 45; 27 T. L. R. 243—P.C.

Life Insurance—Policy—Right of Assignee as against Depositary of Policy.]—The appellant and respondent each claimed to be entitled to the proceeds of a policy of insurance on the life of one D. deceased. The appellant based his claim on an assignment in writing by D.; the respondent based his claim upon a deposit with him by D. of the policy as security for the repayment of a debt:—Held, that as by virtue of section 130 of the Indian Transfer of Property Act, 1900, a transfer of an actionable claim can only be effected by an instrument in writing, the respondent acquired no right to the policy or its proceeds, and that the appellant, who claimed under an instrument in writing conforming to the provisions of the section, was entitled to the proceeds of the policy. Mulraj Khatau v. Vishwanath Prabhuram Vaidya, 29 T. L. R. 89—P.C.

Limitations, Statute of — Immovables — Mortgage — Sale — Proceeds in Hands of Wrongdoer—Suit against Wrongdoer—Period of Limitation.]—By article 132 of the Second Schedule to the Indian Limitation Act, 1877 (Indian Statute), a suit "to enforce payment of money charged upon immovable property" must be brought within twelve years from the time when the money becomes due. By article 120 a "suit for which no period of limitation is provided elsewhere in this schedule" must be brought within six years from the time when the right to sue accrues. The appellants advanced money on mortgage of immovable property in India, and the respondents advanced money on a second mortgage. The appellants having subsequently obtained a decree for the sale of the property, the property was sold, and the appellants wrongfully obtained a balance over and above the amount due to them, with knowledge that such balance was affected with a charge to the respondents. The respondents, at a date more than six but less than twelve years after the money became due to them, brought a suit against the appellants to recover the surplus sale proceeds:—Held, that the suit was a suit "to enforce payment of money charged upon immovable property" within article 162 and was therefore brought in time. Barhamdeo Prasad v. Tara Chand, L. R. 41 Ind. App. 45; 30 T. L. R. 143—P.C.

Money Paid to Prevent Compulsory Sale—Coercion.]—The appellant's mill having been, as he alleged, wrongfully attached by the respondents, the appellant paid under protest the sum claimed, and thereafter sued for a return of the money so paid:—Held, that although the payment under protest of the sum demanded by the respondents was not the only course open to the appellant to rid himself of the alleged unlawful interference with his property, it was an involuntary payment produced by coercion, and that the appellant was entitled to maintain an action for its recovery. Kanhaya Lal v. National Bank of India, 29 T. L. R. 314—P.C.

Mortgage—Instrument to be "attested" by Two Witnesses.]—Section 59 of the Indian Transfer of Property Act, 1882, provides that in a certain class of cases a mortgage "can be effected only by a registered instrument signed by the mortgagor and attested by at least two witnesses":—Held, that this provision requires that the witnesses should be actually present at and witness the execution of the mortgage, and that attestation upon the acknowledgment of the mortgagor is not sufficient. Shamu Patter v. Abdul Kadir Ravuthan, L. R. 39 Ind. App. 218; 28 T. L. R. 583—P.C.

Pardanishin Women—Deed of Gift—Proof of Intelligent Execution—Independent Advice.]—Where a person claims under a deed of gift from a Pardanishin woman, the onus is on the claimant to shew that the transaction had been explained to her and that she understood it, but there is no rule of law that such a gift cannot stand unless the woman had independent advice. If the giving of independent advice would not really have made any difference in the result, the deed ought to stand. Kali Bakhsh Singh v. Ram Gopal Singh, L. R. 41 Ind. App. 23; 30 T. L. R. 138—P.C.

Pre-emption.]—The right of pre-emption held to exist among the Hindus of Behar. Jadu Lal Sahu v. Maharani Janki Koer, 28 T. L. R. 369—P.C.

Punjab—Custom of Agriculturists—Sale of Ancestral Lands—Necessity—"Just debt."]—By the custom of the agriculturists of the Punjab the male proprietor of lands may validly, as against reversioners, alienate ancestral lands in payment of a just debt:—Held, that a "just debt" means a debt which is actually due and is not immoral, illegal, or opposed to public policy, and has not been contracted as an act of reckless extravagance or of wanton waste, or with the intention of destroying the interests of the reversioners. Sardar Kirpal Singh v. Sardar Balwant Singh, 29 T. L. R. 69—P.C.

Sale of Property—Irregularities in Publishing and Conducting Sale.]—Sale of property set aside on the ground of material irregularities within the meaning of section 311 of the Indian Code of Civil Procedure, 1882, in publishing and conducting the sale. Tekait Krishna Prasad Singh v. Moti Chand, L. R. 40 Ind. App. 140; 29 T. L. R. 345—P.C.

Trespass—Search of Premises Ordered by District Magistrate in Course of Enquiry into Disturbance—Action of Trespass against Magistrate.]—A serious disturbance having taken place in a district in India, the appellant, a district magistrate, in the course of his enquiry into same, ordered a search of (inter alia) the respondent's cutcherry. The respondent's cutcherry being locked, and there being no one on the ground to open it, the doors were forced and the contents of the buildings were searched, but nothing of an incriminating nature was found. The respondent having sued the appellant for trespass in respect of the search and obtained judgment, the appellant appealed:—Held, allowing the appeal, that the appellant was warranted by the provisions of the Code of Criminal Procedure in directing the search of the respondent's cutcherry. Clarke v. Brojendra Chowdhry, L. R. 39 Ind. App. 163; 28 T. L. R. 486—P.C.

Will—Hindu Law—Bequest to a Class—Unborn Persons.]—By Hindu law, where there is a gift to a class some of whom may be incapacitated from taking because not born at the time of the testator's death, and where there is no other objection to the gift, it enures for the benefit of those members of the class who are capable of taking. Observations of Wilson, J., in Ram Lal Sett v. Kanai Lal Sett (12 Ind. L. R., Calcutta Series, 663) approved. Bhagabati Barmanya v. Kali Charan Singh, L. R. 38 Ind. App. 54; 27 T. L. Nomination of Property by Members—Limit of Amount—Time of Ascertaining Amount—Date of Nomination.]—By section 25, subsection 1 of the Industrial and Provident Societies Act, 1893, a member of a registered society is enabled to nominate a person or persons to or among whom his property in the society shall be transferred at his decease, "provided the amount credited to him in the books of the society does not then exceed 100*l.* sterling":—Held (Lord Shaw dissenting), that as the word "then" in the proviso to the sub-section refers to the date of nomination and not of death, a nomination is valid if at its date the sum standing to the credit of the member in the books of the society does not exceed 100*l.*, although at the date of the death of the member it does exceed that sum. Eccles Provident Industrial Co-operative Society v. Griffiths, 81 L. J. K.B. 594; [1912] A.C. 483; 106 L. T. 465; 56 S. J. 359; 28 T. L. R. 299—H.L. (E.)

Apprenticeship Deed—Covenant by Apprentice to take Effect after Termination of Apprenticeship—Breach—Right of Master to Injunction.]—A covenant in an apprenticeship deed, made while the apprentice is an infant, to do or abstain from doing something after the apprenticeship shall have terminated, which covenant is reasonable and for the benefit of the apprentice, is enforceable against him. Gadd v. Thompson, 80 L. J. K.B. 272; [1911] 1 K.B. 304; 103 L. T. 836; 55 S. J. 156; 27 T. L. R. 113—D.

An apprentice, an infant, covenanted that he would not, after the apprenticeship should have terminated, carry on the same trade as his master within a specified area during a specified time. After the termination of the apprenticeship he committed a breach of this covenant. There was evidence that he could not have been apprenticed except on the terms of the covenant:—Held, that as the covenant was a reasonable one, and for the benefit of the apprentice, an injunction restraining him from committing further breaches of it should be granted. Ib.

Contract for Employment and Instruction—Breach—Liability for Infant for Damages—Executory Contract—Necessaries.]—An infant, who had acquired a reputation as a billiard player, entered into a contract with a well-known and ex-champion billiard player to go for a tour with him round the world as billiard players. The tour was to be for eighteen months and the net earnings were to be divided between them. The tour was to be under the sole control and arrangement of the adult billiard player. The infant having acted under this contract for three weeks refused to continue it:—Held, that the contract was one for the employment and instruction of the infant, and being for his benefit was binding upon him as a contract for necessaries; and that he was therefore liable in damages for its breach notwithstanding that the breach took place at an early stage when the contract was still to a large extent executory. Roberts v. Gray, 82 L. J. K.B. 362; [1913] 1 K.B. 520; 108 L. T. 232; 57 S. J. 143; 29 T. L. R. 149—C.A.

—— Professional Boxer — Enforceability.] — An agreement by which the defendant, an infant, who was a professional boxer, appointed the plaintiff his sole manager on commission, and agreed not to take engagements under any other management without the plaintiff's consent for three years, held unenforceable against the infant, as it was a trading contract and as it could not be construed as being beneficial to him. Shears v. Mendeloff, 30 T. L. R. 342—Avory, J.

Trading Contract — Benefit of Infant — Liability—Claim ex Delicto—Money Had and Received.]—An infant is not liable upon a contract made in the course of a trade in which he is engaged, and money paid to him under such a contract cannot be recovered back. But if in an action against an infant for money had and received it can be shewn that in substance the plaintiff's claim is a claim ex delicto, the action is maintainable. Cowern v. Nield, 81 L. J. K.B. 865; [1912] 2 K.B. 419; 106 L. T. 984; 56 S. J. 552; 28 T. L. R. 423—D.

Goods Obtained by Fraud—Necessaries—Bill of Sale—Liability of Infant.]—In an action brought by the plaintiff to recover from the defendant the price of certain furniture and effects, the defendant pleaded that at the time he entered into the contract he was an infant to the plaintiff's knowledge. The goods were transferred to the defendant by an agreement containing a licence to the plaintiff to resume possession of the goods if the price was not paid on a certain date. The defendant sold some of the goods for a sum of 30*l.*, and, with the plaintiff's assent, transferred the remainder by bill of sale as security for an advance of 100*l.* by the grantee. The jury found that the defendant represented that he was of full age fraudulently to deceive the plaintiff, and that the goods were necessaries:—Held, that there was no evidence on which the jury could find that the goods were necessaries, and that the agreement was therefore void, and no action could be brought upon it. But held, that in equity, where an infant has wrongfully sold property acquired by a fraudulent misrepresentation as to his age, he must account for the proceeds of the sale to the party defrauded, and that the plaintiff was therefore entitled to recover the sums received by the defendant in respect of the goods. Held, further, that the agreement by which the goods were transferred by the plaintiff to the defendant was a bill of sale which was governed by the Bills of Sale Act, 1878, and not by the Bills of Sale Act, 1882, and was not therefore void for not complying with the requirements of the later Act. Stocks v. Wilson, 82 L. J. K.B. 598; [1913] 2 K.B. 235; 108 L. T. 834; 20 Manson, 129; 29 T. L. R. 352—Lush, J.

Loan Obtained by Infant by Fraudulent Misrepresentation that he was of Age—Liability of Infant — Equitable Relief.] — An infant obtained loans by a fraudulent misrepresentation that he was of full age :—Held, that the infant was not liable to repay the loans, either as damages for fraudulent misrepresentation, or as "money had and received," or on the ground that the infant was compellable in equity to refund the moneys which he had obtained by fraud. Leslie, Lim. v. Shiell, 83 L. J. K.B. 1145; [1914] 3 K.B. 607; 111 L. T. 106; 58 S. J. 453; 30 T. L. R. 460—C.A.

Decision of Horridge, J. (29 T. L. R. 554), reversed. Ib.

Marriage Settlement by Infant—Repudiation — Reasonable Time.] — The reasonable time within which an infant may exercise his right to repudiate a settlement commences to run, not from the time when the property, the subject-matter of the settlement, falls into possession, but from the time when the infant attains twenty-one years of age. Jones, In re; Farrington v. Forrester (62 L. J. Ch. 996; [1893] 2 Ch. 461) not followed. Edwards v. Carter (63 L. J. Ch. 100; [1893] A.C. 360) and Carter v. Silber (61 L. J. Ch. 401; [1892] 2 Ch. 278) followed. Cornell v. Harrison, 60 S. J. 121—Neville, J.

Cheque—Liability on.]—The defendant, who was an infant at the time, drew a cheque on a date prior to July 29, 1913, making it payable to one Bell, and postdating it August 14. The cheque was not given for necessaries. On July 29 the defendant came of age. On August 11 the plaintiff cashed the cheque for Bell, and on August 14 presented it, but it was returned marked "Account closed" :—Held, in an action on the cheque, that the plaintiff could not recover. Hutley v. Peacock, 30 T. L. R. 42—Scrutton, J.

Necessaries—Hire of Motor-car for Specific Journey—User beyond Limits Contracted for—Damage to Car—Liability of Infant.]—The defendant, an infant of twenty years of age and in receipt of an allowance of 80*l.* a year, hired a motor car from the plaintiff for the purpose of driving it to a place six miles off to fetch his bag. It was alleged by the plaintiff, but not proved, that the car was hired on the terms that it should be at the defendant's risk. The defendant drove to the place where his bag was, and meeting a friend drove him to a place twelve miles further on. In the course of this additional part of the journey the car was damaged beyond repair without negligence on the part of the defendant. In an action by the plaintiff to recover the value of the car,—Held, first, that the defendant was not liable in tort, since his act in taking the car for a longer journey than that contemplated by the contract did not make him a trespasser in regard to the car during the extended portion of the journey, so as to render him liable for damage done to the car without default on his part; and secondly, that he was not liable in contract, inasmuch as the mere hiring of the car did not render him liable for its loss owing to causes not depending upon any want of skill or care on his part. Fawcett v. Smethurst, 84 L. J. K.B. 473; 112 L. T. 309; 59 S. J. 220; 31 T. L. R. 85—Atkin, J.

Although the hiring of the car for the purpose in question by an infant in the position of the defendant might be a necessary, it would not be so if an onerous term, such as that the car should be at the infant's risk, formed part of the contract of hiring. Ib.

Entering on Infant's Estate with Notice of Infant's Rights.]—A person entering upon an infant's estate with notice of the infant's rights becomes his bailiff, and continues to be such bailiff, notwithstanding the infant's coming of age, until the relationship is dissolved by some other circumstance or combination of circumstances. A demand of possession by the infant will be such a circumstance, but if made within six years before action brought it affords no defence under section 3 of the Real Property Limitation Act, 1874. McMahon v. Hastings, [1913] 1 Ir. R. 395—M.R.

Deposit of Money in Joint Names of Father and Daughter—Presumption of Resulting Trust Rebutted.]—Where money is placed on deposit by a father in the joint names of himself and his daughter, and to be paid out to the survivor, the relationship of father and child, in the absence of special circumstances, rebuts the ordinary presumption of a resulting trust for the owner, and raises the presumption that the child was meant to take beneficially if she survived her father. Warwick, In re; Warwick v. Chrisp, 56 S. J. 253—Parker, J.

Action by Infant Suing by Father as Next Friend—Staying Action—Costs.]—The Court, being of opinion that an action for an account brought by an infant suing by his father as next friend was instituted by the father with the sole object of extorting money and ought never to have been commenced, stayed the action on the application of the defendant and ordered the next friend to pay the costs. Huxley v. Wootton, 57 S. J. 145; 29 T. L. R. 132—Eve, J.

Administration Action — Infant Plaintiff — Costs of Next Friend—Debt Due to Testator by Next Friend—Set-off.]—The costs of a next friend of an infant in an administration action are treated as the costs of the infant, and accordingly they cannot be set off against a debt which the next friend owes to the estate. Barton, In re; Holland v. Kersley, 56 S. J. 380—Neville, J.

Negligence of Fellow Servant — Common Employment.]—The plaintiff, a boy of fourteen, who had been invited by the defendants' firemen to assist along with other boys in pulling the defendants' fire escape home after it had been used in fire drill, was injured in so doing. In an action claiming damages from the defendants the jury found, first, that the defendants were not themselves guilty of negligence; secondly, that the fire escape was a fit and proper one for its purpose; thirdly, that the defendants' servants were guilty of negligence in the management of the fire escape or in allowing the plaintiff to pull it; and fourthly, that the plaintiff was not aware of the danger:—Held, that the doctrine of common employment applied, and that judgment should be entered for the defendants. Bass v. Hendon Urban Council, 28 T. L. R. 317—C.A. Reversing 76 J. P. 13—Darling, J.

II. WARD OF COURT.

See also Vol. VII. 1354, 1895.

Removal Out of the Jurisdiction — Committal.]—It is no answer to a motion for committal to prison for contempt of Court in removing a ward of Court out of the jurisdiction to say that the act was done on the solicitation of the ward, and that, although there was knowledge that the girl was a ward of Court, there was not full knowledge of the meaning of that status. J. (an Infant), In re, 108 L. T. 554; 57 S. J. 500; 29 T. L. R. 456—Sargant, J.

Where there was no knowledge that the girl was a ward of Court such ignorance of the fact did not altogether exonerate the ignorant parties, but constituted an alleviation of their contempt. Ib.

III. GUARDIANSHIP AND MAINTENANCE.

See also Vol. VII. 1424, 1899.

Vested Reversionary Interest in Realty—Charging Order—Judgment—Registration.]—An infant aged twelve was entitled to an indefeasible vested interest in remainder in real estate expectant on the death of a tenant for life aged eighty-five years. The infant was without any means of support. Upon application by the infant's next friend for an order charging the interest in remainder with the repayment of such sums as might be advanced for "necessaries,"—Held, that the Court had no power to make an order charging an interest in land which is not in possession. Cadman v. Cadman (55 L. J. Ch. 833; 33 Ch. D. 397) followed. Badger, In re; Badger v. Badger, 82 L. J. Ch. 264; [1913] 1 Ch. 385; 108 L. T. 441; 57 S. J. 339—C.A.

A judgment could not formerly be enforced against a reversionary interest in land under the Judgments Act, 1864, because such an interest could not be delivered in execution; and now a judgment cannot operate as a charge on such a interest because, as no order to enforce a judgment against the interest could be made, no such order could be registered as required by section 2 of the Land Charges Act, 1900. Ib.

In the absence of any property which it can reach the Court will not express an opinion that it would be right for an infant's guardian to borrow for "necessaries." Ib.

Power in Will to Apply Income of Daughter's Share in Maintenance while an Infant and Unmarried — Direction to Accumulate Rest of Income — Power to Apply Income in Maintenance between Marriage and Attaining Twenty-one — "Contrary intention."] — A testator gave his residuary estate on trust in equal shares for his daughters for life, with remainder to their issue. He empowered his trustees to apply the whole or any part of the income of a daughter's share for her maintenance while an infant and unmarried, and directed that the residue of the income should be accumulated and added to the share. One of the daughters married some months before attaining twenty-one, there being at the date of her marriage large sums of accrued income of her share in hand:—Held, that the will did not express a "contrary intention" within the meaning of section 43 of the Conveyancing Act, 1881, and that the trustees had power under that section to apply income of the daughter's share accruing due before her marriage for her maintenance between the date of her marriage and the date of her attaining twenty-one. Cooper, In re; Cooper v. Cooper, 82 L. J. Ch. 222; [1913] 1 Ch. 350; 108 L. T. 293; 57 S. J. 389—Farwell, L.J.

Contingent Legacy — Legacy on Attaining Twenty-one — Right to Interest During Minority.] — A testator left certain specific legacies to his children on their attaining the age of twenty-one. He also left certain funds to trustees to be applied for their benefit. In a certain contingency, which had not happened, this trust would determine:—Held, that so long as this trust was in operation, there was in existence a fund other than the contingent legacy, which precluded the infant from being entitled to the interest on that legacy as maintenance. Stewart, In re; Stewart v. Bosanquet, 57 S. J. 646—Warrington, J.

Infants Contingently Entitled—Delegation of Discretionary Power—Maintenance out of Appointed Share.]—An attempt by the donee of a power of appointment amongst children to empower trustees to apply the income of expectant shares of the appointed fund towards the maintenance of the children is void as amounting to a delegation of the power. Greenslade, In re; Greenslade v. McCowen, 84 L. J. Ch. 235; [1915] 1 Ch. 155; 112 L. T. 337; 59 S. J. 105—Eve, J.

Semble, the provisions for maintenance and education and for advancement usually inserted in settlements do not in general apply to an appointed share, such share being by the appointment withdrawn from the general operation of the settlement. Ib.

Jurisdiction to make Orders as to Guardianship and Maintenance on Originating Summons.] — There is jurisdiction upon an originating summons to make an order as to the guardianship and care, maintenance or advancement, of infants, and thereby to make them wards of Court. Cunninghams, In re, [1915] 1 Ir. R. 380—C.A.

Children—Young Person—Conviction—Cost of Maintenance—Liability.]—By section 74, sub-section 1 of the Children Act, 1908, "Where a youthful offender is ordered to be sent to a certified reformatory school, it shall be the duty of the council of the county or county borough in which he resides . . . to provide for his reception and maintenance in a certified reformatory school suitable to the case, . . ." Sub-section 3: "For the purposes of the foregoing provisions of this section a youthful offender or child shall be presumed to reside in the place where the offence was committed, . . . unless it is proved that he resided in some other place." Sub-section 7 empowers a local authority who are aggrieved by the decision of a Court as to the place of residence of a youthful offender, to apply to a petty sessional Court, and that Court, "on proof to its satisfaction that the youthful offender . . . was resident in the area of another local authority, and after giving such other local authority an opportunity of being heard, may transfer the liability to maintain the youthful offender . . . in a certified school to that other local authority, . . ." A boy under sixteen years of age left his father's residence and went into the employment of a farmer in another county for several weeks. He then left that employment, and entered the service of another farmer in the same county, where he worked for three days, sleeping and having his meals at the farmer's house. He was arrested, and was subsequently convicted and ordered to be sent to a reformatory:—Held, that the boy was not, at the time of his arrest, constructively resident with his parents, but that his place of residence was the place where he was employed, and that an order might properly be made under section 74, sub-section 7 of the Children Act, 1908, transferring the liability to maintain him in a certified school to the local authority of such place. Stoke-upon-Trent Corporation v. Cheshire County Council, 85 L. IV. CUSTODY AND RESPONSIBILITY FOR CARE OF.

See also Vol. VII. 1504, 1904.

Custody — Illegitimate Child — Rights of Mother—Interest of Child.]—Where an illegitimate child had been adopted by the respondents and been brought up by them for ten years, the Court refused an application by the child's parents for the delivery up to them of the child, being of opinion that it would not be for the benefit of the child to remove him from the custody of the respondents. Rex v. Walker, 28 T. L. R. 342—D. Compromised on appeal, 28 T. L. R. 375—C.A.

—— Disobedience to Order as to Custody—Attachment—Sequestration.]—By an order of Court the custody of a child was given to the mother, the father being given liberty of access on certain days of the week. Both father and mother gave an undertaking not to remove the child out of the jurisdiction. The father, on one of the days on which he had access to the child, took her away and removed her out of the jurisdiction. The mother applied for and obtained a rule for habeas corpus and a rule nisi for attachment against the father, but as he had left the country personal service upon him of the orders was impossible:—Held, that the rule for attachment should be made absolute, and that a writ of sequestration should also issue notwithstanding the absence of personal service upon the father. Rex v. Wigand; Wigand, In re, 82 L. Neglect of Children — Husband Separated from Wife—Neglect by Wife—Liability of Husband.]—A husband who is separated from his wife by agreement, and who remits to her sufficient money for the support of their children, is nevertheless criminally liable for neglect of the children if to his knowledge she neglects them. Poole v. Stokes, 110 L. —— Illegitimate Child—Putative Father Cohabiting with Child's Mother—Person having "custody, charge, or care" of Child—No Affiliation Order.]—Section 12 of the Children Act, 1908, enacts that any person over the age of sixteen years, who has "the custody, charge, or care" of any child and wilfully neglects such child in a manner likely to cause such child unnecessary suffering or injury to his health, shall be guilty of a misdemeanour:—Held, that the putative father of a child, who is cohabiting with the child's mother, but against whom no affiliation order has been made, may have the custody, charge, or care of the child within the meaning of the section, although the mother is the child's parent and sole legal custodian or guardian, and although the father may not be one of the persons enumerated in section 38, sub-section 2 of the Act as being presumed to have the custody, charge, or care of the child. Liverpool Society for Prevention of Cruelty to Children v. Jones, 84 L. J. K.B. 222; [1914] 3 K.B. 813; 111 L. T. 806; 79 J. P. 20; 12 L. G. R. 1103; 24 Cox C.C. 434; 58 S. J. 723; 30 T. L. R. 584—D.

—— Wilful Neglect by Parent "Causing Injury to Health" — Failure to Provide Adequate Medical Aid—Refusal to Permit Operation.]—By section 12, sub-section 1 of the Children Act, 1908, a parent is deemed to have wilfully neglected his child in a manner likely to cause injury to his health, if he fails to provide (inter alia) adequate medical aid, and is guilty of a misdemeanour:—Held, that the question whether there has been such failure is a question of fact in each case. Oakey v. Jackson, 83 L. J. K.B. 712; [1914] 1 K.B. 216; 110 L. T. 41; 78 J. P. 87;

The respondent's child was suffering in her health through adenoids, for which the only remedy was a surgical operation, which would not be a dangerous one. This the respondent refused to allow:—Held, that the Justices might, on these facts, find that the respondent had failed to provide adequate medical aid for his child. Ib.

—— Verminous Child—Service of Notice on Parent.]—By a local Act the medical officer of health was empowered to examine the person and clothing of any school child, and if he should be of opinion that the person or clothing was infested with vermin or was in a foul or filthy condition he should give notice to the parent or guardian of such child to have him or her cleansed within twenty-four hours. Any notice was to be "deemed to be properly served by giving it to the person to whom it is addressed or leaving it for him with some inmate of his residence":—Held, that a notice under the Act was properly served at the parents' house by leaving it with the child to whom it referred, and that the period of twenty-four hours ran from the time of such receipt by the child. Hope v. Devaney, 111 L. Infant Life Insurance—Payment of Premiums on Policy Effected Prior to Commencement of Children Act, 1908.]—The Children Act, 1908, makes it an offence for a person to insure the life of an infant which he has undertaken to nurse for reward:—Held, that the payment of premiums upon a policy of insurance, effected prior to the date when the Act came into operation, was not an offence under the Act. Glasgow Parish Council v. Martin, [1910] S. V. STREET TRADING.

The appellants, a co-operative society, carried on (inter alia) the business of bakers at various establishments. They used to send vans round daily to the houses of their members, each in charge of a vanman assisted by a boy. One of these boys, carrying a basket of bread taken from the van, knocked at the door of a member's house, which was opened by the member, who asked for two loaves, which she paid for. The boy, when he went to the house, did not know whether any or how much bread would be purchased by the member. The vanman and boy had the appellants' authority to sell to non-members on their request, but in fact had never done so:—Held (Atkin, J., dissentiente), that the boy was not engaged in street trading within the meaning of sections 2 and 13 of the Employment of Children Act, 1903, and that the appellants could not be convicted, under a by-law made under that Act of employing the boy in street trading. Held, further, that street trading in the Act is not confined to street trading by a person on his own account. Stratford Co-operative and Industrial Society v. East Ham Borough, 84 L. J. K.B. 645; [1915] 2 K.B. 70; 112 L. T. 516; 79 J. P. 227; 13 L. G. R. 285; 31 T. L. R. 129—D.

Purchasing of "Article" from Child under Fourteen.]—A local Act defined a "broker" as a dealer in "second-hand goods or articles, or in old metals, bones, or rags," and made it an offence for a broker to purchase "any article" from a person apparently under fourteen years of age:—Held, that a complaint charging a broker with purchasing from such a person "16 pounds or thereby in weight of rags" was relevant, and was not open to the objection that what the accused was charged with purchasing was not an "article" within the meaning of the Act. M'Intyre v. M'Intee, [1915] S. C. (J.) 27—Ct. of Just.

VI. OFFENCES BY.

Child "charged . . . with an offence punishable in the case of an adult with penal servitude or a less punishment"—Offence Charged not Punishable with Penal Servitude—Power to Send to Industrial School. — Section 58, sub-section 3 of the Children Act, 1908, provides that "Where a child, apparently of the age of twelve or thirteen years, who has not previously been convicted, is charged before a petty sessional Court with an offence punishable in the case of an adult by penal servitude or a less punishment . . . the Court may order the child to be sent to a certified industrial school." A boy between twelve and thirteen years of age, who had not been previously convicted, was charged before a petty sessional Court with having committed an indecent assault on a little girl. The maximum punishment for such an offence in the case of an adult is imprisonment for two years, and not penal servitude:—Held, that the Justices had power under section 58, subsection 3, to send the boy to a certified industrial school, as the words "offence punishable by penal servitude or a less punishment" referred to two classes of offence—namely, an offence punishable by penal servitude, and an offence punishable by a less punishment—and that they did not merely refer to an offence punishable by penal servitude or, as an alternative, by a less punishment. Tydeman v. Thrower, 83 L. Proceedings against "young person"—Attendance of Parent.] — The father of a "young person" charged with theft was served by a constable with a written notice signed by the constable, stating that his son had been summoned to appear at the Police Court on a charge of theft, and that the father or some other guardian must attend. The notice also set out the powers of the Court over the parent conferred by the Children Act, 1908 :—Held, that the father had been sufficiently notified that he must attend, and an objection that in the case, at any rate, of a "young person" (as opposed to a child) an antecedent warrant of the Court citing the parent to attend was necessary repelled. Montgomery v. Gray, [1915] S. Documents — Privilege — Letters Improperly Obtained—Copies Improperly Made—Right to Use — Evidence.] — Where confidential documents are improperly obtained by a person who has no right to the documents or the information contained therein, and who has made copies thereof, that person may be restrained from using the originals and the copies and from divulging their contents notwithstanding pending litigation in which such person might desire to use such documents as evidence by production of the originals or by giving secondary evidence of their contents. The decision in Calcraft v. Guest (67 L. J. Q.B. 505; [1898] 1 Q.B. 759), that a litigant who desires to prove particular documents, but on grounds of privilege cannot obtain production of the originals, may produce copies as secondary evidence of their contents, although such copies have been obtained by improper means, has no application to a case where the subject-matter of the action is the right to retain and make use of the originals or copies of privileged documents improperly obtained by the defendant. Ashburton (Lord) v. Pape, 82 L. Pollution of Stream—Breach of Undertaking —Motion to Sequestrate and for Injunction —Jurisdiction to Pay Costs.]—Where the defendants, on a motion for an injunction to restrain them from polluting a stream, gave an undertaking against discharging or allowing to be discharged any noxious or offensive matter so as to pollute the water of the stream, and the plaintiffs subsequently moved to sequestrate the defendant companies on the ground that they had on several occasions committed breaches of the undertaking, the Judge, while holding that the facts strictly entitled him to make the sequestration order, decided that he had a discretion to grant an injunction in the terms of the undertaking and to penalise the defendants by ordering them to pay all the costs of the application as between solicitor and client, and he made such order for an injunction and as to costs forthwith. Marsden & Sons, Lim. v. Old Silkstone Collieries, 13 L. Property in Soda-water Bottles—Participation in Illegal Use of Property.]—An aerated-water manufacturer sought to interdict a drysalter from putting paraffin oil into bottles belonging to the pursuer. The pursuer averred that bottles belonging to him, and marked with his name, were lent by him to his customers in the course of his trade, and were brought to the defender by persons coming to purchase paraffin oil, and that at their request the defender put paraffin oil into the bottles, in the knowledge that the bottles were the property of the pursuer, and that the pursuer objected to such a practice since it injured them for use in his business :—Held, that the pursuer had relevantly averred participation by the defender in a wrongful use of the pursuer's property which, if proved, would form a good ground for interdict against him. Wilson v. Shepherd, [1913] S. Interlocutory Injunction — Breach of Covenants in Lease—Parties to Action—Sub-lessee not Added as Party by Plaintiff.]—Where the lessor does not add the sub-lessee as a party to his action for an injunction against his lessee for breach of the covenants contained in the lease, although he may be entitled to an injunction against such lessee, the scope of the injunction must be confined to the lessee, his servants and agents, and must not extend to the sub-lessee. Metropolitan District Railway v. Earl's Court, Lim., 55 S. J. 807—Lush, J.

Interim Injunction against Persons not Parties to Action.]—The Court has jurisdiction to grant an injunction to restrain persons who are not parties to an action from aiding and abetting the defendant in the action in committing a breach of an injunction which has been obtained from the Court against such defendant by the plaintiff. The defendant in this case was under order of the Court not to sell certain meadow grass. He nevertheless instructed some auctioneers to sell it. The defendant could not readily be found, so the plaintiff obtained an ex parte injunction against the auctioneers :—Held, that there was jurisdiction to continue that injunction without adding the auctioneers as parties to the action. Seward v. Paterson (66 L. Discharge—Undertaking.]—A Court of law has no power to grant a dispensation from obedience to an Act of Parliament and ought not to substitute, for an injunction to obey a statute, an undertaking by parties merely to do their best to obey. Att.-Gen. v. Birmingham, Tame, and Rea Drainage Board, 82 L. The Attorney-General, at the relation of the Tamworth Corporation and the Tamworth Rural Council, obtained a perpetual injunction restraining the respondents from discharging sewage water into a river in breach of section 17 of the Public Health Act, 1875. Upon the appeal the respondents did not contest the propriety of the injunction on the facts at the trial, but obtained successive adjournments to enable them to execute works in order to comply with section 17. The works for this purpose were completed, but there was a conflict of evidence as to their sufficiency, and the Court referred the question to an expert, who reported favourably to the respondents, and the Court dissolved the injunction upon an undertaking by the respondents to do their best to prevent any future breach :—The House held that, though the Court of Appeal had jurisdiction to dissolve the injunction, it ought not to have accepted in lieu thereof the undertaking in its limited form, and they inserted the words "and the defendants undertaking that the results shall in the future be secured, perpetuated, and maintained," and subject to this variation affirmed the order of the Court of Appeal. Ib.

Goods of Guest—Liability.]—The plaintiff, who had been staying at the defendant's hotel, paid his bill in the afternoon and directed that his luggage should be brought from his room and placed where he might get it without delay when he returned later in the evening for it. With his knowledge the luggage was placed in the hall near where the hotel porter sat. When the plaintiff called for the luggage later in the evening it was missing, and he thereupon sued the defendant, claiming in respect of the loss. The County Court Judge held that the relationship of innkeeper and guest had ceased to exist when the plaintiff paid his bill, and that there was contributory negligence on the part of the plaintiff in the directions given by him as to the place where the luggage should be put. The plaintiff appealed :—Held, that the questions whether the relationship of innkeeper and guest had come to an end, and whether there was contributory negligence on the part of the plaintiff, were questions of fact, and that as there was evidence to support the findings of the County Court Judge the appeal must be dismissed. Portman v. Griffin, 29 T. Lien—Guest Living at Inn for Long Period on Inclusive Terms—Motor-car Left by Guest—Motor-car Sent by Innkeeper to Repairer Preparatory to Sale before Lapse of Six Weeks—Amount for which Lien Enforceable.]—In the absence of an express or an implied arrangement under which a visitor at an hotel resides at the hotel in some different capacity from that of other and ordinary visitors, an hotel keeper cannot set up against such visitor that he has ceased to be responsible as an innkeeper for the loss of the guest's goods, and equally the guest or visitor cannot set up against the innkeeper that the latter has ceased to have a corresponding right of lien; and this is so even though the visitor has been so long at the hotel that the hotel proprietor could refuse to keep him any longer. The mere fact that the guest is staying at the hotel on inclusive terms does not affect the liability or rights of the innkeeper. A guest who had been staying at the defendants' hotel left there on December 21, 1910, leaving an hotel bill unpaid, and leaving a motor car in the hotel garage. About three weeks thereafter, the defendants took steps to have the car sold by auction, and for that purpose it was dispatched in charge of their servants to London to a firm of auctioneers. On the way there it broke down and had to be towed back, when it was sent to a local repairer for the necessary repairs. After being repaired it was taken to the auctioneers, who advertised it in a London and a local newspaper on January 10, 1913, and catalogued it for sale. The sale was to take place on February 13—that is, more than six weeks from December 21 :—Held, that by sending the motor car off the premises in these circumstances before the expiration of the six weeks mentioned in the proviso to section 1 of the Innkeepers Act, 1878, the defendants had not lost their lien, as they still retained charge of the car, and could have enforced its delivery to the guest if necessary. Held, further, that the defendants' lien only extended to the expenses incurred by the guest in respect of food and accommodation and the cost of keeping his goods, and did not extend to sums lent to, or disbursed for, him; but held that the defendants were entitled to add to their claim the cost of the repair of the car and the cost of advertising it and arranging with the auctioneers for its sale. Chesham Automobile Supply v. Beresford Hotel, 29 T. L. R. 584—Lush, J.

—— Money Lent by Innkeeper on Articles Brought by Guest.]—The defendants, who were innkeepers, lent money to a guest staying at their hotel on the security of three railway tickets which he had in his possession. The tickets had been stolen from the plaintiff, who now claimed them from the defendants. The defendants set up that they were entitled to a lien upon the tickets as innkeepers:—Held, that the plaintiff was entitled to recover, as the transaction between the defendants and the guest was merely a money-lending transaction, and no question of innkeeper's lien arose. Matsuda v. Waldorf Hotel Co., 27 T. Insurance by Married Woman—Policy for Benefit of Children.]—On August 2, 1872, a married woman effected a policy of insurance on her own life for the benefit of her children. By her will she bequeathed the policy moneys to her four daughters equally. She survived her husband and died in November, 1914, leaving four daughters and five sons, all of whom were born before the date of the policy:—Held, that the testatrix had no power, under the Married Women's Property Act, 1870, s. 10, to take out a policy for the benefit of her children, and that the four daughters were entitled to the policy moneys as legatees under the will. Burgess' Policy, In re; Lee v. Scottish Union and National Insurance Co., 113 L. Condition not to Travel Outside Specific Limits without Licence—Breach of Condition —Forfeiture of Premiums.] —A condition indorsed on a policy of life insurance effected in 1894 provided that if the assured should go beyond certain geographical limits without obtaining the insurance company's licence "the assurance shall be void, and the premiums paid shall be forfeited." In ignorance or forgetfulness of this condition, the assured in 1897 travelled to India, which was outside the specified geographical limits, without obtaining the company's licence. He continued to pay the premiums till 1911, when he informed the company of his visit to India in 1897. The company thereupon replied that, strictly speaking, the policy was void, but that they were prepared to waive the breach of the condition on payment of the extra premium that would have been charged if he had informed them at the time of his visit to India. The company afterwards said that they would waive any claim to extra premium. The assured, however, sued the company, claiming the return of all the premiums paid since 1897 on the footing that the policy was void:—Held, that, even on the assumption that the policy became void on breach by the assured of the condition indorsed on the policy, no action lay for the return of the premiums as money paid without consideration. Sparenborg v. Edinburgh Life Assurance Co., 81 L. J. K.B. 299; [1912] 1 K.B. 195; 106 L. T. 567; 28 T. L. R. 51—Bray, J.

Condition that only One Policy to be in Force on Life of Assured.] —A policy of insurance effected by M. upon her life with the defendant society contained the following clause: "One policy only is allowed to be in force on the life of the person assured and named therein, unless special permission be obtained from the committee of management for any additional policy created, and should any such additional policy be obtained without the knowledge and consent of the committee (which consent shall be evidence by an indorsement on the policy signed by the secretary of the society), such policy other than the first shall if discovered during the life of the assured be rejected, or if discovered after death be null and void, and the sum or sums assured forfeited to the society." During the year preceding the issue of the policy in question three other policies had been effected on the life of M. by different persons. These other policies were all treated by the defendants as valid and the amounts due on them had been paid. No indorsement had been made by the defendants' secretary on the policy in question as to the existence of the other policies. M. having died, her executor claimed the amount due under the policy:—Held, that there might be a consent to the existence of other policies without any indorsement on the policy in question; that in the circumstances the burden of proof was on the defendants to shew that they had not consented to more than one policy on the life of M. being in force; and that as they had failed to shew that they had not consented they were liable on the policy in question. Marcovitch v. Liverpool Victoria Friendly Society, 28 T. II. INTEREST.

See also Vol. VIII. 8, 1659.

Absence of Insurable Interest—Innocent Misrepresentation by Insurance Agent — Recovery of Premiums.] —Premiums paid under a policy of life insurance which is void by reason of the fact that the person paying the premiums had no insurable interest in the life of the person insured cannot be recognised on the ground that the insurer was induced to take out the policy on the faith of an innocent misrepresentation by the agent of the insurance company as to the validity of the policy. British Workman's and General Insurance Co. v. Cunliffe (18 T. L. R. 425) and Harse v. Pearl Life Assurance Co. (73 L. J. K.B. 373; [1904] 1 K.B. 558) discussed and reconciled. Phillips v. Royal London Mutual Insurance Co., 105 L. T. 136—D.

A policy of insurance was effected with a friendly society on the life of a person in whom the person effecting the policy had no insurable interest, and a number of premiums were paid thereon. Subsequently it became known that the policy was illegal and void for want of insurable interest, and an action for the return of the premiums was brought in which it was alleged that fraudulent misrepresentations as to the validity of the policy were made by the collector of the society. It having been held that there was no evidence of fraud on the part of the collector,—Held, that, fraud not having been proved, the premiums paid under the policy could not be recovered back, either on the ground of money had and received, or on the ground that the premiums were paid for a consideration which had wholly failed. The principles laid down in Harse v. Pearl Life Assurance Co. (90 L. T. Rep. 245; [1904] 1 K.B. 558) applied to insurances by friendly societies. Evanson v. Crooks, 106 L. T. 264; 28 T. L. R. 123—Hamilton, J.

The plaintiff signed a proposal form for an insurance with the defendants, an insurance company, on the life of his mother, having in fact no insurable interest in her life, and not insuring to cover funeral expenses. The policy proposed was one in favour of the plaintiff in his own right, and not as agent for his mother. No such policy was issued to the plaintiff, but he received a policy purporting to insure his mother on her own life and making the policy moneys payable to her representative. The plaintiff's mother had made no proposal for a policy and had given no one authority to make one for her, being in fact totally ignorant of the matter. The plaintiff duly paid the premiums under the policy in question. In an action by the plaintiff to recover the premiums so paid, the deputy County Court Judge found that there had been no fraud on the part of the agent of the company, but held that, although if the plaintiff had received such a policy as was contemplated in the proposal it would have been illegal and the plaintiff, being in pari delicto, would be debarred from recovering the premiums, yet, since what he actually obtained was not a policy of any kind, legal or illegal, but a mere nullity, there was a total failure of the consideration for which the premiums were paid, and that the plaintiff was entitled to recover them :—Held, allowing the appeal, that the plaintiff was not entitled to a return of the premiums. Elson v. Crookes, 106 L. T. 462—D.

—— Parties in Pari Delicto—Onus on Plaintiff to Prove Absence of Fraud on his Part.]—The plaintiff effected a policy of insurance with the defendants upon the life of a person in whom she had no insurable interest, and, for the purpose of taking out the policies, signed a card which contained untrue statements, filled in by the defendants' agent, as to her relationship to the person whose life was insured. The policy contained a term to the effect that if any material statement on the card was either fraudulent or untrue the policy should be void and the premiums forfeited. In an action by the plaintiff to recover back the premiums paid by her on the policy,—Held, first, that, in the absence of a finding by the jury that she was induced by the fraud of the defendants' agent to sign the contract without knowing its terms, she was not entitled to recover; and secondly, that, the contract being an illegal one, the parties were prima facie in pari delicto, and that, in order to entitle the plaintiff to succeed, the onus was upon her to prove not only that there had been fraud on the part of the agent of the company, but also to obtain a finding by the jury exculpating her from participation in such fraud, and that, in the absence of such a finding, the premiums were not recoverable. Howarth v. Pioneer Life Assurance Co., 107 L. T. 155—D.

Policies on Lives of Parents — Mourning Expenses — Fraudulent Representation by Agent of Company.]—In 1902 the plaintiff effected two policies with the defendants on the lives of his father and mother respectively to cover his expenses for mourning in the event of their deaths. He was induced to do so by the fraudulent misrepresentation of the defendants' agent that such policies would be valid, whereas the agent knew they were in fact invalid for want of insurable interest. In 1909 the Assurance Companies Act, 1909, was passed. Section 36, sub-section 2 of that Act validated certain policies (within which the policies in question came) effected before the Act, which, apart from the Act, would have been void for want of insurable interest :—Held, that the sub-section did not validate policies which would otherwise come within its meaning, if such policies had been obtained by fraud. Tofts v. Pearl Life Assurance Co., 84 L. J. K.B. 286; [1915] 1 K.B. 189; 112 L. T. 140; 59 S. J. 73; 31 T. L. R. 29—C.A.

Funeral Expenses — Policies Effected with Several Companies—Amount Assured in Excess of that Expended by Assured—Capacity of Assured to Recover Full Amount Assured.]—Where a person effects several policies of insurance with different insurance companies against any funeral expenses he may incur on the death of his mother, and, on the mother's death, is paid by one or more of such companies the full amount of such funeral expenses he cannot maintain a further claim against another of the companies which has failed to pay him the amount of the policy he has effected therewith. Neither can he, in the absence of fraud or mistake of fact, obtain the return of the premiums he has paid to this latter company, the company having been under a risk during the whole of the currency of the policy. Wolenberg v. Royal Co-operative Collecting Society, 84 L. J. K.B. 1316; 112 L. T. 1036—D.

Semble, policies issued under section 36, sub-section 1 of the Assurance Companies Act, 1909, are policies of indemnity. Ib.

III. RISK INSURED.

Exception — Death from Inhalation.]—A life insurance policy provided that it did not "insure against death or disablement by accident directly or indirectly caused to any extent by medical or surgical treatment or fighting, ballooning, racing, self-injury or suicide, or anything swallowed or administered or inhaled." The assured was found dead in a house of which he was the sole occupant. His body was in the lavatory, where the gas was turned on but not lighted. The insurance company repudiated liability on the ground that death was caused by "inhalation" :—Held, that the company were not liable on the policy. United London and Scottish Insurance Co., In re; Brown's Claim, 84 L. J. Ch. 620; [1915] 2 Ch. 167; [1915] W.C. & I. Rep. 485; 113 L. T. 397; 59 S. J. 529; 31 T. L. R. 419—C.A.

Decision of Astbury, J. (31 T. L. R. 202), reversed. Ib.

Re-insurance—Conditions of Life Policy—Settlement in Good Faith—Liability of Re-insurers.]—The respondent society granted a policy of insurance on the life of one M., which recited that a declaration and statement made by M. were the basis of the contract, and that the policy should be void if any document upon the faith of which it was granted should contain any untrue statement. The respondents afterwards effected a policy of re-insurance on the life of M. with the appellant society. The proposal form stated that in accepting the risk the appellants did so on the same terms and conditions as those on which the respondents had granted a policy, "by whom in the event of claim the settlement will be made." The policy of re-insurance also recited that the declaration and statement relating to the original insurance were the basis of the contract and were to be deemed to be incorporated therewith. M. died, and the respondent society paid the claim of his executrix on the policy, acting reasonably and in good faith in the honest exercise of their discretion. Afterwards it appeared that M. had made false statements as to his health, and the appellant society refused to pay the claim of the respondents on the policy of re-insurance : —Held, that the policy of re-insurance was an independent contract, not a contract of indemnity, conditional on the truth of the statements which were made the basis of it, and that the appellants were not liable under it, notwithstanding that the respondents had acted reasonably and in good faith in paying the claim under the original policy. Australian Widows' Fund Life Assurance Society v. National Mutual Life Association of Australasia, 83 L. IV. PREMIUMS.

Husband's Life Premiums Paid by Wife—Lien.]—Where a wife, by reason of the impecuniosity of her husband, paid the premiums on the policies on his life to prevent the policies from lapsing, it was held that she could not be recouped for such payments out of the policy moneys on his death. Leslie, In re; Leslie v. French (52 L. J. Ch. 762; 23 Ch. D. 552), applied. Jones' Settlement, In re; Stunt v. Jones, 84 L. J. Ch. 406; [1915] 1 Ch. 373; [1915] W.C. & I. Rep. 277; 112 L. T. 1067; 59 S. J. 364—Astbury, J.

Recovery of Premiums—Payment Induced by Fraud.]—Premiums paid on a life insurance policy which is prohibited by statute under a penalty cannot be recovered back, even if the payment of the premiums was induced by a fraudulent representation on the part of the insurance company or their employees. Hughes v. Liverpool Victoria Legal Friendly Society, 31 T. L. R. 635—Scrutton, J.

Infant Life Insurance — Payment of Premiums on Policy Effected Prior to Commencement of Children Act, 1908.] — The Children Act, 1908, makes it an offence for a person to insure the life of an infant which he has undertaken to nurse for reward :—Held, that the payment of premiums upon a policy of insurance, effected prior to the date when the Act came into operation, was not an offence under the Act. Glasgow Parish Council v. Martin, [1910] S. C. (J.) 102—Ct. of Just.

V. MORTGAGE AND ASSIGNMENT.

See also Vol. VIII. 45, 1665.

Half Credit Policy—Ineffective Charge on Policy—Equitable Sub-mortgage—Payment of Premiums by Sub-mortgagee—Redemption on Payment of Premiums.]—In 1858, C., a married woman, effected a policy on her own life which provided that if she elected to pay, during the first seven years, one-half of the annual premiums, the unpaid half premiums were to be a debt at 5 per cent. interest due to the insurance company, and the unpaid premiums with interest should be "held as a claim against the policy at settlement." The assured availed herself of the option, and in 1867 she deposited the policy with W. to secure money advanced. In 1879 W. deposited the policy with Y. to secure money advanced. Y. died in September, 1905. From September, 1880, to the death of the assured in November, 1913, the interest on the half premiums and the renewal premiums had been paid by Y. or persons claiming under him. The executor of C. now claimed the policy moneys as against the representatives of Y. : —Held, that the policy being a reversionary chose in action in personalty, neither W. nor Y. could acquire any title from C., but that as the relationship of mortgagor and mortgagee had been established by the keeping down of the interest on the unpaid premiums, the executor of C. could only redeem on payment of such interest, and of the renewal premiums with interest on the latter at 4 per cent. City of Glasgow Life Assurance Co., In re; Clare's Policy, 84 L. J. Ch. 684; 112 L. T. 550; [1915] W.C. & I. Rep. 481—Eve, J.

Joint Tenancy—Payment of Premiums by one Joint Tenant at Request of other—Assignment by other Joint Tenant—Equity—Lien.]—A wife and husband agreed that each should pay one-half of the premiums on a policy of insurance on their joint lives, payable on the death of whichever died first. In several years the wife at the husband's request paid the whole of the premiums. Charges were created on the policy by both jointly, and subsequently the husband assigned all his property to a trustee for the benefit of his creditors. There was no specific mention of the policy in the deed of assignment, and no notice of the deed was given to the insurance company. The husband died and one moiety of the balance of the policy moneys (after deducting the joint charges) proved less in amount than the premiums paid by the wife for her husband :—Held, that, the wife being entitled to the policy moneys at law, the only claim of the trustee was in equity, and that he must do equity and allow the wife (as against him) to set off her claim against her husband. Held, further, that the wife was entitled to a lien on the policy moneys for premiums paid by her at the request of her husband. McKerrell, In re; McKerrell v. Gowans, 82 L. J. Ch. 22; [1912] 2 Ch. 648; [1913] W.C. & I. Rep. 85; 107 L. T. 404—Joyce, J.

Semble, that the assignment, in the circumstances, passed to the trustee no interest whatever, whether legal or equitable, in the policy moneys, but that, if the husband had survived the wife, it might have passed the right to all the policy moneys. Ib.

VI. ACTIONS ON POLICIES.

See also Vol. VIII. 73, 1668.

Proposal—Acceptance—Assignment of Policy—Illness of Insured before Payment of Premium—Action by Assignee.]—One Bentley signed proposals for the insurance of his life with the defendants, an insurance company, and their medical officer certified that his life was a good one. The proposals were accepted, but came to an end owing to the premiums not being paid within the prescribed time. Subsequently, on October 1, 1912, Bentley made fresh proposals on the same terms, the policies to begin from October 18, the applicant declaring that there had been no material change in his health since examination. The fresh proposals were accepted by the defendants, who stated that the policies would be forwarded if the premiums were received within thirty days. On November 4 Bentley purported to assign one of the policies to the plaintiff, and on November 6 was taken ill. On November 8 the plaintiff paid the first premium, and later on the same day Bentley died. On November 12 the plaintiff handed the assignment to the defendants' agent. In an action on the policy it was submitted for the defendants that until the first premium was paid the warranties as to the health of the insured remained in force:—Held, that there was no real assignment by Bentley to the plaintiff, that the policy if issued would have been Bentley's, and that as the defendants would never, with knowledge of the facts, have issued the policy, the action must fail. Harrington v. Pearl Life Assurance Co., 30 T. Decision of A. T. Lawrence, J. (30 T. L. R. 24), affirmed. Ib.

Arbitration Clause—Questions of Law—Life Insurance Policy.]—A life insurance policy provided that it should not cover death by war, and the policy contained an arbitration clause. The assured lost his life by the explosion which caused the loss of H.M.S. Bulwark, and his executrix brought an action on the policy against the insurance company. The defendants applied to have the action stayed. The plaintiff contended that as serious questions of law were involved the case ought not to be sent to arbitration:—Held, that the Court was not justified in refusing the application merely because there were important questions of law to be considered, and that as no sufficient reason had been shewn why the contract to submit to arbitration should not be observed the action must be stayed. Lock v. Army, Navy, and General Assurance Association, 31 T. L. R. 297—Astbury, J.

Deceased Policy-holder Domiciled Abroad—Foreign Executor—No Grant of Representation from Court in United Kingdom—Right to Recover Policy Moneys—"Receive."]—By section 19 of the Revenue Act, 1889, where a policy of life insurance has been effected (with a British insurance company) by a person who shall die domiciled elsewhere than in the United Kingdom, the production of a grant of representation from a Court in the United Kingdom shall not be necessary to establish the right to receive the money payable in respect of such policy:—Held, that the production of such grant was also not necessary to establish the right of a foreign executor of a testator who had died domiciled abroad to recover as well as receive the policy moneys. Haas v. Atlas Insurance Co., 82 L. B. NATIONAL.

I. INSURED PERSONS.

Curates in the Church of England.]—The work and duties of a curate in the Church of England, whether he be appointed under a bishop's formal licence given under seal or merely as a probationer under a bishop's signed permit, are not employment "under any contract of service" within the meaning of Part I. of the National Insurance Act, 1911; and no curate is therefore compulsorily insurable under that Act. Church of England Curates' Employment, In re, 82 L. J. Ch. 8; [1912] 2 Ch. 563; [1913] W.C. & I. Rep. 34; 107 L. T. 643; 28 T. L. R. 579—Parker, J.

Assistant Missionaries—Student Missionaries—Lay Missionaries.]—Assistant missionaries in the Church of Scotland and United Free Church of Scotland are not employed persons within the meaning of the National Insurance Act, 1911, in respect that they are persons holding an ecclesiastical office and perform the duties of that office subject to the general laws of the Church, and not subject to the control and direction of a master under a contract of service. Student missionaries in connection with the same Churches are not employed persons, in respect that their services are rendered as an incident in the course of their studies and not as work done under a contract of service; but lay missionaries who hold no ecclesiastical status and are appointed by, and are subject to the control of, a minister or kirk session or a committee, are employed persons within the meaning of the Act. Scottish Insurance Commissioners v. Church of Scotland, [1914] S. C. 16—Ct. of Sess.

United Methodist Ministers.]—The employment of ministers of the United Methodist Church and the employment of ministers (under probation) of the Wesleyan Methodist Church by the conference of each of those Churches, or by the circuits to which the ministers are attached, is not employment within the meaning of Part I. of the Insurance Act, 1911. United Methodist Church Ministers, In re, 107 L. T. 143; 56 S. J. 687; 28 T. L. R. 539—Joyce, J.

Medical Staff of Infirmary.]—Persons appointed to act in an infirmary—first, as resident physicians and resident surgeons; secondly, as non-resident house physicians, non-resident house surgeons, and clinical assistants; and thirdly, as supervisors of the administration of anæsthetics,—Held, not to be persons employed within the meaning of the National Insurance Act, 1911, in respect that, as the managers of the infirmary had no control over the manner in which these members of the staff carried out their treatment of the patients, no contract of service existed between them. Scottish Insurance Commissioners v. Edinburgh Royal Infirmary, [1913] S. C. 751; [1913] W.C. & I. Rep. 383—Ct. of Sess.

Pupil Teachers and Monitors.]—The employment of pupil teachers and monitors in National schools in Ireland is an employment within the meaning of the National Insurance Act, 1911, and the Commissioners of National Education are the employers. It is not a contract of apprenticeship, because an essential element of apprenticeship—the right to receive instruction—is absent from the contract, but is a contract of service within the meaning of Part I. section 1, sub-section 1 of the Act. Pupil Teachers and Monitors, In re, [1913] 1 Ir. R. 219; [1913] W.C. & I. Rep. 366—Barton, J.

Officers of Poor Law Union.]—Officers of a poor law union are not employed under a contract of service within the meaning of Part I. of Schedule I. to the National Insurance Act, 1911. South Dublin Union Officers, In re, [1913] 1 Ir. R. 244; [1913] W.C. & I. Rep. 245—M.R.

School Attendance Inspector—"Employed contributor."]—A person appointed as school attendance inspector by a school attendance committee under the provisions of the Irish Education Act, 1892, is an "employed contributor" within the meaning of the National Insurance Acts, 1911 to 1913, and the committee is liable for the payment of the contributions in respect of them. O'Callaghan v. Irish Insurance Commissioners, [1915] 2 Ir. R. 262; [1915] W.C. & I. Rep. 412—K.B. D.

"Employment under any local or other public authority" — Pilots Appointed and Licensed by Port Authority under Local Act.]—Pilots appointed and licensed by the Port Authority under a local Act, held (Dodd, J., dissenting), not to be employees of or under the Port Authority, who were therefore not liable to contribute to the insurance of the pilots under the National Insurance Acts, 1911 to 1913. Westport Port and Harbour Commissioners v. Irish Insurance Commissioners, [1915] 2 Ir. R. 283; [1915] W.C. & I. Rep. 406—K.B. D.

Share Fishermen.] — Share fishermen remunerated by shares in the profits of fishing vessels, and under an obligation sanctioned by custom to share any losses incurred, but having no proprietary interest in the vessels, nets, or gear; and also net share fishermen, similarly situated except that they received in addition to such share of profits a further share thereof in respect of their ownership of the nets used on board the vessels, held not to be employed persons within the meaning of the National Insurance Act, 1911. Scottish Insurance Commissioners v. M'Naughton, [1914] S. C. 826—Ct. of Sess.

"Employment otherwise than by manual labour"—Lithographic Artist—Engraver.]—Lithographic artists and engravers engaged in the correction or improvement of half-tone engraved plates are employed otherwise than by way of manual labour within Schedule I. Part II. (g) of the National Insurance Act, 1911. Where, therefore, the remuneration of such persons exceeds 160*l*. a year they are not employed contributors within the meaning of Part I. of the Act. Lithographic Artists, In re; Engravers, In re, 108 L. T. 894; 57 S. J. 557; 29 T. L. R. 440—Warrington, J.

Dairyman's Foreman—Tailor's Cutter.]—The question whether a person is employed in manual labour within the meaning of Schedule I. Part II. clause (g) of the National Insurance Act, 1911, is to be determined by considering whether any manual labour that he may do in the course of his service is the real substantial work for which he is engaged, or whether it is only incidental or accessory thereto. If it is the latter the employment is not employment in manual labour. The employments of a dairyman's foreman and tailor's cutter,—Held, not to be employment in manual labour within the National Insurance Act, 1911, inasmuch as, although those persons did some manual work, their duties were mainly supervisory. Dairymen's Foremen, In re, and Tailor's Cutters, In re, 107 L. T. 342; 28 T. L. R. 587—Swinfen Eady, J.

Master Tailors — Outworkers.] — Master tailors, who make up and finish garments for merchant tailors or wholesale clothing manufacturers, the work being done at the house or other premises of the master tailors, are employed as outworkers within Part I. (c) of Schedule I. of the National Insurance Act, 1911, and persons engaged as such are "employed contributors" within section 1 of the Act unless they come within the exceptions in Part II. of Schedule I. or are exempted by the Insurance Commissioners. Master Tailors as Outworkers, In re, 29 T. L. R. 725—Warrington, J.

One Workman Employing Another—Non-liability of Head Employers.]—Informations were laid against the respondents, who were the owners of silk mills, for non-payment of contributions under the National Insurance Act, 1911, in respect of two women, and it was proved that a number of block printers were employed by the respondents and that the two women were "tierers" who assisted the block printers. Each "tierer" was selected and engaged by the workman whom she was to assist, and the respondents had no voice in the selection. The wages of each "tierer" were paid by the workman who had engaged her, and she could be dismissed from her work by him. The Justices found that the "tierers" were not under the general control and management of the respondents, and therefore dismissed the summonses:—Held, that the question was a question of fact for the Justices.

Workman Engaged by Foreman—Independent Contractor—Relationship of Master and Servant.] —A firm of coal merchants employed a yard foreman, for the purpose of loading and unloading coal at the yard, who was paid by the firm weekly at a fixed rate per ton of coal handled. His earnings amounted to less than 27*s.* a week, and he was an employed contributor under the National Insurance Act, 1911. As the work at the yard could not be done by one man alone, the foreman, by the instructions of the firm, engaged other men to assist. The foreman received from the firm the amount at the fixed rate due for all coal handled at the yard, which he divided between himself and the men employed, all taking equal shares. If the foreman was away, one of the other men received the money and shared it equally among those who had done the work. The firm supervised the work of loading and unloading, and exercised control over the men in the performance of their duties. The foreman engaged and dismissed the men, but the firm had the right to require the foreman to dismiss a particular man. The firm was summoned for not paying a contribution under the National Insurance Act, 1911, in respect of one of these men:—Held, that the man was a person employed by the firm within the meaning of the National Insurance Act, 1911, and that he was not employed by the foreman as an independent contractor, and that therefore the coal merchants were liable to pay insurance contributions in respect of him. Hill v. Beckett, 84 L. J. K.B. 458; [1915] 1 K.B. 578; [1915] W.C. & I. Rep. 1; 112 L. T. 505; 79 J. P. 190; 13 L. G. R. 530—D.

Repair of Roads Entrusted to Contractor—Labourers Appointed by County Surveyor, Paid by and Bound to Obey Orders of Contractor as well as those of Surveyor.] —A county council entrusted the repair of certain roads to a contractor. The terms of the contract provided that the contractor should "keep" a surface man and pay him at a rate of wages prescribed by the county council; that the surface labourers "will be appointed by the county surveyor, and may be dismissed by him at any time on just complaint from the contractor, or for other causes." According to the "instructions for surface labourers" embodied in the contract, the surface men were bound to attend closely to the orders of the assistant surveyor and to those of the contractor when the assistant had not given any particular instructions. The Irish Insurance Commissioners issued a summons against the county council, as employers of the surface men, for failure to pay the contributions under the National Insurance Act in respect of the surface men:—Held, that the contract of service was between the contractor and the surface men, and that accordingly the contractor, and not the county council, was liable for payment of the contributions. Held, also, that where a county council enter into a contract for the repair of roads, they cannot legally reserve for the county surveyor, or for a person employed by him, the performance of part of that repair. Down County Council v. Irish Insurance Commissioners, [1914] 2 Ir. R. 110—K.B. D.

Workmen Employed on Roads under System of Direct Labour—Power of County Council as to Giving Disablement Benefits.] —A county council has no power to give to workmen employed on roads under a system of direct labour terms of employment securing to them provision in respect of disablement as favourable as that conferred by Part I. of the National Insurance Act, 1911, and a county council cannot therefore, as regards such workmen, bring itself within the exception in Part II. of the First Schedule to the Act. Tipperary County Council v. Irish Insurance Commissioners, [1915] 1 Ir. R. 79—M.R.

II. MEDICAL BENEFITS.

a. Administration of by Approved Societies.

Proof of Disease—Rule of Society Requiring Medical Certificate or other Sufficient Evidence of Incapacity—Resolution Requiring Certificate of Panel Doctor—Ultra Vires—Action for Declaration—Dispute between Society and Member—Arbitration in Accordance with Rules.]—The plaintiff, being an insured person under the National Insurance Act, 1911, and a member of an approved society, sent to the secretary of the society a claim for sickness benefit, offering as proof of sickness a certificate of a medical man who was not on the panel of doctors specified in section 15 of the Act. Payment of sickness benefit was refused on the ground of a resolution passed by the society to the effect that in every claim for sickness benefit the insured person should send a certificate of a panel doctor. By the rules of the society, which had been approved by the Insurance Commissioners, no member was entitled to sickness benefit until he had sent to the secretary a medical certificate or other sufficient evidence of incapacity for work. In an action brought by the plaintiff, suing on behalf of himself and all other members of the society except the defendants, against the trustees and the secretary of the society on behalf of the society, for a declaration that the resolution was illegal and ultra vires,—Held, that the resolution was illegal and ultra vires, and that, notwithstanding section 67 of the Act, by which every dispute between a society and a member was to be decided by arbitration, the plaintiff was entitled to a declaration as claimed. Heard v. Pickthorne, 82 L. J. K.B. 1264; [1913] 3 K.B. 299; [1913] W. C. & I. Rep. 685; 108 L. T. 818; 11 L. G. R. 621; 57 S. J. 532; 29 T. L. R. 497—C.A.

Medical Certificate—Evidence of Incapacity—Sufficiency of Certificate—Dispute between Member and Society—Jurisdiction of Court.] —By the rules of an approved society under the National Insurance Act, 1911, it was provided that, with regard to sickness and disablement benefits, an illness should not be deemed to commence or continue unless the member was rendered incapable for work by "some specific disease or by bodily or mental disablement," and that he should send notice of illness to the local secretary . . . and should not be entitled to sickness benefit until he had sent to the local secretary . . . a medical certificate or other sufficient evidence of incapacity and its cause; also that disputes arising between insured members and the society should be decided by the general delegates' meeting. The plaintiff, an insured member of the society, sent to their local secretary a claim for sickness benefit accompanied by a medical certificate which stated that she was "suffering from debility and unable to work." The society required the certificate to be amended by a statement of the cause of the debility, and refused to pay unless this was done. The plaintiff thereupon sued the society, claiming an injunction to restrain them from refusing to accept and consider the medical certificate as evidence of her claim to sickness benefit and also a sum of money representing three weeks' sickness benefit:—Held, that the matter was a dispute within section 67, sub-section 1 of the National Insurance Act, 1911, that it must be decided by the tribunal created by the society's rules, and therefore that the Court had no jurisdiction to entertain the claim. Heard v. Pickthorne (82 L. J. K.B. 1264; [1913] 3 K.B. 299) distinguished. Bailey v. Co-operative Wholesale Society, 83 L. J. K.B. 948; [1914] 2 K.B. 233; 110 L. T. 816; 78 J. P. 285; 12 L. G. R. 545; 58 S. J. 304; 30 T. L. R. 299—D.

b. Panel Doctors.

Panel—Requirement of Duplicate Prescriptions — Refusal by Practitioner — Removal from Panel.]—Where an insurance committee under the National Insurance Act, 1911, have made an agreement with a medical practitioner which incorporates the Act and which does not deprive him of his right to be removed from the panel without an enquiry under section 15, sub-section 2 (b), and have placed his name on the panel, the committee have no power to remove his name from the panel if he declines to make out prescriptions in duplicate, inasmuch as the period of service can only be terminated by the act of the practitioner or after an enquiry into his alleged default. Rex v. County of London Insurance Committee; Salter, Ex parte, 111 L. T. 835; 79 J. P. 36; 12 L. G. R. 1262; 30 T. L. R. 607—D.

Drug Fund—Deficit—Requirement of Contribution from Doctors on Panel.]—A pharmaceutical committee under the National Insurance Acts, in consequence of a deficit in the drug fund, requested the panel committee for an investigation into cases where panel doctors had ordered drugs beyond the average amount. This request was granted and the panel committee reported to the insurance committee that there was a deficit in the drug fund and recommended them to make it up by requiring any doctor who had ordered drugs in excess of the average to contribute in proportion to the amount of the excess. The plaintiff was a panel doctor and he had had no opportunity of attending the investigation, but he received notice that in his account with the insurance committee he was to be debited with his share of the contribution. In an action by the plaintiff against the insurance committee for an injunction restraining them from deducting the amount from the money due to him under the Act,—Held, that as the pharmaceutical committee had not made a representation to the panel committee in the terms of regulation 40 of the National Health Insurance (Medical Benefit) Regulations (England), 1913, and as the panel committee did not report to the insurance committee that any practitioner had been extravagant in ordering drugs, and as the report was therefore not a report within the terms of the regulation, the plaintiff was entitled to the injunction even if the regulation was not ultra vires. Moore v. Leicester Insurance Committee, 32 T. L. R. 80—Rowlatt, J.

Fees of Panel Doctor—Moneys in Hands of Insurance Committee — Debt "owing or accruing."]—When an insurance committee has received moneys from the Insurance Commissioners for the purposes of the National Health Insurance Acts, a debt becomes due from the committee to every panel doctor who has done work within their area, although the exact amount payable to him under his agreement with the committee may not, as a matter of calculation, have been ascertained. O'Driscoll v. Sweeny, 84 L. J. K.B. 734; [1915] 1 K.B. 811; 112 L. T. 594; 59 S. J. 235; 31 T. L. R. 103—Rowlatt, J. Affirmed, 85 L. J. K.B. 83; [1915] 3 K.B. 499; 113 L. T. 683; 13 L. G. R. 1156; 59 S. J. 597; 31 T. L. R. 532—C.A.

It is not contrary to public policy that such a debt should be attached under Order XLV. rule 1, as a debt "owing or accruing" from the committee to the doctor. Ib.

III. CONTRIBUTORS ENTITLED TO COMPENSATION OR DAMAGES.

Right of Approved Society to take Proceedings for Compensation in Name of Workman.]—In the provision in section 11, sub-section 2 of the National Insurance Act, 1911, that, where an insured person appears to be entitled to compensation or damages under the Workmen's Compensation Act, 1906, or otherwise, "and unreasonably refuses or neglects to take proceedings to enforce his claim," it shall be lawful for his approved society to do so in his name, the word "neglects" connotes a failure to do something which is a matter of legal or moral obligation, or a failure to comply with a request made by a person entitled to make it. Rushton v. Skey & Co., 83 L. J. K.B. 1503; [1914] 3 K.B. 706; [1914] W. C. & I. Rep. 497; 111 L. T. 700; 58 S. J. 685; 30 T. L. R. 601—C.A.

A workman met with an accident in January, 1913, and was incapacitated until February 3, 1913, receiving compensation during this time from his employers at the rate of 17*s.* 2*d.* a week. He was again incapacitated on July 6, 1913, from the same trouble, and was away from work for over two months. During this time he received 15*s*. a week from his approved society, but no compensation from his employers. On September 2, 1913, the approved society sent him a form asking questions as to his accident and injury, and as to whether he proposed to take proceedings to recover compensation. The workman answered that he did not think his present illness was due to the accident in January, and that he did not propose to take proceedings against his employers. In the form there was a note that "In the event of a member through lack of means or other causes neglecting to enforce his claim, the society, if of opinion there is a good claim, will take proceedings on his behalf." In November, 1913, the approved society brought proceedings for compensation in the workman's name and satisfied the County Court Judge that the accident was the cause of the workman's injury:—Held, that the workman had not unreasonably refused or neglected to take proceedings for compensation within the meaning of the National Insurance Act, 1911, s. 11, sub-s. 2, and therefore that it was not competent to the approved society to maintain the proceedings for compensation in the workman's name. Ib.

—— Accident—Possible Claim to Compensation—Insured Workman—Whether Proceedings by Workman or Approved Society—Issue of Fact.]—An insured workman desiring to make a claim against his employer under the Workmen's Compensation Act, 1906, may be helped by his approved society. Allen v. Francis, 83 L. J. K.B. 1814; [1914] 3 K.B. 1065; [1914] W.C. & I. Rep. 599; 112 L. T. 62; 58 S. J. 753; 30 T. L. R. 695—C.A.

On September 5, 1913, a workman met with an accident and applied for sickness benefit to his approved society. The society thought the workman to be entitled to recover compensation from his employer under the Workmen's Compensation Act, 1906, and on January 31, 1914, their solicitor wrote to the employer and threatened proceedings. The employer denied liability, and thereupon the society instructed their local solicitors to investigate the case. These solicitors wrote to the employer on February 11, 1914, that they were instructed to act for the workman, and the workman was in fact informed by the society that, if he wished, these solicitors would act for him free of charge in taking proceedings for compensation. On March 26, 1914, the workman signed a retainer of the solicitors, and on March 31, 1914, arbitration proceedings were commenced in his name. Before the County Court Judge the point was taken that the proceedings were in fact brought by the society in the workman's name and were not maintainable, as the workman had not unreasonably refused or neglected to take proceedings within the meaning of the National Insurance Act, 1911, s. 11, sub-s. 2. The County Court Judge then asked counsel for the applicant for whom it was that he actually appeared, and on his refusal to answer the question except by producing the retainer, dismissed the application with costs:—Held, that the case must go back to be heard. The County Court Judge ought to have heard the evidence and fully ascertained the facts, and ought only to have dismissed the application if he then came to the conclusion that the application was really being brought by the society. Ib.

—— Approved Society and Trade Union—No Refusal on Part of Workman to take Proceedings—Reasonable Inference that Workman Insured Member of Approved Society—Surprise.]—A workman having met with an accident, two letters, dated April 23, 1914, and May 2, 1914, were written on behalf of an approved society, stating that it was purposing to take proceedings for the workman against the employer to obtain compensation under the Workmen's Compensation Act, 1906. Proceedings were then brought, and at the hearing the secretary of the local branch of the approved society, who was called to give expert evidence, said, in answer to questions put in cross-examination, that his society was an approved society and had taken these proceedings in the name of the workman. He also said that the workman had not refused to take proceedings, but, though anxious to do so, had not the necessary money. The County Court Judge thereupon dismissed the application on the ground that under the National Insurance Act, 1911, s. 11, sub-s. 2, an approved society was not entitled to bring proceedings in a workman's name unless he had unreasonably neglected or refused to take them himself. On appeal it was alleged on the workman's behalf that he was not an insured member of the approved society, but was merely a member of it as a trade union, and it was contended that in these circumstances the National Insurance Act, 1911, s. 11, sub-s. 2, had no application, and that the proceedings were maintainable:—Held, that, on the evidence as it stood, the County Court Judge was entitled to draw the inference that the workman was insured in the society under the National Insurance Act, 1911, and that, as no case of surprise had been made, the County Court Judge's decision must stand. Burnham v. Hardy, 84 L. IV. REGULATIONS FOR ADMINISTRATION OF NATIONAL INSURANCE ACT.

Provisional Regulations—Validity.]—The National Health Insurance (Collection of Contributions) Regulations, 1912, are valid, notwithstanding that regulations were not at the same time made for the provision of medical and other benefits under the Act. The Regulations are not rendered invalid by reason of the fact that they are called "Provisional Regulations." Hurlock v. Shinn, 82 L. J. K.B. 391; [1913] 1 K.B. 290; [1913] W.C. & I. Rep. 277; 108 L. T. 254; 77 J. P. 97; 11 L. G. R. 367; 23 Cox C.C. 288; 29 T. L. R. 133—D.

By section 83, sub-section 1 of the Act of 1911, a joint committee of the several bodies of Commissioners is to be constituted in accordance with regulations to be made by the Treasury; and by sub-section 2 the joint committee " shall exercise and perform such powers and duties of the several bodies of commissioners under this part of this Act, either alone or jointly with any of those bodies, as may be provided by such regulations." Under the powers conferred upon them by this section, the Treasury made the National Insurance (Joint Committee) Regulations, 1912, regulation 5 of which provided that the joint committee should exercise jointly with the Commissioners " (a) under sub-section (1.) of section 4, and sub-section (1.) of section 5 of the Act, the power of prescribing the intervals at which contributions payable in respect of employed contributors and voluntary contributors respectively are to be payable . . . (c) under section 7 of the Act, the power of making regulations for matters incidental to the payment and collection of contributions " : —Held, that the regulation was not ultra vires of the Treasury, and that the joint committee were thereby empowered to join with the Commissioners in the making of the regulations. Ib.

By regulation 6 (1) (a) of the National Health Insurance (Collection of Contributions) Regulations, 1912, the time for stamping the card of a contributor shall be " (a) where money payment is made by the employer in respect of any employment—before the money payment in respect of the period for which the contribution is payable . . ." :—Held, that although section 4, sub-section 1 of the Act of 1911 provides for payment at " weekly or other prescribed intervals," the regulation was not ultra vires. Ib.

Regulations Made by Insurance Commissioners under Statutory Powers—Power of Court to Review.]—The National Insurance Act, 1911, by section 65, authorises the Insurance Commissioners to make regulations for the purpose of carrying into effect Part I. of the Act (which deals with National Health Insurance), and provides that such regulations shall be laid before both Houses of Parliament and shall have effect as if enacted in the Act, unless annulled by His Majesty in Council on an address presented by either House :—Held (Lord Johnston dissenting), that regulations made by the Commissioners, which had not yet been laid before Parliament, could not be challenged in a Court of law as being ultra vires of the Commissioners, provided they dealt with matters falling within the scope of Part I. of the Act, but could be set aside only by means of the Parliamentary procedure provided by the section. Glasgow Insurance Committee v. Scottish Insurance Commissioners, [1915] S. C. 504; [1915] W.C. & I. Rep. 182—Ct. of Sess.

Inclusion of Other Trades—Order of Board of Trade — Ultra Vires — Commissioner Appointed to Hold Enquiry — Powers of Commissioner.] — By section 103 of the National Insurance Act, 1911, " If it appears to the Board " of Trade " that it is desirable to extend the provisions of this Part of this Act, to workmen in any trade other than an insured trade, . . . the Board may, with the consent of the Treasury, make, . . . a special order extending this Part of this Act to such workmen . . . Provided that no such order shall be made if the person holding the inquiry in relation to the order reports that the order should not be made, . . ." :—Held, that a Commissioner appointed under the Act to hold an enquiry with regard to a draft Order made by the Board of Trade has no jurisdiction to enquire as to whether the proposed Order is or is not ultra vires, but only as to whether, upon the facts, it is desirable that it should be made. Rex v. Hudson, 84 L. J. K.B. 773; [1915] 1 K.B. 838; [1915] W.C. & I. Rep. 227; 112 L. T. 852—C.A.

The Sixth Schedule contains a list of insured trades for the purposes of Part II. of the Act, one of which is " Sawmilling (including machine woodwork) carried on in connection with any other insured trade . . ." The Board of Trade made an Order extending the provisions of Part II. of the Act to workmen in the trade of " Sawmilling, including machine woodwork, whether carried on in connection with any other insured trade or not " : —Held, that the Order was not ultra vires. Ib.

Decision of the Divisional Court (84 L. J. K.B. 194; [1915] 1 K.B. 133) affirmed. Ib.

Determination by Commissioners of Rates of Contribution.]—The Court dismissed an action for the setting aside of a determination by the Insurance Commissioners under section 66, sub-section 1 (c) of the National Insurance Act, 1911, holding that in the absence of averments that they had acted ultra vires the Court had no jurisdiction to interfere with their decision. Don Bros., Buist & Co. v. Scottish Insurance Commissioners, [1913] S. VI. UNEMPLOYMENT INSURANCE.

Termination of Employment—Duty of Employer to Return Card and Book—Return through Post—Failure to Obtain Fresh Employment by Reason of Non-return—Damages—Remoteness.]—It is provided by regulations made under the National Insurance Act, 1911, that an employer must return health insurance cards and unemployment insurance books deposited with him to the workman on the termination of the employment. An employer unable to find the workman at the address he had given, which he had quitted, posted his health insurance card and unemployment insurance book, addressed to him at the above address. Although the workman had given due notice to the post-office that letters so addressed should be forwarded to him at another address, the card and book were lost in the post. By reason of not being able to produce them, the workman was unable to obtain other employment, and preferred a claim for damages against the employer under the Employers and Workmen Act, 1875:—Held, that the claim could not succeed on the ground (by Ridley, J., and Pickford, J.; Avory, J., dubitante) that the above damages were too remote; and (per Avory, J.) on the ground that the employer had returned the cards to the workman because, the post-office under the Act being the agents of the owners of the cards, the Insurance Commissioners, the cards had been entrusted to their agent to be given to the workman. Quære, whether such action would lie at all. Price v. Webb, 82 L. Married Woman — Temporary Unemployment after Marriage—"Person whose normal occupation is employment" — Right to Benefits.]—By section 44, sub-section 1 of the National Insurance Act, 1911, "Where a woman who has before marriage been an insured person marries, she shall be suspended from receiving the ordinary benefits under" Part I. of the Act "until the death of her husband . . . Provided that, where a woman who has been employed within the meaning of this Part of this Act before marriage, proves that she continues to be so employed after marriage, she shall not be so suspended so long as she continues to be so employed, . . ." By section 79: "A person whose normal occupation is employment within the meaning of this Part of this Act shall, for the purpose of reckoning the number and rate of contributions, be deemed to continue to be an employed contributor notwithstanding that he is temporarily unemployed, . . ." The appellant, an insured person within the meaning of the Act, was a member of the respondent society. In August, 1913, she was married, and gave up her employment. She was then pregnant, and was physically incapable, until after December 6, 1913, when her child was born, of following her employment; but at the time of her marriage she bona fide intended to return to it, and she continued to be a person whose normal occupation was employment within the meaning of the Act. The society having refused to allow her sickness and maternity benefits,—Held, that section 79 was applicable to the appellant, and that, notwithstanding her temporary unemployment after her marriage, she was entitled to claim sickness and maternity benefits. Davidson v. New Tabernacle Approved Society, 85 L. VII. OFFENCES.

Non-payment of Contributions by Employer—Proceedings before Court of Summary Jurisdiction—Separate Summonses for Each Week's Non-payment — Combined Order for Payment of Fine and Unpaid Contribution.] —The provisions of the Summary Jurisdiction Acts are applicable to an information under section 69, sub-section 2 of the National Insurance Act, 1911, charging an employer with having failed to pay a contribution which he was liable to pay in respect of an employed contributor, and the magistrate has power to make a combined order for the payment of a fine and of the amount of the contribution. Hurlock v. Shinn; Rex v. Baggallay; Morris v. Ashton; Rex v. Hedderwick, 82 L. J. K.B. 391; [1913] 1 K.B. 290; [1913] W.C. & I. Rep. 277; 108 L. T. 254; 77 J. P. 97; 11 L. G. R. 367; 23 Cox C.C. 288; 29 T. L. R. 133—D.

Under section 69, sub-section 2 of the Act of 1911, each failure by an employer to pay a weekly contribution is a separate offence, and separate summonses may be taken out against him in respect of each failure to pay. Ib.

Employment—Determination of Question—No Decision by Commissioners—Jurisdiction of Magistrate.]—The provision in section 66, sub-section 1 of the National Insurance Act, 1911, that "If any question arises—(a) as to whether any employment or any class of employment is or will be employment within the meaning of this Part of this Act . . . the question shall be determined by the Insurance Commissioners," does not oust the jurisdiction of a magistrate, where the Commissioners have not made any such determination, to decide, on a summons against an employer under section 69, sub-section 2 of the Act for failure to pay contributions in respect of a person alleged to be an employed contributor, whether such person is an employed contributor within the Act or not. Rex v. Wilberforce, 32 T. L. R. 163—D.

Sufficiency of Evidence — Ordinary and Emergency Cards.]—An employer, charged with failure to pay the contributions due by him under the National Insurance Act, 1911, in respect of two servants in his employment, was convicted upon an admission in the witness-box, by each of the servants, that he did not get an insurance card—that is, an ordinary card—stamped by the accused while in his service, and upon proof that the accused and the two servants had refused to give any information when interrogated by the representatives of the National Insurance Commissioners:—Held, that the charge had not been proved as, even assuming that the evidence was sufficient to establish that no ordinary cards had been stamped the prosecutor had failed to prove that the accused had not adopted the alternative course of stamping "emergency" cards. Kinnear v. Brander, [1914] S. C. (J.) 141—Ct. of Just.

Observations on the evidence required to prove a charge of failure to pay contributions under the National Insurance Act, 1911, and, in particular, upon the question whether the evidence of one servant that the employer had not stamped a card for him was evidence supporting a similar charge made against the accused with regard to another servant. Ib.

—— Card Handed to Head Gardener by Gardener's Labourer—No Direct Dealings with Employer—Failure to Affix Stamps to Card—Liability of Employer. — A gardener's labourer was employed by the respondent and was paid wages weekly. The labourer handed his National Health Insurance card to the head gardener and had no direct dealings with the respondent. No stamps were placed on the card in respect of certain weeks :—Held, that the respondent had committed a criminal offence, inasmuch as though the duty of stamping the cards could be lawfully delegated, yet if the duty was not performed the employer was responsible. Godman v. Crofton (No. 1), 110 L. T. 387; 78 J. P. 133; 12 L. G. R. 330; 24 Cox C.C. 90; 30 T. L. R. 193—D.

—— Presentation of Unemployment Book—Whether Condition Precedent—Fitter.]—The appellants engaged one S. as a fitter to attend to and repair plant and machinery in an engineering workshop of their colliery premises. On a summons against the appellants under section 101 of the National Insurance Act, 1911, for non-payment of unemployment contributions in respect of S., the magistrate held that the presentation of an insurance book by the workman to the employer was not a condition precedent to the obligation of the employer to get stamps and endeavour to use them, and that as S. was employed as above stated the appellants must be convicted. One of the insured trades under the Act is that of mechanical engineering :—Held, that on non-presentation of the unemployment book to the employer by the workman it became the duty of the employer to obtain an emergency book, and that there was evidence that S. was employed in the insured trade of mechanical engineering, and therefore the magistrate's decision must be affirmed. Nunnery Colliery Co. v. Stanley, 111 L. T. 843; 78 J. P. 422; 30 T. L. R. 549—D.

—— Bricklayer's Labourer—Employment as General Colliery Labourer — Employment in Construction of Buildings.]—The respondent engaged one W., who was a bricklayer's labourer, as a general colliery labourer, and employed him to break up material for concrete and to make concrete, which was used in the alteration of a fan-house at a colliery. On a summons by the appellant against the respondent under section 101 of the National Insurance Act, 1911, for failing to pay unemployment contributions in respect of W., it was contended for the appellant that W. was employed in the construction, maintenance, or repair of colliery buildings, and that therefore he came within the list of insured trades set out in the Sixth Schedule to the Act and in a decision of the umpire. The Justices dismissed the summons on the ground that W. was a general labourer and not a bricklayer's labourer :—Held, that W. was employed in an insured trade, and that therefore the respondent ought to have been convicted. Opinion reserved on the question whether, in proceeding under section 101, in which a dispute arises as to whether the employment is in an insured trade, the Justices are bound, if there has been no previous decision by the umpire, to refer the matter to him. Robinson v. Morewood, 111 L. T. 840; 78 J. P. 445; 30 T. L. R. 547—D.

C. ACCIDENT.

See also Vol. VIII. 81, 1669.

Exception in Policy—"Anything inhaled"—Construction—Death of Assured from Gas Fumes—Liability of Insurance Company. — By a personal accident and sickness policy the assured was insured against bodily injury by "violent accidental external and visible means," with an exception that the policy was not to insure (inter alia) against death or disablement by accident directly or indirectly caused by "anything swallowed, administered, or inhaled." The assured was found dead in a room with the unlighted gas turned on, and the cause of the death was certified as suffocation from gas poisoning :—Held, that the words "anything . . . inhaled" were clear and unambiguous in their meaning, and could not be construed as having the restricted meaning "anything voluntarily inhaled." The death of the assured was not therefore due to a risk covered by the policy. United London and Scottish Insurance Co., In re; Brown's Claim, 84 L. J. Ch. 620; [1915] 2 Ch. 167; [1915] W.C. & I. Rep. 485; 113 L. T. 397; 59 S. J. 529; 31 T. L. R. 419—C.A.

Third-party Policy—Limit of Liability for any one Accident or Occurrence — Action against Assured — Defence Conducted by Insurance Company—Liability for Costs.]—By a policy of insurance the defendants insured the assured in respect of accidents caused by his employees when in charge of his horse-drawn vehicles. The total liability of the defendants was limited to 300*l.* for all claims for compensation and costs, charges, and expenses paid or payable in respect of or arising out of any accident or occurrence, and the defendants were to be entitled, in the name and on behalf of the assured, to take over and have the absolute control of all negotiations and proceedings which might arise in respect of any accident or claim. There was a further provision that the defendants might pay the maximum sum to the assured in the case of any one accident or occurrence, and thereupon their liability in respect of that accident or occurrence should cease; but if the assured desired the defendants to continue the defence he should pay and make good all costs and expenses incurred thereby. Two persons who had been injured by an accident caused by a cart belonging to the assured brought actions against him claiming damages. The assured gave notice thereof to the defendants, and they defended the actions, the assured not being consulted nor having anything to say as to the advisability of defending the actions. The actions resulted in verdicts against the assured for 200*l.* and 175*l.* respectively. The costs in these actions recoverable by the two plaintiffs against the assured amounted to 218*l.*; and as he did not pay those costs an execution was levied on his goods, and to get rid of this he had to pay the 218*l.*, which he now claimed to recover from the defendants :—Held, that although there were two accidents there was only one "occurrence" within the meaning of the policy, and therefore that the defendants' limit of 300*l.* applied; but that the defendants having denied the actions in the name of the assured without his consent they incurred a common law liability for the costs, and were therefore liable to repay the 218*l.* which the assured had been compelled to pay. Allen v. London Guarantee and Accident Co., 28 T. L. R. 254—Phillimore, J.

Policy against Accidents to Employees — Proviso for Keeping Wages Book—Condition Precedent.]—A policy of insurance taken out by a currier and small farmer against liability for accidents under the Workmen's Compensation Act, 1906, contained a proviso that the observance of the conditions of the policy should be "a condition precedent to any liability of the Society under this policy." A number of conditions were stated, including the following: "The first premium and all renewal premiums that may be accepted are to be regulated by the amount of wages and salaries and other earnings paid to employees by the insured during such period of insurance. The name of every employee and the amount of wages, salary, and other earnings paid to him shall be recorded in a proper wages book. The insured shall at all times allow the society to inspect such books and shall supply the society with a correct account of all such wages, salaries, and other earnings paid during any period of insurance, within one month from the expiry of such period of insurance, and if the total amount so paid shall differ from the amount on which premium has been paid the difference in premiums shall be met by a further proportionate payment to the society or by a refund by the society, as the case may be." The insured employed one labourer only, who met with an accident entitling him to compensation under the Act of 1906. He kept no wages book or record of wages paid by him. The society disputed his right to claim under the policy on account of the omission to keep a wages book:—Held (Fletcher Moulton, L.J., dissenting), that the policy in any case of ambiguity ought to be construed against the society and in favour of the claimant, and that as a matter of construction the condition as to keeping a wages book was not a condition precedent the omission to observe which debarred the claimant from his right to indemnity under the policy. Bradley and Essex and Suffolk Accident Indemnity Society, In re, 81 L. J. K.B. 523; [1912] 1 K.B. 415; 105 L. T. 919; 28 T. L. R. 175; [1912] W.C. Rep. 6.

Policy of Indemnity — Condition against Agent of Assured making Admission of Liability — Admission of Negligence and Responsibility by Agent not Authorised by Assured—No Breach of Condition.]—An admission of liability, made by a driver of a traction engine after a collision caused by his negligence, is not a breach of a condition contained in a policy of insurance made with his employer that the assured shall not by his agent make any admission of liability, unless the admission is authorised by the employer. Under a policy of insurance the defendants were to be indemnified against damage for which they might be liable by reason of a collision with their traction engine, provided that the assured should not, by himself or his agent, make any admission of liability to any person in respect of whom indemnity might be claimed under the policy. After a collision between the traction engine and the plaintiff's motor car, caused by the negligence of the defendants' driver, the plaintiff wrote out, and the driver (who was illiterate) signed with a cross, a document in which the driver admitted that he was negligent and responsible for the collision. In an action for damages brought by the plaintiff against the defendants, and which was settled by the defendants paying him a reasonable sum therefor, the defendants claimed from the insurers, as third parties, indemnity for such payment, and the insurers repudiated liability on the ground that the driver's admission of liability was a breach of the proviso in the policy:—Held, that as the driver had not the defendants' authority to make the admission of liability, and the document signed by him was not part of the res gestæ and therefore was not admissible in evidence against the defendants, the insurers must indemnify the defendants in respect of the moneys paid to the plaintiff. Semble, that an agent's admission of liability, if part of the res gestæ, would not be a breach of such proviso, unless expressly authorised by the principal. Tustin v. Arnold, 84 L. Marine or Fire—Ship—Insurance against "risk of fire only, including general average and salvage charges arising therefrom"—Insurance Company — Winding-up Order — Subsequent Total Loss by Fire — Right of Assured.]—A policy issued by an insurance company insured a steamer while on the Great Lakes of America "against the risk of fire only, including general average and salvage charges arising therefrom." The ship was entirely destroyed by fire a few days after a winding-up order had been made against the insurance company:—Held, that the policy was a fire policy within the Assurance Companies Act, 1909, and that the assured could only prove therefore for the unexpired portion of the premium in accordance with section 17 and Schedule 6 (B) of that Act. United London and Scottish Insurance Co., In re; Newport Navigation Co.'s Claim, 84 L. Non-disclosure—Refusal by Another Company to Continue Insurance.]—The appellant was insured against fire up to August, 1910, with the L. Co. for 2,000*l.* Desiring to be insured for a further sum, negotiations took place with the respondent company, who on August 15, 1910, agreed to cover the appellant for 1,600*l.* for thirty days, and if the insurance was not taken for a longer period the appellant was to pay a proportionate part of the premium. On September 21, 1910, the respondents wrote to the appellant that they would insure him for 3,600*l.* from Michaelmas, 1910, to Michaelmas, 1911, at a premium of 36*l.* 16*s.*, and would take the risk from August 15 to Michaelmas on the 1,600*l.* at a premium of 1*l.* 8*s.* At the foot of this document was the following note : " No insurance is in force until the premium is paid and a printed receipt issued from the office," and across it were the words " Held covered." On September 27, 1910, the appellant knew that the L. Co. had refused to continue his insurance. On September 28 the appellant paid the premium to the respondents, who issued their policy for 3,600*l.*, but he did not inform them of the refusal by the L. Co. to continue the insurance. The appellant having claimed for a loss by fire which occurred on September 28, 1911,—Held, that the document sent by the respondents to the appellant on September 21, 1910, was not a contract to insure for 3,600*l.*, but was an offer to insure and a statement that the appellant was covered for 1,600*l.*; that the insurance was not concluded till September 28, 1910, when the premium was paid; that it was material to the respondents to know that the L. Co. had refused to continue the appellant's insurance; that as the fact of that refusal came to the appellant's knowledge before the contract was concluded it ought to have been disclosed by him to the respondents; and that as it had not been disclosed the respondents were not liable on the policy. Yager and Guardian Assurance Co., In re, 108 L. Misstatement—Correction to Agent of Company—Duty of Agent—Previous Insurance—Previous Refusal.]—Where a person in making a proposal to an insurance company for an insurance against fire makes a bona fide mistake in his answers to the questions on the proposal form, but before the issue of a cover note draws the attention of the agent of the company to the mistake and corrects it, it is the duty of the agent to convey to the company the correct answer, and if he fails to do so the company are not entitled to refuse to pay a claim under the cover note on the ground that there was a misstatement in the answers to the questions on the proposal form. A question on a fire insurance proposal form as to whether the proposer is or has been " insured in this or any other office " does not include all property ever occupied by the proposer, but only refers to the particular premises proposed to be insured, unless other premises are distinctly referred to. The question whether any other office has declined to " accept " or " renew " the proposer's insurance has no reference to a refusal to transfer to the proposer a policy issued to another person. Golding v. Royal London Auxiliary Insurance Co., 30 T. Damage Caused by Fire and by Water in Extinguishing Fire.]—A fire having occurred in the appellant's cotton mill, which was insured with the respondent company, the machinery was seriously damaged, not only by the fire, but by the effect of the water that had been used to extinguish the fire, the injury due to this latter cause being progressive—that is, it was seriously increased by the length of time during which the water was allowed to lie on the machinery. Immediately after the fire the respondents took possession of the mill, under powers reserved to them by the policy, and they retained possession for a considerable time for salvage purposes. Possession was ultimately given back to the appellant, who then put forward his claim under the policy :—Held, that the loss due to fire and water under such a policy was to be determined, not at the moment the fire was extinguished, but when the respondents gave up possession to the appellant after exercising the powers given to them by the policy for the purpose of enabling them to minimise the damage. Ahmedbhoy Habbibhoy v. Bombay Fire and Marine Insurance Co., L. Fire Policy—Arbitration Clause—Charge of Fraud—Repudiation of Policy by Insurers—Forfeit of all Benefit under it.]—The appellant insured his stock-in-trade with the respondent company against damage by fire. The policy contained a condition making it a condition precedent to any right of action on the policy that the amount of the loss should be first determined by arbitration. It also contained a condition that if a claim was in any respect fraudulent, or if the loss was occasioned by the wilful act of the insured, all benefit under the policy should be forfeited. The goods insured were destroyed by fire, and the appellant made a claim on the respondents. The respondents rejected the claim, and charged the appellant with fraud and arson, but these issues were found against them by a jury :—Held, that as the respondents had repudiated the policy, and had contended that all benefit under it was forfeited, they could not set up the arbitration clause as a bar to an action against them on the policy. Scott v. Avery (25 L. " Gasoline—stored or kept."]—A condition in a policy of fire insurance provided that the company should not be liable for loss or damage " occurring while . . . gasoline . . . is . . . stored or kept in the building insured." A fire broke out from a small quantity of gasoline remaining in a cooking stove which was used on an emergency for a particular purpose :—Held, that there was no breach of the condition, as the gasoline was not within the meaning of the condition "stored or kept in the building," and that the respondents were liable on the policy. Thompson v. Equity Fire Insurance Co., 80 L.
